No. 1 MILLER'S STATION, GA.—Miss Douglass' coming here has been a blessing to us all, and a great help to the work. Through her we have been able, as we hope, to get money enough to finish the inside of our church.

CHURCH WORK.

A meeting of Counsel and Advice was convened September 29th at Avery Station, by order of Rev. Floyd Snelson, and on solicitation of the minister in charge, Rev. A. E. Jackson, to organize and dedicate a church to God. In the absence of a letter missive, the minister in charge gave his reasons why a church should be organized at Avery, to be known as the Second Congregational Church of the Mendi Mission. We quote from the report:

"The candidates were examined, and by a vote of the Council eighteen were received into full membership. Some of the candidates were not received because of not being legally married. They were instructed to attend to this matter and then they might be received into the church. They are to remain under watch-care until this obligation is met. Some of those received were old members, while others were new converts, among whom were three chiefs, Peah Carle, Carray Phemah, and Sei Lōtō. These men exercise a vast influence over their people, and their being reached makes the reaching of their people easier."

The annual meeting of the Board of Counsel and Advice of the Mendi Mission was held in the Good Hope Chapel, at Sherbro Island, July 14, 1879. Rev. A. P. Miller presided, and Dr. Benjamin James was elected secretary.

The Committee on Church Work reported forty-four members in the church at Good Hope Station, one having died during the year; seven infants baptized; attendance on services good and showing an earnest desire to hear the word; advance in the Christian life of converts; prayer-meetings valuable. Some persons under watch and care will be received to membership as soon as legally united in matrimony.

At Avery there are forty-one members; under watch and care three adults; eleven children baptized. Increasing willingness on the part of the people to attend church, and growing interest in the cause of Christ, give encouragement.

At Debia, Mr. Goodman conducts religious services on the Lord's day. A chapel is hoped for here, books at Good Hope and repairs of building at Avery.

Our Sunday-school is in a flourishing condition, being well attended, most of the scholars attending church services.

"Brother Snelson preached, choosing Luke xii. 32, as his text, 'Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.' The dedicatory prayer was then offered by Rev. A. P. Miller. A hymn was sung. The right hand of fellowship was given by Brother A. E. White. The address was delivered by Rev. J. Gomer. The Lord's supper was then celebrated; Brothers Gomer and Jackson presiding. It was a solemn scene. The doxology was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. A. P. Miller. The meeting was one long to be remembered."

"Sunday, February 9, was communion day, and it did seem as if the presence of the Lord was with each one in spirit and in power. There were added to the church ten souls, who were that day with us permitted to partake of the Lord's supper. Another feature connected with the church work is full of interest, and that is the prayer meetings. They are, as a general thing, largely attended by the country men, and great interest is manifested among them. We hope that many will be brought to the Lord during this year; but this will depend very greatly upon earnest prayer on the part of the Christians at home."

SCHOOL WORK.

The Committee on School Work reported that at Good Hope the school had made rapid progress. During the year two hundred and forty-five children have been enrolled. These are both from the Sierra Leone and from the native element. They learn English rapidly. "We have teachers," says the report, "who are quite awake to their duty. Children are accessible in Sherbro, and are brought into day and Sunday-schools in large numbers. Through the kindness of friends of the poor little Africans, shirts have been put on their backs and books into their hands, for which they seem to be grateful. Of course, these wear out, and others must be procured in their stead, or these little ones, in many cases, will leave off attending school. They must be constantly looked after. We hope to see, not far in the future, a first-class school at this place. We have material in abundance upon which to work. Time, patience and labor will bring success."

The school at Avery has not made such progress as was hoped for during the year. On the first of January its numbers were decreased by the taking away of most of the larger boys to cut the crops for their parents. The irregularity of attendance is a great obstacle in the way of our success. Some attend for one day, and may not be seen again for a month. Those who have attended regularly have made progress. The prospect for the future is better. There have been fifty-six on the roll during the year.

The school work at Debia is encouraging, Mr. Goodman and family being settled there. We base our hopes largely on the little ones who are being trained in our Mission schools.

INDUSTRIAL WORK.

It seems evident that the industrial work at this station, which gives employment to many, is a means of good both to the mission and the people.

The Committee on Agriculture reported that the cassida planted at Good Hope does not thrive, owing to the impoverished condition of the soil. At Avery the coffee plantation is in a comparatively thriving condition, and some of the trees bearing well. The need of more laborers and implements is urged, and it is recommended "that more of the ground be put under cultivation, as a measure tending to supply the wants of the growing Mission, and that the children of the Mission be employed two hours each day upon the farms, under the supervision of a competent and skillful person." It is further recommended "that the science of horticulture be introduced at each station, and that the choicest flora of native and foreign production capable of being grown on the premises be obtained, so far as practicable, for this purpose."

The Committee on Industrial Work reported that the saw mill needs repairs of floor and roof; that one saw is in good running order. There are sixteen hands employed at the mill, and two more are needed. It is deemed desirable that some of the Mission children should be "instructed into the workings of mechanics so far as we have the means for instruction."

The agricultural department is progressing nicely. Our coffee farm is in a flourishing condition. Many of the trees are in bloom, and some have on them many berries of coffee. I think by another year a greater part of the trees will be bearing well. Our mill is now undergoing repairs, and we hope to have it in perfect running order by April 1st.

OUT-STATIONS.

"Finding that I was unable to reach a very great number of countrymen who live too far from my station to attend services, I have in such localities established preaching stations conducted by the hands employed in the Mission. They meet me each Saturday afternoon, so that I may explain to them the passages of Scripture that they are to use on Sunday at their respective stations. Great good is thus being accomplished. One station, in a very beautiful little town of about twelve hundred inhabitants, is conducted by my interpreter. The meetings are full of interest, and doubtless great good will be accomplished. The chief himself is learning to take a very great interest in the meetings, and of course, if he expresses an interest in them, the subjects will always attend very largely. I hope to see the chief converted before a great while. Another station is maintained in a smaller village, where I trust to see greater interest soon manifested.

Avery is the most interior station held by the American Missionary Association in Africa. This one step has been taken, and a sufficient time has elapsed since, to teach us that it is all-important to push our work farther into the country. There lies on either side of us a vast territory, densely populated by an anxious and thirsty people, who are dying for want of the truths of the Gospel."

MR. ARTHINGTON'S LETTER.

If your Society can so enter into the scheme I am about to propose as to assure me that the debt of your treasury—see the 31st Report—is extinguished, and that your members adopt the proposal of it prayerfully in all faith, I am impressed that I should be glad in the Lord to offer to your Society towards the carrying it into execution the sum of three thousand pounds.

The unevangelized region of Africa, to which I would call your earnest attention, and invite you to accept as a field for missionary labors, * * * * * is situated and extends from the 10th parallel of north latitude to the point southwards where the 40th meridian crosses or cuts the river Jub (or Godschob), west to east from the right (east) bank of the White Nile to the said 40th meridian, and from the parallel of longitude of that point on the Jub southwards west and east from the White Nile to the right (west) bank of the Jub, down to the 3rd parallel of north latitude, and from the 3rd parallel of north latitude down to the 1st parallel of north latitude, west and east from the 35th meridian to the Jub.

We thus avoid Somali Land, which is not at present eligible as a mission field. The territory south of the parallel 1 degree north latitude, it is hoped some other society will evangelize. * * * * *

The proffered gift, then, if accepted by you, should be regarded as a nucleus to which the church of Christ around you shall pour its offerings, and I think that two thousand pounds of the amount should be specially applied towards the purchase and perpetual maintenance of two river steamers, one to navigate the Sobat and command the mission to the Dinkas—to such of the Gallas tribes as are their neighbors on the east, between them and Enarea—to the Gallas tribes on the Chol branch of the Sobat (east or right bank), and to the Latookas west or southwest (of the Chol), if accessible from that river; and the other steamer to navigate the Godschob (called the Jub at its mouth), and command the missions to the Christian Remnants, Wollawo, &c., and to the Gallas, who are to be found in large numbers in the country west of, and up to, the right or west bank of the Godschob. And it is understood that the people of the Berri country shall claim a place amongst your earliest evangelistic efforts. Fatiko, with the Madi country, and Lake Samburu and population, are included in the area, but need not claim a first place in your labors. Possibly the Gallas on the upper course or waters of the Ozi—if geographers are right as to the position of the source of this river—may be reached from the Jub (Godschob) or from the Sobat. Your staff of missionaries for this work, so full of promise of great results, should be a well-chosen band, some of them men skilled in some of the arts, say two in the use of scientific instruments, and they should be most thoughtfully and prayerfully selected.

I ask that two or three of your very best and ablest men—men of large hearts, of enterprise and great faith, with several of the best maps before you—will study the description of the area I have delineated, and if it is not in any point perfectly clear, that you will at once ask for the missing details.

I really desire a thorough and permanent occupation of the field.

Yours most truly, in the Lord Jesus Christ,

Signed, ROBERT ARTHINGTON,
Leeds, England.

INDIAN STUDENTS AT HAMPTON, VA.

Perhaps the most striking fact of the winter is the Indian work. Four years ago a party of hostile Indians of the most intractable sort were captured and sent in irons to St. Augustine, under charge of Captain Pratt, U. S. A. They were desperate fellows; one killed himself rather than submit. Under the Christian treatment of Captain Pratt they experienced a wonderful change, laid aside their savage propensities, and heartily embraced the principles of civilization. A year ago it was proposed that they should be brought to Hampton. The experiment was tried successfully. They mingle in a kindly way with the negroes, and have manifested an earnest disposition to learn what they call the white man's road. They have given up their tobacco and their whiskey; they hold prayer-meetings together, where one may hear their tones of earnest entreaty, pleading with God in their own language. Furthermore, they show their faith by their works, and may be seen digging ditches or picking potatoes with all the energy of an Anglo-Saxon. This for aboriginal gentlemen who, four years ago, accounted manual labor to be the deepest degradation to which a warrior could submit!

Best of all, they have manifested repentance toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. At the first communion in March, eleven of them are, at their own earnest desire, to be admitted to the church. Last summer the experiment proved such a success that the school offered to take fifty more, and educate them for Government, at the low rate of $167 apiece. It was too low an estimate; but it was thought that friends would help, especially in the erection of a building. They came last fall—forty boys and nine girls—bright-faced, ready to learn, full of response to kindness. They are better than could have been expected; already some of them have shown an interest in Christ. No work could promise better. They have a great desire to learn, and are especially interested in the mechanical arts that will help their people toward civilization. Mr. Corliss has offered one of his engines for a machine shop, but there is no money with which to put a roof over it; even the Indian dormitory is yet unpaid for. For want of $18,000 the work is checked; but it is a vital work.

The experiment of negro education has been tried for the last sixteen years, until it is no longer an unsolved problem, but one of which the once unknown quantities have come to have an ascertained value. But the question of the educability of the red man has been one not so conspicuously settled. What has been accomplished in that direction has been done so far away as not to have made much impression on the American people. This year the institution, which has done so much to prove the responsiveness of the negro to educational training, has been engaged in its first experiment with the Indian. Of its success thus far there can be no shadow of a doubt. The Indian boys are contented and making progress, and coming steadily up to a plane on which they can pursue the regular courses of study. Some twelve of the Indian boys have joined the church connected with the Institute.

LA POINTE AGENCY.

From Robert Pew, teacher: Five years ago, I opened the school in this place. On taking a review of that time, it is interesting to note the advancement which the school has made. Then several young men and girls came to school who did not even know the alphabet; now nearly all the little boys and girls can not only read understandingly, but most of them can write and cipher. The number under my care is 52. Eleven left the reserve in the Spring. 45 pupils have been admitted to the school during the year. The number of Indians under the age of eighteen who can read is 48; adults over twenty, 10. The number of months taught, 9.

GREEN BAY AGENCY.

From the report of the school at the Green Bay Agency we extract the following: "Our school closed on the 20th, and we are happy to report that this has been the most favorable term since the opening of the boarding-school. We have had very little sickness and very few changes, nearly all who came at the begining of the term remaining till its close. In this respect, of steady persevering work, we notice great improvement. It is so contrary to the habits of the Indian that we note it with pleasure. The progress, too, in studies is very satisfactory."

Mr. Wheeler writes from Keshena Agency, Wisconsin, of the second successful Agricultural Fair among the Menomonees. About 200 entries of corn and potatoes were made, with other vegetables, grains and grasses in abundance. The displays of woman's work and of live stock were very fine. A ploughing match was held. About $200 was expended in premiums, voted from the tribal funds for that purpose. Advantage was taken of the opportunity for giving instruction in the arts of agriculture, and for exhorting the Indians to keep their children faithfully in the schools. Such gatherings both prove and promote progress.

SISSETON AGENCY.

Our people are doing much more than ever before in making themselves self-supporting, and in advancing their general farm work. The Indians purchased three reapers in 1878. This year they have bought four fanning mills, and are anxious to make improvements. There is every reason for hopeful and encouraging work among them.

The Manual Labor Boarding School has 56 scholars, more than can be comfortably accommodated. The scholars and parents show an unprecedented interest. During three months past, not one child has run away from the school. This has never happened before. Several Indians have recently come into the office desiring to send their children to the Manual Labor Boarding School, and we have been obliged to refuse them admittance. The Good Will School is also crowded, 46 scholars, 26 being regular boarders. Mrs. Renville has 28 scholars in her day-school, as many as can be managed. These three schools are now all full, and it is estimated that there are over 150 children of school-going age on the reservation who have no opportunity to attend school.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY.

We have an excellent young man at Dunginess as school-teacher. Although I never met him until he took charge of the school, I learned that his reputation was good where he had previously taught, and he has taken hold of the work among the Indians wisely and earnestly, and also satisfactorily to the Agent and the Indians.

In addition to his day-school for the children, he has lately begun an evening school, three evenings in the week, for half a dozen of the older Indians who wish to learn. These older Indians are accustomed to talk English, more or less, some of them quite well, and hence find it easier to learn than wild Indians would. He holds services regularly with them on the Sabbath, and on Thursday evening a prayer meeting has been sustained since last May—the only one in the county.

The last Sabbath I spent with them, I baptized two of the older Indians and received them into our church—the first-fruits of our work there. I have been tolerably well satisfied for a year that they were suitable candidates for church membership, but preferred to wait until our teacher could become thoroughly acquainted with them, as I thought that he could form a more intelligent opinion, after almost daily intercourse with them, than I could by semi-annual visits. But we agree in our conclusion.

Last Sabbath we had the privilege of receiving another of our school-boys into our church here. He is one of our older pupils, an elder brother of one already a member.

II.—NOTES ON THE STATISTICS.

1. The school in Suisun was taught only during the month of October, 1878; the one in Visalia was discontinued September 30th, after having been sustained seven months, six of which were in the preceding fiscal year. The school in Woodland was discontinued April 30th, after having been in operation fifteen months. The "West" school, in San Francisco, was begun June 1st, and promises to be permanent, thrifty and useful.

2. With the beginning of a new fiscal year (September 1st), Mrs. S. E. Carrington takes charge of the school in Sacramento, and Wah Yin becomes a helper in Petaluma, otherwise the roll of workers remains unchanged. Thirty-four teachers have served in the work during a part or the whole of the year; twenty are now in service, including five Chinese helpers.

3. The first column exhibits the full number of those who have been brought under Gospel influences in our schools, for a longer or shorter period, in the course of the year. Some may not have been in attendance more than a few weeks; but even they have heard the name of Jesus, and have received some impressions, the memory of which will not easily fade from their minds.

4. The second column gives a tolerably fair exhibit of the size of our several schools, as a visitor would find them on an ordinary evening; except that, in many of them, the last have been much the best months of the year. Thus the aggregate average attendance in July was 280, and in August 278, although three of the schools contributing to the yearly average were not then in operation; that is to say, the aggregate average attendance was greater in July by 46, and in August by 44, than the aggregate average attendance of the same schools for the entire year.

5. The third and fourth columns exhibit the several schools as they were at their best, so far as membership and attendance were concerned, in any month of the year.

6. The fifth and sixth columns relate only to the month of August—the last month of the fiscal year. Among those believed to have been converted in connection with our schools, there are many who, by reason of change of residence, or under pressure of work, are prevented, during any one month, from attending the schools. The total number of whom we have cherished the hope that they were born of God, from the beginning of our work until now, cannot be less than 235.

The Congregational Association of Christian Chinese, the conditions of admission to which are substantially the same with those upon which we receive members to our churches, has now 198 members, of whom 44 were received the past year. These remain for six months or more in the Association under instruction and probation before being baptized. Sixteen have been baptized during the year.

III.—FINANCES.

The Treasurer's report is not yet completed, and the figures here given may not be identical with those which will appear in our Annual Report; but the difference in amount, if any, will be small. The total resources for the year's work, including some amounts pledged, but not yet paid, have been $7,446.90; of which $1,947.65 were received directly into the treasury of the California Auxiliary; $1,770.65 having been contributed in this State.

The expenditures have been as follows:

Salaries of teachers and helpers	$4,648 75
Rents	1,471 00
Incidental expenses (including cost of school-room in Petaluma, $165, $115 of which were contributed in that place): for survey and fencing of a cemetery plat for Christian Chinese—contributed for that purpose by our Chinese brethren—$72; for fitting up the Sacramento Mission House, $58; for printing Annual Reports, $45; and for water, lights, fuel, traveling, repairs, postage, etc., etc., $412.30	752 30
On account of Barnes Mission House:
Paid, and to be paid on the debt	500 00
Expense of new loan, repairs, etc	74 85
	$7,446 90

We have some hope that we may be enabled to carry the payment on the debt a little over the amount named above, but are not certain of it. The debt remaining at the close of the year will be about $3,300, the property being worth about $5,500. We rely upon the rents accruing from it to pay interest, insurance and taxes, leaving us our fine school-room free of rent.

Of the amount named above as contributed in California, $304.05 were the offerings of our Chinese brethren. Over and above this amount, in contributions to Christian work, through their Association and otherwise, their gifts reach an aggregate during the year of not less than $946, making a total of gifts and offerings amounting to $1,250. Their religion is real enough and deep enough to penetrate their pockets; which, among American professors of religion, is accounted a good sign. They have felt the hard times as much as any of us. They have given often out of deep poverty, and they have given with an alacrity, a good cheer, which I cannot but believe has made their offerings rise like sweet incense before God.

SERMON.

RICHARD S. STORRS, D. D.

THE DIVINE ENERGY, INTERPOSING FOR MAN, MARVELOUS IN EFFECT.

Psalm cxviii. 23: "This is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes."

Great songs are born, usually, amid great occasions; when the signal incentive, which is suddenly presented, is matched and mastered by the genius which meets it, and song comes forth—a vital thing, for the lands and for the ages. It is born amid anguish or triumph; and the supreme energy of the spirit which thus marks it continues to pervade it while it continues to be.

The song from which these words are taken was prompted, no doubt, by the return of the tribes from their long captivity in Babylon, and was prepared to be sung at the foundation of the second Temple, when the centre was re-established at Jerusalem of the Hebrew religion, the Hebrew culture, worship, and national hope. If you turn to the third chapter of the book of Ezra, you will find that the strains of this song are there repeated, as having been used at the great ceremonial. So the psalm is full of triumph. The renewal of hope, the revival of ancient and august memories, are echoed from its stanzas. It rings with the clarion sound of shawms and trumpets, and with the acclaiming voice of the people, giving glory and praise to God.

But a great hymn lives long, and voices the feeling of many minds, in different circumstances, and in different moods: as we sing to-day in our churches the Ambrosian Te Deum; as we sing or read the Resurrection Hymn of Adam of St. Victoire; the Funeral Hymn of Prudentius; the Dies Iræ of Thomas of Celano—"Tuba, mirum spargens sonum"; Jerusalem the Golden, from Bernard of Cluny; or the Sacred Head now Wounded, from Bernard of Clairvaux. So this hymn was used by the Lord himself, in application to himself, five hundred years after, as you will see in the twenty-first chapter of Matthew; and it was part of the hymn which was sung by him and his disciples at the Lord's Supper, when the pathetic and impressive record is that "when they had sung a hymn they went out to the Mount of Olives."

It is part of the Hallel, sung at the Passover; part of the hymn which then was on the lips of the Lord himself. So that it is associated, you observe, with the greatest event of the later period of the Jewish church, and with the greater event in the history of the Christian church, when that was established by the sacrament of the Lord's Supper knitting it together, in view of Calvary and the cross, in view of Olivet and the ascension over it.

It is shadowed, therefore, by the gloom of Gethsemane, as well as radiant with the triumph of Jerusalem. It is sprinkled, as it were, with the very drops of the precious blood of Christ. It has in it an echo of his agony, as well as of the earlier triumph. It is one of the clasps, of diamond and ruby, which bind the Testaments together. Rather, in its vitality, it is a living word of God, inspired at first in his child by his Spirit, adopted afterward by his Son; which thus marks the harmony of the dispensations, the prophecy of the old with the illustrious fulfillment of the new—in the establishment of the Christian church, grander than the ancient Temple, and destined at last to fill the earth with its beauty and its power.

We come to it, then, as commended to us by Christ himself, while originally uttered five centuries before, in connection with this dedication of the Temple at Jerusalem. It continues for us, a word full of Divine instruction, always applicable to us, and never more so than when we are assembled on an occasion like the present.

You observe the careful and temperate sobriety which marks the words, in the midst of all the triumph which is in them. It is not said that "it is marvelous in our eyes; therefore it is the Lord's doing." That would be the natural impulse of a mind relatively untaught, contemplating anything amazing in nature, or in historical development. But it would be manifestly incorrect, as making our ignorance of antecedent conditions the criterion of the Divine interposition. So we should attribute many things to God's personal agency and energy which come in the operation of his general law. The meteors, which now and then flame in the midnight sky, as if hanging draperies and banners of crimson and gold along the darkened walls of the universe; the phosphorescent seas, which now and then girdle our shores with their vivid and hurtless fires; volcanic islands, bursting up in the midst of the silent sea, and making the deep to boil like a pot; the conflagration of stars, like that which Tycho Brahe saw in Cassiopeia, like those which have been seen more recently, by later astronomers, blazing and disappearing; even a summer-day in winter; even an ice-storm in summer; such a scene as some of us saw when journeying hither through Canada the other day, trees brilliant with the autumn bloom, yet loaded also with weights of snow:—these, and a multitude of other things like these, might be attributed to God's personal interposition, if it were true that what is marvelous in our eyes is, therefore, to be ascribed to Divine interference. It is not true.

The office of science is to show the harmony between such unusual phenomena and the general laws of the creation. She has been doing that in the past; she is to do it in the future; and many things which now surprise our minds, and surpass our thought, will ultimately, no doubt, be shown to harmonize with God's general method, and to be only part of his universal plan of work. In the world now present, and far more in the immortality, will this result be accomplished. La Place is said to have exclaimed on his death-bed: "Our knowledge, how small it is! and our ignorance, how immense!" But it is the privilege of the Christian believer to know that his present ignorance is only the measure of his future and immortal vision! The unanswered questions which now perplex and transcend our minds are simply the sounding-lines, thrown out by the soul, wherewith to measure the silent spaces, the tranquil depths, of the great Hereafter which lies before us.

But, while it is true that what to us is amazing, is not, therefore, of course to be ascribed by us to God's personal interposition, it is equally true, on the other hand, that when God does interpose, if he ever does, in human affairs, the result may be expected to be astonishing and transcendent.—This cannot need to be argued. Think how his power surpasses ours, his knowledge of forces and opportunities, and his eternal wisdom: think how his immeasurable supremacy transcends all parallel and all thought in us: and you see at once that if he does intervene in human affairs, then the shove of that tremendous energy must surpass all our expectation, surpass even our very conception of possible effects. It will be more than as the rush of the mighty river, compared with drops which trickle from the fingers of a child; it will be more than as the heave of the oceanic tide, measured against the impulse given by a fleck of spray, blown on the wind; it will be like the illumination of the continents by the uprising sun, compared with the feeble and transient light of these city-lamps, under whose flickering lustre we have been walking hither! Even to angels, accustomed to the presence and the sight of God, and to the demonstration of his power in forms and to an extent unimaginable by us, these interventions of his, and the results which come from them, must be amazing. Far more, then, to us.

No one can doubt this; and from it it follows, easily and instantly, that in the progress of God's Kingdom in the world, if we admit that he has such a Kingdom, in whose progress he is interested, and for whose advancement he is engaged, forces may be expected suddenly emerging, effects may be expected suddenly realized, which defy analysis, and surpass previous anticipation; the key to the interpretation of which will be found only in this principle, so carefully though so triumphantly expressed. We may not see God's intervention, then, in the minute particulars of action, in the small detail of affairs, any more than we see the blue of the ocean in the drop or in the cup-full lifted from its waters. But we shall see the Divine intervention in the mass of events, in the grand and far advancement of his Kingdom, as we see without difficulty or doubt the azure of the ocean, when we look upon it, in its heaving immensity, from the deck of the ship, or from the headland on the coast.

We may apply this principle, I think, to the interpretation of the structure, of the contents, of the power in the world, of this Bible before us, which we accept as the Word of God.

The Bible, aside from this factor of Divine agency in its authorship, is the insoluble enigma of the literary world. It well may be. It must be. Think of it! It is the oldest book upon the earth, still read among men; going back beyond the Roman or the Greek literature; going back farther than any other, in parts of it, toward the time when the waters of the deluge subsided from the hills of Western Asia; farther than any other toward the very morning of creation, when the sons of God shouted for joy. Yet its vitality continues, and its power over the human mind remains unwasting.

It is a large book. It sets its stately front for two millenniums along the lines of chronology, history, biography, philosophy, and human science. It challenges assault at ten thousand points. It says to science, "Search the strata beneath and the stars above, and find a God more equal to the problems of the universe than Him whom I reveal!" It says to philosophy, "Find anything in human nature, any power or any passion, any mean inclination or sublime possibility, of which I do not give the manifestation and the explanation!" Thus challenging assault, and opening its line along the whole extent of it to any endeavor to overthrow it, it remains the most remarkable of books.

It presents to us the literature of a people, in whom, aside from it and their relation to it, we have comparatively but insignificant interest. We read the Grecian poetry or philosophy, and it is luminous to us with the light of the Attic heavens. It is musical to us with the lofty echoes of the Attic life and history. All that is tragic, and all that is splendid, in that history, commends the poetry or the philosophy to us. We read it partly for our love of the people which originated the most exquisite and perfect instrument of thought which the world has ever seen, in the Greek language. We read the pages of Roman law, Roman eloquence, Roman history, and they to our minds are reverberating with the tread of that mighty and imperial people, whose place in history is so eminent and large, and to which we ourselves are under such constant and immense obligation. But we read the literature of the Jewish people, and that people, except as connected with the literature which is thus presented to us, has for us no attraction, and but small importance.

Then it is a book full of mysterious utterances, of thought, and of fact. And the human mind does not love mystery. It desires plain statements of the truth, which it may receive, apprehending and understanding them at a glance. It presents these utterances in a tone of authority, by which men are repelled; for the human mind enjoys receiving suggestions from others, enlightening instructions, delicately and persuasively communicated, but it reacts, and sometimes with violence, when it is told that it must accept, under tremendous pains and penalties, that which is declared to it as true.

It requires from us, also, such forms of character, such forms of action, as are in themselves distasteful to us; against the requisition of which we fight, with a native and an instant impulse. And while this is the astonishing character of the book, it is seemingly most irregular in construction, shaped by no formula of art, conformed to no critical canon of taste or judgment, such as are now current in the world.

It seems incredible, therefore, that such a book should hold its place, while the civilizations advance and change. We have, instead of the slender bark of the ancients, pursuing its slow course through the waters of the narrow seas, and looking out anxiously for the Pharos at Alexandria, the mighty steamship, steering by the stars, conquering the oceans, treading its unobstructed way through storm and tempest toward distant coasts. Instead of the camel, we have the rail-train; instead of the pen of the scribe, the type, multiplying copies of human thought a million-fold, as against the pen. Instead of the goat's-hair tent of the desert, we have the splendid and sumptuous palaces and cities of modern civilization. Instead of the javelin and the bow, we have the modern artillery, with its thunderous and fatal power, almost rivaling the artillery of the heavens.

How is it, then, that this book survives all changes in human civilization, and is as apt and powerful in its appeal to us as to those of any earliest time? The wonder grows, when we remember that it widens always in its appeal with the expansion of civilization, and is already in more than two hundred languages. It grows still further, when we remember that the best and noblest of the race are those who love it most, and search it most fondly and profoundly; who stand as humble scholars before this book of the centuries and of the earth. And the wonder comes to its very climax when we remember that this oldest, largest, roughest, and most unworldly of books, is the source and spring of civilization everywhere. Before it, inventions multiply. At its touch, commerce extends. Beneath its influence, churches rise, and spires ascend as songs toward the heaven. It prints its story on blazoned windows. It carves its records in the delicate and enduring marbles. Art, invention, enterprise, liberal governments, humane legislations, all come from this book. This is simply incredible, if it be a book of merely human authorship. Skepticism says that such a Bible has no business to be in the world. But here it is! And we pause, marveling before its mysterious and astonishing wonders, until we recognize the fact that God is in it! It is the Lord's doing; and so it is marvelous in our eyes.

It is impossible that man, unassisted by superhuman help, should have made the Bible. If the men of two thousand or three thousand years ago could construct, with their unaided faculties, a book which was to lift the race, in these later ages, and these remote regions, to heights of civilization which they themselves never attained, then either the stream does rise higher than its fountain, or our imagined modern progress is a delusion and an idiotic dream.

It is impossible that man should have made the Bible. Let all the universities of the world, after all the culture of the centuries has been accumulating in them, undertake to make another Bible for the world, and the enterprise would be looked upon as ridiculous and insane! But if we accept God's agency in it, all its mysteries are explained, with the origin of those mysteries. I do not expect to comprehend the mind of God. When we can put the stars into our pockets, then we may compass the thoughts of the Most High! Its tone of authority is then legitimate and natural; its familiar handling of the highest themes, without excitement, and without evident effort; its luminous discovery of the way of life, the law of holiness, and the redemption of Christ; the marvels of its structure,—its incessant variety, with its constant unity; its perfect simplicity, with its magnificent wealth of argument, illustration, and memorable description,—that structure by which it holds the mind of the world to it, for evermore, with ceaseless attention; the spiritual impulse which comes from it to the human soul in every mood, and the answer which it makes to every need; its inexhaustible energy in lifting peoples; its power of grasping the barbarian tribe, and transforming it into a Christian commonwealth; its inexhaustible supply for all mankind, and its unwasting power in the world:—they are all natural.

If it be the book of God, then I expect a book, not like a palace which human minds have fashioned and human hands have builded, trim, polished, charming, stately. I expect a book like the planet itself: vast and rough in its external appearance, with the treasures of the silver and gold hidden beneath the strata of rock, through which men must dig to find them; with mountain-chains, which we must patiently pierce or cross; with oceans, across which man must find his way, and whose depths he must seek to sound for himself. I expect a book which will call out the largest endeavor of the human mind for centuries, and for all centuries, before it is exhausted of its meaning. I expect the miracles contained in such a book to defy human imitation or conception. I expect prophecy fulfilled to be God's signature to such a book. I expect that it will stand for ages, the Wonder-book of the world: in which hell and heaven confront each other, while the Redeemer stands between, inviting from the one, alluring to the other.

There is no marvel in the Book of God which is not legitimate, if it be his work. It will be profound and yet simple—as it is. It will compact its whole substance into an occasional sentence—as it does. At the same time, it will make its majestic and eternal thoughts, articulated in human language, reverberate through mighty passages of prophecy and argument—as it does. It will be incommensurable with other books, as the ocean is with the clouds which are lifted from it, to be tinted by the sun and to disappear. It will be indestructible by any assault, as the planet is indestructible by any explosion of the powder of the mining engineer. It will be as permanent as the race; and it will reach, in its attractive force, to every region of the earth. Everything belonging to it is legitimate at once, if it be the Book of God!

We may apply the same principle to the Redemption in Jesus Christ, which this book presents to us. Men hesitate before this, on account of the wonders of power and of love which are involved in it; and they decline, sometimes, to receive it, because it so surpasses human imagination and human analysis. But if that Redemption be the work of God, and not of man, it must be expected to transcend all parallel and all precedent, and to surpass the reach of the human imagination.

I grant, at once, that if Christ be simply a human person, then the story related of him in the Gospels is entirely incredible. It is a myth, or a fable—the product of fancy, or the product of frenzy. But if you grant that stupendous premise—that God came to the world in Jesus Christ his Son, to redeem the world from sin and death unto holiness and eternal life—there is nothing that is not afterward legitimate, one may almost say natural, in all the marvelous story. The Incarnation itself,—it is a greater wonder, I admit, than the marvel of Creation ; as the soul, to which Incarnation is to minister, is greater than the body, for which Creation is to furnish the platform. And yet, until I can count the instants of eternity, until I can measure the fathomless depths of the wisdom and the power of God, Incarnation itself, if verified by him as his work, can do no more than amaze and uplift me, while my faith receives it as coming from his infinite purpose and plan!

And the miracle of Incarnation covers, you observe, every miracle that follows. The descent of the dove at baptism, the breaking of the Divine voice from the cloud, the walking on the water, the feeding of the multitudes, the turning of the water into wine, the cleansing of the leper, the raising of the dead, the transfiguration on the mount, the resurrection of the Lord himself, his ascension into heaven, and the coming of the Holy Ghost:—they are all natural, if the Incarnation be accepted as real. You cannot stagger my faith by any marvels, after that. They are all in essence infolded in that, as the eagle in the egg, as the harvest in the seed. And if the power of God be underneath such wonders, no matter how many those wonders be, that power is adequate to account for all! You cannot overload the ocean, by launching one steamship upon it, and then another. You cannot overload and crush the globe, by piling one mountain-peak, one mountain-chain, and then another, on its surface. You cannot fracture the force of gravitation by heaving world after world upon it, to be upborne by it. And you cannot overwhelm the strength of God, by any series of miracles, even the most amazing which the Gospel accounts record.

The character of Christ,—so supreme as it is,—that Divine personality, which fills the ages with its lustre, which dominates the world, around which the purest and the holiest sit as disciples, adoring and wondering,—that personality of Christ becomes then as legitimate and natural as is that of Cicero in the forum, or of Cæsar in the field. If God is in Jesus of Nazareth, all other marvels after that are only the idiomatic forms of expression, in which Divinity declares itself. They are simply touches of the Master on the canvas, "round as Giotto's O," which show the royal hand. Wherever Christ walks, if God be in him, I expect a miracle; and the only wonder to me is that the raiment which was transfigured could ever be soiled with mud and dust; that the brain and the muscle which held that transcendent energy in them ever submitted to be weary and faint!

We may apply the same principle to the Spiritual operation of God in his energy, when touching human souls for the advancement of his Kingdom in the earth.

The soul in every man is an empire in itself, not to be entered by others without its own permission and consent. So our power over one another's souls is always limited and narrow. We try to touch the understanding, that we may excite the feeling; we try to move the conscience, that we may affect the heart. But, after all, how limited a thing our power is! But God, who created the human soul, has access to it in all its powers and fine sensibilities, and no result accomplished in it, if he be engaged for that result, need be to us a surprise. The restraint of the most fierce and resolute enemy of truth, like Saul of Tarsus; the exaltation of the most timid, like the exaltation of the spirit in Peter, who one day frightened by the maid-servant cursed and swore, in the delirium of his fear, that he had never known the Master, but who another day met and confronted the council of the nation without a tremor in his voice or a shrinking of his heart, with all boldness saying, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather than unto God, judge ye;"—yea, that exaltation of spirit which led him at last, according to the tradition, to refuse to be crucified as the Master had been, as not being worthy of such a coronation, claiming to be crucified with his head downward:—this is not surprising, if God by his Spirit is in the work. The conversion of the most sensual and stubborn—like Augustine—the illumination of a mind the most overclouded with doubt, the inspiration of the feeble and timorous spirit, until it confronts danger without trembling, and looks undaunted, victorious, more than victorious, tranquil and triumphant, in the face of death itself—so as you and I have seen it, often; the inspiration of whole communities, which have been sluggish and stupid in their indifference to the truth, until they are pervaded by a unanimous zeal, and are lifted to the level of the most intense and perfect consecration:—all these are instantly seen to be possible, if we apprehend God in the work, and believe that by his Spirit he touches human minds and hearts. Even the inspiration of the human soul, so that it shall discern intuitively divinest truth, and declare it for the world to hear; so that it shall, in prophetic ecstasy, apprehend events still in the future, and foretell them for the world, that all men may recognize the prophecy when the event has come to pass,—this surpasses poetic fancy, this surpasses philosophic analysis, but the conception of it does not surpass our reverent belief, if we see in it the power of God's Spirit.

Men call such states of mind fanciful, or fanatical. Rather, they reveal the unsounded capacities of the human soul—how much of God it can receive and hold. They cast a light, solemn and joyful, upon immortality, and show how wondrous its experience may be! But, above all, they reveal the transcendent energy of God's Spirit, silent but mighty in the soul, lifting it to levels which all its thoughts could never have attained, could never have conceived. That which is impossible with men is possible with God: possible as it is for him to paint the rainbow, by a flash of light, on the retreating storm. Try to emulate that, if you will! Bring your ladders, and set them up. Build your scaffoldings, and with swiftest pencils try to touch the falling drops with the prismatic brightness of the rainbow! God does it, with one stroke of the pencil of his sunlight. He can stir the human soul, he can stir the whole community, as he stirs the vast undulations of the earth when the crumpling fires are burning underneath! There is nothing in the department of spiritual energy, as manifested in its effects upon the human soul, which is not possible to God who made the soul, if he chooses to exert his power. When it is the Lord's work, it may be expected to be marvelous in our eyes.

In the light of the same principle, we see how Providential interpositions of God may also be expected, marvelous in their effects as seen by us, yet perfectly natural, if attributed to the Divine interposing energy.

Nothing is so unmanageable by any man as a nation. The forces are so large which are compacted and combined in it, the mass is so immense, that any man who tries to set himself to guide a nation is like a child setting his foot against an avalanche of rock; is like a man trying to arrest the earth in its revolution. Only once in a century appears one who can be in any true sense a leader of that vast power—a nation. And he leads it, simply by absorbing the spiritual energy which is latent in it, and which is articulated and revealed in himself. He leads it, by yielding to it; and the nation directs rather than follows. Even this, as I have said, occurs only at long intervals in history. But nations are manageable and movable by God, at his pleasure, since he has access to the heart and mind of every person in their complex unity. The great men who are to be his ministers in directing them are always producible by him, at his pleasure: Cyrus, and Cæsar, William of Orange, Cromwell, Washington. The sweep of the centuries spreads out before God, shall I say, as the map of this city before your eyes? as any vivid and limited landscape on which you look! He sees the results that are to come in the far future; and to the infinite prescience of his mind that future is already realized and present. And beneath the touch of his power nations swing into new courses, are turned to new paths. He accomplishes such effects as easily as he paints the autumn woods, with the silent forces of frost or of sun-fire in the sky.

The Psalmist, in the earlier days, discerned this operation of God in the deliverance of the Jews from their long captivity in Babylon. It was amazing—his philosophy of it must be the correct one! amazing, when we remember how the more numerous tribes of Israel, carried into the earlier captivity, vanished in the East; their very footprints were effaced from the records of the world; their foot-fall ceased to echo in the corridors of time; and men have been searching for them, vainly, ever since the Christian centuries commenced. Why were the remaining tribes, fewer in number, sent back from beneath the domination of the spoiler? How came it to pass, except that God had purposes to be accomplished, for which purposes it was necessary that they should be restored to Jerusalem, and the temple be rebuilt? It was the Lord's doing; marvelous in the eyes of those who received the sudden benefit.

It was in some respects a yet more striking illustration of this when the Israelites went out from their servitude in Egypt, which permitted the exodus of three millions of valuable slaves, who had fed the army, who had raised the monuments, who had builded the treasure-cities, of that wealthiest of the ancient kingdoms. This is a marvel, without parallel in history; and the Scriptural account of the reasons for that stupendous event, in the miracles which attended it—miracles which so frightened the Egyptians, and guarded the Israelites, that for forty years the tribes wandered in the wilderness and never were touched by the vast stricken and exasperated power—the Scripture account is the most natural and credible, if God be God!

You see the same thing in the marvelous preparation of the world for the coming of Christianity into it: the Roman empire building its great avenues, reaching to all parts of the civilized earth; the Greek language becoming an expression and a vehicle, the most fit which the world had ever had—perhaps more complete than it has ever had since—for the utterance of the divinest truth; the Jewish nation made purely and intensely monotheistic, in consequence of their experience of the tyranny which was associated with the picturesque and attractive polytheism of Babylon. If all this preparation for the Gospel were the Lord's work, though marvelous in our eyes, it is not unintelligible. It would be almost incredible, otherwise.

So with the conversion of the Roman empire, in so short a time after the last persecuting edict had been issued by Diocletian; so with the enormous migration of barbarian tribes, Huns, Slavonians, Scandinavians, Teutons, in the early ages between the day of Tacitus and the time of Charlemagne—that migration of which no historian is able to give any account, as to its sources and its motives. These are marvels of God's providence, working through wild human passion, with, against, and over, the blinded and determined human will.

Canon Kingsley, in his lectures upon the Roman and Teuton, has one very striking lecture—look at it, if you have not read it—upon the strategy of Providence: in which he shows, vividly, how our German ancestors were massed in the Black Forest, into which the Roman armies dared not follow them, from which they might break forth, as they did, on the Roman Empire in France and in Spain, finally severing Britain, and France, and Spain, from the dominion of the emperors; how, on the other hand, the savage tribes were massed on the south of the Danube, near Trieste, from whence they menaced Byzantium, Macedonia, Greece, Italy, and Rome itself. He says at the close of the lecture, in substance, this: If these armies in this great war had no general on earth, they had one in the heavens; and the hosts of our ancestors, in spite of all their sins, were then and there the hosts of God.

You see the same thing, I think, in the Crusades. Men look upon these as an outburst of blind frenzy, mysterious and dreadful in history, which resulted in little except that the worst passions of human nature were terribly intensified. But remember how that immense movement, continuing for a century and three-quarters, brought Europe and Asia face to face; how it mobilized the populations of Europe, which before had been anchored so fixedly to the soil, under feudal law; how it accustomed nations, before hostile or unfriendly, to work together, in common sacrifice and common endeavor, for a noble end; how it impressed the entire mind of Europe, and expanded it, by the force of a great cosmical conception; how it broke the yoke of baronial tyranny, substituting general law in place of oppressive local rule; how largely it changed and equalized properties; how it stimulated invention, furthered art, quickened geographic research; how it thus weakened the power of the papacy, which, at first, had set it on foot for its own aggrandizement; how it nurtured political liberty, with individual freedom; and how it led, at least indirectly, to the discovery of this continent, from the stimulus which it gave to geographic exploration:—remember these things, and I think that you will see the providence of God even in this. They who were journeying to Jerusalem were really, though they knew it not, journeying westward, to pick up this hemisphere from the waves of the Atlantic. "God wills it! God wills it!" was the shout of the concourse in Auvergne, when the movement was initiated; and in a higher sense than they could know, that was true. It was God's providential movement for bringing the separated states of Christendom to understand each other, and for extending enlightenment and redemption, over Asia, and across the Western ocean!

He can accomplish such providential movements, cosmical, unanticipated, as easily as he loosens the river into motion when the ice-dam breaks; as easily as he arranges the configurations of the stars in the heavens.

I have said enough, Brethren, to show that the principle involved in these words of the Psalmist is not a remote principle, far removed from application to ourselves, connected only with devout feeling, a product of high theories and fancies in the poet's mind. It is a practical principle: the statement of which was quickened by the Spirit of God at the beginning, and was adopted afterward by the Son of God. It is a principle which sheds light on the contents, the structure, and the power of the Bible; on the greatness of that Redemption in Christ, which the Bible declares to us; on the Spiritual mastery over the hearts of persons and of peoples, by a power coming from above; and on great general movements of History, the sources of which we seek vainly to investigate, the momentum of which we cannot explain, as long as we attribute them simply to a human origin. It is a principle which has application to us; on which we may well largely reflect, especially when we are gathered on an occasion like the present, and for a work like that before us;—a principle from which we may derive the grandest inspiration in that grand enterprise which we have undertaken, for the glory of God, in the spiritual welfare of mankind.

It shows us, I think, as clearly as the sun shows objects at noonday, how Christendom has been builded.

It is the puzzle of history, it is a problem insoluble, except in the light of the principle of the text, how Christendom has been erected: out of apparently insufficient and inharmonious materials, by insufficient means, on the wreck of the ancient and splendid civilizations of the world! Remember that every nation, left to itself, tends to decay and decline, in its moral and spiritual life. The Egyptians began with worshiping the Nile, and they ended with the worship of crocodiles and of cats. It was so with the faiths of Rome, Assyria, and Greece. The Assyrians began with worshiping the moon, the sun, and the stars, which hang in the pure air of the Orient like golden globes let down from the azure discernible above them; and they ended with that awful, cruel, licentious idolatry of the later Assyrian and Babylonian times, with whose records the pages of history are defiled. The Greek began by worshiping a God, the Father of gods and men; and he passed through all stages of that fascinating polytheism which at last left it easier to find a god in Athens than a man. The Roman began with worshiping the Capitoline Jove, who smote with the dart of lightning the bronze wolf of the capitol, and who wrapped the city in a tempest on the night when Cæsar died; and he ended by worshiping such savage, lustful, and monstrous tyrants as Tiberius or Caligula. At first, he expects an existence after death; and at last, the foremost man of the Roman world makes it an argument against the capital sentence of Catiline that death is not an adequate punishment for such offenses, as death is simply extinction of being, and is, therefore, in fact, no punishment at all.

Our ancient cousins in the far-off Orient begin, as Max Müller has shown, by worshiping the Infinite, the presence of which they feel in the light, in the air, in the tempest, in the earthquake; and they go on to the worship of minor deities, in the clouds, in the trees, in the dews of heaven, until they come to the worship of every object in nature, alternating with disbelief in all worship whatever.

How is it, then, that these peoples, this circle of peoples, have been lifted up, instead of going down in this career of decline? this circle of peoples, apparently promising no such result? The debauched and dissolute Roman, concerning whom the last biographer of Cæsar has said, and it seems to me has shown, that with all his genius and all his power, that great founder of the empire could not restore a people like that to fitness for republican institutions, but had to make an empire to save them from themselves; the capricious, pleasure-loving, disbelieving Greek; the narrow, bigoted, sectarian Jew, who held a religion which taught him to love his neighbor as himself, but who hated his neighbor the more by reason of his possession of that religion; the childish, but savage and wild barbarian tribes, from whom we are sprung:—these are the peoples that are lifted up, by some power underneath and behind them. They are lifted up, humanly speaking, by a force which comes from the narrowest and meanest of them all—from that very Jewish nation which had crucified the Lord of Glory. They are lifted up by forces which seem utterly insufficient for the work. The preaching of poor men and women, of converted slaves, prisoners in dungeons, worshipers in cavern and catacomb, despised missionaries—such are the forces which lift, on the human side, those peoples up; apparently as incompetent for the office as would be straws and charred sticks to sustain the houses and temples, the warehouses and the piers, of this great city of the Interior, if the ground were now sinking swiftly from underneath them.

The Christianity which they preach is only a moral force, spiritual in its nature. It has as yet no splendid institutes, no semblance of armed power. Yet its recipients are lifted up toward the new civilization, against the most tremendous resistance of persecuting fury,—the lion, the fire, and the sword of the empire, threatening destruction to the new faith; against all powers of temptation, where life is offered on condition of denying the name of Christ; against all destructive forces of civil war; against all fierce onsets of foreign strife; against the corruption of the church itself; against all the powers of the world, the flesh, and the devil, combined to hinder or forbid the work:—until Christendom is here: with its lofty works and loftier promise; with its legislations, its libraries, its charities, its churches; with its liberties and hopes; with its illustrious record of the past, and its prophetic expectation of the future! Not a perfect thing is it, but the grandest thing that has been upon the earth as yet, and predicting a grander civilization than has been realized, in the ages to come. What has built it?

Remember that it is a unique thing of the sort in human annals. China has been twenty-five hundred years on her ancient foundations. She had the mariner's compass before Europe had it, and she has used it only to guide her timid coasters along the shores. She had the movable type. She has used it only to multiply the writings of Confucius, not to create a national literature. She had gunpowder, long before Europe, but she has never used it for anything except making fireworks. Japan has been on her national foundations as long, with no progression, until progress came rushing in with full current, in mighty tide, from the Western world, in our own days. How comes this Christendom to have been built, out of these materials, by these forces, unless God has been in the work? I say that the reverent, devout mind, looking back over these marvelous courses of events, multitudinous, almost immeasurable, and seeing how they all bear on the welfare and advancement of mankind, and on the glory of God in these, will see God in this erection of Christendom as clearly as he can see him in the balancings of the clouds, or the arch of the heavens; almost as clearly as Paul saw the Lord, in the brightness above the noonday sun, as he was journeying to Damascus! It seems to me impossible for any thoughtful man to believe that Christendom has come out of human energy solely; that it sprang up beneath the touch of Paul, and Peter, and John, at Antioch, at Ephesus, or at Rome. Nay! it has come from God's power, beneath and behind all these instrumentalities! and some time history will discern the fact, and will write the records of modern ages beneath its illumination. Then those records will be radiant with a new theophany—with the manifestation of God. Then, under all the melodies of the historic record, we shall hear rolling the deep diapason of that profound and adoring thought which recognizes the Divine in the progress of the world!

And the same principle shows us the secret and the source of the amazing development of Christian power in our own Country.

It seems impossible for any man not to see that God has here been building up a power which is to be the instrument of his will in accomplishing his mighty redemptive work in the world, in the centuries to come. Think of it! I stood the other day by the coffin of a lady, always delicate and fragile in life since I have known her, which has been for more than the term of the life of a generation. She died, at last, at the age of ninety-six. I could not but think, as I stood by her coffin, that three such lives would carry us back almost to the time of the Spanish armada; that four such lives, only equal to her own, would carry us back to within three years of the day on which Columbus planted the cross on the island of San Salvador. Four such lives bridge the whole interval! And yet in that interval what events, amazing, and wholly unparalleled, have here been taking place!

Remember that the continent had been discovered centuries before—had been discovered, and for a time had been occupied, on its coasts, by the roving Northmen. Then the knowledge of it was lost in Europe: the only great fact, so far as I know, of which intelligence once gained in Christendom has been afterward suspended. It seems to have been plucked back, almost as by force, only again to become man's possession when the printing-art was known, when the European life was stirred with fresh impulse, and when the Reformation was in near prospect. Then the lost Atlantis re-appears, and another hemisphere is added to the globe.

The first permanent and fruitful settlements that are made, on our parallels, are made by Protestants. They come, and they stay, in the strong impulse of that passionate zeal for religious liberty which has wrought so much that has been grandest on earth. Only that passion could have held men to the wilderness, in spite of winds, and wolves, and savage men, while commercial colonies, under milder skies, had faded away. Gradually, their descendants are drawn to the interior, by alluring streams, and fertile meadows. Meantime, from the straits of Belle Isle to the mouth of the Mississippi—from the everglades of Florida to the Mexican Santa Fé,—had been stretched the cordon of military posts, by Roman Catholic powers. It was finally broken, in the fierce French and Indian wars, and the continent was opened to the Protestant emigration. The Revolution gave to the matured colonies their separate life, and splendid hope. Westward flowed the constant current of advancing population; up the rivers, around the lakes, over these prairies, till it seemed arrested by yonder mountains. Gold-flakes are picked up in the beds of streams, beyond those barriers, and over them suddenly pours the nation, to plant its institutions, and set up its standards, along the far Pacific shores. It is a gradual progress, suddenly culminating; as if in fulfillment of a pre-arranged plan.

Civil war breaks out within the nation, testing to the utmost its moral force, and its military strength; and that is ended, in the triumph of the forces which had gained before their first firm foothold at Plymouth and Manhattan. The West and the East stand together through the crisis, morally assimilated in one spirit; and the work of Home Missions has saved the country. The nation is only compacted by the struggle, its unity secured for all time to come, and slavery abolished, at the flash of a pen-stroke. And to-day this nation is more full of power for the service of God, in the furtherance of his Kingdom, than ever before; its mechanisms multiplying, beyond computation; its commerce expanding; its repute in the world advancing swiftly. A constant immigration is adding to its numbers, of those attracted by its liberty, its order, its abundant opportunity. A hundred languages, or dialects of language, are spoken to-night in the city of New York; perhaps as many in Chicago. It has relations, intimate, vital, through this immigration, with all the world; not with European states alone, but with kingdoms and peoples outside of Christendom. With Christianity prevalent in it, and with enthusiasm to preach that to the world, no other people has had heretofore, or has to-day, the power of this for that great office!

It has hundreds and thousands of liberated christianized Africans in it, at just the moment when that dark continent is suddenly opened to the access of the Gospel. It has tens or hundreds of christianized Chinamen, at just the time when that vast empire from which they came, ancient and populous, is ready for the message which they have to carry. Fathers, and Brethren, what means all this, unless that God has been building here a power, for the glory of his name, and for his service in the earth? I see the stamp held in the hand, and the liquid wax lying before it; and I do not doubt that the purpose is to fix the impression on that wax, from the engraved brass or stone. I see the men whom man has brought here and whom God has converted, and before them those vast outstretching realms made ready for the truth; and I cannot doubt that his purpose is to fix by these men upon those prepared lands the inscription of the Gospel, and the figure of the Cross! It seems to me that in the end all men must feel this. Wall Street sang the Doxology once, at the end of the war; for even its eyes could see therein "the glory of the Coming of the Lord." I believe, with perfect assurance, that by-and-by shall come a time when, with the Gospel here supreme, and every wrong subjugated by it, a grand Te Deum shall swell through the land, the might of whose majestic anthem might almost startle and stay the stars!

We may see, in the light of the principle suggested by the words of the text, what we need, and all that we need, for assurance of Success in the future prosecution of a work like this in which we are engaged.

The assurance of God's interest in it—that is all which we need. No matter how many or how stubborn the obstacles which threaten it, no matter how immense the work in itself, or how small the forces combined to assist it,—if it moves in the line of God's purposes for the world, so that he will help it if it need, then nothing can arrest it; it will surely advance.

For God is not dead! He has not suddenly grown indifferent to that supreme welfare of man which more than all the circles of the suns shall manifest his glory! He does not grow weary, any more than does the light, which falls to-day as freshly on us as on the first dwellers in Paradise. He works by human forces. He educates his church by many delays. But he works without ceasing; and it is his prerogative to make small and almost imperceptible means conditions and instruments of the greatest results; as the rod of Moses divided the sea; as the word of Christ, passing into the air, became the germ of the whole subsequent development of Christendom; as, even in nature, the seed-bag of the sower holds in it the golden billows of the harvest. Wonderful things may be expected in the future, as they have been plainly seen in the past. He can move men's hearts to give, beyond expectation, as he can inspire wise counsels in administering. If any new invention is needed, that will come. If any new opening for his truth is demanded, that will be here. Millennium is not too much to expect. Men say that our thoughts of it are mere fancies. They are merely the justified expectation of God's children, concerning the final fruit of his working, the consummation of his plan. Christ is to see of the travail of his soul, and to be satisfied. Lifted up on the cross, he is at last to draw all men to him. The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, and Holiness to him be inscribed on the very bells of the horses! We can almost hear already, indeed, the footsteps of that millennial future, drawing nearer! The purified earth is to crown Christ's work, and to be close-knit with heavenly spheres!

All that we need for this assurance is confidence in God. Whatever quickens that, renews and inspires. Whatever impairs that, impedes and threatens. Our quarrel with Science, if we have one, is only this: not that she searches the universe, with lens and analysis, from stars to animalculæ, from the infinitely great to the infinitely little—all honor to her for that endeavor!—but that she strangely seems sometimes to try to diminish our personal faith in a personal Creator and Governor of all. But it is the glory of Christ always to renew this faith in us. It is the office of the Spirit to implant and to confirm it. Our confidence must be re-inspired by that influence of the Holy Ghost, till faith in God becomes supreme, and then we shall never be doubtful of the issue;—we shall no more fear obstacles when working for him than the miner fears the strata of rock, beneath which lie the golden treasures.

Such faith in God is all that we need; and if there be any Christian believers meaner than any others on earth, they must be those who have seen the stately steppings of the Almighty in our own history, and who yet are afraid of what the future years may bring!

In the light of the same principle—that if God is working in the world to renew it, the results of his energy must be amazing—we may see the extent and the limits of our liberty in Prayer, for his assistance.

We must pray always for what God approves. Then we may pray without fear or restraint, by reason of any greatness of our requests, though we ask for things impossible to man.

Our prayers may not be answered according to their terms. Our wish is not the rule of God's administration. The world would have been ruined, ages ago, if the prayers of his children had been literally answered. Christ would have come to the world too soon, and the very memory of his Gospel would have been lost in the darkness of a world unprepared. He would have come as an evident, splendid, conquering Prince; and faith in him would have implied no penitence, and love to him would have wanted that sweet unearthly might which comes from accepting him as our suffering Brother. He would never have been crucified. He would never have afterward ascended from the earth, to send forth his Spirit, and to open the gates of the kingdom of Heaven to all believers. No martyr would have ever died—from him whose face first shone like an angel's, as he looked up to the Lord, to the last victim of savage violence, or fanatical rage, or Turkish tyranny. No saint would have gone hence to the skies.

Your aged parents, who now walk there in immortal youth, would still be tottering amid the infirmities and decays of the earth. Your little children, whom you laid down in the narrow house with eyes blinded by tears, and choking hearts, would still be struggling amid the temptations and labors of the world, instead of walking, in song and joy, with shining feet, in the gardens above. No Christian heart would ever have known—the Church on earth would never have known—the blessed and the uplifting ministry of a terrible sorrow. No! we must ask for what God approves; and always in filial submission to his will.

And we may not be answered, even then, at the time of our petition, or till long afterward. It is that which is kept from us which incites us. God leads us forward, by the unattained. He does so even in secular life. What the race desires, but has not yet gained, is that which always lifts it upward. It is the principle not yet apprehended, or not yet crystallized into speech, which stimulates most the mind of the philosopher. It is that which has not been yet found out, in earth or suns, which keeps the scientific man busy with drill or tube. And so in the moral and spiritual world. It is the as yet unrealized, in its supremest thought and hope, which keeps the Church active, bold, vigorous, inventive; and God will not take away or diminish that vast incentive till the Church has been exalted, by labor and by prayer, into far more intimate sympathy with himself. We may pray, if we will, that millennium may begin next year. It will not come till we are more ready than we have been, or are, for that sublime accomplishment of God's plans.

But in this submission to God, as to the nature of our requests, and as to the fittest time for his answer, we may pray for great things, even the greatest, without restraint; since nothing is too great for Omnipotence to give. We may do it in both personal and public requests,—for the highest things of which we can think, for the accomplishment of seemingly impossible effects, while the energy to which we appeal is the energy of the Almighty. He rounds the dewdrop, and with equal facility shapes the orb of Jupiter in the heavens. It is as easy for him to put treasures into his people's hands as to paint with gold the butterfly's wing. It was no more for him to strike slavery from the land than to scatter the filmy mists of morning, or to turn the rivulet in its course. It has been no more an effort to him to open Japan, or China, or Africa to the march of the Gospel, than to part the broken earth of yonder prairie with the upshooting shaft of corn. All power is his; and we may ask for its use, in the line of his purposes, as freely as we tread the planet. He can fling wide open the gates of access to all the darkness and heathenism of the world, at a stroke of his will; and his omnipotence is forever inexhaustible. In one of the Sagas the northern hero is challenged, you remember, to drain the horn presented to him, and he laughs aloud at the easy task. A long draught, which should have drained it, but still it is full! Another follows, and a third; but the horn continues brimmed as at first—for the other end is in the ocean! As well may men think to drain that dry with thirsty lips, as to exhaust by any prayer the almightiness of God!

Finally, my Friends, there is one sweet and lofty thought at the end of this series of thoughts, which we who are gathered here to-night, and who shall never all be gathered again on this side of the Judgment-seat, may well take with us: and that thought is, that if we are Christian disciples, sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, we need not fear lest all the good promised us in the Scripture should not be realized!

I think we do fear it, sometimes. We believe that there may be advancement there, to the society of elect spirits, with larger knowledge, and sweeter purity; but when we read of the wonders of the heavenly City, it seems impossible that they can be for us. Unreal they seem; fantastic, fanciful; a bright poetic dream, but not descriptions of a transcendent and tangible fact. We sometimes see some image of the city of God, in the splendor of the sunset. We sometimes seem to catch a glimpse of it, in revery or song, in high imagination; but it disappears, and we come back to the thought that it is too vast and glorious to be really intended for such as we are.

O, my Friends, but remember that it is the City which God hath prepared for them that love him! And then let the energy of human action instruct and encourage us. How men prepare their cities! with what lavish expenditure of thought, and labor, and treasure, and life, to build piers and palaces upon the shores, along the great streets, warehouses, homes, temples for worship, the libraries, the galleries, and the vast public halls: till at last you have Venice on her lagoons, Queen of the Adriatic, beautiful as a dream, solid as mountains; Naples, along her lovely bay; Rome, upon her seven hills; Florence, on the Arno; Vienna, on the Danube; Paris; London,—the great metropolis of the English-speaking peoples of the world, with treasure of thought, art, life, of all that ministers to culture and to progress, immense, immeasurable. How you have prepared this city we are in! After the great fire which swept it, the reflection of whose flames surpassed the Atlantic, with what vast patience and stubborn force did you build again these sumptuous and splendid residences, and rear again these commodious habitations for your industry and your traffic! Shall God, then, not adorn his City, by his omnipotence? With the energies and the instruments at his command, what shall not that City be!

I do not marvel that all conceivable beauties are there blended and combined. I do not marvel at any description of battlement, gate, or crystal sea, since it is He that buildeth the City. The texts which seem to have fallen from the sky, like fragments from the jasper walls and golden pavements, and which flash before me as I read them with almost blinding refulgence,—they do not tell me too much of that city of God. No! rather, I get my brightest visions of it not from any texts, but from the cross of Christ. I know what the glory above must be, since it is to be measured by the gloom of Calvary! I know that that transcendent sacrifice was for an end so august and immortal that it passes computation, and wholly transcends all human thought! The gates of pearl, and the streets of translucent gold, the sea of glass mingled with fire, the rainbow like an emerald round about the throne: they are all real to me, because God has reared them.

My Friends, the expectation of that, let it be the inspiration of our life! the fulfilment of that, let it be the glory of our immortality! Let each one of us be so faithful and glad in God's service on the earth that we may join in the worship and the song of that immortal city! and forever, and for evermore, as we enter into its perfect blessedness, our words shall be, in that ineffable consummation, the words of him who spake of old, so simply yet so grandly, in the Hebrew tongue: "This is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes!"

INCORPORATED JANUARY 30, 1846.

ART. I. This Society shall be called "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION."

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations, and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Any person of evangelical sentiments,* who professes faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is not a slaveholder, or in the practice of other immoralities, and who contributes to the funds, may become a member of the Society; and by the payment of thirty dollars, a life member; provided that children and others who have not professed their faith may be constituted life members without the privilege of voting.

ART. IV. This Society shall meet annually, in the month of September, October or November, for the election of officers and the transaction of other business, at such time and place as shall be designated by the Executive Committee.

ART. V. The annual meeting shall be constituted of the regular officers and members of the Society at the time of such meeting, and of delegates from churches, local missionary societies, and other co-operating bodies, each body being entitled to one representative.

ART. VI. The officers of the Society shall be a President, Vice-Presidents, a Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretaries, Treasurer, two Auditors, and an Executive Committee of not less than twelve, of which the Corresponding Secretaries shall be advisory, and the Treasurer ex-officio, members.

ART. VII. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds; the appointing, counselling, sustaining and dismissing (for just and sufficient reasons) missionaries and agents; the selection of missionary fields; and, in general, the transaction of all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies; the Committee to exercise no ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the missionaries; and its doings to be subject always to the revision of the annual meeting, which shall, by a reference mutually chosen, always entertain the complaints of any aggrieved agent or missionary; and the decision of such reference shall be final.

The Executive Committee shall have authority to fill all vacancies occurring among the officers between the regular annual meetings; to apply, if they see fit, to any State Legislature for acts of incorporation; to fix the compensation, where any is given, of all officers, agents, missionaries, or others in the employment of the Society; to make provision, if any, for disabled missionaries, and for the widows and children of such as are deceased; and to call, in all parts of the country, at their discretion, special and general conventions of the friends of missions, with a view to the diffusion of the missionary spirit, and the general and vigorous promotion of the missionary work.

Five members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VIII. This society, in collecting funds, in appointing officers, agents and missionaries, and in selecting fields of labor, and conducting the missionary work, will endeavor particularly to discountenance slavery, by refusing to receive the known fruits of unrequited labor, or to welcome to its employment those who hold their fellow-beings as slaves.

ART. IX. Missionary bodies, churches or individuals agreeing to the principles of this Society, and wishing to appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, shall be entitled to do so through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. X. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present at a regular annual meeting; nor unless the proposed amendment has been submitted to a previous meeting, or to the Executive Committee in season to be published by them (as it shall be their duty to do, if so submitted) in the regular official notifications of the meeting.

* By evangelical sentiments we understand, among others, a belief in the guilty and lost condition of all men without a Saviour; the divinity, incarnation and atoning sacrifice of Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of the world; the necessity of regeneration, by the Holy Ghost, repentance, faith and holy obedience, in order to salvation; the immortality of the soul; and the resurrection of the body, and the judgment in the eternal punishment of the wicked, and salvation of the righteous.

American Missionary Association,

No. 56 READE STREET, NEW YORK.

For List of Officers, see second page of the cover.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS;

relating to the Association should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, Rev. M. E. Strieby, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Editor of the "American Missionary" to Rev. Geo. M. Boynton, at the New York office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Esq., 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. Woodworth, Congregational House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. James Powell, 112 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

Drafts or Checks sent to New York should be made payable to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of Thirty Dollars at one time, or several payments to that amount within a year, will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution, on third page of cover.)

AUXILIARIES.

Any number of persons desirous of promoting the interests of the Association may often do so effectually by forming auxiliaries, and appointing committees to increase the number of members, and present the wants of the Association to every Christian in their neighborhood. Christian women may aid us in this way by coöperation with their brethren, or by forming auxiliaries themselves.

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give the full name, "The American Missionary Association." The following form of bequest may be used:

I bequeath to my executor (or executors) the sum of———dollars, in trust, to pay the same in———days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The Will should be attested by three witnesses, (in some States three are required—in other States only two,) who should write against their names their places of residence, (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the said (A. B.) as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY

Is published monthly, at 56 Reade Street. Terms, Fifty Cents per year, payable in advance.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION."

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations, and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Any person of evangelical sentiments,* who professes faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is not a slaveholder, or in the practice of other immoralities, and who contributes to the funds, may become a member of the Society; and by the payment of thirty dollars, a life member; provided that children and others who have not professed their faith may be constituted life members without the privilege of voting.

ART. IV. This Society shall meet annually in the month of September, October or November, for the election of officers and the transaction of other business, at such time and place as shall be designated by the Executive Committee.

ART. V. The annual meeting shall be constituted of the regular officers and members of the Society at the time of such meeting, and of delegates from churches, local missionary societies, and other co-operating bodies, each body being entitled to one representative.

The officers of the Society shall be a President, Vice-Presidents, a Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretaries, Treasurer, two Auditors, and an Executive Committee of not less than twelve, of which the Corresponding Secretaries shall be advisory, and the Treasurer ex-officio, members.

ART. VII. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds; the appointing, counselling, sustaining and dismissing (for just and sufficient reasons) missionaries and agents; the selection of missionary fields; and in general, the transaction of all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies; the Committee to exercise no ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the missionaries; and its doings to be subject always to the revision of the annual meeting, which shall, by a reference mutually chosen, always entertain the complaints of any aggrieved agent or missionary; and the decision of such reference shall be final.

The Executive Committee shall have authority to fill all vacancies occurring among the officers between the regular annual meetings; to apply, if they see fit, to any State Legislature for acts of incorporation; to fix the compensation, where any is given, of all officers, agents, missionaries, or others in the employment of the Society; to make provision, if any, for disabled missionaries, and for the widows and children of such as are deceased; and to call, in all parts of the country, at their discretion, special and general conventions of the friends of missions, with a view to the diffusion of the missionary spirit, and the general and vigorous promotion of the missionary work.

* By evangelical sentiments, we understand, among others, a belief in the guilty and lost condition of all men without a Saviour; the Supreme Deity, Incarnation and Atoning Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of the world; the necessity of regeneration by the Holy Spirit, repentance, faith and holy obedience in order to salvation; the immortality of the soul; and the retributions of the judgment in the eternal punishment of the wicked, and salvation of the righteous.

Five members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VIII. This society, in collecting funds, in appointing officers, agents and missionaries, and in selecting fields of labor, and conducting the missionary work, will endeavor particularly to discountenance slavery, by refusing to receive the known fruits of unrequited labor, or to welcome to its employment those who hold their fellow-beings as slaves.

ART. IX. Missionary bodies, churches or individuals agreeing to the principles of this Society, and wishing to appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, shall be entitled to do so through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. X. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present at a regular annual meeting; nor unless the proposed amendment has been submitted to a previous meeting, or to the Executive Committee, in season to be published by them (as it shall be their duty to do, if so submitted) in the regular official notifications of the meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn, and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with, or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

Sec. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers, and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable, and have not been repealed or modified.

Sec. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

Sec. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised, or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same; provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

Sec. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

Sec. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. Section four of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

Sec. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month at 3.15 o'clock P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting, and the notices sent out, shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman, and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Home Work among the Freedmen.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Missions.
4. A Committee on Foreign Missions.

A Committee on Appropriations, of five members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail, (1,) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2,) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3,) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committees on Home Work among the Freedmen, Indian and Chinese Missions, and Foreign Missions, to report to the Executive Committee at its regular meeting every month such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these four Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings, (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee,) and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first four Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments; and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or entrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of the appropriations made by the Executive Committee, to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures, viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association, shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees, in the following order: 1. Finance. 2. Home Work among the Freedmen. 3. Indian and Chinese Missions. 4. Foreign Missions. 5. Appropriations.
4. Report of the Treasurer.
5. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
6. Reports of Standing Committees, (in the order named above.)
7. Reports of Special Committees.
8. Unfinished Business.
9. New Business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

The report of the Nominating Committee was accepted and adopted.

The Nominating Committee was empowered to hear recommendations with a view of making a supplementary report.

At quarter past five o'clock it was voted to take a recess until half-past seven.

Evening Session.

The meeting came to order at 7.30, Rev. W. L. Gage, D.D., Vice-President, in the chair.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. S. G. Buckingham, D.D.

The Annual Sermon was preached by Rev. Alex. McKenzie, D.D., from the text: Exodus, chapter ii, 9th verse.

At 9 o'clock the meeting adjourned until Wednesday at 8.30.

Wednesday Morning.

A devotional service was held at 8.30, conducted by Rev. R. B. Howard.

At 9 o'clock the meeting was called to order by Rev. W. L. Gage, D.D., Vice-President. Scriptures were read and prayer offered by Pres. Geo. F. Magoun, of Iowa.

The minutes of yesterday's sessions were read and approved.

A letter from Hon. E. S. Tobey, President of the Association, was read regretting his inability to attend, and rejoicing in the prospects of the cause.

A paper on recent progress of Protestant missions throughout the world was read by H. K. Carroll, Esq.

Rev. L. W. Bacon, D.D., then addressed the meeting upon the new reformation in France, and, in closing, introduced Monsieur Eugène Réveillaud, member of the Reformed National Church of France, who made an address in his native tongue, which was interpreted by Rev. George T. Dodds, minister of the Free Church of Scotland and one of the Directors of the McCall Mission in Paris.

Rev. Mr. Dodds also made an address on the progress of evangelical religion in France.

Rev. Dr. Gage being obliged to retire, Rev. W. W. Patton, D.D., a vice-president, took the chair.

The report of the Committee on Church Work was read as follows, by Prof. Wm. J. Tucker, D.D., chairman, who supplemented the report with an address:

The Committee upon Church Work would emphasize the fact that the religious work among the Freedmen is essentially that of reformation. The churches of this Association are the reformed Churches of the South. Incidentally, they are Congregational. The reason which called them into existence, and which justifies their separate organization, is the demand for a pure, intelligent, progressive Christianity. The Association steadily refuses to multiply churches, or to increase their membership, except as the true type of personal piety can be established and maintained. And, acting upon this principle, the growth of the church is made to depend upon the material which can be prepared for it; in other words, the church is essentially the product of the school. There only can the foundations be laid for an intelligent faith and a pure morality.

Your Committee desire to commend the patient adherence, not only of the Association, but of the churches themselves to this principle. They would also acknowledge with gratitude the prosperous condition of the churches as set forth in the more detailed reports submitted. With hardly an exception, they are provided with houses of worship, they are substantially free from debt, discipline has been thoroughly maintained, mission work has been earnestly carried on, benevolence has been largely increased, the pulpit has been well supplied, and in many cases there have been most gracious proofs of the special work of the Spirit of God.

The present number of churches is 73, an increase the last year of 5, with a present membership of nearly 5,000, an increase of 635.

The question of greatest urgency connected with the department of Church Work, is that of education for the ministry.

Three of the schools have a theological department—Fisk, Talladega and Straight. There is also a theological department connected with Howard University, partly under the care of the Association. But no one of these has any endowment. No permanent provision whatever has been made for the instruction or support of those studying for the ministry. The work is carried on under every possible disadvantage. Meanwhile the demand for an educated ministry is steadily and rapidly increasing. The work of education has now reached the point where the ratio of increase will soon be enormous. Over 150,000 children have been under instruction the past year. The material for churches will soon be abundant. The only question will be, can it be used?

Other denominations, too, are looking largely to the schools of the Association for ministers. And England, in her missions for Africa, naturally turns to the Freedmen of America for missionaries.

Your Committee would call the attention of the churches to the growing prominence of the religious question at the South, and would most earnestly advise the patrons of this Association to make fit provision and endowment for the permanent work of educating men for the ministry.

Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., made an address on the Character and Prospects of Church-work in the South.

At 12.30 a recess was taken until 2.30 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

The Lord's Supper was administered at 2.30 p. m., Rev. J. O. Barrows, Missionary of the A. B. C. F. M., and Rev. Jonathan Edwards officiating.

At 3.30 business was resumed, Rev. W. W. Patton, D. D., in the chair.

The Report of the Committee on Indian work was read by its chairman, Rev. A. H. Bradford:

Your Committee, to whom has been referred that part of the Report of the Executive Committee which concerns the American Indians, beg leave to report as follows:

We recognize with gratitude the work which has been accomplished by the American Missionary Association in behalf of the Indians, in its missionary and educational departments.

We especially recognize and commend the success of the experiment of bringing youth from the tribes, and educating them at Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute and at Carlisle Barracks; and, at the same time, we record our decided opinion that the schools on the reservations, while the reservations are continued, must be relied upon as among the most efficient agencies for improving the condition of the Indians.

We believe that the possibility of civilizing the Indians is no longer an open question, as is proven by what has already been realized at the Fort Berthold, Lake Superior, S'kokomish, and all the agencies.

But your Committee desire emphatically to express the opinion that all attempts to civilize and Christianize the Indians must be slow and unsatisfactory until there is a radical change in the relation between the Indians and the United States Government. The Committee, therefore, desire to reaffirm two resolutions adopted at the last Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, as follows:

Res. 1. That the aim of this Association shall be, as far as possible, and as rapidly as possible, to secure for the Indians,

(1.) A legalized standing in the courts of the United States.

(2.) Ownership of land in severalty.

(3.) The full rights of American citizenship.

These three things, we believe, are essential, if the Indian is to be either civilized or made a Christian.

Res. 2. That to this end the members of this Association will do all in their power to make the Indian question a pressing question, until the attention of Congress is so secured, and held to it, that the legislative enactment necessary to bring about these changes be completely accomplished.

General S. C. Armstrong made an address upon the education of the Indians, with especial reference to the methods pursued at the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute.

He then introduced twenty-four Indian youth from Hampton Institute, who repeated the 23d Psalm in concert, gave a specimen of conversation by the natural sign language of the Indians, and sang with the audience: "What a Friend we have in Jesus."

Rev. A. H. Bradford made an address on the Indian Problem, and gave hints towards its solution.

A letter upon the same subject, from General Clinton B. Fisk, was read by the Secretary.

The Reports of the Committees on Church Work and on Indian Work were accepted.

At 5.30 a recess of two hours was taken.

Evening Session.

The meeting was called to order by the presiding officer at 7.30.

Prayer was offered by General E. Whittlesey, of Washington, D. C.

Rev. Addison P. Foster read the report of the Committee on Educational Work. The report was accepted.

The Committee appointed to report on Educational Work among the Freedmen, find themselves asking and attempting to answer the following questions:

1. What is the work of this Association in the South?

It is to do all it can towards giving a Christian education to about five millions of colored people. Thirty-four years ago, when it began to work among them, they numbered about half as many, and most of them were slaves. To-day, though inheritors of the debauching influences of slavery and the yet deeper injuries of antecedent centuries of barbarism, they are citizens of the United States. This vast multitude, needing so much both on their own account and ours, is the Association's divinely appointed field of work.

2. What means has the Association had to prosecute this work?

The Association began, thirty-four years ago, with nothing. Four years after it had an income of $25,000. Through the succeeding years this income steadily increased, until just before the war of the Rebellion it received $56,000 annually. At the beginning of the war God opened for its activities in the South a great and effectual door. It sent forth teachers and missionaries, numbering in 1863, 83; in '64, 250; in '65, 320; in '67, 528; in '68, 532. In 1865 the National Council at Boston recommended that $250,000 be raised and expended among the Freedmen under the direction of this Association. The hearts of the people were stirred, and most generous responses were made, so that the income of the Association from that day on has never been less than $179,900 a year, has once gone up to $312,000, and was this year for ordinary current expenses $187,000, with $150,000 additional for an especial purpose.

3. What have been the Association's aims?

They have been in the line of a Christian education. The Association has sought to build up the whole man, securing by wise training a systematical proportion in every part. It has attempted to lay the foundation of manhood and womanhood in sound mental training and it has not forgotten to put on the capstone of the temple by consecrating that educated intellect to the Lord. In other words, the school and the church have stood side by side throughout its history, in accordance with the ideas of our Puritan fathers, and never has it been thought possible for one to prosper without the other. On the one hand, education has been broad and thorough. With flaming torch it has touched the race at every point, and kindled innumerable lights in the prevailing darkness. Three departments of education have been constantly kept in line, the intellectual, the industrial, and that which we may call character-building;—the mind has been trained to think, the fingers to work, and character has been developed. It is on account of the last department that the others are especially important. The Association labors to make not mere recitationists, but thinkers; not mere delvers, but skilled workmen; nor yet this alone, but men and women in the noblest sense, self-reliant, earnest, provident, courteous, pure and true. But in this last and greatest department of effort, it recognizes the fact that the school is nothing unless Christian, and that the Christian school does but begin what the Church alone can carry on.

4. What then has the Association accomplished?

It has outgrown its first stage of Christian education, is now in its second, and is beginning its third.

Its first stage was primary. It found the colored race in abject degradation, having by law been kept in absolute ignorance. It was obliged to begin with the spelling-book, and first of all teach the alphabet to the old no less than to the young. But as the years passed and education proceeded, a second stage became practicable. Academies and colleges must furnish a higher education for those who had outgrown the primary grade. Steadily has the Association carried on this great work, and now, with unspeakable gratitude to God, it points to eight chartered collegiate institutions which will compare favorably with any for a similar purpose in the North; and to twelve higher schools and academies. These Christian homes for education are raising up an army, already several thousand strong, of bright young colored teachers, who are seeking out every nook and corner of the South to carry on there the work of primary education. Thus is the original work of the Association passed over and now done on a more extensive scale by the colored people themselves.

But the care of these higher institutions belongs to the Association only temporarily. In the inevitable progress of events, these will and ought to pass out of its hands. As they become self-supporting or suitably endowed, it is fitting that the Association be relieved of their care, that boards of trustees, specially interested and for the most part living in their vicinity, become responsible for their management. This is already the case with several of our chartered institutions, pre-eminently Hampton Institute and Berea College, and to a limited extent, Atlanta and Fisk Universities. Yet, while we say this, it should be remembered that the institutions already established are as yet very far from being in a condition to care for themselves while the eight chartered schools are only a beginning towards the far greater number that are needed all over the South. A vast work, therefore, still remains to this Association in its second stage of progress.

But as this work of higher education goes on, the third stage of Christian training becomes more and more prominent and more and more successful. The organization of churches of intelligent Christian people capable of self-government, and the supplying them with an educated ministry, becomes a grand possibility and the supreme duty. While the Association is not yet relieved from the care of educational institutions and will not be for a long time to come, yet in God's providence this third stage of effort has already grandly begun and is every year increasing in importance. Not to trench on the province of other Committees, we will here only say that the theological schools under the care of the Association are taking every year a more prominent position in our thought and work. There are four such schools with which this Association has more or less to do,—those at Straight University, New Orleans, at Talladega, at Fisk University and at Howard University.

5. What are the present encouragements of the Association in its educational work?

We note with pleasure the growing interest in our schools and approval of them by the best people of the South and the public men of the North, the recent erection of a fine building for Tillotson Institute at Austin, Texas, the munificent gift of $150,000 by Mrs. Valeria G. Stone, to be expended in putting up additional buildings, greatly needed, for institutions which have outgrown their present accommodations; the recent acceptance by Christian workers of high standing and rare fitness, of positions in our Southern field, the successful development of industrial methods in many of our best schools, notably at Hampton, Tougaloo and Memphis, the influence of our institutions on the colored people as seen in their interest in education, their willingness to endure self-denial as teachers, their hopeful, dispassionate and sensible utterances on their prospects and duties, and their courageous self-support; and once again and most of all do we note rejoicingly the prevailing religious sentiment that fills our schools and the colored communities which they reach with its deep, quiet but melodious undertone. Surely there is reason in all these considerations for profound thankfulness to God.

6. What are the immediate needs of the Association?

We are impressed with the call in the Secretary's Annual Report for enlargement. With the added facilities now providentially given and soon to be enjoyed in the shape of new buildings at Austin, New Orleans, Nashville, Tougaloo and Atlanta, there is a necessity for larger contributions for the education of the increased numbers to be accommodated. Similar facilities are loudly called for by the growth of schools at other points, and the report suggests the need of new schools in Kansas and Arkansas. We cannot forget that the second grade of education will not be complete till these institutions are properly endowed, and the students, coming out of poverty-stricken homes, receive annually, either from scholarships or personal gifts, the small sums necessary to supplement their own earnings and so to make their education possible.

Especially do we recognize the need at this juncture of more efficient theological training. Our church-work cannot prosper unless educated colored men are raised up to act as missionaries and pastors. The theological training now given is, from the want of proper facilities, with the exception, perhaps, of the work done at Howard University, where the Presbyterians share in the support of the department, of the most meagre and unsatisfactory character. We greatly wish that some large-hearted Christian givers might find it their privilege suitably to endow the theological schools already existing, that they might become in all respects for the colored students of the South, what Andover, Chicago and other similar schools are for the white students of the North.

Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D., of New York, addressed the meeting at length, on giving education and religion to the neglected races.

Rev. Addison P. Foster, of New Jersey, and Rev. Alexander Hannay, D.D., Secretary of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, continued the discussion of the subject until 10 o'clock, when the meeting adjourned until 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

Thursday Morning.

Devotional services at 8.30 were conducted by Rev. Francis Williams, of Chaplin, Conn.

At 9 o'clock the meeting was called to order by the presiding officer, Rev. Dr. Patton.

The minutes of yesterday's sessions were read and approved.

Addresses on the educational work were made by Rev. H. S. De Forest, President of Talladega College, Ala.; Rev. Wm. E. Brooks, Pres. Tillotson Institute, Texas; Prof. C. G. Fairchild, of Berea College, Ky.; Rev. I. P. Warren, D.D., of Maine, and Dist. Sec'y James Powell, of Illinois.

The Committee on African Missions reported through its chairman, Rev. H. M. Ladd, of New York, who followed the report with an address.

The Committee, to whom was referred those portions of the Report of the Executive Committee relating to the work of the Association in Africa, beg leave to submit the following report:

We stand at the opening of a new era in the history of African missions. No real cause for discouragement in the present aspect of affairs presents itself. There is, on the contrary, abundant reason for gratitude to God, that through the darker experiences of the past, in which He has revealed to us more clearly what are His plans, He is leading us to the brighter issues of the future. The logic of events is irresistible. We, of this Association, are driven to certain hopeful conclusions.

1st. Africans for Africa. This is the evident teaching of God's providence. It is the great lesson of the Mendi mission. The long list of the heroic dead, martyrs for the Gospel in Africa; the vast expenditure of resources necessary in supporting white missionaries; the peculiar dealings of God's providence with the negro in this country, especially fitting him for this work—all point in this direction. This is the fact which gives peculiar significance to the work of this Association, both in this land and in Africa, and we hail it with encouragement and hope as one element of the new and happier era of lasting success, which we believe will, in the future, attend, under God, the missionary work of that waiting continent.

2d. Need of careful supervision. In view of the facts laid before us, and in view, also, of the important enlargement of the work contemplated, we most heartily commend the determination of the Executive Committee to appoint a general superintendent of the work of this Association in Africa. Such a superintendent appears to us to be a necessity. We believe that he would have more than he could conveniently do in devoting himself to systematizing the work in its various phases, providing a suitable literature for the people, supervising educational and industrial enterprises, keeping account of the financial matters of the missions, giving character and direction to the counsels of the missionaries, studying new regions for advance movements, reporting needs and plans, and thus enlisting interest at home and abroad. We urgently hope, therefore, that the appointment of such a superintendent, residing at some healthful point, easily accessible to the missions, will be made at the earliest practicable moment.

3d. The subject of the Arthington Mission is no longer an open question. You have already determined, upon conditions believed to be practicable, that you will occupy that land for Christ. The money, we have some reason to hope, is coming, the men are coming, the Association is only waiting to begin wisely. In an enterprise of such vast moment to all concerned, care is better than cure. Your Committee believe that they only give voice to the earnest desire of the churches, when they express the hope that, as soon as the necessary funds are received, you will go forward with the same judicious care as in the past, and take the proper steps to ascertain more fully the best ways of entering this open door for enlarged work and greater results.

4th. In view of the events of the year, so full of sadness in the history of many African missions, your Committee recognize the fact more clearly than ever before, that the call of God rests, in an especial manner, upon this Association, to maintain and enlarge this African work in the way of His own appointment. The great results it is achieving for the negro of the South have received a new meaning and impetus in the light of African missions. The whole problem of the negro in America is finding its solution slowly but surely. In the providence of God this Association, in the two-fold relation which it holds to the Freedmen of America on the one hand, and to the Pagans of their fatherland on the other, more truly than any other, we believe, holds the key to the evangelization of Africa.

Your Committee, therefore, feel warranted in suggesting that the true attitude of this Association, in view of the report of its missions in Africa, should be one of thankfulness for the experience of the past, encouragement in the work of the present, and earnest expectation for the future.

Addresses were also made by Prof. T. N. Chase, of Atlanta, Ga., giving, in part, the results of his special mission to the stations in the Mendi country, and by Rev. Lewis Grout, formerly a missionary in Africa. The report was accepted.

Recess was taken until 2½ o'clock P. M.

Thursday Afternoon.

The meeting was opened with singing.

An invitation from the Congregational churches of Worcester, Mass., was extended to the Association through District Secretary Woodworth, to hold its next annual meeting in that city. The invitation was, by vote, accepted.

Remarks were made by Dr. Patton, President of Howard University, D. C.

The Committee on Finance and Enlargement reported through Rev. Wm. H. Willcox, D. D. of Mass.:

Your Committee on Finance and Enlargement, to whom was referred the financial exhibit of the Association, for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1880, as presented by the Treasurer, beg leave to report that they have examined the accounts and found them duly audited. These accounts include a minute and detailed statement of receipts and expenditures, a list of the endowments, and also a full account of the property owned by the Association, and were accompanied by the account books of the Treasurer.

We are unanimous in vouching for the faithfulness and economy which characterize all branches of the financial administration. Nor can we refrain from a word of most emphatic commendation of the thorough explicitness of the Association's financial statement.

But passing from this to the substance of the Report, we notice three points suggested by it which seem to call for special mention.

In the first place, it is ground for gratitude and thanksgiving that the year closes without leaving us burdened with a debt. On the contrary, there is a balance in the treasury of nearly eight hundred dollars. Not a very large surplus, surely, but the fact that the year's work has been done and left us anything besides a disheartening deficiency, is itself occasion for thankfulness and cheer.

In the second place, there is ground for anxiety, lest the financial condition of the Association should be misunderstood.

It is well known that a gift of $150,000 has recently come into its treasury. This fact, it is to be feared, has given, or may give, the impression that the Association is, for the present at least, in no further need of funds. We have already heard of one generous friend who has withheld an intended gift through such an entire misapprehension. And lest others should be similarly misled, it seems to us important not only to state, but to emphasize the fact, that this large gift brings no relief whatever to the usual wants of the Association. It is not designed to do the work which the Association is doing. This money is wholly appropriated to the erection of new buildings for the increasing number of colored students. It is to do nothing whatever towards meeting the ordinary expenses of the Association's work; nothing whatever towards diminishing the necessity of aid which the Association is compelled to seek from the Christian and the philanthropist. It cannot be too clearly seen or too widely known, that so far as any augmented power for doing its proper work is concerned, the Association is not one whit better off for this gift of $150,000, than it would be if not a dollar of it had been given. But,

In the third place, this gift is itself a trumpet call for the enlargement of the Association's resources and work. It is simply to erect new buildings for Fisk and Atlanta, at Talladega, New Orleans and Tougaloo. These buildings will soon be filled with students. That means the necessity for more teachers and more pecuniary aid to those who need it. It means increased work for the Association, and the necessity of increased funds with which to do the work. In one word, it means expansion, enlargement. God, himself, is opening before us new furrows in hitherto untilled fields. That is His own call upon us for more seed-corn, and more labor for the enlarging harvest. He is building for us new homes for the development of mental culture and Christian character among the colored people of the South. Each one of these is a Divine summons for such co-operation on our part as is necessary for the best accomplishment of His designs.

In conclusion, therefore, your Committee respectfully suggest the adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, While most gratefully acknowledging the prosperity that has crowned our work through another year, we recognize and accept that prosperity as itself a call from God for still larger and more earnest work."

Addresses followed by Secretary Strieby, Rev. A. F. Beard, D.D., of N. Y., Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D.D., of Conn., and President Magoun, of Iowa.

The report was accepted and the resolution adopted.

The following resolutions were, by vote, referred to the Executive Committee for their consideration:

Resolved, That a Committee of eleven be appointed to inquire whether the Constitution of this Association can be revised with advantage to the security and efficiency of the Society, and report at the next Annual Meeting.

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be instructed to enter into consultation with other societies appealing for contributions to the Congregational Churches, with reference to a uniform size of page for their monthly publications and annual reports.

The Nominating Committee reported that some suggestions made in regard to officers from certain States be regarded in the nominations of the next Annual Meeting.

Recess until 7½ P. M.

Thursday Evening.

The Association met at 7½ P. M., Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D.D., in the chair. The session opened with singing, and with prayer by Prof. S. H. Lee, of Oberlin, Ohio.

The report of the Committee on Chinese Missions was read by the chairman, Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D., of New York.

Your Committee, to whom was referred that part of the Report of the Executive Committee which concerns the Chinese, beg leave to report as follows:

1. That in estimating the success of their work, the difficulties under which it has been prosecuted must be borne in mind; the fact that it has been carried on in the face of an intense hostility to the presence of Chinese upon our shores, extending not only to the lower classes, but also, in not a few localities including influential clergymen and laymen, and become so far a dominant sentiment, that both the great political parties have yielded to it by inserting anti-Chinese planks in their platforms.

2. That this work ought to be not only generously supported and vigorously maintained, but, so far as practicable, extended, especially by the establishment of schools and mission work among the Chinese in the mines.

3. That while your Committee recognize the difficulties in the way of establishing a mission in China, they also see that there would be great advantage, both direct and indirect, in thus connecting a foreign with the home work, and they recommend the Board to give serious consideration to the proposition, and to carry it into execution, if, on a more thorough inquiry, it shall be found practicable to do so without interfering with the other work of the society, or with the work of other Evangelical missions in China.

Addresses were also made by Dr. Abbott, of N. Y., Rev. Samuel Scoville, of Conn., and Rev. R. B. Howard, of Mass.

Voted, that the reports of the various Committees be adopted, and that the minutes, reports and addresses be referred to the Executive Committee for publication at their discretion.

The following resolutions, offered by Dist. Secretary Woodworth, were adopted:

Resolved, That this Association tenders to the Congregational Churches of Norwich hearty thanks for inviting and receiving the thirty-fourth Annual Meeting of this body to its beautiful city.

To the Broadway and Second Churches special thanks for the use of their houses of worship and parlors connected therewith, to accommodate the sessions of the Association, and the Christian women who have met to pray and confer in behalf of the poor and the needy.

Grateful thanks, also, to the Congregational pastors of the city for time and labor, and co-operation freely given in receiving and caring for the meeting.

The Association would render warmest thanks to the members of these churches, and to the good people of the city who have opened their houses in generous hospitality, and received their guests with a graceful courtesy, which has doubled the value of the gift.

It would thank the choir of this church, as well as the individuals who, during the meetings, have rendered us pleasant aid in the service of song; and it would assure the press of this city, that it is not insensible to its aid in sending forth, from day to day, faithful and liberal reports of the various proceedings.

It would put on grateful record the liberality of those railroads which have favored the attendants on this meeting with reduced rates of fare over their different lines.

And, in particular, would it record its sense of obligation and its thanks to Charles E. Dyer, Esq., and to the efficient Committees who have planned and executed the arrangements for this meeting, which have made this thirty-fourth anniversary one of the best, if not the best, in its history.

Rev. Wm. S. Palmer, D. D., of Norwich, chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, made hearty response.

After singing, and the benediction by Rev. Mr. Chamberlain, the Association adjourned.

GEO. M. BOYNTON, Secretary.

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

OBITUARY.

It is with thanks to God that we come to this Anniversary with the gratifying statement that no executive officer of the Association, and no worker in active service, has died during the year; and it is equally gratifying that those whose names appear on our death roll were so abundantly prepared for the change. Rev. Charles B. Venning, whose name stands on the list of our missionaries in Jamaica in our first Annual Report, and who was one of the most faithful and self-sacrificing missionaries on that list while health permitted activity, and most patient under a long and painful illness; Miss Dell Safford, for six years a conscientiously active teacher in Alabama in the earlier days of our work there; Mrs. Julia Spence Chase, who with her husband had been in Fisk University eight years, for a portion of the time an instructor in music, and at all times and to the very last a devoted friend of the colored people; Mrs. Sarah Spees, twice on our mission field among the Indians, fearless in dangers and faithful in work, then retiring from the work to wait three years by the river; Peter Smith, of Andover, Mass., one of our Vice-Presidents, born in Scotland, fondly devoted to his native land, yet one of the first to offer his adopted country the means he had earned on her soil towards suppressing the rebellion, a life-long friend of the oppressed, liberal with the abundant wealth God gave him, and devoted in heart to the Redeemer; and Edward P. Sanford, a director in our California Auxiliary, active, efficient and prayerful: these are our dead—faithful in life and peaceful in death, they have gone to their reward.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The battle cry of the American Missionary Association now is ENLARGEMENT. We are called to this by a review of the past, by the encouragements of the present, and by the demands of the future.

I. THE REVIEW OF THE PAST.

Decennial year suggests a review by decades. We select the last four. If, from our stand-point, we survey the decade ending with the year 1850, we shall see the anti-slavery reform quietly yet persistently pressing forward, using, in its aid, the pulpit, the press, the platform and the ballot, while its friends are denounced as fanatics by the mass of people in Church and State.

The American Missionary Association, then four years old, was doing its part, not only in its testimony for the slave, but in a good work in home and foreign missions, on an income of $25,000.

At the close of the year 1860 the agitation is intensified; the North is alarmed, the South is frenzied. Men speak with bated breath of the things that may soon come to pass. The lines of battle are forming, and the raid of John Brown is the first signal gun from the one side, and his death on the gallows is the answering gun from the other. The work of the American Missionary Association feels the pressure of the coming struggle. Its picket lines of missionaries in the South are driven in; thirty-six persons fled from Berea, Ky., to save their lives; one missionary in North Carolina escaped, another was imprisoned, those in Kansas were providentially shielded, while their friends were murdered around them.

The survey at the close of 1870 reveals in rapid succession the passing of the dreadful storm-cloud of war, the lightning flash of the Proclamation emancipating the slaves, and the rainbow of mercy spanning the South in the line of missionaries and teachers among the colored people. The American Missionary Association sent into the South, from 1861 to 1870, a steadily increasing number of such Christian soldiers, and at the close of the decade the roll-call of that year was answered by 533 of these peaceful warriors. But the South was defeated, not subdued. The embittered spirit, driven from the more honorable battle-field, found vent in the midnight raids of the terrible Ku Klux Klans.

The review of the decade drawing to a close with the year 1880 is full of encouragement. The sound of war has not been heard in the South; the negroes are free, and many of them have made great progress in acquiring homes, education, and better views of the Christian life. Many have become teachers and are now instructing thousands of pupils, while others have become eloquent and faithful ministers of the Gospel, and some have gone as missionaries to Africa; but the mass are still ignorant, impoverished and oppressed. In making contracts for labor, and in renting and purchasing land, they find themselves at the mercy of the whites. They toil all the year and scarcely get the scantiest living; they receive very inadequate help from the public school funds, and their political rights are practically annulled. In utter discouragement, thousands have migrated to Kansas, rather than continue the wearisome and hopeless struggle at home.

The sketch of these forty eventful years forces the conviction that Providence does not intend that the negroes shall be left, after all this, in their present unsatisfactory condition. Surely the great drama must be completed. The negro must be saved from mental as well as physical bondage, and America must be saved from the curse of a neglected as well as of an enslaved population. And surely, too, the American Missionary Association, which was among the first to seek the good of the slave, and the first, both in time and efficiency, to elevate the Freedmen, must be helped on in its great work. The voice of God to this Association, as it comes down through these forty memorable years, is, "Enlarge your work."

II. THE ENCOURAGEMENTS OF THE PRESENT.

FINANCES.

We present our financial situation as one of these encouragements, and first in order, as being special, we mention the receipt of $150,000, the donation of Mrs. Valeria G. Stone, of Malden, Mass. This munificent gift has been so confidently anticipated that Prof. T. N. Chase has for some time been occupied in maturing plans for the buildings to be erected by it, so that the work at all points will be pushed forward with rapidity and economy. We hope, therefore, at our next Annual Meeting, to announce that buildings have been erected at several points in the South, that shall afford much needed facilities to overcrowded schools, and that shall serve as monuments to the liberality and wisdom of the donor, more fitting, because more useful, than the most costly shaft or obelisk.

Next in order, but not least in significance, we refer to the financial exhibit of our Treasurer, with its favorable balance sheet. The receipts for the year, aside from Mrs. Stone's donation, have been $187,480.02, which, together with the amount on hand Sept. 30, 1879 ($1,475.90), makes a total of $188,955.92; and the expenditures $188,172.19; thus giving a credit balance of $783.73.

As a part of the gratifying results of the year's expenditures, as we had no debt to pay, we can point to four school buildings newly erected or greatly improved; to six church edifices completed; to two in the process of erection; to five repaired and improved; and to three parsonages repaired, one in process of erection, and one built by the people. Among these new school buildings we are glad to number the large and commodious edifice for Tillotson Institute, Austin, Texas, a permanent outpost, we hope, in the rapidly increasing population of the great South-west. One of the new church buildings, that at Tecumseh, Ala., was erected for our use by the Iron Company at that place, and we take this occasion to express our thanks to the company for its wise liberality.

Such a balance sheet, carrying on the one side our regular work and these new and greatly needed buildings, yet held in even poise by the generous donations of our friends, is an argument for enlargement at other points calling for it with increased importunity. We dare not be presumptuous; but may we not trust still further to the God of the poor, and will not his people sustain us in the trust?

FREEDMEN.

Our Educational work among the Freedmen furnishes the next source of encouragement.

The increasing appreciation of our schools by both the white and colored people of the South, is manifest. Georgia, the Empire State of the South, continues to give the substantial assistance of her annual appropriation of $8,000 to the Atlanta University. A large majority of the State Board of Examiners attended the anniversary exercises this year. Their examinations were close, their report to the Governor wholly favorable, and their recommendation of the continuance of the appropriation unhesitating, the closing words of their report being: "Who can doubt the wisdom of continuing the appropriation?"

The State of Mississippi was represented at the Commencement exercises at Tougaloo by her Superintendent of Education and other influential citizens, who, after careful inspection, gave public assurance of State aid. The first instalment, we are confident, will reach us this fall. Soon after the war, when this State was under Republican rule, it granted aid to Tougaloo. Under changed political control, this grant was for a time withheld, but now while overwhelming Democratic majorities are regularly reported, the proffer of aid is renewed. The significance of the fact is that both political parties, much as they may differ on other points, are agreed in sustaining the Tougaloo University.

Another evidence of such appreciation is found in the increased attendance at our school anniversaries of persons who represent public sentiment, and in the favorable notices of the local press. At Hampton, President Hayes, Secretary Schurz, the Governor and an ex-Governor of Massachusetts were present; at Berea, the audience numbered probably 1,800 or 2,000 persons, two-thirds being of the white race; at Fisk, there was reported "a crowded house;" at Atlanta, the audience was packed; at Straight University, New Orleans, it is reported that "the audience, both in numbers and intelligent appreciation, was one of the best ever gathered for the purpose in the city." We will only add in the line of the thought before us, that the accounts we have copied as to the excellence of these examinations and anniversary exercises have been largely, and might have been wholly, taken from the notices of the press. Our work is not now done in a corner, nor under the ban of good people, North or South.

The colored people show their appreciation of the schools by an increased attendance. The roll is larger than last year in the aggregate, and in nearly all the departments. The total number of pupils reported this year is 8,052 against 7,207 last year. The largest proportionate increase is in the theological, grammar and normal grades.

The Industrial Departments are doing well an important work. They require great care in their management, and the experience, oft repeated, and under favorable circumstances,—years since in Oberlin, and recently in Hampton—proves that they do not pay to the institution in dollars and cents, but that they do pay to it in discipline and in moral stamina; while to the student they pay still more manifestly in securing present support in school, and practical knowledge for the future duties of life. We are watching with much interest and hope the recent experiments of Prof. Steele at Memphis, to introduce the cutting of garments, various branches of needle-work, knitting, etc., and also the training of nurses. This last, we think, may be the opening of a wide door of usefulness to colored girls.

Our schools are meant to be religious. If not, they are as nothing to us. We watch, therefore, with great jealousy, the developments in this direction, and we are gratified to be able to report interesting revivals at Fisk, Tougaloo and Woodbridge, with conversions at other schools. The usefulness and activity of our students as they go out in vacation or at graduation may be illustrated by facts like these: "One pupil who is a minister reports over forty hopeful conversions in connection with his labors during the summer vacation." Another writes: "I was assigned to a place where there was no school-house or church. The people had their meeting under an arbor. I worked with the patrons until they built me a school-house." From Memphis, the report is: "Sixteen of our young people have, during the summer, taught 1,035 day pupils and very nearly as many Sunday-school scholars." The returning pupils at Tougaloo reported that "the Sunday-school and Temperance work had been vigorously pushed with excellent results, one of which was over 1,300 signers to the Temperance pledge."

Our Theological Departments are the flower of our schools, and the germinating seed for our church work. They have this year, as we have seen, increased in the number of their students, as we are assured they have in their efficiency. Talladega reports that "eight young men will graduate from the Theological Department, all of whom will enter the Congregational ministry in the South. They are now warmly welcomed to the pulpits of all denominations." From New Orleans: "The Theological Department is larger than in any previous year. Four of the class are ordained ministers, of whom two are pastors of churches in New Orleans." The Theological Department of Howard University reports that "sixteen students were sent forth to preach, all of whom go to the South to the Freedmen."

With such a record before us, a work so useful and that needs almost indefinite expansion invites to that expansion by its very success.

Our Church Work shows a steady and healthful growth. The number of churches in the South is 73 as against 67 last year; of church members, 4,961; last year, 4,600.

In the four new churches organized, and in the six new edifices erected, and two in the process, five repaired, and in the parsonages improved and built, we see the additions to the outward scaffolding, within which is going forward the spiritual work of rearing the polished stones into a sanctuary of our God; and we see the added force of workmen ascending this scaffolding, in the ordination of four young men to the Gospel ministry, and in the reports from our Theological Departments of well trained young men graduating and entering the service.

That spiritual work is indicated in part by the reports of precious revivals and ingatherings into the churches. The pastor at New Orleans writes: "It is my happiness to record one of the most precious revivals in the history of the Central Church." From Shelby Iron Works, Ala.: "The meetings closed with twenty-one conversions reported. Last Sunday, fifteen came forward, entered into covenant with the church, and were baptized on profession of their faith. Some eight or ten are to unite by letter the first opportunity, who were not ready to join last Sunday." From Savannah,

Ga.: "There has been an unusual work of grace among this people, and the meetings have been quiet and orderly as with a New England congregation."

We have been impressed this year with the unusual mention in the reports from the churches of the attendance and interest in the prayer meetings. If the prayer meeting is the pulse of the church, we should infer that the life blood flows warmly from the heart in our churches in the South.

The disposition for self help is a plant of slow growth among a people marvelous for their faith and passive endurance, but little used to forethought and activity. We have felt the need of developing "this grace also," and have, therefore, taken unusual pains to induce the churches to aid more fully in the support of their pastors. The responses have exceeded our expectations; in almost every instance the additional sum we have named has been given, and in some instances more.

Other facts of the same purport are seen in such extracts as these, culled from the "Detailed Report." The pastor of the church in Atlanta proposed that the church debt should be paid off. With a little help from the North and from the professors of the University, it was done, making about $563 raised by the church, aside from current expenses, in six months. They have also aided in securing a fine bell of 800 lbs. The young church at Marietta, Ga., raised $300 for their new church edifice. In a church collection for the American Missionary Association in Marion, one man put in $5, being one-tenth of his crop—a bale of cotton. A man and his wife are sustaining their daughter in the school at Tougaloo with the money saved on snuff and tobacco since they signed the pledge. The church at Wilmington, N. C., claims to be the banner church among the constituents of the American Board, having given more than any other, according to number and means, as judged by the report of Dr. Alden.

The Sunday-schools as reported show a slight increase in numbers, but the reports are not full, and hence the figures do not properly represent the strength of this arm of the service. Revivals have occurred in some of the schools. The Temperance cause holds its place in the hearts and efforts of our workers in the South. In the churches, schools, mission-schools, and by the teachers who go out in vacation, is the good work pushed forward.

The Conferences in the South have held their meetings, and Dr. Roy, who was enabled to attend several of them, was delighted with the excellence of the sermons and papers and the ability of the discussions, as well as with the fervor of spiritual life. Some of the Conferences appointed delegates to the National Council. A marked feature at one of these meetings—that of the Alabama Conference at Selma,—was the social and religious welcome it received from the white families and churches. Dr. Roy thus reports it:

"You have been told of the new era in our work, marked by the opening of half a dozen of the homes of the first families in Selma, Alabama, for the entertainment of the white members of the Conference. It was not merely the offer of their houses as eating and sleeping places, but it was a delicate and attentive Christian hospitality, which invited the guests around from home to home in order to the extension of acquaintance. When grateful words were said to Major Joseph Hardie for having led the way, he answered that that gave him too much credit; that the places had all been opened cheerfully; and that, after the sessions were over, other families had said: 'Why didn't you give us a chance? We would like to have had some of those folks.' Another host, referring to the mutual satisfaction, said: 'It is just because we are getting better acquainted.' In the same line was the opening of the Presbyterian pulpit, morning and night. The exercises of the Conference were of a high order and well sustained throughout. It was much like one of the Western General Associations."

The Woman's Work for Woman in the South gives increasing satisfaction. In our last Annual Report it was stated that "No general organization of Northern women has been attempted in this behalf, but of their own motive circles have been formed, etc." We are glad to announce that during the past year the WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION has been organized. It is national in its character, asking the support of the women of every Congregational church in the land, and proposing to extend its aid to the West, the South, the Indian, the Negro and the Chinese. It has our warmest sympathy and co-operation. Woman's work for woman is peculiarly adapted to the fields which we are trying to cultivate. The churches and schools feel its strong and healthful influence. It meets a want which the pastors cannot supply, and which is beyond the reach and range of the teachers. It comes in just where it can be most effective—in the hearts and homes of the people, and supplements the work of both church and school. The reports for the year of our seven excellent female missionaries, Miss Hattie Milton, Miss Lizzie Stevenson, Mrs. H. B. Northrop, Mrs. C. B. Babcock, Miss E. W. Douglass, Miss H. E. Wells, and Miss Anna E. Farrington, are full of encouragement.

THE INDIANS.

The experiment of educating Indian youth at Hampton and Carlisle is a confirmed success. We have in the office two pictures—one representing a company of these young Indians as they came to Hampton, in their blankets and with their stolid countenances, and the other taken after they had spent a year in the school. The change in dress is less significant than the bright and intelligent look of the faces in the last picture. A visit among them, as they are engaged in the school-room and at various mechanical employments, accounts for the change. The joint education of the two races, the black and the red, seems helpful to both. We continue the appropriation made to Hampton last year.

The Indian church work under the care of our missionary, Rev. Myron Eells, at S'kokomish, is prosperous. There were added to the church, by profession, 11; by letter, 3; a greater accession than in any previous year. More Bibles have been sold this year; the scholars are inclined to buy them with the first earnings of their work. The total number of members is 36, yet the contributions for the year were, for benevolent objects, $265.62; for pastor's support and Sabbath-school, $230.25; total, $495.77. The station at Dunginess has an attendance of 45 at public worship, of 30 at the prayer meetings, and of 35 at the Sabbath-school.

Four agencies, the same number as last year, are under our nomination, and we have favorable reports from each. At the Lake Superior Agency, some years ago, the Indians wanted blankets, beads and trinkets; now they want a boarding school. At Fort Berthold, 40 new houses were built this season; at the Sisseton Agency, the Indians dress entirely in citizen's clothing, live in log houses and cultivate 4,025 acres of land, and the scholars in the boarding and day-schools show marked improvement; at the S'kokomish Agency, the morals, manners, health and homes of the Indians are improving; most of the houses have been ceiled and furnished with good, tight floors. More land has been cleared, and 1,000 fruit trees have been set out.

CHINESE IN AMERICA.

Our work on the Pacific coast has been pushed forward quietly and successfully. The efficient Superintendent, Rev. W. C. Pond, says that not only more, but better work has been done this year than ever before. The total enrolment of pupils is 67 greater than last year, but the most marked gains are in those reported as having ceased from idol worship, and as giving evidence of conversion; in the former, 180 against 137 last year, and in the latter, 127 against 84.

AFRICA.

The aspect of our Mendi Mission, in a surface survey, seems discouraging. A deeper view discloses one great element of success, and moreover reveals lessons of wisdom that will be of much more value than any transient success.

After maintaining this mission for 30 years with white missionaries, with a rapid death-rate and meagre results, Providence seemed to open to us a plan for using the Freedmen of America, trained in our schools, as missionaries to Africa. Three years since, a company was sent out, with Rev. Floyd Snelson as a leader. His age and experience guided the mission well, and the next year new recruits were added. But the failure of Mrs. Snelson's health compelled him to return with her to this country. The management fell into younger and less experienced hands, and dissensions and complaints ensued. Prof. T. N. Chase, of Atlanta University, accepted our invitation to visit and inspect the mission. Accompanied by Rev. Jos. E. Smith, the pastor of our church in Chattanooga, he spent two months at the mission, making most careful examinations, the result of which he embodies in an extended and exhaustive report; a portion of which, as large as our space will permit, will be found in the "Detailed Survey" in this Report. It may suffice here to say that Mr. Chase found many things in an unsatisfactory condition, chargeable in some degree to moral delinquency, but more largely to immaturity of experience and of judgment.

From Mr. Chase's report and our own knowledge of the affairs of the mission, we reach these results:

1. The colored man of America can endure the climate of western tropical Africa. We have sent to the Mendi Mission 17 persons of that race—seven men, five women and five children. Of this number not one man has died, and but one has been compelled to leave on account of ill health; nor have any of these, with this one exception, suffered from the African fever so as to hinder their work, except temporarily. The children were not sick; of the women, one died, the wife of Dr. James. Mrs. Miller has been compelled to return as far as England for the recovery of health. In the single case of death and in the three of failure in health, the cause can be traced to the germs of disease in the constitution existing there prior to leaving America; but in every case of a sound constitution, good health has been maintained. In this we see hopeful evidence that, with careful previous medical examination, the colored people of America can furnish missionaries for tropical Africa, capable of enduring the climate and of rendering active service as missionaries—a result full of encouragement.

2. Due allowance must be made for the inadequate training of the young colored missionary. The Anglo-Saxon race has behind it 17 centuries of culture; the negro race in America, 17 years. This should make a difference as to the races. The white candidate for the post of a missionary was born in a Christian home, reared in a Christian community, educated in early days with the best culture of school and church, enjoyed afterwards the training of the best college and seminary, with their full corps of highly educated professors, with all the advantages of large libraries, apparatus and lectures; and, above all, that unconscious education that comes from constant contact with practical men and cultured society. The colored candidate was born a slave, lived in the slave quarters, with no refinements of home or surroundings; his education was in our young and imperfectly equipped schools and colleges, and his knowledge of the world is bounded by this limited horizon. This should make much difference with the individual. Perhaps these facts on both sides have not been duly considered. They will hereafter be fully recognized by us, and will lead us to place the management of our African mission for a time in charge of a white superintendent. They will also dictate a great deal of caution in selecting candidates for that field. We may send fewer at first; we will try to send those that are best prepared.

3. Our experiment with colored missionaries in West Africa has not been discouraging, when compared with our former efforts there with white missionaries, or with those of other societies in other parts of Africa. A new impulse has been given to African missions by the startling discoveries of Stanley and others, and if the Christian world expects these new missions to be crowned with immediate success, it will soon be undeceived. There, as elsewhere, missions must furnish heroes and martyrs, must fight battles, suffer defeats, win victories and endure hardness. Leviathan in the African jungle is not easily tamed, and the efforts which would overcome the barbarism which has for ages defied civilization, and even discovery, will test the "perseverance of the saints."

We are not alone in the trials of our African Mission, nor must we, more than others, be discouraged. Africa was not forgotten in the Redeemer's plan. His people must meet and overcome difficulties. The assurance that the colored American can endure the African climate is worth all the effort we have made.

III. THE DEMANDS OF THE FUTURE.

1. Enlargement in the work already in hand among the Freedmen.

The noble gift of Mrs. Stone, while supplying some of the great and most pressing wants in certain directions, creates new ones in others. It gives additional buildings, but these mean more students, more teachers, more student aid, more libraries, and more apparatus.

Buildings are needed where the gift of Mrs. Stone, great as it is, does not reach—needed as imperiously as where it does. At Talladega, the original building erected before the war at a cost of $30,000, bought by us after the war, used and oft repaired, is thus described by President De Forest: "The walls are staunch, but the roof leaks, and within and without, from foundation to bell-tower, it needs repair. It is estimated that $3,000 are required for this purpose." A house is also needed as a home for the President, to save room for teachers and pupils in the main buildings. In addition to the $15,000 from the Stone donation, Talladega needs for these buildings and repairs $10,000. The wants of Tougaloo are even more pressing. The crowd of students defies all means of accommodation. Temporary barracks have been erected, out-buildings and garrets have been used as lodging places, and yet students have been turned away for want of room. The buildings now on the ground need extensive repairs to save them from decay, and additions should be made to the farm buildings to give adequate shelter to the stock and products of the 500 acres of land connected with the school. Memphis has long needed a boarding department; its school and its promising industries would be doubled in their usefulness with a suitable boarding house. But what shall we more say; for the time would fail us to tell of the needs of Wilmington, N. C., of Greenwood and Orangeburg, S. C., Mobile, Montgomery and Athens, Ala., as well as of the new building needed at Hampton for a printing office, and to accommodate its very useful knitting factory, which employs thirty hands; and at Berea, to give adequate room and protection to its library, its treasurer's office, etc. These last two institutions, though not under our care, are yet associated in the same great service, and deserve our good word when we plead for the enlargement of facilities in our common work. Besides all this we ought to establish, at some eligible point in North Carolina, a chartered institution, of higher grade, with a boarding department We have, for a long while, felt the need of this, and have only been deterred by the lack of means. We ought, also, to found an institution in Arkansas, similar to that in Austin, Texas. We are just beginning efforts among the Refugees in Kansas, and these should be greatly increased, and include churches, schools and lady missionaries.

Our Theological Departments need enlarging. These are vital to the awakening of a new religious life among the Freedmen; but they are inadequate in equipment, some of them being dependencies on the regular classes, both scholars and teachers doing duty in a double capacity. The time has come when these theological students should be furnished with full corps of teachers, with the needed accommodations as to rooms, libraries and pecuniary aid, that they may take full courses of instruction. They, no more than their white student compeers at the North, can make their full tale of bricks without straw.

Student Aid should be more abundant and steady. This is but another name for the vast sums furnished to the colleges and seminaries of the North and West, in scholarships and by educational societies. If needed there, how much more here!

Endowments are an absolute necessity for our institutions at the South. Here are eight institutions, carefully managed, efficient in work, and furnished with buildings equal in number and size with some at the West of much greater age. These Western schools have in most instances the nucleus of an endowment, if not a complete one. Those in the South need endowments much more, and have almost nothing of the sort. Here is a pressing claim and a grand opportunity for wise men and women to whom God has granted the means and the heart to do great things.

The Church Work needs strengthening. We propose no rush in this direction. We know the ground and mean to walk carefully, but there is a work for us there that should be enlarged. It is great in its direct influence, and quite as powerful in its indirect. Dr. Sears said that the employment of one trained Normal teacher necessitated the dismissal of seven untrained teachers in one town. The planting and sustaining of one pure church, with its educated minister, compels other churches to be more pure and to demand a more educated ministry. Our Theological Departments are now sending out ministers, and we should aid them in founding churches or assist in their support as home missionaries, in feeble churches, ready and eager to hear an intelligent Gospel.

2. But enlargement should far transcend the limits of the work already in hand among the Freedmen. We take it for granted that every portion of the population of this country must have equal facilities open to it for education and advancement. No part of that population is so inadequately supplied as the four and a half millions of colored people in the South. There were in 1875, in this country, 1,932 schools of grades above the primary. Of this whole number, the four and a half millions of colored people have access to but 91! It must be borne in mind that in this number of schools, (1,932,) Harvard, Yale and Oberlin are but units, with their ample endowments, teachers of finest culture, libraries and apparatus of the best and largest; and to balance them, the colored people can only point to a few new and inadequately furnished schools, of which those of this Association are among the best.

There were in 1875, in this country, 3,647 libraries, numbering 300 volumes and upwards in each. Of that number, the colored people of the South have access to 25! The same disparity is found here in regard to the size and quality of the libraries open to them as in regard to the schools and colleges.

It will not do to say that these people need only primary schools. No race can rise unless it has leaders who can teach and encourage the masses; nor will it suffice to say that the few seeking special advantages can go to colleges at the North. The people of the West cannot send their sons to Eastern colleges in adequate numbers. The West has, and must have, its own colleges. How can the poor ex-slaves of the South send their children to the North for education, when most of them have a life struggle with the wolf at the door?

Here, then, are glimpses at the great duty that this nation owes to the Freedmen for its own sake as well as theirs. But that duty involves enlargement fifty-fold of what is now done for them.

3. The work of the A. M. A. beyond the South needs enlarging.

The Chinese schools in California need the permanency of having buildings under their own control. Bro. Pond earnestly desires the means to reach the "Chinese in the mines." Some of our converts have returned to China. Jee Gam and others have gone thither and come back again. They, and many of their intelligent white friends in California, are importunate for a mission at Hong Kong, and point out its great advantages as supplementing our work in California. The call has its difficulties as to comity with other Mission Boards and involves expense, but is worthy of consideration.

The work of educating Indians at the East should be enlarged. It is not a substitute for schooling among the tribes; it helps it. Capt. Pratt, who inaugurated this movement in Hampton, and who now conducts the large Government school for Indian youth at Carlisle, is very earnest that more, much more, should be done in this direction. The power of the movement, in his opinion, will be measured by its extent. He is anxious that every school of the American Missionary Association, in the South, should be prepared to receive Indians. This broad plan deserves the careful thought of the Association, but, if adopted, it will necessitate not a little enlargement of accommodations and of the teaching force.

But Africa! what does the future ask at our hands in her behalf? When we recall the struggles of the past for her enslaved children in this country, when we think of the graves of our missionaries in the Mendi country, and when we hear her children in our schools asking to be sent thither, we feel called to a new and strong effort to equip completely the mission on the West coast. The East coast calls to us also. The Arthington Mission, though we have moved cautiously, is neither forgotten nor abandoned. The generous offer of Mr. Arthington still remains; considerable sums have been collected in this country and in Great Britain, and as soon as the adequate amount ($50,000) can be secured, we shall feel called to go forward.

From all these considerations, we ask for a new and wide enlargement of our work. The duty to America and to Africa demands it. Especially do we urge that America owes it to its own safety and honor that it shall adequately care for the Freedmen. But who will take the lead in the movement to enlarge? The Pilgrims and Puritans of New England were the first to plant liberty, education and religion on these shores; they were on the crest of the wave that carried these blessings across the continent to the Pacific slope; they were foremost in the great anti-slavery struggle; they were in the van of the armies that fought for the unity of the nation and the freedom of the slave; they were the first, through this Association, to take the school and the Gospel to the Freedmen at Fortress Monroe; and who but they should see the great need of the hour, and step forth to meet it?

The American Missionary is published monthly, and aims to give a full report of our operations. Our long-continued and wide-spread work in the South enables us to give accurate reports of its progress in education and religious work; we shall seek to collate and embody in brief notes the most recent intelligence pertaining to Africa; we shall report fully and discuss with candor the various phases of the problem of Indian civilization; and the reports of our operations among the Chinese on the Pacific Coast will continue to present a faithful picture of the progress of that people. We trust the "Missionary" will, as heretofore, be a reliable source of information on these points, so vital to the welfare of the nation and of the cause of Christ.

The Freedmen's Missions Aid Society of London still co-operates with us in behalf of mission work in Africa. Dr. O. H. White, its Secretary, has been seeking to raise £3,000 in addition to a like amount pledged by Mr. Arthington, which with the sum of £4,000 proffered by this Association, will complete the $50,000 needed for a new mission in the Nile Basin.

As in past years, we are under continued obligations to the American Bible Society for generous responses to all our calls for copies of the printed word of God.

DETAILED REPORT.

FREEDMEN.

EDUCATIONAL WORK.

I. CHARTERED INSTITUTIONS.

Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, Hampton, Va.

Board of Trustees.—M. E. Strieby, New York City; R. W. Hughes, Norfolk, Va., Alexander Hyde, Lee, Mass.; S. C. Armstrong, Hampton, Va.; Thomas K. Fessenden, Farmington, Conn.; J. F. B. Marshall, Hampton, Va.; Robert C. Ogden, Philadelphia, Pa.; Samuel Holmes, Montclair, N. J.; Anthony M. Kimber, Philadelphia, Pa.; Edgar Ketchum, New York City; Z. S. Ely, New York City; Lewis H. Steiner, Frederick, Md.; Elbert B. Monroe, Southport, Conn.; A. N. Arnold, Pawtucket, R. I.; F. N. Watkins, Farmville, Va.; J. H. Means, Boston, Mass.; Henry W. Foote, Boston, Mass.

Instructors.—S. C. Armstrong, Principal, Outline of Man, and Agricultural Topics; J. F. B. Marshall, Treasurer, Acting Assistant Principal, Book-keeping. Academic Department—Mary F. INCREASED ATTENDANCE.

McLEANSVILLE, N. C.—The grading, the new books, and the uniformity of books, have each and all had a stimulating effect. The pupils study harder. The school has improved in numbers and in regularity of attendance. The number enrolled is 84.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The Avery Institute for the year has numbered 476 pupils, with an average of 376—its most prosperous year.

GREENWOOD, S. C.—Mr. J. D. Backenstose writes: I have just closed my first week of school for this year, (1880), and am glad to be able to report a larger number of students than ever before at this place. I have had to rent a room of one of my neighbors, and we have as many boarders now as we can well accommodate even with our new house, and more are to come in the middle of the month.

No. 1, MILLER STATION, GA.—The school is doing well. I have enrolled 67 now, and have larger scholars than at any time before.

WOODVILLE, GA.—Our school is crowded. If you had not built the parsonage, the pupils could not have been accommodated. Almost every day, children are refused admittance, because we are so full.

NASHVILLE, TENN., FISK UNIVERSITY.—The number of pupils is rapidly increasing, and there is a prospect that the students will be too many or the accomodations too few.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The school opened November 17th with about forty students. This number on December 2d had increased to over 100. We are now receiving new students every day. Of these ten are in the senior or graduating class.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—The year thus far has been most pleasant and profitable. During the fall term we had an unusually large number of students who entered into study with faithfulness and energy.

MOBILE, ALA.—This year the second month closes with fifty names more than the highest number of last year. The rooms are furnished with the best of modern desks; but their present capacity is exceeded by more than forty names.

ZEAL FOR STUDY.

There are many instances yet of the early eagerness to learn among the young, and even among the old; we give an instance from a teacher's letter: "One woman, 39 years old, lives in the country, and walks six miles to school, and six miles again after school to her home. Her seat has been vacant only on one or two of the rainiest days since the school opened, September 1st. At home, she has all her household affairs to look after, and finds time to study at night even then; and if, on account of helping her husband to pick cotton in the fall, she would go late to bed without 'knowing her lesson,' it 'worried' her so, she said, that she 'could not get a wink of sleep,' and her husband would waken to find her up and studying. She is gaining slowly in rudimentary knowledge, and is very much pleased, or, as she would say, 'proud' of her success."

MEMPHIS, TENN.—We note with interest a revival of the early desire for education and the culture which it brings; not just the early desire of ignorant and foolish expectation, but a steadily deepening conviction of the need and advantage of patient, continued study and training for better things in the future. We hope to foster this feeling, and to do what we may to realize the expectation, by building up honest, manly and womanly characters in our students.

MARION, ALA.—For the last five months, we have had an afternoon school for children under 14 years of age, here at the "Home." A large room on the back gallery was fitted up for them, and here twenty-five children come every day and are taught from 1 to 4 o'clock.

Besides the ordinary book lessons, their young teacher instructs them in good manners, neatness and simple fancy-work, and gives each day a half-hour talk on birds, plants, or animals, illustrated by pictures on the black-board.

The children are quick to learn and eager for all kinds of information, which they take home and repeat to their parents, when the work of the day is done.

ENLARGEMENT NEEDED.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—At present we have one hundred and four boarders, with the prospect of more soon. Every room is occupied, and we are crowded to what seems the utmost limits of our accommodations. What we shall do with those yet to come, is a problem which neither mathematics nor the laws of expansion have solved. Shall they hang up in the trees or bivouac under them? We want to put an addition to the "barracks," but have not the means necessary. Dear friends at the North, shall we turn these young people away? What is your answer? We hope that by a year from now, a good substantial building will be at least in process of erection, that shall do away with some of the temporary accommodations we now have.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—Talladega has very pressing needs. Her accommodations for young men are altogether inadequate to the demand, and such as she has are of a very indifferent character. A donation of $15,000 from the Stone Estate, however, gives cheering prospects that during the coming year this sore need will be met.

But $10,000 more is needed just as much for furnishing the new dormitory, improving the College grounds, and making necessary repairs on "Swayne Hall," which, though originally costing $30,000, and a very stately building, is literally going to ruin from lack of means to repair it.

These facts being known, may it not reasonably be hoped that in the near future, friends of humanity and of Christian education may be found, who will recognize this rare opportunity for investments, and come to the rescue of a worthy and suffering College? Who will be the first?

ATLANTA, GA.—Sixty-two girls in rooms fitted for forty, and prospects that the number cannot be kept down to that. It could easily be increased to one hundred next year. The $10,000 given from the Graves estate for a building, must be supplemented by $5,000 to make it adequate to pressing need.

BEREA, KY.—Berea College is well equipped with buildings and a good corps of teachers. The Ladies' Hall is modeled after, and about the size of, the similar building in Oberlin. Howard Hall gives excellent facilities as a boys' dormitory. The new chapel is a model of neatness and convenience. Other and smaller buildings meet other wants, and while another edifice could be well used, yet Berea's great need now is endowment; and to those who have the means, and are looking for a place to use it for the nation's welfare and the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, we can safely and unhesitatingly turn their attention to this worthy and growing institution.

MOBILE, ALA.—School overflowing. If we have room and teaching force enough, we shall have three hundred in attendance by February 1st. Without increased room and help we shall be obliged to turn away many that would enter the intermediate and normal departments. We have already begun this at the primary door.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—Our school is growing larger—double what it was at the corresponding time last year. Many expect to come after Christmas from abroad. Must enlarge our accommodations.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—One of the saddest things about the work is the lack of means to accommodate those who would be glad to avail themselves of the advantages of this school.

COMMENCEMENT OR CLOSING EXERCISES.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VA.—The graduating exercises at the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, on May 20, were of even unusual interest. A large and distinguished company was in attendance, including Governors and other notabilities from Massachusetts, and President Hayes and Secretary Schurz from Washington. A military parade by the students under the inspection of the President, recitations, and an exhibition of the various industries of the school, occupied the morning. The work of the Indian boys excited special interest. A farm-cart, complete in all its parts, tin-ware, tables and large siliciate globes, were among the articles which they had made.

Whitin Hall was crowded in the afternoon. The students, 300 in number, seated on benches rising toward the rear in front of the audience, were a picture of neatness, intelligence and content. Those who remembered the squalor and ignorance of the colored people as they sought refuge in the Union lines during the war, could not fail to recognize the value of the work done by the noble educational institutions which the American Missionary Association has brought into existence throughout the South. This thankful feeling was deepened as the students took up the parts assigned them. Their addresses were not mere essays, but the expression of their opinions on practical, vital themes, concerning the welfare of their race. These utterances were marked with rare good sense, a freedom from bitterness for past or present ill treatment, and a hopeful courage for the future. More than once some expression unexpectedly pathetic, or forgiving, or consecrated, brought tears to the eyes of those who heard.

BEREA COLLEGE, BEREA, KY.—The little village of Berea, Ky., presented a busy scene on the 16th day of June. Commencement day brought together a crowd that for numbers and variety is seldom collected on such an occasion. The gathering began early in the day. Fine buggies and carriages came filled with people, and with them were wheeled vehicles of almost every variety of construction and in almost every stage of decay. But the larger part of the crowd came on horseback in true Kentucky style, frequently two, and in some cases three persons riding on the same animal. There must have been 800 or 900 horses on the campus. The audience numbered 1,800 or 2,000 persons of both sexes, both colors, and of every stage in social position. I judged that two-thirds were of the white race, representing the well-to-do classes as also the poorer farmers from the mountains.

The public exercises of the forenoon were very creditable to the pupils as well as their teachers in the essays and speeches. The range of topics was wider than is usual in our institutions in the South, and with less reference to the peculiar position and struggles of the colored race. This was easily explained by the fact that about half the pupils are white. The afternoon was occupied with addresses by Rev. J. A. R. Rogers, Secretary Strieby, Pres. Fairchild, of Oberlin, and two colored ministers of the vicinity. The previous evening was taken up with a stirring address in the chapel by a Kentucky gentleman of prominent position, the son of a former slave-holder. It was in hearty sympathy with the work in Berea College, and concluded with some very timely and practical advice to the colored people, which they heartily applauded.

Berea College is doing, as may be seen, a peculiar work. No institution in the nation approaches it in uniting the two races in the same school. As a pioneer in the breaking down of caste prejudice, it has no rival; nor is this purchased by lowering the one race at the expense of the other, nor by any approach to the blending of the races in marriage. It is simply a quiet, unpretentious and practical working out of the brotherhood of man in educational and religious co-operation.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—The Nashville Daily American, whose proprietor is the Honorable Secretary of the United States Senate, gives a full report of all the commencement exercises of this school, making at least five columns.

Monday was given to examinations. The American says: "These examinations were held in different recitation-rooms of Jubilee Hall and were attended by interested visitors. We stopped a while in the room where the senior class was being examined in Geology by Prof. Chase. One student was giving the names of sixty or seventy specimens of minerals, ores, rocks and fossils. Another was determining the nature of certain minerals by means of the blow-pipe, while another gave the classification of the mineral kingdom as he had written it on the board. Prof. Morgan was hearing a class in Cicero as we entered the library, and one of the students was reading in a sonorous tone the impeachment of Cataline by Cicero. In another room, Prof. Spence was hearing a class in Phædon. Prof Bennett conducted a class through the United States History within the hour and a half allotted to him. Other classes were examined in Astronomy, Virgil, and the Greek Testament.

"In the evening came the Common School Normal Exhibition, beginning promptly at 8.30 o'clock. On Tuesday examinations were continued, and in the evening was the Union Literary Society Exhibition. Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, occurred the presentation of the great bell given to the University by the Jubilee Singers and Mrs. Gen. C. B. Fisk of New York. These were of an exceedingly interesting character. Speeches were made by Prof White and Mr. Loudin, on the part of the singers, and by Pres. Cravath, Prof. Willcox and others; after which a poem by Prof. Spence of the University was read. A number of pieces were sung by the Jubilee Singers, who furnished much of the music for all the exercises. The evening was given to the senior preparatory exhibition. The programme was a full one and well carried out.

"According to announcement, the commencement exercises took place Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, in the presence of a crowded house. In addition to the decorations of the previous day, the wall back of the platform was tastefully set off with the folds of the Dutch and English flags, the American flag being on duty on the border. Upon the folds of the flags were arranged in letters of cedar the words, 'The Class of 1880.' Six young men then gave their graduating addresses. These are kindly and appreciatively spoken of, as able and well delivered. Professor G. B. Willcox, D. D., of Chicago, was introduced, and spoke to the graduates in reference to those things which scholars hold in common. Then came, what is now a feature of Fisk commencement-day, the Alumni dinner, with its post-prandial wit and wisdom. And thus closed the most successful and prosperous year in the history of Fisk University. The catalogue shows an aggregate of 350 students. The work done in the class-room has been unusually satisfactory. There have been abundant evidences of growth in character and mind on the part of all the students."

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.—On Sunday, June 20, the baccalaureate of Atlanta University was preached by Rev. M. E. Strieby, D. D., of New York. His subject was the path of the just and the way of the wicked, the forming of character, good and bad.

The Commencement exercises, June 24, came off the same hour with the nomination of General Hancock. Orations were pronounced by six young men, and essays read by ten young women, all of whom showed a fine scholarship and a good degree of the art of elocution. The most gratifying feature in these productions was a zeal to help their people by precept and example in the way of economy, thrift, and moral reform. The degree of A. B. was conferred upon three young men, and that of B. S., with the certificate of graduation from the higher normal course, was given to twelve students, male and female. The college address was delivered by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., and the diplomas presented by Rev. M. E. Strieby, D.D.

The State Board of Examiners, ten in number, came over, fresh from the inspection of the State University at Athens, and gave four days of faithful attendance upon the examinations and Commencement of this Institution. Their Report has been made to the Governor and the Legislature, and will be found on another page, and they were greatly delighted with the thoroughness of the scholarship evinced, and the general morale.

The Constitution, which reported each day, said: 'The examinations were heard by many visitors who showed great interest in all the proceedings. The various questions were, as a rule, aptly answered, and each student gave evidence of the progress achieved in this excellent and yearly growing Institution. The familiarity with Greek which was shown by the class, which was called upon to construe and parse selections from Demosthenes, was quite astonishing. Special proficiency was shown in the several other branches upon which the students, both male and female, were subjected to rigid questioning."

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, TALLADEGA, ALA.—The friends and patrons of Talladega College have great occasion for encouragement and congratulation, in view of the present condition and future prospects of that Institution, as evinced by the examinations and exercises connected with its Tenth Annual Commencement.

Those exercises opened grandly on Sunday, June 6th, at 10.30 A. M., with a baccalaureate sermon by President De Forest, addressed particularly to the class of eight young men who this year graduate from the Theological Department. At 4 o'clock P. M., a Union Prayer Meeting of the Sunday-school classes was held in the College Chapel, after which Professor T. N. Chase, of Atlanta University, gave an intensely interesting detailed account of his recent experiences while visiting the Mendi Mission on the West Coast of Africa. The evening was given to the missionary sermon by the Rev. O. W. Fay, of Montgomery.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday occurred the regular examinations, which, for impartiality, thoroughness, and general familiarity with the subjects considered, reflected great credit upon both teachers and pupils. To one not familiar with the standard of instruction and scholarship in the colleges of the American Missionary Association, it might seem a little surprising to find examinations in moral science, geometry, history, pastoral theology, and all higher branches, conducted topically and well sustained; but, when it is known that President De Forest and Professors Andrews and Ellis, with their able corps of lady associates, represent Yale, Olivet, Oberlin and Mt. Holyoke, he is prepared to expect and find all that is standard and best, both in theory and practice, at Talladega. There was no evidence of special "cramming" on the part of the students, or of special favoritism on the part of the instructors. On the other hand, the evidence was abundant that all had been doing good work, thorough, honest and true. Ex-Governor Parsons, one of Alabama's most distinguished citizens and a trustee of the College, honored the examination of the graduating class with his presence, and expressed intense gratification with what he saw and heard.

On Tuesday evening, the Annual College Address was given by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Field Agent of the A. M. A., on the "Incompleteness of individual talent." In the afternoon of Wednesday came the prize-speaking. The contestants for prizes in declaiming and reading were eight young men and one young woman. Two prizes were contended for; the first was tuition at the College for one year, and the second, tuition for half a year. A good deal of commendable ambition was aroused, and the contest was so sharp that the Committee found some difficulty in awarding the honors, which were finally conferred by giving the first prize to H. L. Bradford, of the Normal Department, and the second prize to Spencer Snell, of the Theological Department. Miss Dorcas White was also awarded a second prize for an essay on education. At 8 P. M., as a part of the programme for the week, was held the regular Wednesday evening prayer-meeting, led by the pastor, Prof. G. W. Andrews—full, fresh, spiritual and refreshing in its character. The subject of the hour was "Christian education."

The graduating exercises of Thursday were, indeed, a fitting culmination of all that had preceded them. The orations of the eight young men who graduated were in happy accord with the expectations raised by their examinations the day before. They were all thoughtful and manly efforts, well conceived and well delivered.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The anniversary of Straight University was observed at Central Church. The audience, both in numbers and intelligent appreciation, was one of the best ever gathered for such a purpose in the city. The literary exercises were exceptionally fine.

There was no graduating class. Those who in order would this year have finished their course, were persuaded to remain another year that their graduation might signify a higher grade of scholarship.

The year has been crowned with the Divine favor. Three hundred students have been in attendance, real progress has been made in all departments of study, and the Institution stands higher to-day in the estimation and affection of the New Orleans public than in any previous year.

Unless all signs fail, the ensuing year will bring to our doors a greatly increased throng of eager and earnest students. The public schools of New Orleans, and of Louisiana, are threatened with the evils of indefinite suspension. The doors will be closed June 30th, and the wisest friends of education cannot predict the time of their re-opening.

So far as adequate support is concerned, the public school system in this State has been an uncertain quantity for many months. Its fate trembles in the balance to-day. A subscription list is now in circulation among the merchants and bankers to raise money to pay the public school teachers the monthly salaries long since due. The most plaintive appeals are made to public sympathy in their behalf. It is time to press forward our work.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, TOUGALOO, MISS.—The exercises of Commencement were held on June 3d. Horses, mules, and vehicles of all kinds, at an early hour, were hitched under the trees. Visitors came by the tens and by the scores; but finally a special train put down its brakes at the station, and hundreds, with lunch baskets in hand, were swarming through the woods, and massing themselves near the platform. Seven young men, after the ordeal of a searching examination, if I may judge from the little I was in time to hear, pronounced their orations and received their diplomas. The addresses of the graduates were thoughtful, full of moral earnestness, well delivered and well received by the great audience, among whom were representatives of the clergy at Jackson, the Board of Trustees, and the Superintendent of Education. Several of these visitors added words of hearty and well-deserved commendation.

This institution, in the centre of the great cotton State, where the black soil seems the natural home of the black man, has a field as large, as needy and as hopeful as can well be desired. From Marion, Ala., on the east, to far beyond the Mississippi on the west, north from New Orleans and south from Holly Springs, each about two hundred miles away, Tougaloo sits alone, and has undisputed possession of a great, a populous, and a waiting African Macedonia, crying out, "Come over and help us." The University, with meagre equipments and limited accommodations, is trying to answer that cry. It is doing much, very much; but how little compared with what might be done and ought to be done!

It seems strange to us who are on the ground, glad to man these out-posts and give what we have of life and vigor to the work, that needed supplies are not forthcoming. Give us adequate appliances, and we can greatly multiply our usefulness. We wish to be re-inforced, not relieved. Our commissariat is insufficient. We are glad to give ourselves to this work, but we need supplies. And we cannot think that life is cheaper than lucre; that men at the rear can afford to neglect those who are allowed to go to the front; and if America has any front in this nineteenth century, it is still down South. We wish to advance all our lines, and are simply waiting for supplies.

BEACH INSTITUTE, SAVANNAH, GA.—The scholastic year of the Beach Institute was made the occasion of interesting school exercises in the examination of the several classes of the Institute, and an exhibition of the scholars in recitation, declamation, reading and singing. The school is in a prosperous condition, nearly 300 scholars having been registered during the year. It is divided into five grades, under competent teachers.

The examinations evinced the faithfulness of the instructors in their departments and the aptitude of the pupils, and we were particularly struck with the examination of the normal class in introductory Latin exercises, the pupils showing a remarkable proficiency in their recitations from Harkness' Introductory Latin Lessons.

STORRS SCHOOL, ATLANTA, GA.—The Storrs School at Atlanta, Ga., closed one of its most successful years, on the 23d of June, with an examination that gave great satisfaction to Sec. Strieby, Prof. Chase and Supt. Roy, who were present. A large number of the parents and patrons were present to rejoice in the evident progress of their children. This school has had for the year a total of 543 pupils; the largest number at any one time, 356, and an average of 333. The course of study is that of the Grammar School. It is recognized by the school authorities of Atlanta as a school of the very first quality.

LEWIS HIGH SCHOOL, MACON, GA.—(From the Macon, Ga., Telegraph and Messenger).—The closing exercises of the Lewis High School took place yesterday, May 27th, and reflected credit alike upon teachers and pupils. The latter, embracing both sexes, number 110; and a more intelligent and well-behaved body of colored youth cannot be found anywhere. The singing and music were especially good, indicating great aptitude on the part of the scholars, and very careful training.

Among those who attended the examinations were Rev. Geo. McDonald, D. D., and Rev. Joseph Key, D. D. Both of these gentlemen expressed themselves highly gratified with all that they saw and heard, and when called upon, responded with neat and appropriate addresses, to the great encouragement and delight of their auditors.

The Lewis High School is doing a good work for the colored people of Macon, and should receive the countenance and support of our citizens.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The closing exercises were of the usual nature, the Junior classes having their exhibition for the benefit of the library, and netting $50 for that purpose. Then followed the public session of the Literary Society, under the management of its members, and the graduating exercises, at which three young men received diplomas. The address given on this occasion by Judge Pierce was heartily appreciated and enjoyed by a large audience of both colored and white people. He also presented the diplomas in a manly, earnest address to the graduates.

The final, and perhaps most significant, meeting of commencement week was the Alumni, at which about a dozen of the graduates of the school—nearly all who have been sent out—gathered, with teachers and a few friends, for a pleasant evening. The refreshments were followed with the usual orations and speeches, and did much to gain for the school an earnest working constituency.

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS.

HAMPTON, VA.—The saw-mill, which since September last has cut over a million feet of lumber, the knitting-room, which has produced this year 12,000 dozen mittens for a Boston firm, the market-garden, from which have been sent this spring thirty barrels of peas a day to Baltimore, and from which have been raised peas and asparagus, together amounting in value to $1,500, the ice house, in which are stored 180 tons of ice, the industrial room, where are made the students' uniforms, the cooking school, in which the girls are taught the culinary art, the printing office, from which is issued monthly "The Southern Workman," the shoe shop, the blacksmith's shop, the wheelwright's shop, the carpenter's shop, the repair shop, the brick-yard, which has supplied all the bricks used on the buildings of the Institution, the $6,000 barn, where fine blooded stock is kept, the farm of 330 acres—these departments of activity, wonderful for their variety and completeness, are steadily training the students and the inhabitants of the surrounding region in ways of industry.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—The Southern Industrial Association held its second annual fair at Talladega, Ala., November 11-14. This Association is officered in part and largely helped by Talladega College, and its object is to promote the industry and physical good of the Freedmen. In agricultural and garden products, in fancy articles, in needle-work, both plain and ornamental, and in the culinary department, especial excellence was shown. The exhibition of stock was meagre, with the exception of fowls, which were numerous and remarkably fine. Some blacksmiths' hammers, tables, and an upholstered chair, would compare well with similar productions from the best Northern workmen. More than seven hundred entries were made, and the premiums awarded were worth about three hundred dollars. The fair stimulates industry, and marks a real advance in the condition of the people. Many of our white friends paid well-deserved praise, and one late slave-holder, said to have owned nearly a hundred negroes, was so pleased as to make a cash contribution to the treasury, and offered to double it should there be a deficit.

MEMPHIS, TENN. In industrial work, such as may be undertaken in a day-school, we have met with every encouragement and success. The sewing classes, two each day, have done much in learning to cut garments and in the various branches of needle-work, knitting, etc.

During the year, about an hour each day has been devoted to the training of nurses, without interfering with regular studies, and with the effect of stimulating the students in all other directions. The list of questions on the care of the sick, which constituted a part of their examination at the close of the winter term, indicates a varied and minute training, which must fit these pupils to be angels of mercy, and most blessed ministers of comfort and health in many cabins of the South.

Co-operative Farming.—During the last season, the colored people about our church at Lawson's, in Alabama, Rev. J. W. Strong, pastor, rented a half-dozen acres of land, and cultivated the most of it in cotton, for the purpose of adding to the fund for supporting their school. They had a board of managers. They worked when called upon. They plowed and hoed. They at last picked out the cotton and found that they had two bales, worth $120. One bale they sent to the colored folks' Industrial Fair, on the grounds of Talladega College.

REPORTS OF STATE BOARDS.

EXTRACTS FROM THE REPORT OF BOARD OF VISITORS TO ATLANTA UNIVERSITY.

For three days we listened to examinations of the scholars conducted orally by the teachers, and written examination work from the higher classes was laid before us. We were also present at the anniversary exercises of the Institution. It is with pleasure that we bear testimony in behalf of the accuracy and thoroughness manifested both by the teachers and scholars. We have never seen stronger proof of careful and successful teaching, and the discipline and government cannot be surpassed in any institution.

The practical sciences are not neglected. A visit to the culinary department showed us that the female students had been thoroughly taught the art of cooking good dinners, without which even the intellect would pine and languish. Calisthenics, also, constitute a part of the training.

We found the buildings and grounds in the best of order, evidencing the same watchful eyes which overlooked the entire institution.

The school-rooms and furniture were entirely free from defacements of any kind, showing a marked difference in this respect between the Atlanta University and most other colleges.

An interesting feature is the Library, composed of a collection of about five thousand volumes, selected wisely for the purpose of interesting as well as instructing the scholars. To the library there have been added during the past year, three hundred new books of recent publication. In connection with the library is a reading room, in which can be found the leading magazines and daily papers.

The future of the University seems truly bright, and a better opportunity can never be given our colored citizens for a thorough education.

We commend the entire corps of instructors, and must express the confidence which we feel in the capacity of the president, Mr. Ware, and in his fitness for the position which he occupies

In conclusion, we think it proper to dwell for a moment upon the fact that the Atlanta University, besides the influence which it wields directly upon its scholars, reaches, through the many who pass out from its walls as teachers, almost the entire colored population of our state. While the mental man is being developed, the moral man is carefully trained, and temperance and religion are important parts of the instruction given.

From this college, Georgia is sending out missionaries for the amelioration of a large class of her citizens. Who can doubt the wisdom of continuing the appropriation?

REPORT OF THE STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC EDUCATION TO HIS EXCELLENCY GOVERNOR J. M. STONE, AND THE HONORABLE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI.

Tougaloo University, under the direction and control of the American Missionary Association, is doing a most excellent work in the education of the colored youth of the State. For a number of years after its establishment an annual appropriation was made by the State, supplementary to the funds contributed by the Society, and a Board of Trustees was appointed on the part of the State. This Board still exists; but inasmuch as the last Legislature failed to make appropriation for the University, and as the property belongs to the Missionary Society, it would appear to be useless. The Principal, writing on the 20th of December, 1879, says: "The improvement in the school is very marked. This is seen in the general training of students, in the greater number who are desiring to complete the regular course of study, the increased number in attendance in the higher grades, in more frequent visits from patrons, and by the friends it is making among the whites where our students have been at work."

The management of the institution is admirable, its teachers are superior, and everything connected with it is in excellent condition, as I have had occasion to learn from personal observation. As a recognition of the good work being done by the American Missionary Association in the education and elevation of the colored people of the State, it is recommended that a liberal appropriation be made, that it may be rendered still more useful.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Hampton Institute has suffered the burning of one of its noble buildings; but with insurance money and the ever-ready aid of friends, it is to be replaced at once.

Tougaloo University has added a plain house for the President's Home.

Storrs School, Atlanta, Ga., and its Teachers' Home have been refitted and repainted, greatly to the delight of their occupants.

Trinity School, Athens, Ala., is going forward with its new building. Last summer the colored people, by their own labor, made and burned a kiln of 120,000 brick, and this summer they have burned another. It takes a good while to build a house if you have to stop to make the brick, and that without any money with which to mix the enterprise. Miss M. F. Wells, the Principal of the school, who has been in that position for a dozen years, has been the good angel of the people in rallying and directing their enthusiasm.

The Tillotson Collegiate and Normal Institute at Austin, Texas, has been built during the year. Including the basement above ground and the mansard roof, it has five stories, and is a commodious and comely structure crowning one of the finest sites about that beautiful city in the valley of the Colorado

LIBRARIES.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Our public library is demonstrating its influence and usefulness in a gratifying way, in awakening in many laboring people a love of reading and of thought, aside from the great advantage it is to the school directly and indirectly. During the summer months, considerably over one hundred volumes were drawn and read. Among many others several white persons of most excellent standing availed themselves of its privileges. Of these latter, one is principal of a boys' and girls' school in our vicinity.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—The donation of books to the value of more than four hundred dollars, from Rev. W. H. Willcox, of Malden, Mass., attracts the eye, and feasts it, too. The books are new, of standard and current interest.

MACON, GA.—Pastor S. E. Lathrop is getting under way his Circulating Library for the colored people. He sends out a circular, printed on his own "Gospel Press," that was given to him as a home missionary in Wisconsin, appealing for the gift of new or second-hand books for this purpose. Gov. Colquitt and Senators Gordon and Hill have furnished some. Pres. A. L. Chapin, of Beloit, Wis., is putting up a trunk full. Supt. Roy sent in a "carpet bag" full.

RELIGIOUS CHARACTER OF SCHOOLS.

HAMPTON, VA.—Best of all, as the crown no less than the beginning of wisdom, the students, entering the school without special religious impressions, seldom leave it without becoming devoted Christians.

"I am glad to tell you that two of your Indian boys, Murie and Hustice, are to unite with our church on next Sunday."

NASHVILLE, TENN.—The week of prayer was observed as usual with us, but without any special increase of interest. The question then came up, "Shall we pass through the year without our usual work of grace?" This led to earnest prayer and consecration on the part of teachers and Christian students. The result was soon perceptible in greater earnestness among Christians, and a widespread spirit of inquiry among the impenitent. At this point the attendance on the half-hour prayer meetings was largely increased. From six to ten inquirers presented themselves for prayers from night to night, and from this time the work went forward. Four students were converted on one Sabbath, and others were brought out into the light. Thus the work went forward hopefully but quietly, until, up to this time, fourteen students have expressed a hope in Christ. This is the second season of interest during the present scholastic year. Before Christmas, a brief season of spiritual awakening brought seven students out upon the Lord's side, so that the results of the year have been twenty-one conversions. Several others are still inquiring, and the work goes on, though with less manifest power than a few weeks ago.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—We have had a blessed work here this week. Several of our pupils had been very thoughtful for a great while, some of them a year, and one or two even longer. They had held out stoutly, but last Sabbath afternoon one yielded. Saturday night several asked for prayers. After church, three young men were converted. Monday morning twelve more yielded. Monday afternoon one of the most stubborn cases I ever met came into the fold. She had been trying to climb up some other way for more than two years. Tuesday afternoon another gave up, making in all eighteen within two days. At mid-winter a work of grace pervaded the school, and not far from thirty, it was thought, of these pupils became Christ's disciples, and they go forth with new purposes.

WOODBRIDGE, N. C.—During the last two weeks we have had a remarkable outpouring of the Spirit. On two afternoons we have had to suspend the school exercises on account of those weeping over their sins. Some little ones will not leave the house till they feel forgiven. Almost all are from the Band of Hope. The older ones look on in surprise at such a work among the children. Some have tried to stop their children from praying, but they would come to school and pray, or go out in the woods till they were converted, and then they couldn't help it. We have a daily prayer-meeting in the school-house, in which all take part. Sometimes we have open meetings for the children. We have nightly revival meetings, in which the children are taking hold as far as it seems advisable.

Later.—One Saturday four came to tell us of sins forgiven. Since then, for three weeks, almost every day has brought one or more, till about thirty have believed, and several others are anxious. Most of these are children: a few are pretty small. To-day some of them have been praying all their spare time, that they may be able to hold out to the end.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—Our pupils are from four counties, including this (Guilford) county. Thirteen are here paying board, or boarding themselves. Of the thirteen all are professors of religion but three: one is a minister, two are preparing for the ministry; one professed religion since he came here a year ago, one of those preparing for the ministry united with the church at the last communion, and one is a teacher.

FISK UNIVERSITY.—The following statistics relating to the religious condition of the University were read at a meeting held on the day of prayer for colleges. In Model School—Number of Christians, 35; not Christians, 56; total, 91; percentage, 38.4. Normal School—Number of Christians, 61; not Christians, 55; total, 116; percentage, 52.5. Collegiate Department—Number of Christians, 77; not Christians, 9; total 86; percentage, 89.5. Total number in school, 293; number of Christians, 194; percentage, 59. This meeting occurred in the midst of, and was followed by, special religious interest, which greatly reduced the percentage of non-religious students.

STUDENT TEACHERS.

McLeansville, N. C.—Of those enrolled last year, seven are teachers, six of whom are now teaching, and one attending school. One pupil who is a minister reports over forty hopeful conversions in connection with his labor during the summer vacation.

By the close of the present school year twelve to fifteen of our pupils will be able to obtain teacher's license from the County School-Examiner.

Atlanta, Ga.—More than a dozen of its graduates are now teaching high schools in leading cities of the State of Georgia, and so starting from these centres, radiating influences that shall bless many more communities.

Macon, Ga.—A graduate from the Lewis High School writes: "I have worked faithfully for three months. I was assigned to a place where there was no school-house or church. The people had their meetings under an arbor. I worked with the patrons of the place until they built me a school-house. Since that they have erected a church at the expense of $350. It is 35 by 45 feet. We are holding protracted meetings. Three persons have been received in full connection, and many more are hovering around the altar. Our Sunday-school is prospering. Many are coming in. The old folks are more interested in this great work than the young. We are hammering down upon them. My school numbers thirty-nine scholars. I have received several petitions from the colored people, asking me to come again and teach for them."

Memphis, Tenn.—Sixteen of our young people have during the summer taught one thousand and thirty-five day pupils, and very nearly as many Sunday-school scholars. This does not include the teachers now at work, some of whom return to us next week, or in early spring. Probably this is only a fifth of the record, counting all former pupils.

One young woman was assistant in a school of 80 children. The log-school-house had no windows except board shutters; the seats were boards fastened upon blocks of wood; the blackboard was of her own manufacture. The building was so small that in pleasant weather she heard her recitations in a bush-arbor built against the side of the house.

A young man, a member of the senior class, could scarcely leave his people. A powerful revival in connection with the school had brought many aged people as well as children to confess Christ, and the converts were loth to part with their teacher and friend.

A few during the sickness were employed by the Howards or other societies as nurses, one young man saving about $200 at this work, and gaining an enviable reputation as a nurse.

Tougaloo, Miss.—Many who had been teaching during the summer, gave most interesting reports of their work. The Sunday-school and temperance work had been vigorously pushed with excellent results, one of which is over thirteen hundred signers to the temperance pledge. Some conversions in their Sunday-schools were also reported; and quite often now some one speaks in our prayer-meeting of receiving a letter from a pupil asking for prayers that he may become a Christian.

EXODUS.

Florence, Ala.—The work in Florence for the last two years has been comparatively a new one. The exodus of the colony from here not only took from the town some of the best citizens, but it robbed our church of its strength, both in a temporal and spiritual sense, leaving behind the weakest spiritually and the poorest financially. If those who have gone to Kansas had seen the present condition of the church, I believe it would have been a great check upon their going, although there were other reasons which helped to drive them from the South, besides a lack of proper facilities for the education of their children.

Charleston, S. C.—When I am made to know that there are 20,000 poor wretches in this city that are the carcass on which rich cormorants are fattening, my soul is sick within me. Congress may investigate the cause of the emigration of the colored people to all eternity, and come to what conclusion they may, it won't stop. I pray God it may not stop until enough laborers get away from the South to give room for those who remain to grow. What think you of a man supporting a family of four on twenty-five cents a day, and paying five dollars a month for house rent? What think you of a family of five living on the wages of the daughter who gets six dollars a month working out, and paying five dollars a month for house rent? Hungry mouths will stifle conscience. Oh, how long could the good people of the North live on hasty-pudding without molasses or milk, morning, noon and night, and nothing else, day after day and week after week?

Do you say, Why not go back into the country and work the land? So I said to one who had brought his family of five or six down here to starve with the rest: "Why didn't you stay up in the country?" "Couldn't lib up dar nohow. Starve up dar, shuah. Rent so high couldn't lib. Had free acres ob land and a po', mis'able shantie, and had to work fo' days ob de week fur de rent, and but two days to tend my own crop. Hab to buy ebryting ob de commisary. Hab to pay twenty cents a pound fur meat (bacon), and forty cents a peck fur grits (corn meal). Starve to deff up dar, shuah." Four days' work every week for the rent of three acres of land! The best land in that section is worth four dollars an acre. Call the man's work worth twenty-five cents a day. His rent was one dollar a week—fifty-two dollars a year. No wonder the landlords are not anxious to sell land to the colored people, when they can get four times the value of the land every year in work at twenty-five cents a day. Defunct institution! Yes, on the statute book. "But, my man, why don't you buy the land at four dollars an acre?" "Well, sah, some ob 'em did buy de land. I dunno how much dey pays; but I know when dey's paid two or free 'stalments dey can't pay no mo', and gibs 'em up." Do you wonder the people listen to glowing pictures of better opportunities somewhere else? If these people had a decent chance at home, they would not listen to invitations away. The fact is, they are perfectly helpless, and there is nothing for the mass of them but to sit down and wait.

wait, wait through the long, long years till the morning comes. I do not wonder they emigrate. I pray God they may continue to go, until those who remain shall have their hands full to supply the demands for labor. It may not be better for those that go, but it will be better for those that remain. The more you thin out your woodland, the taller and stouter will be your timber. The only hope for this people is a scarcity of laborers. There are so many who must have work, or die, that every vacancy has a dozen ready applicants. Twenty-five cents a day, I am told, is all that some of these planters will give to man or woman; and they can get enough at that price. In such circumstances, you cannot expect people to haggle long about the price of labor. The cry is simply, "Give me my hire!" And then, if you remember that two hundred years of slavery in a man's blood is not a very good preparation for independence, you may get a pretty good idea of the situation of the people.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENTS.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY, WASHINGTON, D. C.—The anniversary exercises of the Theological Department of Howard University, (which is largely aided by the American Missionary Association), occurred on the 7th inst., in Washington. The spacious and beautiful edifice of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was freely offered for the purpose, and was filled with a large audience of white and colored people. Such an event could not have taken place at any former time, and it marks the rapid and healthful progress of public opinion. Six of the graduating class made addresses, which were a credit to themselves and their race, and elicited the commendation of many intelligent ladies and gentlemen who heard them. Sixteen students were sent forth to preach, all of whom go to the South, to the Freedmen. Five of these had pursued a full course of study, including Hebrew and Greek; the others had received training in English studies only. Fifty theological students have been under instruction in this department the present year.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—The theological students at Talladega College have just been favored with a course of lectures on Eschatology by Rev. H. S. De Forest, President of the College. They manifested a lively interest in these lectures, and in the study of the intricate and somewhat obscure field of thought traversed by them. Eight young men will be graduated from the Theological Department of the College this year, all of whom will enter the Congregational ministry in the South. They are now warmly welcomed to the pulpits of all denominations, and are recognized as an important factor in the elevation of the colored people in this region.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The Theological Department is larger than in any previous year. It numbers twenty members, young men of zeal and promise, not only willing but eager to be instructed in the truths and doctrines of God's word. Four of the class are ordained ministers, of whom two are pastors of churches in New Orleans. Not all of them have the ministry in view. Those who have not, are hoping through this instruction to become more useful and efficient in the church. Three theological lectures are given each week, and there are also sermons given by the students before the class for criticism, and discussions on religious topics.

NEW CHURCHES AND BUILDINGS.

CHURCHES ORGANIZED IN 1879-80.—Lassiter's Mills, Randolph Co., N. C.; Caledonia, Lowndes Co., Miss.; Napoleonville, La.; Luling, Caldwell Co., Texas.

CHURCH BUILDINGS ERECTED IN 1879-80.—Marietta, Ga.; Cypress Slash, Liberty Co., Ga.; Tecumseh, Ala., (built by the Tecumseh Iron Co. for our use); Florence, Ala.; New Iberia, La.; Flatonia, Texas.

CHURCHES UNDER PROCESS OF ERECTION.—Wilmington, N. C.; Lassiter's Mills, N. C.

CHURCHES REPAIRED AND IMPROVED.—Dudley, N. C.; Miller's Station, Ga., Woodville, Ga; Anniston, Ala.; Marion, Ala.

PARSONAGES BUILT AND GREATLY IMPROVED.—Cypress Slash, Ga.; Terre Bonne, La., (built by the people); Montgomery, Ala.; Mobile, Ala.; Savannah, Ga.

ATLANTA, GA.—June 20th, Rev. M. E. Strieby, D.D., preached the dedication sermon of the First Congregational Church. The dedicatory service had been delayed until all debt should be cleared off the house—a beautiful structure in brick, with slate roof and tower, having cost more than $5,000. This done, and a $300 Troy bell secured, all was ready. In the afternoon, a thanksgiving service was held, consisting of music, the responsive reading of appropriate Psalms, and addresses by the pastor and others.

MARIETTA, GA.—On the Sabbath, June 6th, the new church which is also to be used as a school building at Marietta, Ga., was dedicated. The house is 24 x 40 feet, well-finished and painted, and furnished with desks that answer the double purpose of church and school use. The people raised $200 towards the building. Two young Illinois business men put each $25 into this Christian investment.

FLORENCE, ALA.—On the Sabbath, November 23d, a new church edifice was dedicated at this place. Fifty of the best white cittzens of the place were present; among them, besides the ministers named, two other Methodist preachers, ex-Governor Patton and four lawyers. These friends contributed freely to the balance needed ($70) to put in the pulpit and pews, which had not yet been secured. It was all raised in a few minutes after the sermon. The house is spoken of by the citizens as the only modern church in the place. It is indeed a gem. It is twenty-five by forty feet, with a brick foundation, a steep roof and a little belfry. It is well painted on the outside, and on the inside ceiled with varnished yellow pine. The total cost is $950. It was planned through the benevolence of Mrs. J. Fowler, of Mendon, Ill., who contributed fully one-third of the total cost. The completion of the work was made possible by "Howard." To his $300, the Central Congregational Church of Providence, R. I., to which Mr. Ash belongs, added $100.

RELIGIOUS INTEREST IN THE CHURCHES.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—It is my happiness to record one of the most precious revivals in the history of the Central Church. Sunday, January 4th, the first day of the week of prayer, was marked by evident signs of deepening interest. On that day, eight were received to the church, of whom three came on profession of their faith. For twenty-seven consecutive evenings we met in our lecture-room. Beginning with an audience of 75, the numbers in constant attendance rapidly increased to 200. The interest suffered no diminution to the last night, when six came forward to the "mourners' seats" with the cry, "Pray for us."

Some continued in an anxious state for two, three or four weeks, while others, coming in from motives of curiosity merely, were stricken down by God's Spirit, and as quickly brought into the light and liberty of believers.

An old man of 70 years was brought into the Kingdom, and is as happy as the youngest convert. Another, much in political life, and who publicly said, "I have been an awful sinner," seems now to be a reformed and converted man.

Four of our University students have joyfully professed Christ.

Sunday, February 1st, was our "Feast of Ingathering." Of the thirty converted in the meetings, twenty-four were received to the fellowship of the church, with two who came to us by letter. Of the 250 present in the audience, 150 received the sacrament.

MACON, GA.—Our church observed the week of prayer, and there seemed to follow an unusual tenderness in the regular prayer-meetings. Brother Rogers came during the last week of February, and remained five weeks, preaching and laboring with uncommon earnestness and consecration. I never have known any church in the North to be so thoroughly united in revival effort.

There have been from twelve to fifteen hopeful conversions. Ten have united with our church, four of whom are heads of families, and the rest promising young men and women. Some have united with other churches.

SHELBY IRON WORKS, ALA.—During the first week in October we set apart Wednesday as a day of fasting and prayer. On the following Sabbath we commenced a series of meetings, which continued three weeks.

Every evening, one half-hour before services, a number of Christians would assemble and converse with those who came to inquire the way of salvation. The meetings closed with twenty-one conversions reported. Last Sunday fifteen came forward, entered into covenant with the church, and were baptized, on profession of their faith.

Some eight or ten others are to unite by letter, the first opportunity. Our total membership will then stand about fifty.

RALEIGH, N. C.—The spiritual condition of the church is still very encouraging. Fifteen persons entered into covenant last Sunday, which made it a day of rejoicing. Six others have been voted into the church, and will enter into covenant at the next communion.

LASSITER'S MILLS, N. C.—The church is greatly revived; six converts this week, and many more are seeking the Lord.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Mr. Cutler writes: "Yesterday was a grand day for us. The church renewed its covenant. About 100 were present. Some 30 or 40 others sent word that they wished to do so. We are now in a condition to go forward. I trust the renewal was made sincerely."

SAVANNAH, GA.—There has been an unusual work of grace among this people, and the "meetings have been quiet and orderly, as with a New England congregation." A number have been brought into the church whose experience has been most satisfactory; none of them have had dreams or visions, but all tell a simple faith in the Saviour, and express the purpose of a new life of intelligent obedience to Him.

WOODVILLE, GA.—Mr. Sengstacke writes: "I have been preaching every night for six weeks. Our Sunday night meetings are crowded, and the unconverted people are getting alarmed. I am now reaching the very class I have been longing after for some time—the young people. In February I baptized two young people, in March three, and last night one young woman professed conversion. We are having the chur h repainted on the inside, and are trying to raise money for additional seats. We cannot seat the people. Last Sunday night many turned away because we had no room."

LATER.—Eleven united with the church, one by letter. Five were baptized, four by sprinkling, one by immersion. While a few went to the water to witness that ordinance, the many gathered in the church for a season of prayer, and I think that hour gave tone to the service of the day.

MCINTOSH, LIBERTY CO., GA.—Mr. Snelson writes: "Our communion season held yesterday was highly enjoyed by all. Six persons united with the church. Four were promising young men. Two of the candidates came out from Baptist families and were baptized by immersion."

BEREA, KY.—There were four accessions to the church at Berea on profession of faith on the first Sabbath of May.

LAWSON, ALA.—Rev. Spencer Snell rejoices in some eighteen hopeful conversions as the fruit of a series of meetings held in August.

HELENA, TEXAS.—Rev. M. Thompson, on the first Sabbath of August, had the joy of receiving to his church six persons who had recently found the Saviour.

PARIS, TEXAS.—The Rev. J. W. Roberts, who is located at Paris, Texas, an enterprising and growing city on the Texas and Pacific Railroad, writes of a pleasant series of meetings resulting in some ten additions to the two churches under his charge.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—Our revival commenced on the Sabbath, August 15th. That night there were four or five inquirers. Monday the interest increased, and Monday night there were thirty inquirers. Tuesday there were twelve or fifteen conversi ons. Tuesday night, 28 or 30 inquirers and three or four conversions. The whole number of conversions was about 25.

PRAYER MEETINGS.

ATLANTA, GA.—I have just come in from our social evening service of thanksgiving and prayer for the A. M. A. About fifty were present, and there were repeated expressions of gratitude for blessings here received, and fervent prayers for the continued and increasing success of the cause. One brother thought the Association the chief agent in the abolition of slavery, and spoke most feelingly of the inexpressible relief which that abolition had brought to him and to his people. Another in his prayer thanked the Lord for the schools and the church in the city, expressing the conviction that if the A. M. A. had not sent its workers here "things would be in a considerably worse fix than they are."

One woman told her story: her blind gropings as a slave, her joy at being sought out and taught by the teachers of the A. M. A., just when she "did not know what to do with her freedom," and made capable of giving her children, now converted, a Christian training, with a purpose henceforth to use for the good of others all the light and help she had received. Another told us how the A. M. A. had reached out its helping hand to him in this city when he was ignorant and vicious, and through the influence of a faithful teacher in a night school had saved him from evil companions and the curse of drunkenness.

MCINTOSH, GA.—As the members of this church are so widely scattered that it is difficult for the pastor to visit them often, they are arranged in seven districts, each having its "watchman," whose duty it is to sustain district prayer-meetings, and to report to the pastor anything needing his attention.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—We set apart a portion of the day of prayer for colleges for appropriate exercises, and had a solemn meeting. Since that day some have been seeking Jesus. Our hearts are specially cheered with the evident sincerity of two promising young men, who, we trust, are now entering upon the new life. We have a weekly school prayer-meeting, and meet on Tuesday nights such pupils as we think will be especially helped in a small social meeting.

MARION, ALA.—Every Monday at 4 P. M., the women meet at the "Home" for an hour of prayer. They have no clocks to tell the time by; but as most of them live in sight, I hang a white flag on the gate-post, fifteen minutes before the hour. We call this our "Gospel flag!"

The prayers of these women are marked by an unquestioning trust. They ask directly for what they want, without getting entangled in the formalities of more educated Christians, and they evidently feel that they speak into a listening ear. Their faces often beam with pleasure as they hear the reading of the Bible. "What a glorious chapter this is!—it feels so holy!"—one of them said.

They need these hours of prayer, for life with them is hard, and pinched, and poor, and in their small houses of one or two rooms, full of little children, washing and ironing and cooking, these mothers have no "closet" where they may shut themselves up for communion with Jesus, and get patience and strength for the day. But are not their prayers heard as they stand by the tub, washing for the rich?—or bend over the cradle, in which, for some, there is always a baby—or cook the meal, which to us would seem so scanty? A woman once told me that in slavery times, she went down in the garden, among the butter-beans, to pray—and there she had such a season of joy, that when she came in and took her place at her master's table, to brush away the flies, "'pear'd like glory was in de fly-brush!"

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Last night at our preparatory service, seventy-five were present; five new members were received, of whom three came on profession of faith. It was a meeting of peculiar tenderness and spiritual power. After a brief lecture by the pastor, forty-two Christians spoke tender, earnest words of love to God, and devotion to His service.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—We have been observing the week of prayer in the school, by fifteen minute prayer meetings, directly after school. At first, these were held in a recitation room, but Thursday evening the meeting had grown so large that it was held in the Intermediate room, and Friday evening in the Assembly room. A good deal of interest has been shown, and a number have expressed a desire for the prayers of Christians.

SELF HELP.

ATLANTA, GA.—On the 28th of March, the pastor of the First Congregational Church of Atlanta, proposed that the debt of that church should be paid off. $26, from two Sunday-schools in the North, were handed in by the pastor as a starter. The Professors of the University gave $30 more, and the people nobly came forward and have now paid off all the debt, making some $563 they have raised, aside from current expenses since last October. They have since raised money, which, with special gifts for that purpose, procured a fine 800 lbs. bell, which greeted our Secretary when he reached Atlanta on the 24th of June.

MARIETTA, GA.—A gem of a church school-house, 24 x 40 feet, with a gallery, and furnished with wardrobes and Sherwood's crown double desks, was dedicated at Marietta, Ga., on the 6th of June. The people raised $300 for it; two young men in Illinois gave $50, and the A. M. A. furnished the remainder, and owns the property.

MARION, ALA.—In one envelope yesterday, the collection being for the A. M. A., was $5 from a hard-working man, this being one-tenth of the man's crop—one bale of cotton, which brought $50—showing that your work for this people is not wholly unappreciated.

NORTH CAROLINA.—While Islay Walden's people in Randolph county were hauling in logs for the lumber of their new church, the mill was burned, and a part of their boards. The owner not being able to rebuild, and there being no other mill near, the people came together to help him, the young colored preacher putting down $25 from his scanty salary. They hope to have the mill under way again in three or four weeks. Meantime they will hurry in their logs, to be the first of the new sawing.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—We have a colored man visiting his daughter to-day; his first visit to Tougaloo. He says he is keeping his daughter in school with the money saved by himself and wife on snuff and tobacco since signing the pledge; the result of the work of one of our students who taught in his district.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—I cannot close this letter without a word concerning the church here. During the epidemic, one of its most earnest, reliable members fell a victim to the scourge. By thrift and saving, every family belonging to the church, except one only, got through the long summer of idleness without aid in the way of charity, and before the return of the teachers, and in the absence of the pastor, the church voted to send a delegate to the Conference at Athens, raising money at once to pay his expenses. If this is not an example of commendable church devotion and courage, show us one that is so.

NEW IBERIA, LA.—The church at New Iberia, which welcomed our last annual conference, and which is memorable as the scene of a most precious revival, and suffered seriously in the loss, by a furious wind storm in September, of their tasteful and commodious chapel, is rallying grandly from the shock. By liberal subscriptions, by mortgaging their property, and by personal labor, they have put up and covered the frame of a larger building, and have stopped before finishing, simply because they could do no more. Two hundred dollars will put the chapel in order for dedication. Shall they appeal in vain?

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—A year ago we greatly felt the need of dormitories, and accommodations for students to "batch." For this the Association could make no appropriation. One of the neighbors has put up a building for this purpose, another is building, and a third has converted an old store-room into dormitories, and four families have taken boarders. Last year our school was confined to one room; now we have added a recitation room.

MCKEE, KY.—The Saturday and Sunday meetings are regularly attended, and the people are very anxious that a suitable building should now be erected for school and church purposes. A subscription of over five hundred dollars has already been raised by the citizens of McKee, and as soon as a thousand dollars can be obtained from some benevolent source, we shall lay the foundation for something permanent.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Do the friends of the American Board and Home Missionary Society know that we down here are broadening their field for harvest? Some of these little churches reported contributions to aid the white people out West in supporting the Gospel and to send missionaries abroad. The one at Wilmington claimed itself to be the Banner Church of all the constituents of the American Board, having given more than any other according to number and means, as judged by the report of Dr. Alden.

FLORENCE, ALA.—Since the dedication of the church, I have been anxious that our lot should be inclosed, and on April 9th we gave an entertainment whose results surpassed our most sanguine expectations, as we made $64 above expenses.

We have put up a neat fence in front, well painted, which improves the looks of the church, and have ordered lumber for the other sides of the lot, and by next week the whole will be fenced.

NO. 1, MILLER STATION, GA.—The church has raised towards the work here about $30. A number of the people are not able to do anything, for they need some one to help them to get bread. We have our house all ceiled inside, and now we are trying to get it painted.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

LINCOLN MISSION, WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is a very large Sunday-school at this mission, and has been for several years. The teachers come from Dr. Rankin's church, more than fifty of them, and manifest great enthusiasm. The school averages about three hundred scholars, and on some occasions, during the cold weather, we had more than four hundred.

CARESVILLE, VA.—Nearly all of our Sabbath-school are converted. From sixty to seventy have been baptized and received into this church, and since the 1st of September the pastor has baptized 150.

Sabbath before last, I had the blest privilege of seeing forty-three of the converts all seated together in the front seats. All ages were represented there from the little child to the man of grey hairs.

NO. 1, MILLER STATION, GA.—The Sunday-school is growing in numbers and also in interest, and its work has had great power over the people here for good.

ATLANTA, GA.—Atlanta has a monthly Sunday-school Teachers' Institute. Pastor Hawley attends it. Atlanta's County, Fulton, has also a Sunday-school Association, which convenes in the city, quarterly. At the last meeting, as interest was warming up in favor of taking some more practical measures toward helping the colored Sunday-schools, it was found that the constitution limited the membership to such schools as were "all white." Whereupon a resolution of interest and of encouragement was adopted. At the last meeting of the State S. S. Association, held in Macon, a colored school in Savannah applied for membership. The matter was quieted for the time, but it is said that it will come up again. Upon the recommendation of Gov. Colquitt it is proposed to adopt the Brooklyn idea of a Children's Day once a year; this not only for the City but for the State. In Atlanta there are fourteen colored Sunday-schools.

ANNISTON, ALA.—On Thursday night, December 25th, the colored church was crowded to its utmost capacity to witness the exercises of the school children, which consisted of songs, recitations, etc. After these exercises, the presents from the Christmas tree were distributed among the children. Several white visitors were present and spoke very highly of the management of the church and school. On Friday night they gave a fair at which they realized $56.80.

MARION, ALA.—Our Sunday-school numbers about eighty. The children come to their classes neatly dressed, after the Saturday's washing and ironing, and give quiet attention during the hour. We find blackboard illustrations helpful in fixing the thoughts of the lesson. One Sunday, twenty maps of Palestine were handed in, in connection with the lesson. We wish our friends at the North could see how well these colored children carry through the Bible exercises and other recitations.

MCKEE, KY.—About four or five months ago I made my first visit to McKee, the county seat of Jackson Co., Ky. I found a small village having a court-house, jail, poor-house, two or three hotels, about the same number of stores, several dwellings, a small school-house, but no church. I immediately helped them to the organization of a Sunday-school, and made an appointment to preach there every other Saturday and Sunday during the winter. We now have a Sunday-school with a membership of over seventy-five, with a good library and lesson papers.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.—This Association was organized only last year at Montgomery, so this was our first gathering. Thirteen schools were represented by delegates, four by written reports, one by letter; their aggregate shows over thirteen hundred teachers and scholars in attendance, seventeen hundred volumes in libraries, one hundred and eighty dollars raised, and one hundred conversions. This does not include the schools taught by our students through the summer, although they are really a part of our work. This brief sentence gives no idea of the interest with which these reports were given and received, or of the amusing or touching incidents connected with the giving.

TEMPERANCE.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—Bible temperance meetings at McLeansville, N. C., seem to tone up the sentiment of the people. One young man, who at considerable trouble and expense had procured a situation in a grocery store where whiskey is sold, has thrown up his position and gone to work on a farm, because he was convinced that the Bible condemned liquor-selling, and he could not ask God's blessing upon his daily work.

WOODBRIDGE, N. C.—During the summer generous friends contributed a good supply of clothing, which was bestowed only on temperate persons. I am glad to report that I found in all 160 persons, old and young, whom I judged worthy. We succeeded in making temperance respectable in clean clothes. Our Band of Hope had been organized five years, but was not yet really a power. We now clothed our members, overhauled our books, expelled the unworthy, elected new officers and went ahead.

For a few weeks we spent all our time in trying those who had broken their pledges. We also passed laws that members might be brought to trial for anything dishonorable to the Band, and that all on trial must stand on the platform during trial. So each Sabbath every member is asked "Have you broken your pledge, and do you know any one who has?"

NO. 1, MILLER STATION, GA.—The Temperance Society is doing good. At our meeting last Sabbath, five joined us. The band numbers now about 50. I find it is those who are trained in our schools, and those only, that take hold of our principles.

KYMULGA, ALA.—A very interesting temperance meeting is reported. Sixty persons were present. The exercises consisted of singing, addresses and selections by the members of the Society.

MOBILE, ALA.—In this city it is impossible for your Superintendent to find a provision store having any considerable variety of goods that does not include among its principal commodities wines and liquors. Members and officers of churches are engaged in the trade, and scruple not to advertise conspicuously that branch of their business. Yet there are some churches, both white and colored, whose rules and discipline would delight the heart of a Puritan.

CONFERENCES.

SOUTH-WEST CONFERENCE.—This conference includes the Congregational Churches of Louisiana, and the meeting this year was held at Terrebonne, in April. Brother Clay and his church had made every preparation. One hundred and fifty dollars had been raised and expended in putting the church and parsonage in perfect order. With the exception of two of the small mission churches, every church was represented.

The reports from the churches indicate a pure and steady growth. The process of cutting off dead branches has gone on, so that although nearly two hundred have been received during the year, the numerical gain over all losses has been very small. We are glad to believe that the sixteen hundred members in the churches of the Association represent more solid moral worth than in any previous year. Five "missionaries at large" were chosen. Some of them already have churches, and take on all the supplementary work for which they can find time. These men are unsalaried, and depend, in their missionary tours, upon the thoughtful kindness and hospitality of those to whom they go. The next meeting of the Association will be held in Terrebonne, the 1st Wednesday in April, 1881.

SOUTH WEST TEXAS ASSOCIATION.—The regular time for the meeting of the Association of South-Western Texas, is in July, which in the South is the slack time of the year, with the corn and the cotton "laid by," and which is the usual period, among both colored and white, for revival meetings, as is the winter at the North. This year the brethren undertook to bring it forward to April, so that the Superintendent might be with them, but as everybody was plowing corn and chopping out the cotton, the effort brought to Helena only the two pastors, B. C. Church and M. Thompson. Yet we had a glorious four days' meeting, with preachings, conferences, a communion, a season of baptizing, and a class meeting, which, according to the custom of the church, precedes the communion as a preparation. People came six, nine, or twelve miles.

CENTRAL SOUTH CONFERENCE.—The Central South Conference embraces the Congregational churches of Tennessee, North Alabama and Mississippi. Its ninth annual meeting was held at Athens, Alabama, commencing November 20th. That morning was spent in hearing the narratives of the churches. The reports generally showed progress. Athens alone reported a less membership than last year; but in this church there has been a growth in grace in many of its members.

KENTUCKY CONFERENCE.—This Association embraces the churches at Berea, Big Hill, Cabin Creek, Hillsdale, Camp Nelson, McKee and Williamsburg, all in Kentucky. It was organized in September, 1871, and the annual meeting was at Camp Nelson, the last Saturday and Sunday in March, 1880.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—The fifth annual meeting of the Alabama Conference was held, beginning Saturday evening, March 27th, and closing on the evening of the 30th, at Selma, a city noted for wide streets, beautiful trees, and pleasant homes. Pastors and delegates from the fifteen churches were present. Some spoke of special religious interest, others of neighborhood prayer-meetings, one of a pastor's class for brother ministers, some of farms recently purchased to be carried on by different members for the benefit of church or school; and various plans for the uplifting of the people showed that the pastors of these little churches are thinking and working, as one of their own members said, "still holding on, though there are discouragements."

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.—The Georgia Congregational Conference is a large body, if an extensive framework can make it so. My share of the travel to its second annual session at Savannah was six hundred miles. Of the fourteen churches, two of which are in South Carolina, all save one were represented, and the meeting was much enjoyed by all. The reports from the churches do not show any rapid increase. "We must expect the churches to be small, perhaps, for twenty years yet," said one who has grown up with this work. There are obstinate prejudices in the way, and there is a great educational work yet to be done. A lay delegate sagely remarked: "When the ground is rough we must go slow, or there'll be trouble."

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.—This is the Benjamin of the Congregational Israel. Its first meeting was held one year ago, at Raleigh; its second occurred June 7th–9th, at Dudley. The five churches had come to be six, the new one being at Hilltown, in the western part of the State, and having as pastor Rev. Islay Walden, a graduate of the New Brunswick Seminary, ordained by the Dutch Classis of that locality, who had been a slave in the region where now he is preaching the Gospel. A gracious revival and a meeting-house under way are the fruits of the first six months of the life of this church. These six churches and the five schools of the A. M. A. in the State, were all represented. McLeansville was fixed upon as the place of the next meeting.

ORDINATIONS.—On the way down to Conference, some of us stopped at Macon according to letters missive, for the examination and ordination of Preston W. Young, acting pastor at Byron; and during the sessions of Conference another council examined and ordained two others, A. J. Headen, of Cypress Slash, and T. T. Benson, of Orangeburgh, S. C. These three young men passed very creditable examinations, and, with Rev. J. R. McLean, Moderator of the second Council, formed a very interesting group—all Talladega men and classmates—a fine illustration of the good work done by the school for the church. H. S. Williams was also ordained at Talladega for the church at Memphis, Tenn.

WOMAN'S WORK.

MACON, GA.—Monday afternoon I give to practising music in the Sunday-school; Wednesday, we have our school prayer-meeting; Thursday, a mother's meeting, for prayer and conversation. Friday evening, I have a meeting for Bible-reading and prayer in the cabins near by. Sunday evenings I usually spend in the same way. Saturday, at 2. P.M., I have the sewing-school, numbering seventy-five, and weekly increasing in numbers and interest. The mothers are delighted, and the children not less so. As the entire burden of the work rests on me, with no white help, you can see that my moments at home are all occupied with cutting and basting. I have finally succeeded in getting some colored teachers, and may in time have help in preparing work. I try to visit the homes of all the scholars, that I may know their condition and needs. I find I have made 150 calls during January, and though this is not a large number, still it implies a great many miles of walking.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—A very poor woman came to me asking for clothing for the little helpless children of her dying sister. I had just given out the last garment; but while talking with her I put up a prayer that something would come soon: just then the door-bell rang, and I went to the door and found there a box, which I opened at once, and in it beheld the answer to my prayer! It was full of very nice and mostly new clothing for children. It was a literal fulfillment of the promise, "before they call I will answer; and while they are yet speaking I will hear." A few days since while visiting a very hard neighborhood, one mother who is a church member said, "I allers lays close down to what ye say, like the knife to the grindstone, 'cause I wants ye to sharpen me, so I will get to living better. I's mighty keerless, tho' sometimes I does try in a stammerin' manner to talk to my trifling neighbors. Now do come around often and scrub us up with the Bible."

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—It often seems as if our work grew upon our hands, so that we have no time to tell about it; with our nearly 400 pupils, with all the cases of discipline that must arise, with interviews with parents and visits to their homes, in addition to the full hours of school given to instruction; then the school-prayer-meetings, the special meetings for Bible study, the Young Men's Association of the school—a condition of membership of which is in pledge to abstain from the use of tobacco,—and the semi-monthly meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, which we have of late devoted to "Health talks." At our last meeting I sent an invitation to the mothers of our pupils to come to the school-room on Monday at four o'clock. A large number responded, and we gave them such instruction as we could, regarding things they so much need to know for themselves, their children, and their homes. The women listened earnestly, and begged for another meeting of the kind.

SELMA, ALA.—Surely, much more ought to be done here by educated Bible Christians; but our teachers are already nearly breaking down with over-work in their regular school duties, there being one less teacher than usual on the force this year. In short, I am more than ever convinced that we need a lady missionary here, to devote her whole time to personal work among the classes not now reached by our schools and churches, and to take charge of the industrial work among the women and girls. We have in mind just the one we need if her support can be assured.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—My Sunday-school class in Central Church is a great joy and help in my work. Commencing with thirty little ones, the names have increased to one hundred and twenty. Through these, I find entrance to many homes otherwise closed to all religious influences. During the last three days I have visited thirty-four families. One Sabbath I was pleased to see in church three mothers and ten children whom I had visited during the week.

MENDI MISSION, WEST AFRICA.

Missionaries—REV. ALBERT P. MILLER, REV. ANDREW E. JACKSON, BENJ. JAMES, M.D., MR. A. E. WHITE, MR. ELMORE E. ANTHONY, MRS. ALBERT P. MILLER, MRS. ANDREW E. JACKSON, MR. NATHANIEL NURSE.

Native Helpers—REV. GEORGE N. JOWETT, MR. SAMUEL H. GOODMAN, MR. JOSEPH E. GERBER, MRS. LUCY DURING, MR. BUEL TUCKER.

(These details are from the Report of Prof. T. N. Chase.)

GOOD HOPE.

At Good Hope Station is a large house, with a fine yard containing many valuable fruit trees, a good little chapel, a school-house that answers its purpose and a large tract of land. In the vicinity is a large Sierra Leone element and a much larger native population. No census was taken in 1870, but there is no lack of material untouched by either the Church Missionary or Wesleyan Mission. In the village of Bonthe which is a short walk distant, are post-office, commandant's quarters, colonial surgeon's residence and police station. Steamers from Liverpool and other places often come to Bonthe, and a small steamer will soon begin to make regular trips between Bonthe and Freetown. Good Hope is thus a valuable base, and is really needed. Supplies can be received there and shipped to all the stations, the sick can be taken there for medical treatment, and there all the workers can be assembled for consultation once a year, or oftener.

The Church.—During our stay about 100 were present at the morning service, although of late the usual attendance has been much less than that. At the prayer-meetings from ten to fifty adults were present. Two or three of the brothers and several of the sisters led in prayer, using numerous quotations from Scripture and hymns very appositely.

The School.—The actual attendance at present in both rooms is about eighty. The most advanced pupils are three boys, who are ciphering in cube-root. Mr. White appeared to be teaching quite well the day I visited the school, but the order was poor, through a want of a high standard, I think, rather than inability to control. Mrs. During teaches the little ones to read and spell in the old way, and seasons her labors by having them learn plenty of Scripture texts.

AVERY.

The Church.—The three Sunday services are the same as those at Good Hope. We were present two Sabbaths. The morning congregation numbered about 100, many of them being present to see and hear the visitors from America. The preaching is done through an interpreter, Mr. Jowett, the teacher. The Church is certainly in a very low state, and few, if any, of the members, are up to the usual standard of requirements.

The School.—This is taught by Rev. Mr Jowett in the basement or lower story of the church. The number enrolled is forty-six, and the number present the day on which I visited it was twenty-three. Most of them are mission children and children of employees. Nothing is taught but reading and spelling, and none are very far advanced in these branches.

Coffee Farm.—In the coffee farm are 1,500 trees from two to six feet high, set in rows eight feet apart. They were started by Mr. Burton in 1873-4-5 from plants obtained in Liberia, and are just beginning to bear, being backward on account of not having been properly tended some of the time. The coffee grows in pods about the size of a robin's egg, in each of which are two kernels enveloped in husks. When ripe it must be picked by hand, dried, "pestled," and cleaned at the cost of a large amount of labor. The grass about Avery is very troublesome, and to keep it down in this farm two men are employed most of the time. This experiment of coffee-growing ought to have a fair and careful trial, for, apart from the Gospel, the greatest need of West Africa is a system of profitable agriculture.

The Mill at Avery is a monument to the energy, ingenuity and perseverance of Mr. Burton. As one looks at it away up there in the wilds, he wonders that Mr. Burton could have succeeded in its construction with the material and men at his command. It has a circular saw propelled by a turbine wheel, which, owing to an insufficient head of water, can be used only for small logs of the softer species of timber. Most of the sawing is done by a straight saw propelled by an undershot wheel, and, on account of the comparatively small force of the water, the imperfections of the machinery and the slowness and dullness of the native workmen, the operation of sawing is slow.

The mill is giving a few natives a chance to get a better living than they could obtain otherwise, and, in a small way, is teaching habits of industry and the ways of civilized life.

Mission Pupils.—When Mr. Miller left, there were seven mission boys and girls at Good Hope and nine at Avery. But on the first of March, at my suggestion, Mr. Jackson took the Good Hope children up to Avery. The children at Avery seem contented and happy, and are making as good progress as could be expected under the circumstances. They appear fond of Mrs. Jackson, and she is well adapted to care for them and train them, but has not sufficient time to do all that ought to be done for them.

DEBIA.

The work begun at Debia by the late Barnabas Root has been continued by Samuel Goodman, a Sherbro native, educated at the Mendi Mission for ten years under Mr. Burton and Mr. Claflin. The present number of pupils enrolled is nineteen, of whom eighteen were present the day I visited the school. Instruction is confined to reading and spelling for the most part, but the pupils have some general exercises, such as counting, naming the days of the week and the months of the year, repeating the table of English money, the commandments, apostles' creed and Lord's prayer.

At the Sunday service Mr. Goodman says that ten or twelve besides the children attend. He says it is expected that his cousin will be crowned King of Sherbro Island soon, and that people will then settle in his village, which is near the school, and thus the number of pupils and attendants upon the Sunday service will be increased.

STATIONS ON RIVERS.

The Sierra Leone Government is extending its jurisdiction over all the rivers of the Sherbro and Mendi country, and the people are in an unsettled or transition state. They do not submit cheerfully to British rule, but will hardly make any attempt at resistance, since the Governor is prudent and takes the precaution to impress them that such resistance would be useless. The British authority is so much regarded now that tribal wars, in regions easily accessible by police and troops, may be considered at an end. This will doubtless produce great changes in the location of the population, for they will no longer need to settle with reference to defence against hostile neighbors. But it remains to be seen whether they will occupy the best locations along the rivers, or, because of their dislike toward the British Government, withdraw more into the interior. It is quite probable, however, that in two or three years there will be good openings on the rivers for missionary effort with a reasonable prospect of permanency. The past history of the work seems to favor a policy of caution and conservatism. Of all the rivers, the Boom Kittim seems to be the best with respect to the nature of the country and the number and character of its inhabitants.

MOCASSIE.

Mocassie is situated some twenty-five miles due north of Avery by land and about thirty-five miles by water. In the river are two falls, around which boats must be drawn. It consists of three unwalled towns containing a large number of people, (figures are entirely unreliable.) I was told that Rev. E. P. Smith visited the place and thought it a good point for a station. Mr. Jackson thinks the chiefs would like to have a mission there. Mr. Jowett, teacher and interpreter at Avery, says he would like to start a work there, and would take his wife with him. I think it would be well to plan to send Mr. Jowett there next January or February, and to erect for him a mud house and mud barrie. I should hope and pray for some substantial success in due time, but would also be prepared for failure.

KAW MENDI.

I visited Kaw Mendi to see the spot where the first work of the Mission was done, and to inspect the labors of Rev. John McK. Williams. Mr. Williams is a native of British Guiana, which is usually considered a part of the West Indies. He worked for a time in Freetown with the Lady Huntington connection, then in Liberia, afterward at the Shengay Mission, and has been nearly three years at Kaw Mendi. He has erected a good mud house of four rooms and a "barrie" for school and church services; has cleared several acres of land, and has raised and manufactured some arrow-root for market. He has twenty-three boarding pupils and nine day scholars. Eleven of these are ciphering and one has got to compound proportion. Four, who knew no English three years ago, can interpret quite readily. He says he has fifteen church members, all of whom are at home and attend meetings regularly. Three of these are Amistads, who had gone back to their heathen customs. His Sabbath congregation numbers over one hundred. Within two miles of the station is a population of some five or six hundred, it having been diminished greatly by recent wars, now at an end.

Several considerations seem to favor making this a part of the A. M. A. work:

1. For Africa, Mr. Williams' effort may be considered a success. Very few missionaries could accomplish so much in so short a time in any field in Africa. 2. He cannot continue his work long without assistance from some source. Poverty is written upon everything about the station. 3. It is the scene of the first labors of the A. M. A. in Africa, and contains the dust of several of its early missionaries, and so a desire to keep it up, if a mere sentiment, is a worthy one. 4. More good work can be done here under the direction of Mr. Williams for a certain amount of money than is being done for the same amount anywhere in the Mission. A small expenditure would be a very economical use of means.

FORWARD OR BACKWARD?

Foundation work must be done, although a vast amount of material and labor be expended below the surface of the ground. When the Lord gave the command to go forth and preach the Gospel to every creature He did not except the Africans of the Mendi country. Eighty years of continuous mission effort at Sierra Leone have produced much fruit that can be seen in the intelligence of a large number of blacks residing there, and of those who have emigrated thence to many places on the coast, in the numerous self-supporting churches among them, and in the thousands of professing Christians, who, with all their failings, are illustrating the power of the Gospel. And what is true of Sierra Leone is true, in a measure, of the Yomba country, Old Calabar, Gaboon, Zululand, Caffraria, Natal, Madagascar and other places in Africa. The power of polygamy and superstition is not superior to that of the Gospel.

Then shall Good Hope Station be given up on account of the climate, when almost within a stone's throw five Europeans are employed in a trading post, selling rum to the natives by the schooner load? Shall men, allured by a high salary, or driven by want, brave the deadly influence of mangrove swamps, while those who profess to want souls for their hire shrink from the danger?

To abandon the Mendi Mission would be doubting the sure prophecy of God's word, disobeying the Saviour's command, writing "failure" where it is possible to write "success," and acknowledging that the motives of the Gospel have less force than the wages of mammon.

EXPERIMENT IN INDIAN EDUCATION.

Indian Boys Leaving Fort Berthold.—Capt. Pratt, who was detailed by the Government to get fifty Indians from the mission, came to start his company at this Agency. We did not know how the people would feel about sending their children to a distant and unknown country. But Capt. Pratt had both experience and faith; he told us of his talks and prayer-meetings with the prisoners in Florida, and of their desire for education, and of the willingness of Eastern Christian friends to help them; then we knelt down in the sitting-room of our mission home, that Sabbath evening, and committed our way unto the Lord. All was in doubt; some had refused to go; the chiefs would not send their children; but soon three youth came of their own accord and offered themselves. They had been attending our school and had learned in a measure to trust us. They said they knew it was a long way to go and a long time to stay, and it would be hard; but they were prepared to carry out their resolution to learn to be white men. Soon thirteen youth, nine boys and four girls, were secured, all from our school; it took the nucleus of our school; but we knew that this movement would create a new interest in education and bring us new scholars, as well as do more than we could for the old ones who should go away, so we gave them up willingly. With this beginning Captain Pratt started down the river in a flat-bottom, stern-wheel mission steamboat, one cold October day, collecting more from the river agencies as we went along till forty-nine were secured. The youth looked very sober as they started off; there were some very touching partings with friends, one of whom said: "I may not see a hair of him again;" and at the last look at them we saw blankets and coats waving in lieu of handkerchiefs on the upper deck of the boat. All this was a year ago; to-day a hundred more from Dakota are on their way to Hampton and to Carlisle, and provision is being made for others in the West near their own homes.

Indian Boys at Hampton.—We wish the friends who bade them good-bye that cold October morning could see them to-day. Almka (White Wolf) would show them the blue farm-cart, of which he is rather shyly proud, because he made it, wheels and all, with his own hands. White Breast would lay down the doors of a new wardrobe he is finishing neatly, and Karunach would come from mending shoes to tell them about Hampton, till their ideas out-stripped their tongues, and the old Indian sign language came to the rescue. I think E-cor-rup-ta-ha would stop a minute, with a nonchalant air, to polish lovingly the big Corliss engine, before he shook hands even with them. Laughing Face and Kawhat would tell them how much they have made of the new carriage-house the Indians are building. Tom Smith would throw away his plane and meet them with a joke and his merry, boyish laugh; and little Ara-hotch-kish would look up from his painting with a quick, shy glance of welcome, going straight to the warmest place they have saved in their hearts. Most of our Indians have gained a sufficient command of English to receive any idea which can be put in simple words; and if any reader of the MISSIONARY is troubled with ennui or thinking of searching for a new sensation I advise him to come to Hampton and try telling the old children's stories to Indians. Even Washington's little worn-out hatchet gets a new, sharp edge. Imagine telling the story of David and Goliath for the first time to a school full of Indian boys and girls. The room is breathlessly still. Scarcely a suppressed Indian grunt or guttural disturbs the narrative, till the first-slung stone lodges fairly in the giant's forehead, when little Ta-ta-ton-ka-skah, on the back seat, forgets all traditions of the Indian stoicism, jumps about a foot in the air, and claps his hands in an ecstacy of delight.

LAKE SUPERIOR AGENCY.

I have just returned from Lac Courte d'Oreille. In looking over their patches, for their farms are in miniature as yet, they were seen to be well tended and well fenced; and as I looked upon the nearly twelve hundred Indians as they received their goods, for which the males between the ages of eighteen and forty-five had worked under the direction of the farmer, I could not but compare them with the same number gathered in the fall of 1873. Then they wore long hair, blankets, feathers, paint, &c.; they were dirty, filthy, and almost eaten up with vermin. Now they are clean, with short hair, blankets rare, little paint, no feathers, and most of them well clothed. The dresses of the females were in the latest fashion, and many of them had on hats. The men wore clean white or colored shirts, and hats or caps. They prized the agricultural implements, hoes, rakes, scythes, plows, grub-hoes, &c., all being in great demand. Some years ago they wanted blankets, beads and trinkets. Now they seem delighted with the idea of a boarding-school such as we agreed upon while I was East.

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.

The Indians at this Agency are quiet, peaceable and well-disposed, and are evidently tending towards a better civilization. There are about 1,406 Arickarees, Grosventres and Mandans, all living in log houses—no tepees on the Agency. About forty new houses were built this season. The Indians cultivated 612 acres, divided into 202 allotments, the Indian women, as has been the custom, doing the greater portion of the work. This land they planted in corn, potatoes, beans, squash and oats. In consequence of long-continued drouth the yield will be small. There are two schools at the Agency, one supported by the Government, with two female teachers, and one a mission school with two teachers.

SISSETON AGENCY, D. T.

This Agency has been established about ten years. The Indians now dress entirely in citizen's clothing, and live in log-houses, some with shingled roofs and board floors; most of them with dirt roofs and floors. The number of houses built of logs, is 220, and 15 frame. There are about 4,025 acres under cultivation; there was broken of new ground during the spring, 1,055 acres. Many of them are able to do such work as an ordinary carpenter or blacksmith does. We have built three frame houses and have two more nearly completed. I depend on Indians as help in running our threshing machines, engines at our steam-mills, caring for our horses, and have employed no extra white help, other than one white man to oversee each department, since April 1st, 1875. The largest crop raised by any one Indian last year, was 575 bushels of wheat and oats, two others raising nearly as much. There are three schools, two Government and one mission; 7 teachers, five Government and two mission.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY.

Among the Indians generally, habits of morality appear to have been growing stronger. Their general deportment is very good, and their style of living in their houses is improving all the time. Their general health, in consequence of their improved manner of living, has never been better than during the past year. Most of their houses have been ceiled and good tight floors put in them during the past winter, so that they are quite as comfortable as the average of white settlers throughout the country. There has been some land cleared by them, a decided advance in the kind of fences built by them, and I have furnished 1,000 fruit trees which they have set out, nearly all of which have lived.

Our schools have been well attended, and the progress of the scholars in their studies has been quite satisfactory. The average attendance of the two schools has been something over fifty. One feature of improvement at the Agency, which deserves mention, has been the employment of apprentices, at small wages, at the various shops at the Agency. We have had five of our former school-boys employed in this way during the summer, and they have done very well. The delay of the Government to furnish the Indians on this Reservation with titles to their allotments of land, has operated to discourage them very much in the improvement of their farms.

S'kokomish Church.—Number of male members, 20, female members, 16, total, 36. Received during the year, on profession, 11, by letter, 3; one dismissed. Average attendance on Sabbath-school, 58, on Prayer-meeting, 38, on public worship, 70. Families under pastoral care, 53, all but six of whom are Indians. Contributions for benevolent objects, $265,52; for pastor's support and Sabbath-school, $230,25; total, $465, 77. At Dunginess Station, where six members of the S'kokomish Church reside, the average attendance on Sabbath-school is 35, on prayer-meetings 30, on public worship 45. More Indians have been added to the S'kokomish Church than during any previous year. More Bibles have also been sold, for as the scholars give up and go to work, they seem inclined to buy them among their first purchases. A small church-bell and a melodeon have been ordered for the people at Dunginess.

II.—Remarks on Statistics.

The figures will cease to look dry, and the statistical table will begin to glow with even a celestial light, if our readers will but reflect that every unit in these numbers stands for an undying soul, and every unit in some of them for such a soul brought out from the dark bondage of Chinese paganism into the glorious liberty of the Son of God.

1. It is often said that "figures cannot lie," and yet they can, and do; and however conscientiously they are prepared, they may convey a false impression, unless explained. Respecting the figures given above, it ought to be said that our Chinese pupils move about a great deal, and thus, in the course of a year, their names come to be enrolled in several schools. This tends to swell the totals, particularly in the second and the last two columns. On the other hand, it should be said that many are in our schools for very brief periods without becoming enrolled, but not without seeing and hearing something to set them thinking—and thinking in the direction of the true light and the higher life. And so, too, there are many who profess to have ceased from idol-worship, and many who give evidence of conversion, who have removed to points from which our schools are inaccessible, and who are, therefore, not counted in their respective columns, so that the over-statements, which cannot be avoided on the one hand, may be, and in respect to those giving evidence of conversion we know are, more than counterbalanced by the under-statements on the other. In blessed fruits "gathered unto everlasting life," the past year's work has seemed to be especially rich. I cannot at this time state accurately the number of hopeful conversions, but it can scarcely fall short of forty; and the whole number of whom we venture to hope that they have been born of God in connection with our work during the last ten years is nearly, if not quite 300.

2. The school at Grass Valley was an experiment, and cannot be regarded as a success. But the causes of the failure were not such as should discourage us from trying again. Partly for lack of funds and partly for lack of a suitable helper who could be spared from other fields, we have been deterred from renewing the experiment, but we hope to do so in the coming year. It would seem that if from any point, as a centre, we could reach effectively "the Chinese in the mines," it would be Grass Valley; and either there or somewhere else, we propose, if the Master will open the way, to push the hard problem their character and condition involve, through to solution. A scattered, motley, ragged and most ill-favored flock, they are making their way, each one, to the grave; but bearing, each one within himself, a treasure more precious than worlds. Shall no man care for them?

3. The school at Oroville we hope to resume as soon as the hot and sickly season closes; and to continue it till that season next year returns. This seems, for the present, to be the most we can do there.

4. The total number employed in the work at the close of the year is twenty. The largest number employed at any one time was 25. The total number of months of labor performed is 246; 22 more than in any previous year. Seventy months of service have been rendered by nine different Chinese helpers, of whom six are still employed. It seems to me that not only more work, but better, on the whole, the year through, has been rendered in '79—'80 than ever before.

5. If we compare our Statistics for this year with those of last, we find the total number enrolled as pupils to be greater by 67, but the average attendance for the year precisely the same. The most marked gains are in the columns of those reported as having ceased from idol-worship, and as giving evidence of conversion; in the former 180 against 137 last year, and in the latter, 127 against 84.

III.—Finances.

Our resources for the year have been $7,622.55, of which $1,622.55 have been contributed directly to the mission treasury. Our expenditures have been, for salaries of Superintendent, teachers and helpers, $5,266.35; rents, $1,751.50, and for incidentals, $604.70, of which for travelling expenses of Superintendent, teachers and helpers, $81.05; for fitting up and furnishing school-rooms, $79.60; for printing Annual Reports, $45.00, and for fuel, lights, water, books, minor repairs, postage, etc., $399.05.—Total, $7,622.55. The property of the mission remains unchanged:—viz., a lot at San Lorenzo, which was a virtual donation from Rev. T. M. Oviatt, valued at $250, but not at present salable; and the Barnes Mission House in San Francisco, valued at $5,500, on which there remains a debt of $3,300. The interest on this debt, however, together with the cost of insurance and taxes, is paid by the income from the property.

SERMON.

REV. ALEXANDER McKENZIE, D.D.

Ex. ii : 9. "Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages."

Africa has always been interesting to us for different reasons. It was interesting in our childhood because there was almost nothing to be known about it. The school boy, when he was bewildered as he had wandered over the map of Europe, and had tried in vain to make out—what we have scarcely made out to this day—the mysterious and ever-changing boundaries of its States and coasts, and when he had become confused in the vastness of Asia, in the effort to keep in mind its divisions and their lines and the unrememberable and unpronounceable names of its mountains and rivers, and still more as he brought his studies nearer home to be disturbed by the feeling that he ought to know his own country, the length of its rivers, the area of its lakes, the boundaries of its States, their capitals, and the various interests which commend themselves to us as members of this nation; the boy, bewildered and distressed by this demand upon his thoughts, turned with relief to Africa. There was something which could be grasped. He readily ran up and down its coast, seeing hardly a gulf which would elude his reach, and scarcely a promontory which would thrust itself upon his notice. The few settlements scattered along the border could be counted upon the fingers of his small hand, the northern part was conveniently taken up with a great desert, and the southern part was marked "Unexplored." Such was the geography of my boyhood. To that we always turned with a special hopefulness.

But Africa grew more interesting to us, as we came into closer contact with it, than any other part of the unknown world. A Chinaman was a rarity indeed; a Japanese we seldom or never saw; but the African was always here—in our streets, in our homes, entering even into our boyish politics and into the ardor and hope of our young manhood, until we came to engage in that irresistible conflict which now draws slowly toward its close. Africa became more interesting yet as it opened itself before us when we were old enough to appreciate the tide of exploration which was flowing into it, and to follow the various discoverers as they passed inward from the sea-coast, from lake to lake and from mountain to mountain. We found so much novelty and incident attending their efforts that there was no study more interesting than this, which they laid before us that we might learn it leisurely and thoroughly at their hands. Africa became again more interesting as we came to think of its prophecy, and to see that it had arisen out of the sea not in vain, but that this great people which had been brought into the closest political relations with us had come at last into our ecclesiastical work and life, and was coming to be one of the great factors in those great problems which civilization and Christianity are trying to solve.

To-day, with all this increased knowledge of Africa, and with the rising of this great power which cannot be put aside, the great question comes, What are we to do? Nothing that I recall so well illustrates to my mind our position as that incident which the words which I have taken for my text bring to your notice. A king's daughter by the banks of the river; a slave-child in an ark of bulrushes hidden among the reeds, brought suddenly and unexpectedly to the notice of the princess; then that solemn question, "What shall I do?"

There are certain moments which are inexpressibly solemn. There are very few moments in the history of the world more solemn and more profound in the depth of their significance than the instant when Pharaoh's daughter paused above that weeping slave-child to determine what she should do. Shall she thrust him back again that he may take what fate may bring upon the tide of the great river? Shall she give him over to those who have placed him already under sentence of death? Shall she take him to her home and bring him up with all the possibilities that may be wrapped in this infant mind, and the manhood that shall come after it? On that turned more than turns on any dynasty of kings, or any school of philosophers which the world has seen.

Upon that African woman's answer concerning that child turned the destiny of kings and philosophers and of mankind with all its interests. If she decided wisely, she was to give to the world its greatest law-giver, one of its greatest statesmen, one of its greatest reformers; she was to give a man who was to take a horde of fugitive slaves and fashion them into a state; who was to make the first written constitution which the world had; who was to govern and guide this people through forty years of an instructive pilgrimage; who was to go up the mount of God and receive the law for all nations,—the man, who, more than any other man who was only man, was to be the teacher of men, the head of colleges, the head of governments, the head of civilization, until his word should be law—law and gospel in the churches and Sabbath-schools of the world. Those tiny hands lying in their helplessness before her, were to be lifted above a nation, were to take from the hands of the Almighty the tables of stone which were to express so long as time shall be, the duty and the glory of man. Whether this should be, turned upon what this African woman might decide in the moment when she settled with herself and with humanity and with the ages, the question whether her foot should thrust the ark of bulrushes upon the tide, or her hand should take the outcast child to her palace.

So Africa lies before us to-day—the nation prostrate, enslaved, ignorant and helpless, under sentence of the world's neglect and scorn; hidden in the ark of bulrushes, daubed with slime and pitch and concealed in the reeds by the river's bank. Africa has come up to sight, and lies where the river touches the land; and the king's daughter,—the wife of the king's son, the Church, which is the Lord's bride,—looks down upon this child weeping in the bulrushes, to repeat again the question of the Egyptian Princess to herself, "Shall I thrust him back? or shall I bring him to the palace and give him to the world?"

I need not remind you how that great, solemn question concerns us; how it has come to enter into our politics and to affect the permanence and honor of our Republic; how it has come to be the great question for the nations to solve, as a new continent and a new people come into the light. This great coming-up of this slave-child at the feet of the King's daughter forces upon us to-day as serious a question as the world has to consider. Nothing, probably, that our civilization will have to pass upon, or our Christianity will have to decide, shall surpass this: What Pharaoh's daughter shall do with the child Moses,—what God's daughter shall do with the child Africa.

How much we know of Africa, of her history, of her territory! How much has been brought to our notice! I said just now that it was easy for us to compass it and to follow it leisurely along until we grasp the whole of it. I thought so until I turned my mind more particularly to it, thinking that I could get in a book or two substantially all that had been written upon Africa. I found that the immense library open to me had "Africa" scattered through it, and that it was not the work of a few moments, but of months and years, to come to even a tolerable knowledge of this country. I said then, We know so much that we must do more than we have done in making this knowledge a power. The people know so much, so much is written and laid before them, that it does not fall to me to describe Africa.

And yet what is this country? We look upon it as it lies yonder over the seas and here with the millions of its sons at our very doors. We look out over the waters; there lies the great continent with its sixteen thousand miles of coast line, with scarcely an indentation; a land stretching five thousand miles north and south, five thousand miles east and west—a country with all varieties of condition, from the place of destroying cold to the place of consuming heat; from mountains to plains; from forests to jungle and morass; from healthy regions to malarial tracts; from all that can give the rich and ripe products of the earth to all that can destroy the man who ventures within its reach.

What shall we say of the African products? Still the same thing. Nearly everything is there. Run through the list in your price-current in to-day's paper, and almost all can be found in Africa; cotton and coffee, oil and oats, wheat and barley, rice and rubber, sugar and spices, wools and woods, gold, iron, diamonds, ivory—fifty thousand elephants, they say, dying in a year, to give us their strength and beauty.

What shall we say of her people? More than two hundred and five millions—nearly one-seventh of the population of the globe, are there. Many kinds of people, some tall and well-developed, some small as pigmies, some black and some yellow, some with the coarse, black hair, some with the ideal curly locks, and some with yellow wool; some stout and sinewy, others loose jointed, shuffling along their path; some with the features of manhood and living like men, in villages and towns, even in walled cities, with governments of their own; some sunk into the deepest degradation, herded together like beasts, and like beasts creeping into their kraals.

What shall we say of their manners and customs? I do not know that I can answer the question better than by quoting the report made once to the British government by a naval officer sent to explore the country, and, among other things, to describe its manners and customs. His description of at least one place he visited was this: "They have no manners, and their customs are very disgusting."

What shall we say of their religion? There is little to be called by that name. There are feeble remnants of decayed churches. There are the countless multitudes under the degrading sway of Mohammedanism, and the rest are pagans, with not even the poor mitigation of the Moslem abomination. There are degrees of degradation. But ignorance, superstition, cruelty, tyranny, are everywhere. There are vague traditions of a Great Spirit, a more intense realization of the devil whom they worship; undefined ideas of some powers around them; more definite confidence in the fetish about their neck. They are cruel, savage, killing their own children, eating their enemies, showing as low a form of life as the world is able to produce. Their own traditions along the Gold Coast tell that the Great Spirit, when he had made three black men and women and three white men and women, in his preference for the blacks offered them their choice between a calabash and a sealed paper. The bow held gold, iron and the best products of the earth. The African chose that, and has been of the earth, earthy, ever since. There was nothing left to the white man but the paper, which taught him knowledge, and he has known and ruled ever since.

This is Africa in a general way—vast in its territory, swarming with people, with these varied capabilities, but with this common baseness of a common paganism, with its ignorance and cruelty, with its polytheism and polygamy, with all that marks the depths into which men can descend. This is the child that lies at the feet of the king's daughter to-day. What shall we do with the child? Fortunately, in the hurried times in which we are living, we have not that question to consider. The general principles which must be framed into a practical answer are plain. What shall we do with Africa? Africa certainly is included in that great world which God has made and Christ has redeemed, and to which he has bidden us go that we may preach the Gospel to every creature.

At one time in our war, when the government at Washington was greatly perplexed and the people were sad and fearful, I heard the admiral of our navy say, "I have one advantage in this business; I have only to go where I am sent." That is the work of the king's daughter to-day—to do what she is told to do. There is said to be some doubt whether Wellington ever referred the man who asked his opinion of foreign missions to his marching orders: "Go preach." I do not see that it is any consequence whether the great Duke said it or not. I could not do what he did in India, on the Peninsula, at Waterloo. But I could have given that answer. Any intelligent boy who has read the Gospel of St. Matthew could do that. It was in Africa that Cyprian answered the Proconsul who bade him consider the Emperor's command that he should offer sacrifice: "Do what is commanded thee: in a cause so just no reflection is needed."

To preach the Gospel to every creature is a duty to be done, not a project to be considered. If we pass from this command, may we not think that our Lord in his pity for the poor and the oppressed has a very strong compassion for Africa? May it not be a special compassion and desire? This Jewish boy never forgot that his father Abraham went down into Africa for bread, and that Jacob and his sons were fed in Africa. He never forgot that Moses was born in Africa and nurtured there. He remembered that his mother had found shelter and safety for him in Africa. Perhaps even the separation of this land and people from our sympathies may commend them the more to him. I love to remember when I think of the strictness of the Hebrew race, its willing isolation from all who were without, that in our Redeemer there was a strain of alien blood. Even as pertaining to the flesh Jesus was not a pure Jew. In the line of his ancestry was a daughter of the accursed Moab; and by all the blood of Ruth that ran in the veins of Jesus, there was something in which his sympathy could flow to the Moabite and the Ammonite and the stranger in all the earth. "I am not sent," he said, "but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and yet, pressing far north, he wrought his miracle of might and mercy for a woman of the heathen coasts of Syrophœnicia. "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel;" yet in despised Samaria, to an outcast woman who sought the secrecy of noon-day that she might hide her shame, to a Samaritan with whom his people had no dealings, sitting on his father's well, he talked in mercy and declared the sublime truth that God is a Spirit, and to be worshiped only in spirit and in truth; and uttered that divine confession, which all the Gospels elsewhere do not surpass in clearness: "I that speak unto thee am he." So when I think of our Lord's descent, and of his love for the despised Canaanite and for the hated Samaritan, I cannot but think that the downtrodden of our day, the neglected, the outcast, even the despised nation, may lie close to his heart of boundless sympathy and boundless sacrifice.

We have the command; have we not more than this? Does not this great people appeal to our sympathies? We think of them as not knowing God. What shall be too much that we may tell them of God? They never knew that Christ died for them. What if we all died to-night that Africa might know that? Never shall there come a better cause to die in, though we give up our life upon our beds, than if we laid down our lives that Africa might hear the story of him whose infancy was cradled upon her soil.

The people of Africa appeal to our sympathy if we only look at them in their temporal destitution. If we can make a man stand up who creeps upon his hands and knees; if we can make a man clothed who walks in his shamelessness; if we can make a man kind who is cruel; if we can teach him the rights of his fellow-men and his own rights; if we can establish a good government over him, it is worth all that we shall do. If we can give woman her place, carrying in those implements even of our agriculture, which shall supplant her servile work! You remember the African chief, who, when first he saw an American plow tearing its way through his ground, rubbed his hands and laughed, "Ah! that is good; that will save me five wives." Is it not worth while to do that? For every cent of the money which in thirty-four years has been poured into the treasury of this Society, it were a recompense that should satisfy every giver if nothing whatever had been accomplished save to bring African women from the plow into the home. Yet more than that. How much can be done for the children, too, to make them safe, to give them childhood, with its hope and its opportunity.

No sooner do we begin to do the useful than we begin to do the ornamental. No sooner are necessities supplied than luxuries come following in their train. It is a little thing, perhaps, to mention, but in the church whose minister I have the good fortune to be, there is an association of young ladies which was working at one time for Africa. They were making garments for the Zulu children—simple bags, I thought; pieces of cotton sewed together. I happened upon them one day as they were pursuing their work, and I saw how their cunning fingers had put beauty here and there, and when I expressed surprise, the leader answered: "Why, the girls wanted to put the ruffles on." Well, they always will. Friends, I think we might come up out of the dry-as-dust practicalities of life. It would be too much to say, perhaps, that all this money had been wisely expended if it had produced nothing but ruffles, but there is many a thing beside the eternal salvation of these men and women which would be a recompense for all the money that we have spent. Think of them in their degradation, their suffering, their peril, their ignorance, and dying like the rest. What shall we do for them?

Then how they appeal to our sense of justice. Are we not very much in their debt? Call to your mind the fifty millions of Africans who had been torn away and carried into slavery—five hundred thousand perished in a year, they said, at one time. For every one who was absolutely taken away, four or five died in the process of capture and removal. Our prosperity as a nation is due very much to their unrequited labor. Who have sustained your great cotton factories? Africans. Whence has come much of the luxury that has been upon your tables all these years? From African labor. Who helped fight the battles that kept the Union safe? Africans. Who are doing our work to-day in so many honorable and useful places? Africans. We owe them something—we always have—this nation of servants, so long servants.

When the nations of the world combined to crucify the Lord of glory, all the three parts of the world bore their portion. Asia gave the wood he died upon and the men who should pursue him to death. Europe gave the sentence under which he was crucified and the soldiers who nailed him to the cross. Africa took her own place, the servant's place. She took the cross and carried it on her back. Do you think the Lord has forgotten that? Asia profited; she had her own way; priest and scribe felt more secure when he was dead. Europe had her profit; she divided his raiment, and cast lots when she might not tear the seamless robe. What fell to Africa? For eighteen centuries to be bearing the cross, carrying it where "There is a green hill far away

Without a city wall,
Where the dear Lord was crucified,
Who died to save us all.

"Oh, dearly, dearly has he loved,
And we must love him too,
And trust in his redeeming blood,
And try his work to do."

We must in our measure do his work for the cross-bearer and all the poor; his work of sacrifice for the guilty and the dead.

How it appeals to our compassion and our thankfulness. It appeals to our heroism, because of the difficulties and perils of the undertaking; it appeals to our love of adventure; it appeals to our desire to be of service in the world. All that is noble and manful and good and true within us is enlisted when this child, born a slave, looks up into the face of the king's daughter and weeps because he cannot talk.

But if we pass from these considerations to the side of encouragement in this work, we come still upon certain practical things which may help us the more to fasten our duty and privilege upon our conscience and upon our will. In this that we shall do for this child here, among us, there, in his own land, think of the great encouragement that comes from this fact: that the missionary does not go alone into this country which lies before us for our service. Business is already there. That little corner where Moses was born, in the last year sent out into the world sixty-eight millions of dollars' worth of goods, and took in from the outer world thirty-one and a half millions of dollars' worth of goods. Think of the steamers running up and down the coast, and penetrating as far as they can up the rivers. Think of the explorers and men of science pressing within, and the men of business going with them; with business already so well established that it has reached that mature state in which it can begin to defraud; and Englishmen stamp their goods with the American name, and cheat Africa as Africa has been cheated through the centuries. I think when business gets so far settled in Africa that it is willing to forge a trade-mark, we can say that it will be likely to hold its place. Now, where business goes the Church can go. The Church has always gone along the roads the merchants have opened. The early apostles traveled the Roman highways. We have long sent our missionaries out in merchant ships—missionaries above and rum below.

We send them by those avenues that are opened for worldly purposes, availing ourselves of these openings that God gives to us that we may carry his Gospel to all those who are without. We have a legitimate right to avail ourselves of these openings made by business, not only in the fact that man has a common right to travel upon a highway, but in the fact that the missionary has so often been before the business man. Missionaries have been pioneers the world over. This new opening of the Dark Continent has been largely due to the daring work of these Christian explorers. Business enters where they have prepared the way. It should be for the common advantage. It means much for the missionary. He no longer goes where no other man will go. He no longer stands alone and unprotected. Wherever there is a missionary there is a merchant with his store, and they band together to defend each other. Behind the merchant is his government, with its ships, with its armies, with all needed means of defense; and along the lines of this enterprising and protected mercantile spirit the missionary can go as he has gone before.

Now let us add certain other considerations; this, for instance: that this missionary work has succeeded already in places as difficult as this. I do not know how we can grade Paganism very well as higher and lower; but to men as degraded as any in Africa the Gospel of God has gone. The sign that the Jews sought after would not avail; the wisdom that the Greeks desired would not serve; but the cross of Christ, the wisdom of God, and the power of God, have wrought over the world, in many places, the very works that need to be repeated in Africa.

We have these past successes; shall we still say these pagans are too low? Is it strange that they are low? An evil is not a very great evil when you have come to an intelligent apprehension of the cause of it which you can remove. What is the cause of the degradation in Africa? Why has she been so long kept in her place?

A venerable clergyman who walked with me this evening told me a little incident which has the secret in it. There was a meeting among the negroes of the South, where the minister proposed that the persons present should relate their religious experiences. Among them arose a black man who began to describe some dream or vision. "But stop, my brother," said the preacher, "we don't care for your visions; we want experience." "But, in old times, didn't God speak to people in visions and dreams?" "Oh, yes! He did then because they had no Bible." "Well, we have no Bible." It seems to be all there. What makes Africa ignorant? Because nobody ever taught her. What makes Africa down? Because there is somebody over her. What makes it night there? Because we have closed the shutters to keep in the sun to lighten the places where we have been playing live.

Then let us think again that this bar of separation, this "color line," is only a temporary thing. How long are these national distinctions to last in the face of that Gospel which knows neither Greek nor Jew, barbarian, Scythian, bond or free? There was in my old parish in Maine a colored woman; and one night when the meeting was breaking up and all were going out, the impatient sexton turned off the gas too soon, and all were left together; and this witty woman, congratulating herself, said: "Well, we are all alike in the dark." Yes, woman, we are all alike in the light, too. When the day dawns, when the Day Star arises in our hearts, we are all alike then.

We come to this work with experience, which we have gained elsewhere, and by which we can profit. It is not without reason that Africa, most difficult, perhaps, of all lands, has been left among the later fields of our work. We have experimented in making men Christians, and can show results. The work has had so much delay and deferred hope elsewhere, that any delay in Africa cannot dishearten us. We are still so far from a nation of Christians, though we have had the Bible all our days, that we need not wonder if it be long before all of that somber continent is peopled with men of God.

Our observation may give us courage as we still pursue our work, and it may give us wisdom as we carry it on to its end.

Let it be noticed as another point of encouragement that the Church goes out to-day with great strength. Turn for a moment to the early Christian missions. Look at the first attempt of Christianity to force its way into the world.

See it in the city of Rome; a few despised, ignorant foreigners, many of them slaves; dependent on the very government beneath which they sought to do their work; conquered people, serving a leader who had died in ignominy on the cross—poor, persecuted, helpless, they enthroned Christianity in the Roman Empire, and established there the light which, though the fogs have gathered around it, has never ceased to shine. Think of the Church as it goes out in its missionary work to-day. It goes forth, not a handful of Jews, but with an immense multitude out of all nations; it goes out not poor, but rich; not foolish, but wise; it goes, not cast down, but triumphant; it goes, not from a subdued, but from a victorious nation. The life of civilization, the strength of government, the power of literature, the influence of humanity—all that civilized man values most, is behind the humblest minister of the Gospel of Christ as he goes into the dark regions of the earth to preach that which he has learned himself. "I claim, my hearers," he might say in Africa or in India, "that you should listen to me. This Gospel that I preach to you makes the religion of every civilized nation in the world. This is the religion of every nation that has science, art, good schools, good government. This is the Gospel of every nation that has a home and honors the woman, and the mother, and blesses the child." With this immense advantage of all civilization behind him, how mighty is he compared with the earliest preachers of the truth, the disciples of one who had died at Jerusalem at the hands of this very power, which said, "If you preach this Gospel you shall fall in the arena."

The whole Roman government was opposed to the first Christian missionary there was; the governments of the civilized world now stand by every missionary there is. In Abyssinia not long ago a few missionaries and German Bible-readers were imprisoned, and the British army hastened to deliver them. Magdala was burnt, King Theodore committed suicide, and the British general was raised to the peerage as "Lord Napier of Magdala." Was there any such protection to the first missionaries? But they conquered paganism; they forced their way into the Roman Empire; they became an element in Roman politics, until they gained the throne and reached their fingers out upon the sceptre which was stretched over the world. How glorious, how grand it is! Whose heart grows faint? If any man doubts, if any man's spirit quails, let him read the Acts of the Apostles, let him read the history so recently and so admirably written of the "Conflict of Christianity with Heathenism," and say if the despised Christians could make Christians out of pagan Romans, cannot honored Americans make Christians out of pagan Africans?

With this great success, this great encouragement, this great profit of experience, this great power of all the governments behind us, surely with this we may push on through our country and through the world. I have not yet said—what is the greatest of all—that this redemption of Africa enters into the thought of God, into the purpose of God, as touching this world. Africa is of the nations that are to be given to him who died to redeem all men; not the son of Joseph, but the Son of Man, mankind; who shall see of the travail of his soul in Simon, the cross-bearer, and be satisfied. Among the people which are to be the trophies and reward and crown of his redemption shall Africa come to have her place, and the sons of Africa from near and from far. This is our prayer—the prayer we offered at our mother's knee, when scarcely comprehending the words: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done." The words have grown as we have grown, until now we apprehend more fully what it is for the kingdom of God to come. While our prayer has grown, the kingdoms of men have come up till we can mark how the prayer is matched by the opportunity. Our childhood's prayer has become our manhood's toil, and our infant faith our sturdy confidence; and, with the widening of the petition and the widening of the world, we still pray, "Far as the sun shines, far as the waters roll, far as the wind blows, O Son of Man, thy kingdom come, thy will be done." It shall come. The might of the Lord is in it; the word of the Lord has spoken it.

It is not the work of government upon government. It is not a work that denationalizes and despoils. We do not seek to make Americans of the Africans; we do not care to clothe them in our cumbersome attire; we do not ask that they shall have all our literature and all our manners; but that they shall know God, and Christ, the Son of God, and that they shall have churches of their own, ministered to by their own men, self-governing, self-supporting, self-perpetuating; shall have the leaven cast in by our hands, and left to work its way under the inspiration of that Spirit, who, coming like the wind, can seek men's hearts as the wind seeks the places among the leaves of the trees and hollows of the rocks, the Spirit of God searching the thoughts of men, taking the imagination, the will, the conscience, the reason, the passions, the affections of men under his sway, until the will of God is done on earth as it is done in Heaven.

The old myth was that Mount Atlas, rising from Africa, held upon its summit the heavens and their stars. The myth has gone, but gone to give place to the truth. The stars and the heavens do rest upon Mount Atlas, not for the upheaving of the mount, but for the coming down of the heavens. By the grace of God, that mount which rises in its sublimity and its power, towering over degraded millions, touches the sky. The Oriental myth becomes the imperial reality, and from the summit of the mountain men can see their home.

What shall we do, brethren? They who are afar off call to us. Their prayer finds words as they beseech us to come and help them. More piteous, even, are their dumb lips which make no cry, and their dead hearts which know no hope. Some have gone, and call to us from Heaven. The graves of men who have fallen summon us to the front. What shall we do? Who shall bear the light into the dark, and liberty into the prison house? Who have, must give. Who can, must serve. Upon our conscience and our humanity lies the duty by all our faith in the Gospel by which we live, which no more graciously bids us come than solemnly it bids us go. What a chance this is for our young Christian manhood, in this crowded world, where it is so hard to find a place to work! The closed doors which confront the young man at every turn have an outer side toward the needy places which call for men, for courage, piety, devotion. The young Christian has a splendid opportunity to prove his manliness, to make himself of use, to serve the generation of which he is a part.

While this duty of giving Christianity to Africa rests on us all in proportion to our ability, it bears with especial force upon the race whose ancestral home is there, but who have received abroad what those at home so greatly need. The sons and daughters of Africa are to minister to their mother in her want. They are able to do this. Here, in the land which owes them so much, have many of them come into the knowledge of God. They have been taught in our schools and prepared to teach others. Their service should be at the command of those who seek to evangelize the land to which, as a race, they belong. The work should not be wholly put upon them. It is found of advantage that they work with those who have had a larger training under Christian institutions. But they should form a large part of the host of mercy. It has been proved that they can bear the climate of Africa better than the whites. They have special interest in the work to which they are now called. It is to their credit that they are found willing to enter upon it. They must have all needful preparation, and we must see that they have it. These picked men and women must go forth. It is the demand of nature and of grace.

The warm feeling of the African race and their zeal in religious work, enforced by the claims of patriotism and humanity and religion, point to them as the appointed ministers of mercy to their own people. We must send them—they must go.

There is something even in the songs of their days of slavery in our house which may prove of service in their work. We can judge something of a people by their songs. The weird melodies of these singers, springing from their life of sorrow and hope, always touch our hearts. They may do more. They may be the evangel of promise and courage to those who do not know their Father and their Saviour, while they strengthen the hearts from which they spring. To themselves and to others they sing their prayer when disheartened and overburdened, they cry with St. Paul, "Who is sufficient for these things?" and voice their supplication in their plaintive song,

"O my good Lord! Keep me from sinking down."

When they stand sometimes with the prophet and his servant, and the servant's heart sinks within him until his courage revives as he beholds the mountain full of horses and chariots of fire on the heights of Africa, in their desolation and peril, they may catch the gleam of the golden wheels of the triumphant chariot of the King, and sing, out of their faith and their experience, the song of the prophet over again,

"Swing low, sweet chariot."

The experience of these men, thus embodied in simple melodies, full of passion, possibly, but of passion touched by the spirit of longing and hope, and the spirit of truth, will work mightily when it is turned into the current of patriotism and philanthropy, and be strong for the enlightening and saving of the race. Who shall read with more ardor than they the words of our Lord at Nazareth, when the promise of deliverance falls from the lips of men born poor and broken-hearted into the ears of the captives, and the blind and bruised? Where better than in Africa can the divine preacher find another Nazareth? Rare men, rarely endowed and trained; men ready for the work and called to it by all which moves others, and by the personal appeals of their own and their father's land:—they wait till we bid them go. Let it not be long.

There are many interesting scenes in African history; there are heroic events whose story thrills us as we read it. But there is nothing which touches my heart in all that travelers have found, nothing in all their experiences or their discoveries which moves me so much as that I see when I enter the rude hut which his faithful servants have built for him, and find Livingstone dead upon his knees. He had made the weary march to Ilala; he was worn out with pain; his heart would have sunk had it not been more intrepid than other men's; he had lived upon mercury until even calomel had ceased to be nutritious; he lived upon God day after day, night after night. He kept himself within the humble door of his hovel. No one but his two servants could come near him, save that every man was desired to come to the door each morning and say "Good morning, sir." In the early dawn Majwara saw him and dared not speak to him. He called Susi, his companion. They feared to disturb their master. A half-burned candle was on a box by his side. There knelt the great traveler, with his shattered frame thrown forward, his arms outstretched, his head buried in his hands upon his pillow, and his soul with God. "As he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered." That worn body rests with the kings and the mighty men in the solemn renown of Westminster Abbey. That hut at Ilala is a truer and a prouder place. It meant all things that he was there; it sealed all things, that, from the ground he had hallowed by his life, he should be translated to the skies.

If it were given to me to devise a seal for this Missionary Association which carries that land in its hand and upon its heart, it should bear but one figure: David Livingstone in Africa upon his knees, dead. The legend should be, "Faithful unto death." His works do follow him, whither he has followed his ascended Lord. He will rejoice when Africa comes up to God; when the suppliant hands of Ethiopia are raised only in thanksgiving. The day of the Lord is coming. The light is on the hills and along the coast of all the lands. The nations are coming to the king. The continents and the islands begin to hear his voice. The tongues of men shall be filled with praise. It is not long; a few more days of work and prayer; a few more deeds of sacrifice and love; a few more lives given; a few more men girded with the towel and with the basin in their hands; a few more repetitions of that strange and sacred deed, Jesus washing the feet of Judas. Then the glory and the rejoicing. A little while and the day shall dawn. We may see the hastening light as we face the East,

Where, faint and far,
Along the tingling desert of the sky,
Beyond the circle of the conscious hills,
Were laid in jaspar-stone as clear as glass
The first foundations of that new, near Day
Which should be builded out of heaven to God.

ADDRESS.

REV. W. M. TAYLOR, D.D.

SELFISHNESS AND SELF-SACRIFICE.

As the starting-point of my address to-night let me bring before you from the Gospel history a scene with which you are all familiar. It is the latter portion of an Oriental afternoon, and the slopes of the mountain on the eastern side of the Lake of Tiberias are covered with thousands of people who have come from the towns and villages round about to listen to the words of Him who spake as never man spake. All day they have been hanging on His lips with such absorbing interest that every meaner thing has been forgotten by them, and no care has been taken by them to provide themselves with necessary food. Nor even as the sun is rapidly westering has any thought of what they should do for bodily sustenance disturbed their minds. The engrossment of the moment was too complete for that. But the disciples, anticipating trouble when the inevitable claims of hunger should assert themselves, and not seeing what they should do to still the clamor which should then arise, came to their Master and said, "Send the multitudes away." Therein, however, they only showed that they had not yet themselves fully comprehended the spirit of their Lord, for He immediately replied, "They need not depart, give ye them to eat;" and when, even by their own greatest efforts, they could raise only five loaves and two fishes, He took them and multiplied them to the feeding of the fasting crowd. Now many purely spiritual lessons of a valuable sort might be learned by us from this interesting episode in the life of our Lord. In particular we might give emphasis to the truth that it is never necessary to send men away from Christ; and that, aye, until upon the throne of judgment He shall Himself say to those upon His left hand, "Depart from me;" no one, be he apostle or bishop or presbyter, has any right or warrant to turn a single sinner away from Him.

But it is not for the enforcement of that truth, glorious as it is, that I have brought this scene before you now. My design is to set in clear and striking contrast on the one hand the policy of selfish non-exertion for the needy, as that comes out in the request of the disciples, "Send them away;" and, on the other, that of self-sacrificing love, as that is enforced by the reply of Christ, "They need not depart; give ye them to eat," and to apply the principles that underlie the Master's words to the work which the American Missionary Association has specially undertaken to perform in our land. Indeed, it would seem to me that in few departments has the cold indifference of selfishness been more manifested by men in modern times than in the treatment that has been given by the community generally to those suffering races whose interests are so tenderly watched over by this Society; while, on the other hand, the spirit of Christian love has been rarely more conspicuously displayed than it has been in the plans which have been formed and the efforts which have been made under the auspices of this institution for those peoples, who, in a manner so marvelous, have been brought by Providence into juxtaposition with the American nation; and I do not think that I can render a better service, not to this Association merely, but to the nation, than by making the truth of this assertion thoroughly apparent.

Here, then, let us take first the case of the North American Indians, and we shall find that the spirit of the greater part of our national dealings with them may be condensed into the words, "Send them away." Every kind of expedient has been resorted to for shutting them up in isolation and preventing them from coming into wholesome contact with our civilization and Christianity. They have been imprisoned within reservations beyond which they are not permitted to move. They have been forbidden to trade directly with those who might wish to purchase anything which they may raise or manufacture. In the words of General Leake, in his able and exhaustive paper on this subject read at the last annual meeting of this Association: "We have placed over each tribe whom we can confine an agent of strange race to them, ignorant of their customs and language, with power to suspend their own chiefs, to suspend all trade, to warn off all visitors of whom he may disapprove. We have prescribed who should sell them anything, the place where the sale should take place, what the article sold should be, and how much they should pay for it." All this is bad enough, and yet they have no security that the reservation assigned to them will be in any proper sense of the term reserved to them, after all. If for any purposes of gain white men desire the lands which have been allotted to them, they must arise and go elsewhere. "There is," to them, as it has been strongly but sadly said, "no element of certainty in their title to their lands, but that they will lose them." And when they gird themselves to defend their rights they are denounced as savages! To what an advanced degree of civilization, I pray you, must we attain before we should tamely submit to such indignities? And what savages our forefathers must have been when they emptied the tea-chests into Boston harbor, and resisted unto blood, striving against injustice! Almost every treaty made with the Indians has been violated, not by the Indians, but by the white man; nearly every promise that has been made to them has been broken; and the principle on which the nation has proceeded toward them has been almost always that of the most selfish dishonesty, to wit:

> "That they should take who have the power,
> And they should keep who can."

Even a joint committee of the Senate and the House of Representatives has reported that "in a large majority of cases" (of Indian wars) "they are to be traced to the aggressions of lawless white men, always to be found upon the frontier or boundary line between savage and civilized life." And a commission appointed by the President on the same subject reported: "If the Indian is cruel and revengeful it is because he is outlawed, and his companion is the wild beast;" while the common saying in the mouths of heartless men to the effect that "the best Indian is a dead Indian," may fitly represent the spirit which has presided over the dealings of the nation with his race, and which is solely and absolutely responsible for all the troubles which have arisen between him and the white man. Now, whatever may be the right way of dealing with these aboriginal tribes, this is very evidently the wrong one. For one thing, it will only make them worse. Kindness may elevate them; but cruelty and injustice can only degrade them. "The villainy we teach them they will execute, and it will go hard but they will better the instruction." How can we teach them honesty, when we are continually defrauding them? How can we produce in them a regard for justice, when we are constantly trampling upon their rights? How can we hope to give them reverence for truth, when our own most solemnly asseverated promises to them are systematically broken? That which we are to them, they will become, in an intensified form, to us, and we need not marvel at the poor success of our Christian missionaries among them, when we think of the treatment they have received at the hands of a nation calling itself Christian. Nor must we forget that all this injustice will one day return, if we repent not, on our own heads. During all this century of dishonor, in our treatment of these tribes, we have been "treasuring up wrath to ourselves, against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God." The God of Elijah liveth yet; and He who gave Jezebel to the dogs, for the appropriation of Naboth's vineyard, may sooner than we wot of send some national calamity upon us, for our oppression of the red man.

But what is to be done with them or for them? The answer is plain in the light of the saying of the Saviour which I have already brought before you. "They need not depart; give ye them to eat." Give over this selfish, unjust, utterly unfeeling policy; and treat them in the spirit of Him who fed the multitudes upon the mountain side. Let there be an end of truce-breaking with them, and since the plan of deceit and cruelty and injustice has so signally failed, let us try one of love and righteousness and truth. If they are to have reservations, let them be protected in their possession of them, and let us not continually send them away from them at the demand of lawless men. But why should they be confined within any such territorial limits? Have we so little faith in our national civilization that we do not believe it can assimilate a few hundreds of thousands of Indians? Or have we such meagre confidence in the gospel that we cannot think it shall be the power of God unto salvation to a believing Indian? Is it good for the elevation of every nationality but his? And with such trophies of its power elsewhere are we to be daunted here? Let us break down then all these walls of separation, and leave the Indian free under the law to come and go where he pleases and as he pleases. Let us not compel him to remove to a place which he dislikes, or to remain in a locality which he hates. To borrow again from General Leake: "The remedy is to stop driving the red men from the valleys they love to the reservations they hate; but let them scatter as they choose, so that they may soon be lost in the mass of the population. Instead of pushing them beyond the influences of civilization, let them come into the midst of it, where they will be incited and elevated by all good influences around them." How shall the leaven affect the mass if it is never allowed to come in contact with it? Let us put the leaven in the meal, and then we may hope for success. A beginning has been made in this direction, as we have this day been hearing, in the Hampton Institute. We hail it as full of hope for the Indians, and as an evidence of the commencement of national repentance for a great national sin. This is the Christian policy or rather—for Christianity should know no policy, but principle—this is the Christian principle, and if we will carry it through, Indian questions and Indian wars will disappear, and we shall find that the red man will ultimately take his place among us, and become as respectable as the average citizen of the Republic.

But let us see how the same contrast comes out in our dealings with the negro race. And here it is happily unnecessary for me to go back over the years when slavery was a cherished institution of the Southern States, nor may I seek to revive any of the sectional antagonisms which underlay the War of the Rebellion. I stand before you as one who came to cast in his lot among you after the war was finished, and who was required only to deal with the state of things which he found around him. I rejoice in the good which even at so great a cost of blood and treasure has been realized. Emancipation is an accomplished fact, and the citizenship of the negroes has been recognized—on paper at least—by the amendment of the Constitution. But everybody knows that the settlement of these matters has thrust new difficulties upon us; for citizenship is a name and nothing more, unless the citizen shall be protected in the enjoyment of its privileges and the performance of its duties; and it may even become a danger to the State, unless he is fitted by education and independence to take a right view of his responsibilities, and intelligently and manfully to rise to them. Now it is in dealing with these new difficulties that we see anew the contrast between the two methods to which I have referred. On the one hand, there are those who think that enough has been accomplished when the Constitution has been amended. They virtually say: "The negroes have received their freedom, and the right of suffrage has been bestowed upon them: now let them look after themselves. Send them away; they have no further claim upon us. We are sick of hearing about them. They have cost us enough of trouble and bloodshed and dispeace in the past, but now let them go their own way and attend to themselves; and so far as we are concerned we should rejoice if by any means they could take themselves off and relieve the country of their presence. It is nothing to us if they are prevented from using the privileges that have been conferred upon them. What need we care if they should be sunk in poverty or steeped in ignorance, or debased in immorality? Emancipation has cleared off all old scores between us and they must now shift for themselves." But this selfish and indolent indifference, besides being unutterably unchristian, is miserably unenlightened; for it would be easy to show, from the annals of the past few years, that the presence of a million of voters, or thereabouts, in the land, who are characterized by ignorance, superstition and immorality, must be a constant danger. Either they will be tampered with by traffickers for their own nefarious ends, or they will be ground under the iron heel of a terrorism not many degrees removed from the slavery from which they have been so recently set free. Thus we have in the midst of us a new form of the old peril which Longfellow, in lines referring to slavery, has so admirably described.

"There is a poor blind Samson in the land,
Shorn of his strength, and bound in bonds of steel,
Who may in some grim revel raise his hand
And shake the pillars of this common weal,
Till the vast temple of our liberties
A shapeless mass of wreck and rubbish lies."

Selfishness always ends in the punishment of self; and the nation that neglects the mental and moral well-being of its citizens will soon cease to have any greatness that is worthy of the name. Even in the North it has been felt that some system of national education is needed to counteract the dangers that confessedly attach to universal suffrage. The common school is recognized as the great assimilating organ of the body politic, and in some of the States—this of Connecticut among the number—the education of every child under a certain age is made compulsory. But if this is felt to be indispensable in the North by us whose children are born into the heritage stored up for them by centuries of freedom, how much more is it for the negroes of the South; and so, even on the principle of an enlightened selfishness, this policy of indifference to the colored race must be denounced as ole of shameless inconsistency and shortsighted folly. But mere education will not suffice. We are Christians, and as such we believe that no education is in the highest sense salutary, but that which is pervaded by the spirit of the Gospel. We see that the negroes must be not only educated, but Christianized, if they are to be really elevated, and are to cease to be an element of danger in the midst of us. They need a religion which shall be to them not merely an occasional diversion or dissipation, but a permanent and abiding principle of life. They need to have impressed upon them the dignity of labor, the sanctity of chastity, and the sacredness of property, for it is especially in these three respects that they carry on their souls the scars of the wounds inflicted on them by slavery. But where shall they learn the first of these more thoroughly than from the contemplation of Jesus at the carpenter's bench in Nazareth, and Paul in the tent-maker's shop in Corinth? How shall they acquire the second more fully than from Him who bids them regard the body as the temple of the Holy Ghost? And how shall they see the third more impressively than from Him whose whole life was one of constant self-sacrifice for the good of others, and whose servant said: "Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hand the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." This is the true Christian method, and the American Missionary Association is following in the footsteps of the Lord Jesus when it says of the colored people, "They need not depart," and appeals to the churches for the support of its educational work in the words: "Give ye them to eat."

It will be said, indeed it has often been said, that the colored people are incapable of receiving such a Christian education. But to that I reply that the statement is at once a calumny and an insult. It is a calumny, for I have known educated colored people whose culture would not have disgraced any of the more favored race. While I was a student of theology, there came to Scotland a young Caffre Christian, black as jet, to be educated for the ministry of the Gospel. He went first to the University of Glasgow, and in the Greek class there, if I remember rightly, he had awarded to him—by the votes of his class fellows, too—one of the prizes of the year. He was received as a friend in many Christian homes, and married a young Scotch lady of good family who went out with him as a missionary to his people. And now his biography, as the life of the Rev. Tiyo Siga, is one of the most interesting books in modern missionary literature. As the moderator of the council who ordained him I took a prominent part in the examination of the Rev. Barnabas Root, who some years ago was sent out to his native Africa by this Association, and I deliberately affirm that no examination of the kind which I have ever heard was more satisfactory than his, and that his acquaintance with Scripture was richer and fuller than I have met with in the average of our seminary students. I have been privileged, too, on at least two occasions, to be present at Commencement at Hampton College, and in the addresses of the students there I did not perceive any marked inferiority to those which I have heard at some of our Northern colleges. With such experiences as these, therefore, I cannot but regard the taunt of inferiority as a calumny upon the negro. Give him the same advantages and he will improve them as thoroughly as his white brother. But the sneer is more than a calumny. It is an insult, to which I can think only of one feeble parallel. For centuries in England the test acts shut the doors of Oxford and Cambridge against Nonconformists; and then Churchmen turned around and sneered at Dissenting ministers as uneducated men. But now that the universities are open, hardly a year elapses without seeing the name of a Dissenter on the honor list and often high up there. So for generations the colored people have been kept in ignorance, and now they are to be jeered at as inferiors. Wait a little until they have their opportunity, and we may see some things that may surprise their censors. But be not in too great haste to make your estimate. "Judge nothing before the time, but judge this rather that every stumbling-block shall be taken out of their way;" for we cannot expect that all at once the evils inherited from centuries of slavery can be eradicated from them. We hear a great deal in these days of the doctrine of heredity; and if there be anything in that, are not the colored people entitled to all that can be said on that score in their defense? Is it wonderful that after long subjection to a system in which marriage was degraded, it should be difficult for them to understand the very idea of chastity? And can we be surprised that the spirit of self-help should at first be feeble in a race which for so long had no care or thought of self? Nay, even as to mere knowledge, who shall tell how much of our intelligence has come to us unconsciously through our surroundings? or at what a disadvantage one must stand who is born into slavery? Judge Tourgee has set all this forth most admirably in the later of those two books—which, as is allowed on every hand—give such a fair and candid description of the condition of things in some of the Southern States since the war. Thus concerning the lame preacher Eliab, he says, "What he achieved was without that substratum of general intelligence which the free white student has partly inherited and partly acquired by observation and experience, without the labor or the consciousness of study;" and again, that "our conscious familiarity with the past, which is as the small change of daily thought to us, is as a strange currency to his mind." There is immense force in all such considerations, and in judging of the educability of the negroes they must be duly weighed. Let us not expect the highest results too soon. That poor, down-trodden race has centuries to make up in the march of civilization, and that is not to be accomplished in half a score of years. Nay, considering all the disadvantages with which they have to contend, I cannot but be amazed at the results which have been achieved among them. Let us, therefore, continue on in the line which we have begun. Let us not be weary in this well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Many of you may have seen Ary Scheffer's beautiful picture which he called "Christus Consolitor." The Saviour is there in the center, and around

Him are the poor, the lame, the blind, and the broken-hearted, seeking that help which He never denies. There, too, on the outer edge of the company is the negro, making his mute appeal with eager eyes and pleading hands for assistance. Some considerable time before the war, a religious book was published in a Northern city, and in it an engraving of that picture was used as a frontispiece, but so strong was the prejudice that in the engraving the negro was left out. That was in deference to the spirit of the time which said, "Send him away." But now we have begun to reverse all this. Thanks to this Association for its grand share in the good work, we have put the negro back again into that picture. Let us keep him there. Let us seek to have him in direct and living contact with the loving Christ, that He may heal the bruises which are the marks of his long degradation, and make him worthy to be not only a citizen of this Republic, but also a denizen of Heaven.

But narrowing in now to a conclusion, we may see the same contrast in the treatment which has been given to the Chinese within our borders. Not Kearney and his followers alone, but even the legislature of California, and, had its members not been prevented by the veto of the President, even the Congress of the United States would say: "Send them away;" but the Christian sentiment of the country, enlightened by God's word, and inspired by the spirit of the Gospel, says, "Let them remain, and while they are here let us introduce them to the Lord Jesus, that they may return at length to their own people, and tell them what great things God hath done for their souls." It is the same old story. Mammon is selfishness, but God is love; men repel, but Christ attracts; and in proportion as we become assimilated to Him we give over saying "Depart," and begin to cry "Come." So far from wishing the Chinese to be banished from the land, the Christian views their presence here as a providential opportunity, and seeks to take advantage of that, not only for their own good, but also for the welfare of that marvelous country which has been for so many centuries closed against intercourse with other nations. He hears the Master saying to him: "Give ye them to eat," and he hastens gladly to obey. And if any should affirm that they are incapable of education, he can point to the excellent characters maintained, and the honorable positions secured in our own schools and colleges by those Chinese youth who have been recently domiciled among us. Said a teacher in one of these schools not long ago: "This school would be a paradise if all the pupils were to show the same diligence, docility and decorum as the Chinese among them do." Nor is this all. The fact that in the Sandwich Islands recently, among a company of Chinese settlers, there were about a hundred with certificates of membership in the Christian church, who raised a house of worship for themselves, and took means for the maintenance of Gospel ordinances among them, is a proof that they are not only capable of being Christianized, but also able to carry into their Christian life the same qualities of patience, perseverance and independence which they have manifested in the conduct of their ordinary affairs. Besides, if we can be but instrumental in converting them, what noble missionaries they will make among their own people! We cannot hope for the evangelization of China by any merely foreign agency, but here, close by our side, are numbers of the Chinese themselves, as if the very design of God was that we should take them and train them for that great work. And yet men will thrust them away and speak of the great peril which they bring to our civilization! Peril! The peril is all in the other direction. The peril will be if we neglect our opportunity; but the improvement of that opportunity—if we be wise enough to improve it—will be one of the richest honors our American Christianity has ever won. Who knoweth whether we are come to the kingdom for such a time as this? If we fail in our duty still they will be evangelized; "enlargement and deliverance" shall arise from some other quarter for them, but—let each conscience supply the ellipsis for itself.

But good as is the work which the American Missionary Association has done among these three races, it has as yet made only a beginning. The cry is for enlargement, and we must endeavor to secure that this cry shall not be made in vain. Our own interest demands it. No duties are more pressing upon our churches, in these days, than those of evangelizing the masses of our large cities; carrying the Gospel to the emigrants who are daily penetrating by hundreds into the new West; and giving a Christian education to the colored Freedmen throughout the South. It is hard to say which of these is the most urgent; but it is at our peril if we neglect any one of them, and however important the other two may be, the case of the Freedmen is pre-eminently imperative. We may not say of it merely: "If it were done at all, it were well it were done quickly," but rather it cannot be done at all unless it be done quickly. For whether we educate them or not, they will receive an education; but it may be such an education as will make them as smoke in our eyes, and thorns in our side during our entire after-history, and we may find it impossible to undo the mischief which our neglect has caused. Every subscription given for this object now, therefore, is a premium paid for the insurance of our national safety in the future; and thus, even on the lowest of all grounds, we ought to help on the enlargement of the work of this Association. But I cannot, I dare not, I will not leave it on this low ground. Here is the great motive: "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." Let us take fully in all that these words imply, and giving will rise from a duty into a privilege; from a necessity into a luxury and a joy.

Permit me to conclude what I have to say with an anecdote which I heard from my father many years since.

Some ninety years ago, or more, before there were any macadamized roads in Scotland, it was the custom for farmers to convey their grain to the mill in a sack on the back of a horse. One day my grandfather was going to the mill, taking the grain after that fashion. The road was steep and stony, and the animal stumbled so that the sack fell off. He tried to put it up again, but the weight of three score years and ten was upon his shoulders, and he was unable to do so. By and by he saw a gentleman on horseback coming near, and he thought: "He will help me, perhaps." But as he drew near he discovered he was the Earl who dwelt in the neighboring castle, and his heart sank within him, for he thought he could not muster courage to ask assistance from him. But he did not need, for the Earl was a gentleman by a higher patent than that of any earthly nobility, and when he saw the old man's need, he dismounted and said: "Here, John, let me help you." So between them they replaced the sack on the animal's back. Then my grandfather, who was a gentleman, too, although he did wear homespun—or, as we call it in Scotland, "hodden gray"—took off his Kilmarnock bonnet from his head and said: "Please your lordship, how shall I ever thank you for the great kindness you have done for me?" "Very easily, John," was the reply; "whenever you see a man needing your help as much as you were needing mine just now, help him, and that will be thanking me."

And now for the application. You stand and look at the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ, and you say: "What shall I render unto Thee for all these benefits of salvation, of instruction, of elevation, of holiness, conferred upon me?" He says: "Very easily. There are those poor, afflicted races needing your help. Raise them by education, by evangelization, and in so many other ways help them, and that will be thanking me."

For my sake! That is the motive; and if but that motive could be brought to bear with all its power on every Christian heart, there would be no difficulty among us in doing far greater things than this Association has yet even conceived of.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves. Since Emancipation it has devoted its main efforts to preparing the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as missionaries in Africa. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy towards the INDIANS. It has also a mission in AFRICA.

STATISTICS.

CHURCHES: In the South—In Va., 1; N. C., 6; S. C., 2; Ga., 13; Ky., 6; Tenn., 4; Ala., 14; La., 17; Miss., 4; Texas, 6. Africa, 2. Among the Indians, 1; Total, 76.

INSTITUTIONS FOUNDED, FOSTERED OR SUSTAINED IN THE SOUTH.—Chartered: Hampton, Va.; Berea, Ky.; Talladega, Ala.; Atlanta, Ga.; Nashville, Tenn.; Tougaloo, Miss.; New Orleans, La.; and Austin, Texas, 8. Graded or Normal Schools: at Wilmington, Raleigh, N. C.; Charleston, Greenwood, S. C.; Savannah, Macon, Atlanta, Ga.; Montgomery, Mobile, Athens, Selma, Ala.; Memphis, Tenn., 12. Other Schools, 31. Total, 51.

TEACHERS, MISSIONARIES AND ASSISTANTS.—Among the Freedmen, 284; among the Chinese, 22; among the Indians, 11; in Africa, 13. Total, 330. STUDENTS—In Theology, 102; Law, 23; in College Course, 75; in other studies, 7,852. Total, 8,052. Scholars taught by former pupils of our schools, estimated at 150,000. INDIANS under the care of the Association, 13,000.

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches—the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing numbers of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers here, and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

"Very easily, John," was the reply; "whenever you see a man needing your help as much as you were needing mine just now, help him, and that will be thanking me."

And now for the application. You stand and look at the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ, and you say: "What shall I render unto Thee for all these benefits of salvation, of instruction, of elevation, of holiness, conferred upon me?" He says: "Very easily. There are those poor, afflicted races needing your help. Raise them by education, by evangelization, and in so many other ways help them, and that will be thanking me."

For my sake! That is the motive; and if but that motive could be brought to bear with all its power on every Christian heart, there would be no difficulty among us in doing far greater things than this Association has yet even conceived of.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves. Since Emancipation it has devoted its main efforts to preparing the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as missionaries in Africa. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy towards the INDIANS. It has also a mission in AFRICA.

STATISTICS.

CHURCHES: In the South—In Va., 1; N. C., 6; S. C., 2; Ga., 13; Ky., 6; Tenn., 4; Ala., 14; La., 17; Miss., 4; Texas, 6. Africa, 2.[2] Among the Indians, 1; Total, 76.

STUDENTS—In Theology, 102; Law, 23; in College Course, 75; in other studies, 7,852. Total, 8,052. Scholars taught by former pupils of our schools, estimated at 150,000. INDIANS under the care of the Association, 13,600.

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches—the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing numbers of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers here, and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY.

This magazine will be sent, gratuitously, if desired, to the Missionaries of the Association; to Life Members; to all clergymen who take up collections for the Association; to Superintendents of Sabbath Schools; to College Libraries; to Theological Seminaries; to Societies of Inquiry on Missions; and to every donor who does not prefer to take it as a subscriber, and contributes in a year not less than five dollars.

American Missionary Association,

No. 56 READE STREET, NEW YORK.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

relating to the Association should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary, Rev. M. E. STRIEBY, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Editor of the "American Missionary," to the New York office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. HUBBARD, Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. WOODWORTH, Dis't Sec., Congregational House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. JAMES POWELL, Dis't Sec., 112 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS at one time, or several payments to that amount within a year, will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution.)

AUXILIARIES.

Any number of persons desirous of promoting the interests of the Association may often do so effectually by forming auxiliaries, and appointing committees to increase the number of members and present the wants of the Association to every Christian in their neighborhood. Christian women may aid us in this way by co-operation with their brethren, or by forming auxiliaries themselves.

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give the full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I BEQUEATH to my executor (or executors) the sum of —— dollars, in trust, to pay the same in ——— days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The will should be attested by three witnesses, (in some States three are required—in other States only two,) who should write against their names their places of residence, (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the said (A. B.) as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY

Is published monthly at 56 Reade Street. Terms, Fifty Cents per year, payable in advance.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION."

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Any person of evangelical sentiments,* who professes faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is not a slaveholder, or in the practice of other immoralities, and who contributes to the funds, may become a member of the Society; and, by the payment of thirty dollars, a Life Member; provided that children and others who have not professed their faith may be constituted Life Members without the privilege of voting.

ART. IV. This Society shall meet annually, in the month of September, October or November, for the election of officers and the transaction of other business, at such time and place as shall be designated by the Executive Committee.

ART. V. The annual meeting shall be constituted of the regular officers and members of the Society at the time of such meeting, and of delegates from churches, local missionary societies, and other co-operating bodies, each body being entitled to one representative.

ART. VI. The officers of the Society shall be a President, Vice-Presidents, Corresponding Secretaries (who shall also keep the records of the Association), Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee of not less than twelve members.

ART VII. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds; the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing missionaries and agents; the selection of missionary fields; and, in general, the transaction of all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies; the Committee to exercise no ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the missionaries; and its doings to be subject always to the revision of the annual meeting, which shall, by a reference mutually chosen, always entertain the complaints of any aggrieved agent or missionary, and the decision of such reference shall be final.

The Executive Committee shall have authority to fill all vacancies occurring among the officers between the regular annual meetings; to apply, if they see fit, to any State Legislature for acts of incorporation; to fix the compensation, where any is given, of all officers, agents, missionaries, or others in the employment of the Society; to make provision, if any, for disabled missionaries, and for the widows and children of such as are deceased; and to call, in all parts of the country, at their discretion, special and general conventions of the friends of missions, with a view to the diffusion of the missionary spirit, and the general and vigorous promotion of the missionary work.

* By evangelical sentiments, we understand, among others, a belief in the guilty and lost condition of all men without a Saviour; the Supreme Deity, Incarnation and Atoning Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of the world: the necessity of regeneration by the Holy Spirit; repentance, faith and holy obedience in order to salvation; the immortality of the soul; and the retributions of the judgment in the eternal punishment of the wicked and salvation of the righteous.

Five members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies, churches or individuals agreeing to the principles of this society, and wishing to appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, shall be entitled to do so through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present at a regular annual meeting; nor unless the proposed amendment has been submitted to a previous meeting, or to the Executive Committee in season to be published by them (as it shall be their duty to do, if so submitted) in the regular official notifications of the meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with, or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

Sec. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers, and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable, and have not been repealed or modified.

Sec. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

Sec. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised, or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same; provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

Sec. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

Sec. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. Section four of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

Sec. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month at 3.15 o'clock p. m. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting, and the notices sent out, shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman, and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Home Work.

3. A Committee on Foreign Missions.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committees on Home Work and Foreign Missions, to report to the Executive Committee at its regular meeting every month such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments; and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures, viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association, shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings.

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees, in the following order: 1. Finance. 2. Home Work. 3. Foreign Missions. 4. Appropriations.
4. Report of the Treasurer.
5. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
6. Reports of Standing Committees (in the order named above).
7. Reports of Special Committees.
8. Unfinished Business. 9. New Business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

THIRTY-FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Thirty-fifth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association was held in the Plymouth Church, Worcester, Mass., commencing Tuesday, November 1, 1881.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. M. E. Strieby, D. D., Corresponding Secretary, and Rev. S. R. Dennen, D. D., of New Haven, Conn., was chosen to preside. After devotional services, conducted by the Chairman, the organization of the meeting was completed by the election of Rev. Marshall M. Cutter, of West Medford, Mass., as Secretary, and of Rev. John L. Ewell, of Millbury, Mass., and Rev. Cyrus P. Osborne, of Branford, Conn., as Assistant Secretaries.

The following committees were appointed:

Business Committee.—Rev. George M. Boynton, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; Rev. George R. W. Scott, Fitchburg, Mass.; Dea. George P. Davis, Newton, Mass.

Committee on Nominations.—Rev. E. H. Byington, Monson, Mass.; Rev. A. P. Marvin, Lancaster, Mass.; Charles L. Mead, Esq., New York.

Mr. H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, then presented his annual report, with the certificate of the Auditors annexed, and the report was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The annual report of the Executive Committee was made through Rev. G. D. Pike, D.D., District Secretary, and the several parts of the report were referred to the proper committees.

The Nominating Committee then made the following report, which was adopted:

For Committee of Arrangements.—Rev. C. M. Lamson, Rev. G. W. Phillips, Rev. D. O. Mears, Rev. W. T. Sleeper, Rev. Daniel Merriman, Rev. J. F. Lovering and Rev. H. A. Stimson.

Committee on Finance.—Hon. J. J. H. Gregory, Rev. G. F. Stanton, Rev. A. D. Mayo, D.D., Col. Franklin Fairbanks, Mr. C. A. Richardson, Mr. Edwin B. Hosmer, Mr. R. W. Morville and Mr. John H. Washburn.

Committee on Education.—Rev. Charles T. Collins, Rev. D. L.

Furber, D.D., Rev. John R. Thurston, Rev. J. J. Dana, Rev. Joseph Boardman, Mr. E. S. Warner and Pres. E. H. Fairchild.

Committee on Church Work.—Pres. Cyrus Hamlin, D.D., Rev. S. R. Dennen, D.D., Rev. J. E. Roy, D.D., Rev. E. Frank Howe, Rev. J. B. Seabury, Rev. E. O. Bartlett and Mr. I. T. Hutchins.

Committee on Chinese Missions in America.—Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, D.D., Rev. L. Dickerman, Rev. C. H. Pope, Rev. Charles M. Blake, Rev. George R. Leavitt, Mr. T. C. Jones and Mr. Manning Leonard.

Committee on Indian Missions in America.—Gen. S. C. Armstrong, Capt. R. H. Pratt, Gen. O. O. Howard, Hon. A. C. Barstow, Mr. J. N. Stickney, Rev. S. D. Gammell, Rev. Edward W. Bacon.

Committee on African Missions.—Rev. John W. Harding, Rev. G. S. Dickerman, Col. H. G. Prout, Rev. W. L. Gage, D.D., Hon. Henry D. Smith, Rev. S. Leroy Blake and Rev. W. Sewall.

Committee on Religious Services and Prayer Meetings.—Rev. R. B. Howard, Rev. Marshall M. Cutter and Dea. D. M. Camp.

The remainder of the hour was occupied by devotional services, special remembrance being made of the workers in the field, who, according to custom, had set apart this time as a season of prayer, in concert with this annual gathering.

The Association then took a recess until 7.30.

EVENING SESSION.

Upon assembling in the evening, the devotional exercises were conducted by the Chairman and Rev. Edward G. Porter, of Lexington, Mass.

The annual sermon was preached by Prof. Chester D. Hartranft, of Hartford, Conn. The Association then united in the celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Rev. George W. Phillips and Rev. George H. Gould, D.D., officiating.

The Business Committee reported a programme for the proceedings of Wednesday, which was adopted.

The Association then adjourned to Wednesday, a. m.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The morning prayer meeting was conducted by Rev. Addison P. Foster, of New Jersey.

At 9 o'clock the Association was called to order. Prayer was offered by Rev. A. H. Plumb, of Boston. The minutes of the first day were read and approved. The report of the Executive Committee on "Proposed Amendments to the Constitution" was presented by John H. Washburn, Esq., of New York.

Proposed Amendments.—ART. III. Any person who contributes to the funds of the Association may become a member thereof for the current year by requesting to be enrolled as such at the time such contribution is paid into the treasury of the Association, and any contributor to the amount of thirty dollars, at one time, may, on request to that effect, be enrolled as a Life Member.

ART. V. The annual meeting shall consist of the Officers, Life Members who have been such prior to the first day of October preceding the time of such meeting, such persons as have been enrolled as members within one year prior to that date, and of delegates from churches that have within the year contributed to the funds of the Society, and from State Associations and Conferences, each of such churches, associations and conferences to be entitled to one delegate.

ART. VI. The officers of the Association shall be a President, Vice-Presidents, Corresponding Secretaries (who shall also keep the records of the Association), Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of not less than twelve members.

ART. VII. After "dismissing," omit the parenthesis. Omit ART. VIII., and number ARTS. IX. and X. respectively VIII. and IX.

Report of Committee on Proposed Amendments.—During the past few years the churches have been much exercised in regard to the management of the various Benevolent Societies that appeal to them for support. And this is not to be wondered at in view of the unfortunate results of negligence or malfeasance on the part of some of those to whom these trusts have been committed.

It is not necessary to specify instances. The memory of all who are familiar with the history of these institutions will supply them.

While in its actual workings the management of this Association has been, so far as is known, entirely satisfactory, there has been a growing feeling that changes in its Constitution, if not absolutely necessary, were important to adapt it to the changed circumstances of these times.

At the last annual meeting a resolution was offered that a committee of eleven be appointed to inquire whether the Constitution of the Association can be revised with advantage to the security and efficiency of the Association, and report to the next annual meeting. This resolution was not passed, but was referred to the Executive Committee for their consideration.

Immediately after their election the Committee gave their attention to the whole subject of revision of the Constitution and of their own By-laws.

The new By-laws were adopted as soon as they could be prepared and properly considered, and were laid before the public with the last Annual Report. After several months' experience the Executive Committee are well satisfied with their working, both as regards the facility with which the business is managed and the safeguards thrown around it.

It was with a good deal of hesitation that the Committee took up the questions of alterations in the Constitution. There was no doubt in their minds as to the necessity of a revision, not only to conform to the demands of an enlightened public sentiment, but to meet the requirements of laws enacted by the State of New York since the organization of the Association and the adoption of the Constitution; but they could not forget that each article had been adopted by the founders of the Association under what seemed to them the pressure of absolute necessity, and was hallowed by all its history from that time to the present, and the Committee naturally shrank from disturbing these time-honored landmarks.

In yielding to the inevitable, and undertaking the work which could not be longer postponed, they have endeavored by the changes proposed to make the Constitution such that it may stand for many years without further alteration.

The amendments proposed by the Committee have been published as required by the Constitution, but it is proper that before they are submitted to the Association for their action the reasons which have led to their recommendation should be presented.

Art. 3, which is the first in which any change is proposed, fixes the terms of Membership in the Association; and in accordance with the democratic spirit which has characterized the Association from the first, the Committee thought it wise not to fix a price for annual membership, so that none who esteemed it a privilege should be debarred by poverty, but the widow with her two mites should stand upon an equality with the donor of larger gifts. The Committee have thought it wise to drop that portion of the original article which prescribes Evangelical sentiments, etc., as a necessary qualification for membership, as something impossible of enforcement, and hardly needed to prevent unworthy members from forcing themselves upon the Association in such numbers as to embarrass its working as a Christian institution. If, however, the Association should differ with the Committee upon this point it is very easy to insert after "any person" the words "professing faith in the Lord Jesus Christ," which is certainly as long a creed as need be inserted in such an article.

Acting upon the principle that what is worth having is worth asking for, the Committee have recommended that all who desire to be members of the Association should make their wish known when their contribution is made. In no other way can any list of members be made up.

Art. 5, which prescribes the constitution of the annual meeting, is so amended that no members, either life or annual, shall have the right to take part in its proceedings unless their names are placed upon the roll prior to the first day of October preceding such meeting. Without some such limitation no list of those entitled to speak or vote can be had, and it seemed to the Committee desirable to close the books at a date sufficiently early not only to facilitate the labors of the officers charged with the duty of preparing the roll, but to prevent any such addition of names at the last moment as might result in the packing of a meeting for any purpose. It is hoped that all contributing Churches, State Associations and Conferences will avail themselves of the right to a representation at the annual meeting, and that in this way their influence upon the Association may be powerful for good.

Since the proposed amendments were published, the Committee have heard from friends of the Association, whose opinions are entitled to great weight, some expressions of dissatisfaction with the changes suggested in Articles 3 and 5, but the criticisms have been so diverse as to show that in offering amendments to the Constitution the Committee have undertaken no easy task.

Some object to dispensing either in whole or in part with the religious qualifications for membership. Others would fix a money value (say $5 or $10) upon annual membership, thinking that such membership would be more highly esteemed if it bore a higher price.

Others still would have the Constitution so modified as to approximate that of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, with its limited corporate body.

Another and perhaps more numerous class, and one with which the Committee are more inclined to sympathize, would have all personal membership honorary, and lodge all power of management in the hands of delegates elected by the Churches or by State Conferences and Associations.

The Committee are of the opinion that, under the amendments proposed to Article 5, if the Churches are once awakened to their privilege and duty, the Annual Meeting will be largely composed of their delegates, and that practically it will thus become a representative body, so that the affairs of the Association will be managed by men selected by the Churches from whom its support is derived. So far as their own preferences are concerned they are quite willing that it should be so, and will cheerfully support any changes in the Articles under consideration which shall tend to bring about such a result.

By the amendment to Article 6, the executive officers of the Association cease to be members of the Executive Committee. This is in accordance with an Act of the Legislature of the State of New York, passed in 1872, prohibiting the payment of any salary or compensation for services directly or indirectly to any trustee or director of a charitable or benevolent association, and makes the Constitution conform to the law of the State. Since the passage of that act the Association has in fact, though not on paper, acted in accordance therewith; the salaried officers, though nominally members of the Committee, having declined to act in that capacity, and not having been recognized as such.

The omission of the parenthesis in Article 7 needs no comment.

Art. 8 was very properly regarded as of vital importance when the Association was organized, but the good Providence of God has now rendered it a dead letter and needless encumbrance of the Constitution.

The Executive Committee in the changes recommended have sought to make such only as would promote the efficiency of the Association and give additional grounds of confidence in its management to those who are interested in its success. It is too much to hope that all will be pleased with their work. Some will consider the changes too radical, while others will be sure that they do not go far enough, and though the Constitution with the amendments proposed commends itself to the best judgment of the Committee, they have no pet plans to carry out in the matter, but submit their work to the criticism and action of the Association.

The report was accepted, and the matter was referred to a special committee of seven, with instructions to report at the opening session of Thursday. Vice-President L. T. Chamberlain, D.D., of Connecticut, announced as this committee: Hon. Franklin Fairbanks, of Vermont; Pres. E. H. Merrill, of Wisconsin; Gov. Wm. B. Washburn, of Massachusetts; Rev. L. W. Bacon, D.D., of Connecticut; Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D.D., of Connecticut; Rev. George M. Boynton, of Massachusetts, and Pres. E. H. Fairchild, of Kentucky.

The order for the a. m. was then taken up. Papers were read as follows:

On "The Strength, the Weakness and the Needs of the Colored People," by Richard Wright, Esq., of Augusta, Ga. On "God's Designs for and through the Negro Race," by Pres. E. H. Fairchild, D.D., of Berea College, Kentucky.

Gen. O. O. Howard was then called to the chair, and Secretary Strieby made an address on "The Duty of America in the Conversion of the World, and especially in the Conversion of Africa."

Pres. E. A. Ware, of Atlanta, Ga., read a paper on "The Higher Education."

The Association then took a recess until 2 o'clock p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The meeting was called to order by Vice-President Chamberlain. Prayer was offered by Rev. H. A. Stimson, of Worcester. The first address was delivered by Gen. O. O. Howard, upon "Our Social Needs and their Remedies." At the close of his address Gen. Howard took the chair, and introduced as the second speaker Gen. S. C. Armstrong, of Hampton, Va., who reported for the Committee on the Indian Work.

Your Committee on work for the Indians recognize with gratitude the greatly increased general interest in the welfare of the red race, a change to more encouraging ideas in respect to its future, and a disposition to make increased efforts for its redemption.

They point to the fact that to Christianize the aborigines was a deep-seated purpose of the Pilgrim Fathers, and that the duty is greater now than ever from the wrongs they have suffered at our hands; and to the fact that the destruction of buffalo and other game has compelled a large class of Indians to seek white men's means of support, thus bringing thousands of their children within reach, and creating conditions of successful evangelizing work among them far more favorable than they have ever been in the past three centuries.

They urge action because civilization is rapidly surrounding them; many tribes are increasing in numbers, and the alternative is either Christian education or a terrible, bloody, costly struggle with a powerful race. Education or extermination is the issue. They point to the success already achieved in Indian education at Fort Berthold, Lake Superior and S'Kokomish agencies, by the American Missionary Association; to the grand results of missionary effort during the past forty years at the West; and to the hopeful work at Carlisle and at Hampton, as affording every encouragement.

They recognize the great need of legislation that shall encourage citizenship among the Indians, and afford means of attaining the conditions of citizenship.

Your Committee would, therefore, recommend for adoption the following resolutions:

Res. I. That the Association shall do all in its power for the education of Indian youth at their own homes, and in its colored schools at the South.

Res. II. That the Executive Committee of this Association be charged with the duty of pressing upon the general public and the Government its responsibility for the Indian race, and by co-operation with other societies, and by direct effort, exert its influence at the seat of government in behalf of legislation that shall secure citizenship to the Indian; to that end, a legal status and education to fit him for it.

Capt. R. H. Pratt, of Carlisle, Pa., followed upon the same topic.

The report of the Committee on Church Work was presented by Pres. Cyrus Hamlin, D.D., of Middlebury, Vt.

Your Committee on that part of the general survey referring to Church Work report, that they consider it most encouraging and inspiring. Seventy-eight churches formed; 5,472 members admitted; 8,130 scholars in Sabbath schools. But the great question is, have we a spirit of power and development in all these organizations? for if they are dead they are worthless.

Significant facts give us the answer. Five churches were added the past year. Five hundred and eleven members were added to the churches; 1,800 scholars to the Sabbath school; seven church buildings erected or in the process of erection—one the gift of Mr. Gregory (upon whom be peace)—two parsonages; two president's houses. One-third of these churches have had revivals, indicating future enlargement. There are seven State Conferences, Women's Home Missionary Societies in active work, Sabbath School Conventions, female missionaries sent forth into the houses of the poor—11 commissioned the past year—and a revolutionized public sentiment set in, so that Southern governors, generals, editors, have generously recognized the value of the work.

Now it has sometimes been questioned whether a Congregational organization, working on thoroughly Congregational principles, could so well plant the Christian church among an ignorant, degraded people, needing guidance, oversight, care, government. But how did the primitive churches in apostolic days succeed? They were all Congregational, and for the most part composed of ignorant people. Did they have apostles to guide them? So have we. Dr. Strieby and his associates and helpers are successors to ostles in this work. They have the oversight, and the churches have freedom of expansion and growth.

What is the path, let us inquire, through which a feeble church or churches may safely become strong? It is, it must be, through self-government, self-development and self-support. As to the first, churches composed of illiterate Freedmen are, doubtless, unfit to govern themselves. But how shall they ever become fit? How shall they learn, except by trial, failure and correction under kind but faithful leadership? We have given our colored citizens the largest civil and political freedom, with no guidance but t that of unscrupulous politicians. Shall we now say that they cannot be trusted in the church? That they can be free citizens in the republic, with all the duties, trusts and responsibilities of citizenship, but that they cannot be freemen in the republic of God? Our church organization is in perfect harmony with the genius of our government, and is the best possible school of good citizenship. It teaches liberty, regulated by law and love.

But the second essential principle of Congregationalism, self-development, is no less eminent. This necessitates organization and co-operation. Each church cultivates its own field, but its field expands into all the world. It looks over into the Dark Continent, and sends forth some of its young men and women to win, perchance, the martyr's crown. Every such effort is development, strength. It brings in health and power. The working church alone grows and thrives. This is the nature of the Congregational church.

Without this element of self-development into active Christian graces, the church, of whatever material formed, will remain in the weak and callow state of permanent and persistent chickenhood, and in cold nights it must be wrapped in cotton wool to keep it from dying. Now these churches of our Association have gone vigorously to work. They have done well. The facts enumerated in the report, and to which we have briefly referred, prove this. Let us cheer them and urge them on to greater effort. The whole race will rise just so far as it shall put forth what strength it has.

The third great requisite of the Congregational Church is self-support. From the way in which missionary churches come into existence, this is apt to be the most difficult principle to apply. They are weak at the beginning and must be aided.

Their real wants are pressing—a pastor, church building, school-house, school. But all these are so precious to them, to their children and their posterity, that great exertion and self-denial on their part should be called forth. No one should be admitted to church membership who will not do something for these great objects. It is safe to follow the teachings of Paul to the poor Corinthians.

Let it be well understood that church membership in a Congregational church means the true Christian manhood of self-support. Let them be taught systematic giving. This will consecrate all duties and all true enterprise. This will bind the church and the pastor together, and will help them to have the spirit of Him who pronounced it more blessed to give than to receive. This will purify the church. Give alms of such things as ye have, and behold all things shall be clean unto you.

As in the foreign field, so in the home, with all due safeguards, let us raise the banner, self-government, self-development, self-support. This is true Congregationalism and true Christianity.

Rev. J. E. Roy, D.D., the Field Superintendent of the Association, addressed the meeting on the church work at the South.

Rev. Charles T. Collins, of Cleveland, O., made the report of the Committee on Education, following it with an address.

Your Committee upon the educational work of this Association would congratulate its friends upon the great prosperity which has marked the past year, and which gives such rich promise for the years to come.

We find as causes for thankfulness:

1st. The permanent improvements to our various educational institutions in new and better buildings and increased endowments.

2d. The growing appreciation by the colored people of these educational privileges.

3d. The increasing confidence and sympathy of the Southern whites in the education of the Freedmen; and in the schools founded for them by the North, as shown by the words and deeds of prominent individuals and the articles in leading journals.

4th. And lastly, we are devoutly thankful that the Holy Spirit has been so manifestly present in the labors of the year, and that revivals of religion have given evidence of God's favor on the work, and promise of men and women for the great missionary work lying before the American Freedmen.

Your Committee feel constrained to urge the importance of the following measures:

1st. This Association should concentrate its efforts upon its work in the States, among the negro, the Indian and the Chinese, as offering its distinctive missionary field.

2d. The friends of the Association should redouble their efforts to put its schools upon a permanently endowed basis, and thoroughly equip them for giving a high Christian education to the Freedmen.

3d. In view of the vast educational structure to be built from the very foundations, the pressing importance of immediate education for millions of illiterate children, the poverty of the South, and the insufficiency of benevolent contributions from the North, the National Government should be urged to immediately inaugurate some additional and more adequate system of national aid.

Rev. John R. Thurston, of Massachusetts, also addressed the meeting upon the same subject.

A recess was then taken until 7.30.

EVENING SESSION.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Hon. Edward S. Tobey, of Boston. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. L. Gage, D.D., of Hartford, Conn.

The theme for the evening was "Christian Education at the South," and the addresses upon it were delivered by Rev. L. O. Brastow, D.D., of Vermont; Prof. Cyrus Northrop, of Yale College, and Hon. George F. Hoar, U. S. Senator from Massachusetts.

The order of proceedings for Thursday was presented by the Business Committee, and adopted by the Association, after which it was voted to adjourn until Thursday, a. m.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The morning prayer meeting was led by Rev. O. H. White, D.D., who for six and a half years was Secretary of the Freedmen's Missions Aid Society, of London, Eng.

The Scriptures were read by Secretary Woodworth, and Rev. I.P. Langworthy, D.D., offered prayer. The minutes of the preceding day were read and approved. By special assignment the Committee, to whom was referred the report of the Executive Committee on the proposed amendments to the Constitution, reported through Hon. Franklin Fairbanks, and Rev. George M. Boynton, of the same Committee, made certain statements in explanation of the same. The recommendations of the report were adopted, and were as follows :

1. That the amendments proposed to Articles VI. and VII. be adopted; that Article VIII. be omitted, and that Articles IX. and X. be renumbered respectively VIII. and IX.

2. That the subject be referred to a special committee of the Association, with instructions to report through the Executive Committee for the action of the next annual meeting.

On motion of Rev. R. B. Howard it was voted :

That this special committee consist of thirteen members, of which the committee of seven reporting this morning shall be members.

The nomination of the six additional members was referred to the Nominating Committee.

Secretary Strieby then read the following letter which had been addressed to him :

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR :—Impressed with the increasing importance of the work of the American Missionary Association, I deem it highly desirable that it should have the personal service of some one as its President who can devote no inconsiderable amount of time and special attention to its extended interests. This I am precluded from doing by other imperative duties and claims upon my time, which I cannot honorably disregard. I am, therefore, prompted to decline the use of my name as a candidate for re-election, in the earnest hope that a successor may be found who can do far more than I have been able to do in promoting its noble and patriotic objects. In thus severing my official relations to this Association, I cannot forbear to express my cordial appreciation of both the honor and the privilege which it has conferred upon me by re-electing me to its presidency for so many successive years, mingled with my sincere regret that circumstances have not permitted me to accomplish more in the advancement of a cause so intimately related to the vital interests of our country, and the extension of Christian civilization. Assuring you of my personal regard for yourself and your official associates, I remain, with great respect,

Your obedient servant, EDWARD S. TOBEY.

The resignation was accepted and the following resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote :

Resolved, That in accepting the resignation of Hon. E. S. Tobey as President of this Association, we desire to express our high appreciation of his character and services, of his uniformly courteous and Christian bearing, and of his intimate knowledge of parliamentary usage. Accepting the position as one of the successors of his pastor, Rev. E. N. Kirk, D.D., he has perpetuated with us the revered memory of that beloved servant of the Lord. Regretting, with Mr. Tobey, that his numerous and urgent duties, public and private, have sometimes compelled his absence from our meetings, and recognizing the delicacy of his frequent intimations of his readiness to decline re-election on that account, we now receive his resignation with most cordial wishes for his happiness and usefulness in the many honorable positions he occupies among his fellow-men.

Rev. Charles T. Collins then extended, in behalf of the Congregational churches of Cleveland, O., a cordial invitation to the Association to hold the next Annual Meeting in that place, and the invitation was accepted by a unanimous vote.

The Nominating Committee reported the following list of officers for the ensuing year :

A. S. BARNES,	ADDISON P. FOSTER,	CHARLES A. HULL,	JOHN H. WASHBURN
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,	S. B. HALLIDAY,	SAML. S. MARPLES,	A. L. WILLISTON,

On motion of Rev. Charles T. Collins, the following resolution was passed :

Resolved, That it is the sentiment of this meeting that appropriation should immediately be made by Congress to supply national aid to the cause of education in the South. And the Executive Committee are requested to transmit to the Secretary of the Interior the resolution of this body.

Rev. E. S. Atwood was appointed to fill a vacancy on the Finance Committee.

The Nominating Committee reported the names of those who are to serve as the Committee on Amendments to the Constitution :

Col. Franklin Fairbanks, of Vermont; President E. H. Merrill, of Wisconsin ; Hon. William B. Washburn, of Massachusetts ; Rev. L. W. Bacon, D.D., of Connecticut; Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D.D., of Connecticut ; Rev. George M. Boynton, of Massachusetts; President E. H. Fairchild, of Kentucky ; Hon. C. I. Walker, of Michigan; S. R. Heywood, Esq., of Massachusetts ; Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, D.D., of Massachusetts ; Col. C. G. Hammond, of Illinois ; Rev. A. H. Plumb, D.D., of Massachusetts ; J. G. W. Cowles, Esq., of Ohio.

The report upon the Chinese Missions was read by Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, D.D., of Ware, Mass.:

Although in the report of your Committee very brief mention is made of the work among the Chinese of this country, it is not therefore to be inferred that that work is being neglected, nor that it is failing in the ends for which it was undertaken. Rather is there a deepened conviction of its importance and increased encouragement in the prosecution of the work. In estimating the importance of the work we are not to consider alone the Chinese in this country, though they are a body of men of sufficient number to call for all, and more than all, that has been done for them. But we look beyond the 75,000 Chinese in California to the 400,000,000 in their own land. The Christian world, through its missionaries, and by personal intercourse, is coming to understand this people better than it once did. Instead of the race of barbarians, stupid and immovable, which they were once thought to be, those who are well-informed accept the assertion of the Rev. John Ross, who says: "They are beyond comparison the most intelligent of non-Christian peoples, and if any race surpasses them in industry, it is only the Anglo Saxon."

We have learned to respect their civilization and to see that it has elements of strength and stability which it is not impossible that we as a nation may be, ere long, fonnd sighing for, it may be in vain.

It is fitted to make Christian nations open their eyes when their mad rush for wealth and material aggrandizement is rebuked by the Chinese Ambassador to England saying: "The Empire cannot be governed by the yard measure of the merchant; first principles cannot be reached by those who excel only in the use of their hands." And still more is the greed for gain rebuked when the Chinese Viceroy, Li Hong Chang, says: "Opium is a subject in the discussion of which England and China can never meet on common ground; China views the whole question from a moral standpoint, England from a fiscal." Even the natural conservatism of China may yet vindicate itself and prove that changes in civil government and religion, sure as they are to come, are most healthy and most likely to produce permanent benefit when they come slowly, and as a result of sober conviction rather than of impulse. But how is the Christian Church to bear a part in remodeling the institutions and customs of that vast nation? Not by any one method alone, but one of those which Providence has opened, is doubtless to be through the agency of Chinamen coming here and returning to their homes to preach the Gospel to their countrymen.

It cannot be questioned that there will be a place and need for those trained under the institutions of the Gospel to go to China and plant the same institutions there, yet the converted Chinaman can do some things and exert an influence in some directions not open to others.

The career of Yung Wing furnishes a striking illustration of this. Of humble parentage, converted while at school in this country, he conceived the plan of bringing here Chinese youth of promise to be educated. He returned to China in 1855, without money, without influential friends, having almost forgotten his own language. For sixteen years he studied, taught, served the government, worked his way upward and won to his views officers high in authority. In 1871 his plan was adopted by the government, $1,500,000 placed at his disposal, and more than 100 selected Chinese youth were brought to this country. Though his experiment has now received a check and perhaps will not be carried on further, even its success so far is a standing proof of influence exerted by a Christianized native such as no other could hope to exert.

And not only so, it has by no means been a failure even in itself considered. The young men who have gone back to China from colleges and schools and Christian families have gone back far other than they came.

It is even a question whether they may not be more to be feared by the Chinese government as revolutionists than as though they had returned thoroughly converted Christians. But all will have received new ideas. Even those who have been chased through the streets by the Hoodlums of San Francisco have learned some new ideas. They can distinguish between a Christian and a politician, and know who are their friends and what makes them so. If in a generation we could send back to China a score of Yung Wings we should do more for the conversion of China than by any other method open to us.

The report speaks of a plan for establishing a new mission in Southern China as being under consideration. To your Committee it would seem the part of wisdom to move slowly in this matter so long as the present facilities are offered for labor in this country, especially as it is uncertain how long these facilities may continue to be enjoyed.

Thirty different Mission Boards are already occupying points in China, and though their 1,200 laborers are wholly inadequate for the work of evangelizing China, yet they furnish in their various stations, points from which laborers may go out, so that the call would seem to be for men to recruit the missions already established rather than for forming new ones. Especially will a separate movement of this kind be unnecessary if the converted Chinese of this country are able to carry out their purpose of establishing a mission of their own in the country back of Canton. The very fact that they are entertaining such an idea and earnestly pressing it, speaks volumes for the work which this society has already accomplished and opens a glorious vista for its ever expanding career in the future.

Your Committee would propose the following resolution:

Resolved, That in view of the small demands made upon the treasury of the American Missionary Association by the work among the Chinese, and the great returns which that work promises, the constituency of this Society are under the most solemn obligations to furnish for this branch of its work all the means that can be employed consistently with a wise economy and with due regard for the encouragement of self-help by the converted Chinese themselves.

Upon the same subject papers were read and addresses made by Miss Harriette Carter, of Boston, Rev. Lysander Dickerman and Rev. C. H. Pope.

The report on African Work was presented by Rev. John W. Harding, of Massachusetts:

Your Committee, to whom is referred that portion of the Executive Committee's report relating to the Foreign work of the Association, beg leave to report as follows:

The experience of the past and Providential indications of the future seem clearly to call upon this Association to concentrate their foreign work upon two fields—the Mendi Mission on the West coast, and the proposed Arthington Mission, in East Central Africa, in the region of the Sobat River.

The experience of the Mendi Mission has been a sad history of the sacrifice of many lives, and of meagre results when measured by that sacrifice, in any narrow view of the past or present. But when we stretch our gaze into the future, and think of the "must needs be," which is the law of suffering that accomplishes great results, and lays the foundations of many generations, the Mendi Mission already justifies its past. It is the key of a future that seems full of promise. It opens the door to a wider and more salubrious region, reaching back from the malarious coast toward the highlands of the head waters of the Niger, and inviting the extension of mission outposts with better conditions of success. Meanwhile, Good Hope station, on Sherbro Island, is favorably situated as a base of supplies and easy communication with Sierra Leone and the civilized world.

The past experience of the Mendi Mission has taught some valuable lessons. 1. That the white missionary cannot be depended on for permanent work by reason of the deadly climate. 2. That the pure black, of good constitution, although born in America, can endure the climate and is to be the future African missionary. 3. That a competent superintendence is desirable for this African work. 4. That extreme and deliberate care is demanded in the selection of missionaries to Africa, in respect both to physical health and thorough character. 5. That when such selections have been made our missionaries should be better equipped and provided for than they have been in the past for efficient and progressive work. A false economy has involved too much loss. The supporters of the Association have only need of intelligent and exact information to see and remedy this defect. A mission steamer for the Mendi work is greatly needed to save time, health, labor, and, in the end, money. So are other industrial equipments that might be named, fairly essential to the highest and speediest spiritual results. Your Committee recommend that the Mendi Mission be put in good repair; that any dropped stitches be taken up; that the things which remain be strengthened, particularly in respect to its sanitary and industrial basis, and better conditions for pushing its stations further into the interior.

As to the Arthington Mission, in its connection with the other generous and thoughtful projects of this enthusiastic friend of Africa, and in connection also with other Christian missions, and particularly that of the United Presbyterians on the Lower Nile already dotting that Eastern coast, we approve of the measures under progress by Superintendent Rev. Henry M. Ladd and Dr. E. E. Snow for exploring the Sobat region, and getting all possible light on a desirable location and all other matters involved in a wise prosecution of the work proposed. Should it prove feasible we advise, as in the case of the Mendi Mission, a generous equipment, the providing of a good physical basis, particularly in the procurement of a steamer of light draft adapted to such rivers as the Sobat and the Jub.

Also, at no distant day, the establishment somewhere on African soil, in a salubrious quarter and with favorable contacts with civilization, of an educational institution for young native Africans, combining the best features of the Lovedale School in South Africa, and the Hampton School in Virginia. We believe that such a school will be essential to the best development of our future work in Africa, not only for the training of native missionaries, but for the fundamental lessons of industry and self-help that should be woven from the start into a Christian civilization.

It would also prove a stimulus and an outlet for the various gifts of our educated Freedmen in this country, and furnish a wise direction to their growing enthusiasm for that African work sooner or later to demand them, when princes shall come out of Egypt, and "Ethiopia," as Dr. Edward Blyden renders it, "shall suddenly stretch out her hands unto God."

It is also incumbent upon this Association, as the peculiar helper of these Freedmen, to bend its utmost and untiring efforts to develop in them that prime, indispensable, and, by reason of their past limitations, sadly deficient prerequisite for missionary success—a thorough character—builded on the only sure foundations—that "fear of the Lord" which is "the beginning of wisdom," and the love which fulfills His law.

As it appears that the foothold of future success for the Arthington Mission will largely depend upon the good-will of the Egyptian government, it is evident that vigilant care should be taken in all possible ways to secure that good-will, and the alliance of all moral and diplomatic aids from our own and European governments which are interested in projects like that of the "International Association" for the civilization of Africa.

In making the above suggestions, we would not be understood to reflect upon the Executive Committee as lacking proper care or enterprise in the pursuance of the African work. We are aware of their past limitations, the sudden exigencies of the civil war, the vast responsibilities thrown upon them by the emancipation of the slaves, and that the immediate sympathies of the Christian public on which the Association relies for its support have demanded prime attention to the home work; but now that the logic of events more clearly defines the important relations of the home work to the foreign, the appeal should be strongly made for such an increase of contributions as shall warrant the Association to push its work abroad with fresh vigor.

The report was followed by an address by Mr. Harding and a paper from Col. H. G. Prout, lately of the General Staff of the Egyptian Army. The closing address of the morning was made by Rev. George S. Dickerman, of Lewiston, Me.

By a unanimous vote, the name of the retiring President was placed first upon the list of Vice-Presidents, and the Secretary was instructed to forward to Mr. Tobey a copy of the resolution passed at this session.

On motion of Rev. E. H. Byington, it was voted:

That the Nominating Committee for the Session of 1882 be appointed at this meeting, and that the appointment be made by the Chair. President Tobey announced the following names for the committee:

Rev. George M. Boynton, of Massachusetts; Rev. R. G. Greene, of New Jersey; Prof. John M. Ellis, of Ohio; Mr. J. E. Ingersoll, of Cleveland, O., and Mr. J. T. Leavitt, of New York.

This Committee were authorized to fill vacancies occurring in their number, and the Association took a recess until 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Association was called to order by President Tobey at 2 o'clock.

Prayer was offered by Rev. D. L. Furber, D.D., of Newton, Mass.

The topic assigned for the afternoon was, "Woman's Work for Women." Papers were read by Miss M. L. Sawyer, of Boxford, Mass., and Miss. E. B. Emery, of Gorham, Me., and a brief address followed from Mrs. J. C. Spence, of Fisk University, Tenn. Addresses were then made by Rev. E. N. Packard, of Dorchester, Rev. A. H. Plumb, of Boston Highlands, and Rev. E. S. Atwood, of Salem.

Next in order came the report of the Committee on Finance, which, in the unavoidable absence of Mr. Gregory, the Chairman, was made by Rev. Mr. Atwood.

Your Committee on Finance beg leave to report that they have examined the accounts and have found them duly audited. Attached to the Auditor's report there is a statement that all the funds which represent permanent property of the Society have also been examined, and everything is found in order. There is a balance in the treasury, September 30, 1881, of $518.80. The management asked last year for an increase of 25 per cent. in the contributions; the churches gave them an increase of nearly 30 per cent. During the year there have been large improvements made, and some enlargements of the different educational institutions, so that they are now able to accommodate a much larger number of students than before; and if that opportunity is to be embraced, and these students who are clamoring for an education are to be instructed, it will require a larger outlay of money than that of the preceding year.

On the basis of the heartiness with which the churches complied with the request of last year, your Committee recommend that the management ask of the churches this year a little more still, and that, as against the $246,000 last year, the endeavor shall be made to raise $300,000 the present year.

The Committee desire reference to be made to some special departments of the work where the need is special, notably the Chinese work, where there is ample room for a hundred-fold more of service. The Indian work also claims a special contribution, and the work among the Africans is always enlarging more and more.

I am requested to call attention also, in this informal way, to two provisions of the by-laws, that you may understand how financially secure this Society is, and how well-nigh impossible it is that there should, in any event, be any loss of its funds, or that they should be diverted from the use to which they are devoted.

On the sixth page of the report, concerning the Committee on Finance, it says:

"It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1), all stocks and bonds owned by the Association at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2), all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3), all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands."

The Committee desire to say on this point that they doubt whether any other benevolent organization can show a more careful guarding of the munificence of the churches; and on the basis of increased want, and of larger opportunities and perfect safety, they ask that the churches this year put into the hands of the management the sum of $300,000.

The report was followed by the addresses of Rev. George F. Stanton, of Massachusetts, and of Secretary Strieby, who made the closing appeal for the enlargement of the work.

Secretary Woodworth briefly reviewed the work which Mr. Gregory had done for the station in Wilmington, N. C., and a recess was then taken to 7.30.

EVENING SESSION.

The Association was called to order at 7.30 by President Tobey. Rev. Lewis Grout, of West Brattleboro, Vt., offered the opening prayer. The first address was made by the Rev. O. H. White, D.D., who spoke of the work which British Christians are doing through the A. M. A. in helping the missions in Africa. Henry D. Hyde, Esq., of Boston, made the second address upon the progress of the South, and its relation to the redemption of Africa. The last speaker was John B. Gough, Esq., endorsing the general work of the Association.

On motion of Secretary Strieby it was Voted, That the reports, minutes and all papers read at this meeting be referred to the Executive Committee with full power in selecting and publishing.

Rev. G. R. W. Scott, in behalf of the Business Committee, offered the following resolution.

Resolved, That the hearty thanks of this Association be extended to the pastors and members of the Congregational Churches, and to the people of Worcester, for their cordial welcome and generous hospitality to the many attendants on this the thirty-fifth annual meeting; in particular, to the Plymouth Church and Society for the use of this elegant house of worship and the convenient rooms connected with it, and to the pastor, Rev. George W. Phillips, for his many courteous attentions.

This Association also desires to express its sincere thanks to the large choir for its aid in the service of song; to the Press for its full reports of the exercises, and for the liberality of the railroads which have reduced the rates of fare over their lines. While deeply grateful to the various committees for their great work in making and executing wise plans for this large gathering, it wishes to recognize specially the efficient labors of the Rev. Charles M. Lamson and Samuel R. Heywood, Esq., whose wisdom and executive ability have greatly contributed to the success of this meeting.

Secretary Woodworth seconded the resolution and Rev. C. M. Lamson briefly responded, calling up in closing the pastor of Plymouth Church, Rev. Mr. Phillips, who made a fitting response on behalf of the inviting churches.

After singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds," on motion of Secretary Strieby, the Association adjourned sine die.

MARSHALL M. CUTTER, Secretary.

REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

OBITUARY.

The American Missionary Association assembles at its 35th Annual Meeting with thanksgiving to the Lord of the Harvest for the favors bestowed during the year just closed.

Before entering, however, upon a detailed report of the various operations, it is fitting that a moment be given to a mention of those who once labored with us, but are now entered into rest.

J. M. Pinkerton, Esq., Vice-President of the Association, died Feb. 18, 1881. He was born in Derry, N. H., Feb. 6, 1818, and was graduated at Yale College in 1841, after which he pursued the study of law at the Harvard Law School, and also in the office of Wm. Gray, Esq. He was chosen a director of the American Education Society in 1858, and was made Vice-President of the same in 1872. He was elected in 1862 deacon of the Mount Vernon Church, Boston, to fill the position made vacant by the death of Hon. Daniel Safford. Like his predecessor in the deaconate, he was distinguished for his liberality, his gifts during the last years of his life to charitable and benevolent objects exceeding one-third of his net income. At his death, he willed most of his property, amounting to about $200,000, to Pinkerton Academy, Derry, N. H., which had been founded by his uncle and father.

Rev. Kelly M. Kemp died at Good Hope Station, Mendi Mission, May 29, 1881. He was born a slave in North Carolina, and liberated by the exigencies of the war. Shortly after coming to the North he manifested an earnest desire for an education, for the purpose of entering the Christian ministry. His friends encouraged him to study at the Lincoln University, where he graduated with the confidence and respect of those who knew him. He was recommended by the Faculty of that Institution on the appeal of this Association for men for Africa, and after prayerful consideration, consented with his wife to engage in service at the Mendi Mission. He reached Good Hope Station March 30. His ordination and brief ministry at that point were full of promise, when death came and took him. He died of heart disease, aggravated by fever brought on by exposure to heavy rains.

Mrs. Kelly M. Kemp was studying at the Howard University at the time her husband received the invitation to join the Mendi Mission, and unhesitatingly, and indeed with enthusiasm, consented to accompany him. She was a brave, true woman, of fine instincts and elevated taste, whose life and example will not soon be forgotten in the field where so many had already learned to love her. She died at sea while coming to America, shortly after the death of her husband.

Mrs. L. C. Palmer Steward died July 3, 1881. She was born in Windham, Ohio, Aug. 10, 1839, and at fourteen years of age commenced work as a teacher. Largely by her own efforts she procured the means needful to pay her way through the Female Seminary at Painesville, O., where she graduated in 1862. In October, 1866, she entered the service of this Association as teacher among the Freedmen, and labored efficiently for ten years, dividing her time between Chattanooga, Tenn., Marion, Ala., and Fisk University. In 1868 she was married to Hon. T. C. Steward, who was stationed at Marion, Ala., in charge of the work of the A. M. A. She leaves a husband and three young children to mourn her loss.

Rev. G. W. Walker died at Centreville, Pa., Aug. 23, 1881. He was a graduate of Oberlin College and Theo. Sem. Mr. Walker entered the service of this Association at Atlanta University as Professor of Mathematics in 1872, and continued in the work for three years. He was a calm and happy Christian, a scriptural and impressive preacher, toiling faithfully and earnestly for souls wherever the Master placed him.

Mr. S. B. White died Aug. 23 at Paris, Texas. He was a graduate of the Normal Dept. of Talladega College, and had taught two years in Alabama and one year in Texas. He was a successful teacher and devoted Christian.

GENERAL SURVEY.

FREEDMEN.

The fortunes of the freed people during the current year indicate a marked degree of progress. A healthy growth in all the branches of our Southern work is quite discernible. It is strikingly evident that the Freedmen are discovering the extent of the horizon opening up before them through our educational institutions. At one time, many of their leaders were attracted by the allurements of political preferment, and counted nothing so good as position in office, and many such, doubtless, there will be to the end of time. There is, however, an increasing number among them who are coming to realize that intelligence and character developed by Christian education have a commanding worth and solid value that cannot be conveyed by an appointment or imbibed during the sessions of a legislature. This good result has been hastened by Teachers' Institutes, conducted by Southern and Northern educators, among the black and also the white citizens, sometimes large numbers of both classes mingling in the same convention.

Possibly never have our missions been more richly blessed by the outpourings of the Holy Spirit than during the past year. Whole classes in a school have indulged the hopes of a new life, and the rich experiences gathered during revivals have been borne forth into the villages and the country during the summer months by our students. Sabbath-schools have everywhere received due attention, and temperance work has been well sustained and productive of much good. Missionary meetings and societies have been encouraged, and the gifts from the hard earnings of the poor to the cause of missions abroad, indicate what may be hoped for when the colored people become educated and prosperous.

Educational Work.

Our eight Chartered Institutions, including Berea College and Hampton Institute, which were founded by this Association, have experienced a year of unusual prosperity. The number pursuing a higher grade of study has been continually on the increase, and the quality of the work done, as testified to by many who have witnessed it, indicates that the grade of teachers has been improved, not only by self culture on the part of those who have been long in service, but also by accessions from among the best educators in the country. Three of our teachers have received honorary degrees from important colleges at the North, and others have been encouraged by many tokens of appreciation and esteem.

During the year, the Tillotson Institute at Austin, Tex., took possession of its new building, a brick structure one hundred and four feet long, forty-two feet wide and five stories high. From the first this school has met with the hearty approval and sympathy of a large number of the best citizens of Austin. The new building was opened in January, and before the close of the spring term 107 students had availed themselves of its advantages.

The college at Berea has added $50,000 to its permanent endowment fund; the Fisk University has received $4,000 endowment for student aid. At Hampton, two new buildings, one for Indian and one for Negro girls, have been provided by the friends of the Institution, and a new Academic Hall, in place of one that was burned, has been dedicated. At Tougaloo, Miss., a boy's dormitory of brick, with accommodations for about 75 students, has been completed. This building was made especially necessary by the ravages of fire, which destroyed the wooden structure that had served in a very inadequate way both for school rooms and boarding purposes.

Other buildings at Straight University, New Orleans; Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Talladega College; and Atlanta University; provided by the gift of $150,000 by Mrs. Valeria G. Stone, have either been completed, or are in a good state of progress. At New Orleans, there was added to the half square of land on Canal street, before owned by the A. M. A., the remaining half. Upon this site, has been erected a neat three-story building, ninety-two feet on Canal street and ninety-one feet on Roche Blave street, containing dining-room, kitchen and laundry for the whole school, parlor, bath-room, apartments for teachers and dormitories for about 60 girls.

At Talladega, Stone Hall, for boys, has been completed. It is three stories high, with a basement, and contains printing-office, reading-room, bath-room and dormitories for 76 students. With a portion of Mrs. Stone's gift, supplemented by $1,000 from Mr. Gregory, of Marblehead, $100 from Gen. Swayne and a few smaller sums from others, Swayne Hall has been remodeled and thoroughly repaired from pavement to bell-tower, including roofing, flooring, blackboarding, etc. A house for the accommodation of the President will soon be completed. With these improvements the college will be ready for a great work.

At Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., Livingstone Missionary Hall is nearly inclosed. It is two hundred and four feet long, sixty-two feet wide in the centre, and has four stories and a basement. The foundation is of stone and the walls are of pressed brick. A mansard roof with brick gables and ornamented chimneys crowns the edifice. It will contain chapel, lecture-rooms, recitation-rooms, teachers' apartments, and dormitories for 120 boys. Although planned with a strict regard for economy, it will be a grand and stately companion for Jubilee Hall. Several months will be required for its completion.

At Atlanta, a new wing has been added to the girl's dormitory, and plans for a school building between the two dormitories have been completed, and some materials purchased. It is expected that the building will be finished and ready for occupancy in a year from this time. In planning these various buildings, it has been the aim to provide the best facilities possible, but the claims of architecture have not been wholly ignored. Some of the best architects in the country have been consulted, and all the plans have been examined carefully by your Executive Committee.

It will be seen by this review that each of our eight chartered institutions has received permanent and substantial aid either in funds or in buildings, and that never before were they so fully equipped for the great work thrown upon them. The prayer of the last half score of years for room has been wonderfully answered, and the blessing of Heaven is crowning the labors of workers with rich rewards.

Our other schools, 46 in all, normal and common, have met with favor on every hand, and have experienced uninterrupted progress throughout the year. At some of them the industrial work has been pushed forward with gratifying success. Attention has been given to household industries in two or three places. A class of girls at Memphis, Tenn., has been carefully instructed with actual practice in an experimental kitchen, on the nature, relative values and healthful methods of cooking food. Classes in needle-work, knitting, and in the use of sewing machines, have had daily lessons and practice.

We have had in all 230 teachers in the field, a gain of 30 over last year. Of these, 14 have performed the duties of matrons and 15 have been engaged in the business departments.

The total number of students has been 9,108, a gain of 1,056 over the previous year. They were classed as follows: theological, 104; law, 20; collegiate, 91; collegiate preparatory, 131; normal, 2,342; grammar, 473; intermediate, 2,722; primary, 3,361; studying in two grades, 136.

Our normal and common schools, like our chartered institutions, are constantly sending up the call for more room. Permanent accommodations have been provided at some points and temporary ones at others. At Wilmington, N. C., by the gift of Hon. J. J. H. Gregory the school building has been remodeled for the accommodation of a large number of students. A new mission home has also been built by the munificence of the same gentleman. At Athens, Ala., the colored people have done nobly toward furnishing material for the school-house now under process of construction. They have already made two hundred thousand bricks with their own hands, and are placing them in the walls to represent their interest in the property. It is hoped that the work will be completed by January 1st, and that Miss Wells, who has been Principal of the school for fifteen years, will be rewarded for her labor and patient waiting, by ample accommodation for all the students who may seek the advantages of her excellent normal school.

During the year, we have inaugurated work at Topeka, Kan., the chief rendezvous of the refugees, where a lot has been purchased and a building suitable for both church and school purposes erected. Divine services are held on the Sabbath. A Sabbath-school with an average attendance of 170 has been gathered, and a prosperous night-school sustained. Much good has been done by our missionary and others at this point in the distribution of supplies to the destitute, and by speeding them on their way to homes among the farmers and mechanics of the State. We have also resumed our church work at Lawrence, Kan., with good results.

Commencement days, or the closing exercises at our different institutions, are becoming more and more eventful as the years go on. One feature of especial interest at Hampton was the delivery of orations, and the reading of papers by the alumni of the school. These displayed an amount of character and culture on the part of those who had been several years in the field since their graduation which was very gratifying.

Commencement day at Berea College is unlike any other in the South or elsewhere in the country. Hours before the exercises begin, the streets are thronged with hundreds of people, black and white, old and young, properly dressed or dressed in rags, some riding on the finest steeds produced in Kentucky, some on plough horses, mules and ponies, riding single, riding double, with a child or two between. The exercises are held in a large open tabernacle seating about three thousand persons. The building is usually decorated with mottoes and banners, with plants and flowers and miniature fountains. The college band furnishes the music. Not the least interesting is the basket dinner on the college campus. The fame of these days spreads far and wide for hundreds of miles, awakening an enthusiasm on the part of the young for an education, and winning words of praise and tokens of cheer from the very best of people throughout the State.

At the Emerson Institute, Mobile, Ala., eight hundred people crowded into the Third Baptist Church to see and to hear of the work for themselves; while, at Montgomery, on the theory that what is good for a part is good for all, every scholar, from the least to the greatest, was given a speech. As there were more than three hundred to take part, the authorities decided that all the exercises should not be crowded into a single day. Consequently, in order that a good thing might last a good while, it was arranged to devote three evenings to the speaking.

The growing interest in these anniversary occasions all along the line of our work, the attendance of leading white citizens and their readiness to occupy seats on the platform with our teachers and workers, the enthusiasm of the colored folks to throng in and catch every word that is uttered, all combine to lift up the work from the low place it has occupied among those at the South who have looked unfavorably upon it, and to magnify in the minds of the colored people, who have struggled so hard to send their children to school, the dignity and importance of Christian education. With a few more years of progress like the past, our educational work will outrun and leave behind the obstacles and the enemies which have stood in its way during the past years, and God is speeding the day.

Church Work.

Our Church Work is attaining a steady and healthful growth. We do not seek to force the founding of churches where there is no urgent demand for them, for while this might swell our rolls, it would only serve to weaken and discourage ultimately. Our purpose is to establish churches where there is sufficient intelligence and outlook to give reasonable hope that a Congregational Church may do good service for the Master, not only by the benefit accruing to its own members, but also by its influence upon other and older churches that have not had the advantages of an educated ministry. Our whole number of churches is 78, being an addition of five over last year. These have been organized at Washington, D. C., Louisville, Ky., Little Rock, Ark., Bayou Du Large, La. (Thibodeaux Post-office), and Grand Bayou, La. (Howma Post-office). The total number of church members is 5,472, a gain of 511 on last year. The number in Sabbath-school, 8,130, a gain of 1,806. New meeting houses have been constructed at Peteance, La., Little Rock, Ark., Lassiter's Mills, N. C., and Wilmington, N. C. At the latter place a tasteful structure, with accommodations for 400, was provided by the gift of Hon. Mr. Gregory, at a cost to him of $3,600, and dedicated with fitting ceremonies, which were heartily participated in by the leading white clergymen of the city. Church buildings are under process of erection at Caledonia, Miss., Luling, Tex., Frausse Point, La. Parsonages have also been built at Florence, Ala., Flatonia, Tex., and houses for the Presidents at Tougaloo, Miss., and Talladega, Ala.

The material prosperity of our churches indicated by these statements is very encouraging, but the spiritual activity and growth is far more so. More than one-third of our churches have reported revivals, with conversions numbering from seven to forty-four, resulting in a large number of accessions to the churches.

Our church work is gradually creating a demand for the services of the students graduating at theological departments under our supervision at Howard University, Talladega College, Fisk and Straight Universities, and these are taking the places of white clergymen from the North in many localities.

The growing interest in theological seminaries for Freedmen is happily illustrated by the gift of $25,000 to us, for endowment of the theological department at Howard University.

We have seven State Conferences, embracing the most of the territory occupied by our schools and churches. These hold annual conventions, at which large numbers assemble.

The Alabama Conference has associated with it a woman's missionary society, which reports the operation of its auxiliaries in different parts of the State. It is an active, hard working and successful society, that does great credit to the missionary workers connected with it. This Conference also has a Sabbath-school convention representing many county organizations, and the Sabbath-school interests of the State. The meetings of this conference, as well as those of the others, exert a beneficent and wide-spread influence, which serves not only to cement, but to make active and strong, the Congregational church work at the South.

The movement made a few years since on the part of a few leading ladies at the North to send forth female missionaries to labor in the homes of the poor and destitute colored people, and to assist otherwise for their temporal and spiritual improvement, has met with marked approval and encouraging success. We have commissioned eleven in all during the past year, and their reports have been full of interest. We believe the work they have been doing is a vital necessity, and that it should be extended as rapidly as may be consistent with the other interests we have in charge.

It is fitting before bringing to a conclusion the report of our operations among the Freedmen, that proper recognition be made of the improved sentiment among the whites at the South relative to our work. We entered the South with right principles. We did not inquire especially what was good policy, but what was required by justice, and what was consistent with righteousness. To promote these ends our missionaries were ready to sacrifice, if need be, their lives. They never advanced to retreat, but to conquer. Amidst hardship, ostracism and poverty, they toiled on; the Southern people watched them; little by little they came to recognize their worth; they saw massive structures rear themselves in choice locations in the great capital cities of the South. They were led to recognize the ability and integrity of the self-denying workers, who pursued their toilsome way in leading young Freedmen up to Christian manhood and womanhood; they saw church after church founded with a pure and educated ministry; some of the best of them ventured to visit the teachers and their schools. The work grew on. The children who had been under the care of leading white citizens in service or in household, exhibited the value of the work done so strikingly as to remove all doubt of the purpose and success of the teachers from the North. United States Senators, the Governors of States, Legislative bodies and companies of good men, out of interest, out of patriotism, out of curiosity sometimes, attended anniversary occasions and lent their interest and gave their influence to promote the welfare of the institutions under our care. The result of it all has been to emphasize and establish the principles with which we started out, and to revolutionize the sentiment of many leading minds throughout the Southern country; and now halls of legislation and portions of the press of the South sparkle with sentiments that would do honor to Northern patriots, who battled early for the existence and success of this Association. Governor Brown of Georgia wins his election to the United States Senate after affirming before the Legislature, "We must educate the colored race. They are citizens, and we must do them justice."

Governor Holliday, of Virginia, who lost an arm in the Confederate service, comes forward and makes good use of the other in expressive gestures while urging the claims of the colored people for education at the anniversary at Hampton.

General Humes, a Major-General in the Southern army, consents to give the oration at the anniversary of the Le Moyne Institute, and conveys assurances of the active sympathy of the best citizens of Memphis for the work carried on; while Dr. Atticus G. Haygood, the President of Emory College, bursts forth with the exclamation, "Suppose these Northern teachers had not come, that nobody had taught the negroes, set free and citizens, the South would have been uninhabitable by this time. Some may resent this; be it so, they resent the truth."

The utterances of the press are not less significant. An editorial in the Memphis Appeal affirms: "The Southern States have too long stood aloof, and allowed the stranger to do for the negro what they should have done themselves." "There is but one thing for the people of the South to do, and this is, to throw themselves into the work of educating the negro. We must go forward, and must take the negro by the hand and make him feel that he is a part of the great column of the people." The Nashville American, the most influential paper in the State, through its leading editor, in giving a report of the anniversary of Fisk University, goes on to say: "In the labor of regeneration of a race, no agency will have so high a place as this conservative school." The Vicksburg Herald strikes another note on the gamut and illustrates a change of sentiment on this wise, in response to a narrow-minded, complaining correspondent: "We are heartily in favor of the South from the Potomac to the Rio Grande being thoroughly and permanently Yankeeized. Yankee energy, Yankee schools, Yankee cultivation, Yankee railroads and Yankee capital are badly needed in the South, and will be welcomed by every Southern progressive patriot."

We believe there is nothing to hinder this tidal wave of better feeling from sweeping the entire South. For our part, we have only to hold on and press on.

AFRICA.

The development of the work among the Freedmen, the interest taken in African civilization by the most thoughtful people in the country at large, and the enthusiasm awakened among the blacks for the land of their ancestors, constantly remind us of the call we have for mission work in Africa. We have paid much attention to the consideration of this call. In accordance with the suggestion of the last Annual Meeting, we have appointed a Superintendent of African Missions, not only to supervise the work we have carried on so long on the West Coast, but to lay the foundations of the Arthington Mission on the Upper Nile. Great care was taken in selecting a superintendent, resulting in the choice of Rev. Henry M. Ladd, the son of a missionary, who spent the first sixteen years of his life in the East, after which he came to this country, pursued a course of study and entered the ministry at Walton, N. Y. Mr. Ladd left America for the Mendi Mission in February, reaching the West Coast the last of March. He made a careful examination of the methods of missionary work, at Freetown, Sierra Leone, under the care of our British brethren, and afterward proceeded to Good Hope Station, where we have a church and school. Mr. Ladd was accompanied to Africa by Mr. Kelly M. Kemp and his wife, from Lincoln University. A council was called at the Good Hope Station for the ordination of Mr. Kemp, and representatives of the Shengay and other missions were present. It was thought advisable that Mr. A. E. White, who had acted as teacher at this point, should return to America. He has since done so, and at present is pursuing his studies at Oberlin College, with a view of preparing himself for better service on the mission field. Mr. Nurse has also retired from the mission, giving place to Bro. Kemp, whose experiences and education rendered him a desirable person as pastor over the church at this point. After arranging details of affairs at Good Hope, Mr. Ladd visited the Avery Station, and was encouraged by the good work under the supervision of Mr. Jackson at this inland station.

Our saw mill, being the only one on the coast, can be brought into service constantly. Logs are plentiful in the neighborhood, and the people are willing to work. The coffee farm at Avery shows signs of progress, and very soon we may hope for a yield that will test the value of the experiment. The church and school have been kept up, much attention being given in the church to rigorous discipline, where the members had inclined too strongly toward the barbarous customs of the heathen about them. We have long felt the need of a business superintendent to manage the affairs of the mill and farm at Avery, to take care of the property at Good Hope and Debia, and to keep the temporary home at Freetown in readiness for the missionaries on their way to and fro. Mr. I. J. St.John, a man of considerable experience in business affairs, has been appointed to fill this position. In common with other missionary societies, laboring for the redemption of Africa, we find that where there are no roads or domestic animals, but many rivers, a suitable steamer would be quite serviceable in promoting the interests of our civilizing operations, and in adding to the comfort of our missionaries. We believe we ought to provide such a steamer for the Mendi Mission as early as possible, and our appeals are already out for $10,000 as a special fund for this purpose.

We were saddened early in the summer by the unexpected death of Rev. Mr. Kemp, which was followed soon after by the death of his wife, just as they were settling down to the life-work they had chosen. Both of these dear missionaries were unavoidably exposed in open boats to the bad influences of the climate. By their death they illustrate our need of more speed and better shelter in transporting missionaries from station to station.

We have appointed Rev. J. M. Williams, a native of South America and an experienced worker in Africa, to carry on the work at Kaw Mendi, the first station occupied on the return of the Amistad captives.

Rev. J. M. Hall, a graduate of Maryville College and of the Theological Department of Howard University, has consented to fill the place vacated by the death of Mr. Kemp, and he, with Mr. St. John, left America in October for the mission.

Three lads from the Mendi country are at school in America, one at Fisk University and the others at Hampton Institute.

Early in December Mr. Robt. Arthington, of Leeds, Eng., signified his readiness to pay over the £3,000 he had pledged as a nucleus provided we would plant a mission on the Upper Nile. Already Dr. O. H. White, Secretary of the Freedmen's Missions Aid Society of London, had made good progress in securing £3,000 additional to Mr. Arthington's pledge for the same purpose. It was evident to us that the $30,000 asked for from Great Britain toward the $50,000 fund for this mission would be speedily made up. As we had pledged ourselves to furnish $20,000 on condition that we received in all from Great Britain $30,000, the question of the establishment of the mission directly was thrown upon us. We felt that the call to us was to go forward, and Mr. Ladd's services were secured at the earliest day possible with a view to this necessity. As the plan of sending forward two men to look over the mission field, select a site for the station, and to determine what supplies and facilities would be needful for the mission, fully met Mr. Arthington's view, we determined to send forward Mr. Ladd early in the autumn for the purpose mentioned. We were happy, also, in securing the services of a former parishioner of Mr. Ladd, Dr. E. E. Snow, a physician of much experience, to accompany him on his journey. These two brethren left New York in September. They had provided themselves with a valuable letter from Secretary Blaine, instructing the Consul General of the United States at Cairo to further their object as much as he might be able. On their way they purposed to procure letters of introduction from the English government, hoping thereby to be assisted in making favorable arrangements with the Khedive of Egypt for transportation to the field of their destination, and also for the privilege of using a steamboat on the waters of the Upper Nile. Their plan of route will be to visit Cairo, and proceed from thence to Souakim, on the Red Sea; from this point they will pursue a camel route, a distance of 240 miles to Berber, where they hope to find steamboat facilities for the remainder of their journey. The point which they seek to reach is about 1,500 miles in a direct line south of the Mediterranean and near the mouth of the Sobat, where the people are in the depth of barbarism. It is the hope of your Committee that Brothers Ladd and Snow will be able to return in early summer, at which time Dr. Snow will devote himself to procuring a suitable steamer for mission purposes on the Nile, and other supplies and facilities needful for the comfort and success of the enterprise. Supt. Ladd will devote himself to organizing a suitable corps of missionaries for the Arthington mission, two of whom are already under appointment, with a view of proceeding up the Nile next autumn to their field of labor. Our African work is not without its hazards, its embarrassments, and inevitable discouragements. We believe, however, that the good tidings of great joy must be preached to the millions of newly-discovered peoples in Central Africa, and that the negro race with which we have so much to do has an urgent and imperative call in this direction. We accept, therefore, cheerfully and prayerfully, our part of the burden, trusting that the many friends of the long despised and forgotten Africans will sustain us by their prayers and by their contributions, while we go forward as the Lord opens the way, performing our tasks as best we are able until the day shall dawn.

INDIANS.

We believe that the Peace Policy of General Grant, which was continued by President Hayes, has been productive of great and lasting good to the Indians. Some infelicities have occurred between the government representatives and those of the religious bodies having nominations intrusted to them, and these, together with other reasons, have served to diminish the interest once taken by the officials at Washington in the co-operation of the religious bodies. We have no wish to discuss the subject, nor to press upon the Administration the question of the continuance of the Peace Policy. We content ourselves, therefore, with giving a few statements relative to the Indian work under our care.

The general improvement of the Indians at the S'Kokomish Agency is indicated from the fact that the white employés, with the exception of the clerks, physician, and those connected with the schools, have been discharged and their places filled by Indians. At this Agency, the long desired titles to their land have at last been granted to the Indians by the Government, and they have, therefore, additional inducements to become thrifty and make themselves homes. At Dunginess Station, where a few members of the S'Kokomish Church reside, there is a church building, the only one in the county. This has been furnished recently with a bell and melodeon. An average attendance of forty on divine services at this point and of eighty at S'Kokomish is of much encouragement. Their gifts, also, to benevolent objects for the year, amounting to $614.67, indicate that the Indian may be counted upon to help on the world's conversion. Good work has been done for Indians at Hampton and Carlisle, and we have the question under serious consideration of providing suitable accommodations for Indian youth in connection with other institutions.

THE CHINESE.

The work among the Chinese on the Pacific Coast has been carried on under the able and energetic superintendence of Rev. W. C. Pond with unabated interest and success. Here there has been enlargement. The excess of teachers for the past year over the previous year has been six, that of pupils 76, and of hopeful conversions 13. A comparison of the statistics and work shows an improvement at all points. The total enrolment last year was 1,556; this year, 1,632. The number last year who gave evidence of conversion was 127; this year, 140. All reports that have come to us are exceedingly encouraging, and not the least among them is the repeated expression of the need there is of some well chosen point in Southern China for a mission station from which converted Chinamen returning to their fatherland may go forth to preach to their countrymen. We do not purpose to act hastily upon suggestions of this kind. We seek, however, to learn clearly the will of the Master, and to expand His work whenever and wherever it is evident He is leading the way.

FINANCES.

The financial success reported at our last Annual Meeting, while full of encouragement, cast upon us a shade of anxiety. It was not certain that the additional funds made necessary by the large gifts we had received for new buildings, and the plans we had adopted for enlargement at different points, would be forthcoming. Efforts were made throughout that meeting to impress upon all those present the urgent necessity we were under for at least 25 per cent. of increase in receipts over the previous year for current expenses. The same necessity was also set forth at the National Council at St. Louis, in our publications and in the pulpits, and at conferences and conventions wherever opportunity was afforded. We felt that God had called us to do an enlarged work, and that if we could convey the information to His people, and share with them the burden we felt ourselves, the responses would be sufficiently liberal to meet all demands. In this we were not disappointed. The receipts reported for the fiscal year closing Sept. 30, 1880, were, for current work, $187,480.02; this year, $243,795.23, a gain of $56,315.21. This shows an advance of nearly 30 per cent. inthe ordinary subscriptions over last year, and indicates the people's hearty appreciation and indorsement of our work. For this we return profound gratitude to Almighty God. The fiscal year was closed free from debt, and with a balance in our treasury of $518.80. We are sure that the liberality displayed augurs well for the future. We believe the money received was expended wisely. We do not see how we could have done justice to our work without it. But additional outlay for current expenses is sure to be needful. The Stone Hall just finished at Straight University will afford accommodations for the teachers and sixty girls. The cost however, for student aid, for insurance and the care of the building, will require additional receipts. What is true at New Orleans is equally true at Talladega College, with its new dormitory for a hundred boarders, and at Tougaloo, Miss., with the facilities of its new Hall. When Livingstone Missionary Hall, at Nashville, is done, and Stone Hall, at Atlanta University, completed, two hundred additional boarding students will make new demands which must be met.

To all we have mentioned must be added the consideration that we are laying foundations for a mission in Africa on the Upper Nile, at a point further remote from the coast than any occupied by other societies, either home or foreign, and that the outlay for this, if carried forward, will be considerable in the near future. We believe, therefore, that it is our duty to ask the friends of this Association to give us during the coming year not less than $300,000 for the support and enlargement of the varied work we have in charge.

DEMANDS OF THE FUTURE.

Some of the demands indicated above may be summarized as follows:

1. The increase of students this year over last year is 1,056. A considerable number of these were boarding students, but with our additional accommodations we shall require the coming year from five to ten thousand dollars more than usual for student aid.

2. We have no boys' dormitory at Straight University, the new Stone Hall being exclusively for the teachers and girls. We need immediately fifteen thousand dollars to supply this want.

3. Funds also are necessary for libraries in at least ten of our different institutions. An advanced school without a sufficient library labors under great disadvantages, and especially so when located amid a people who have but very few books of their own. From ten to twenty thousand dollars for libraries could be used very profitably at once.

4. Our theological departments need better facilities and an increased corps of instructors. The number of students graduating from the different schools at the South is rapidly increasing. Many of these would enter the Christian ministry if sufficiently encouraged to do so. We need funds for the endowment of professors' chairs at least at three different points south of the Ohio.

5. We need also endowment funds for all our chartered institutions. No colleges thrive for a great length of time without endowments. The work of a missionary society primarily is to plant churches and religious institutions, and to sustain them until they can care for themselves. Its business is, and must be, aggressive. As soon as may be its churches, and its educational institutions, must become self-sustaining by their own endeavors, while the society goes forward to new fields. We need now, we surely ought to have in the near future, not less than five hundred thousand dollars for the endowment of our different institutions.

6. We need also ten thousand dollars at once for a suitable steamer for our Mendi Mission.

The negroes in the West Indies, the millions in South America, the two hundred millions in Africa, have their claims upon us. We are of them as a missionary society, and they are of us as our brethren in distress, awaiting such benefits as we have been blessed in bestowing on the few representatives in our own country.

Finally, this Association needs, most of all, the prayers of God's people everywhere for the guidance of His Holy Spirit, and the sufficiency of His grace to direct its affairs in days to come, and for this your Committee puts forth its most urgent appeal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Representation at the Congregational Union of England and Wales.—Upon the invitation of its Secretary, Rev. Dr. Alex. Hannay, of London, and by appointment of the National Council and this Association, our Secretary, Dr. M. E. Strieby, represented these bodies at the Jubilee of the Union held at Manchester, Eng. October 4th to 10th.

The interest taken in the African race by the people of Great Britain and their assistance in providing funds for our general work, assured Dr. Strieby a hearty welcome. On October 6th, he addressed the Convention, giving an account of the history, progress and outlook of our great work. We believe that the fraternal relations which have long existed between us and our British brethren were strengthened by Dr. Strieby's visit, and that we can rely more and more upon their sympathy and aid in the future.

During the Secretary's absence, his place was filled by Rev. J. E. Roy, D.D., our Field Superintendent.

The American Missionary, published monthly by this Association, furnishes a good report of our work in all its departments. We believe it to be indispensable to those who wish to keep themselves well informed of the operations of one of the three great missionary societies that rely upon our churches for support. We have welcomed with gratitude the improvement in the missionary literature of the times, and it has been our aim to make the American Missionary equal in appearance, quality and usefulness to the organs of other missionary societies, home and foreign. We believe its circulation should be largely increased.

The Freedmen's Missions Aid Society of London abates none of its interest in our work. Dr. O. H. White, its Secretary, after securing in Great Britain £3,000 to supplement Mr. Arthington's gift of the same amount for a mission on the Upper Nile, returned to this country for a brief sojourn. It is his purpose to resume his labors for the Society in Great Britain during the coming year.

The American Bible Society.—We are, as in former years, indebted to this Society for its prompt and gratuitous supply of the word of God on all occasions when made acquainted with our wants.

COLD AND POVERTY.

RALEIGH, N. C.—The winter has been unusually severe, and our people are so very poor and unprepared for it that the attendance at church services has been very small. A part of the time it has been so cold and muddy that it was impossible for the people to get about.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—It has been awfully wet, muddy and cold all the month; the like has not been experienced here for many years. The great suffering among the poor for the want of food, fuel, clothing and shelter to keep them from the terribly cold weather was fearful. It rained steadily through the week of prayer, and we were able to have meeting only one night.

MACON, GA.—For this season, at least, the name of "Sunny South" is a misnomer. Beginning in November last, there have been almost four solid months of cold, sour, dismal, cloudy, stormy weather. For ten days the thermometer stood constantly below the freezing point. One night it touched zero. The coal-yards gave out, and the wood market was empty. The smooth-shod Southern horses could not climb the icy hills to bring supplies. Fuel became steadily scarcer and higher—wood going up from four dollars (the usual price) to fifteen dollars per cord, and very scarce at that.

Rich and poor alike suffered. Many burned the fences, fruit trees and shade trees. Poor people burned their board partitions, bedsteads, tables, even chairs and trunks, and some, after all, had to go to bed as the only means of keeping warm. The "fuel famine" lasted ten or twelve days, the like of which was never known before. Water pipes burst, fruits, flowers and vegetables were frozen, and general distress ensued. Most Southern houses are very loosely built, generally warmed with fire-places or coal grates, over which you may scorch one side and freeze the other. Water froze one day within six feet of our stove. Much suffering, sickness and death have resulted among the poor in their wretched cabins.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—This has been an unusually severe winter. The colored people have been poorly prepared for it, both in regard to comfortable houses and clothing. Our January communion was postponed, on account of the severe weather till the first Sunday in February. It is sad to see the sick and dying in such uncomfortable hovels. One young lady is an invalid in a log house. In many places the daubing is out. The floor is of rough plank, with cracks between. The joists are partly covered with loose plank, while large spaces are not covered at all. There is no window, and the door is left open most of the time for light. The room is about eighteen by twenty feet. At one end is a fire-place, which answers the double purpose of cooking the simple fare and heating the small apartment. The bed of the sick is at the other end. The above, with slight variation, is a description of the houses in which all the colored people live.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I was asked to visit one day in a neat brick cottage which I should have passed many times with no suspicion of need within. On entering, the first thing that attracted my attention was that the walls and ceiling were entirely unfinished; the walls were the bare bricks, and over head were the flooring beams; and, where the walls and ceiling met, were wide open spaces for the wind to sift up from under the eaves. The inmates were a colored woman, unfitted for work by age and rheumatism, and her daughter; the daughter was her widowed mother's only dependence, yet the poor girl was lying sick with pneumonia, and had been two weeks without medical treatment. They had no money, but pride kept them reticent of their affairs. To provide medicines, and later, little delicacies; to visit the sick girl every day and sometimes twice a day was my care for three weeks.

LACK OF ROOM AND MEANS.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Recognizing the fact that the school building has a seating capacity for only about 350, while the average attendance for a part of the year has been 450, the necessity for enlarged accommodations, as well as some of the difficulties encountered by the teachers, will be apparent.

MOBILE, ALA.—Early in the year, for lack of room, we were obliged to refuse forty or fifty pupils admission to the intermediate and primary grades. In the course of a few weeks the A. M. A. sent us another teacher, and a new department was at once formed. But where should it find a home? Our walls would not expand. The basement room of a church near by furnished a haven, and the primary department, numbering between seventy and eighty, has been receiving instruction there. In the meantime, arrangements have been made for the removal of our own Congregational church from its old site to a place by the side of our school building, where it will be fitted up to answer the double purpose of chapel and school-room; and the primary department will find more commodious and convenient quarters, we hope, in the course of a few weeks.

Later.—Three hundred and fifty pupils enrolled for the year carries our numbers above any point reached since the boarding accommodations disappeared in the "Blue College" fire. Had we possessed boarding facilities and sufficient school-room, the number would have been as near 500 as 350.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—There are now 107 boarding students, while not a few have been turned away for lack of room. The new house for the home of the President is nearly completed. A third story is to be put upon the Ladies' Hall, and other enlargements are sufferingly needed.

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—The completion of the building and fencing the grounds which is an absolute necessity, with the cost of furnishing, call for at least $2,000. This should be provided at once; then land is needed; thousands of colored youth in Texas greatly desire an education; they are worthy, but poor. Yet their highest good requires that they pay for their education. And, since this is not possible in many cases, some means should be provided by which they can. The most practical way is to have land which they can work.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—There is a large territory spiritually to be occupied in Charleston. We have a population of 50,000, a large part of whom are colored. In this county there are 71,000 colored people and only 30,000 white. There are 604,000 colored people in the State and 391,000 white. The colored vote is 40,000 in majority. There is great wickedness among these colored people. They copy and improve on the vices of the whites, in addition to their natural depravity. Gambling, profanity, drunkenness, licentiousness and Sabbath-breaking abound. Some of these vices have been born of freedom, others have been increased by it. Drunkenness was rare among the blacks in slavery. Gambling was comparatively unknown. Now both of these vices prevail to an alarming extent. Outside the city limits on Sunday groups of men and boys are to be seen everywhere, throwing dice or engaged in some other form of gambling. An effort is on foot to reach these outlying masses and bring them under the influence of the Gospel. I know of but one missionary who gives her time to the work of visiting the thirty thousand colored people of this city. We could use advantageously a dozen.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—Since my arrival home the one question that presses heaviest on my heart is, how can we provide for the boys and girls of Marion and other places visited that want to come to the college to school? In Childersburg, Shelby Iron Works, Calera, Selma and Marion, places along the line of my journey, I found many smart boys and girls anxious to become educated men and women. In one place I found twenty-five eager to come, not one of whom could pay more than a small part of necessary school expenses. Low wages, poor crops, the cotton worm and inherited poverty keep them where they are, and so far as I can see they must live and die there in their poverty and hopelessness, unless those whom God has more highly favored are moved to help them. Our college expenses are so low that seventy dollars will keep one pupil in school one year, and sometimes, on account of labor done or aid from home, a much smaller amount will suffice. We need more than one thousand dollars to be used in this way this year, above the amounts already pledged.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

HAMPTON, VA.—At 8.30 a. m., May 19, the new Academic Hall was dedicated. Bishop Payne, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, in most appropriate words and manner, offered the dedicatory prayer. General Howard followed in an address of marked ability, and of broad and liberal and most approved views, admirably presented, basing his brief and pertinent remarks upon the duties of the hour in reference to the negro on the editorial in the Memphis Appeal, reproduced in the May Missionary. Governor Holliday, of Virginia, was introduced to General Howard. Each had lost an arm in battle. With their left hands in cordial grasp, they exchanged fraternal salutations. The incident gave unaffected pleasure to all who witnessed it.

The corner-stone of the Stone Memorial building, for colored girls' industries (the generous donation of Mrs. Stone, of Massachusetts), and the corner-stone of the Indian Girls' building, were also laid May 19. The Rev. Dr. Strieby, president of the corporation, delivered the address in the first, and Rev. Dr. Potter, of New York, in the latter of the ceremonies.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—It was with gladness of heart that a large number of its friends, white and black, from the city and from other States, gathered to lay the corner-stone of Livingstone Missionary Hall on Wednesday afternoon, May 26. Gen. Fisk presided most felicitously, and the address of Dr. Strieby was in every way happy and inspiring. It was a regular love feast, not simply because there was so much of the Methodist element in it, as represented by the General and his excellent lady, and Dr. McFerrin—"a rebel who fought on the last ten acres left for the rebellion to stand upon," and who overcame great obstacles to get out to the exercises, despite attractions in other directions, and made a delightful speech, full of good feeling—but because there was such a flowing together of hearts and good-will from all classes as represented on the occasion. Eight or ten shorter speeches followed, one of which was by the city's treasurer, who came to represent the Historical Society. There was a poem written for the occasion by Professor Spence, and read by one of the pupils.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—On the afternoon of Commencement Day, May 31, the interesting ceremony of laying the foundation of "Strieby Hall," the new boys' dormitory, was followed by a procession to the chapel, where the annual address was given by Dr. Strieby. This was a stirring presentation of the reason why the American Missionary Association is to-day in the field of Southern Freedmen education, and of exactly what it is aiming to do for the colored race. It was shown how this Association was pioneer in the work, and how, gradually, the most prominent and cultured of Southern gentlemen have come to regard the higher education of the race as possible, and, now, as a necessity to the prosperity and the material advancement of the region.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—The corner-stone of the new dormitory which Mrs. Stone gives to Talladega College was laid May 13. Scripture was read and prayer offered by President De Forest. Professor Andrews, the veteran in American Missionary service in Alabama, laid the stone and gave an address, in which fitting reference was made to the good lady, who, having seen and known none of us here, with her queenly benevolence, has blessed not only this school of Christian learning, and others in the South, but indeed round the world. The students were well represented by Spencer Snell, a member both of the Normal and Theological departments; after which a very appreciative address was delivered by Captain N. A. McAfee, a citizen of the place and a friend of the college from its foundation.

The sun was very hot that afternoon, and the services, beginning at 5 o'clock, naturally ended in a collation, which was followed by off-hand speeches, the singing of old-time songs, and music from a brass band. Twelve years ago the corner-stone of Foster Hall was laid, in the days of turmoil, fear and violence. The first college building, now called Swayne Hall, was begun nearly thirty years ago; and it is a noteworthy fact that one who worked as a slave on that structure is the brick contractor of this, while his home to-day is the place owned by his master at the time of the surrender.

ATLANTA, GA.—A wing has been added to the girls' dormitory at Atlanta University, 60 × 40 ft., four stories high, containing twenty-four rooms, and a large study-hall. This was erected with money from the Stone fund.

STONE HALL, TALLADEGA COLLEGE, ALABAMA.

CLOSING EXERCISES.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VA.—Those whose good fortune it was to be present will "not willingly let die" the pleasant memories of the Commencement Day at Hampton, Va., on the 19th May, 1881. The illness of Mrs. Garfield, regretted by all, prevented the President's attendance. General Howard, Governor Holliday, of Virginia, Rev. Dr. Potter, and other representative men and women, contributed largely to the pleasures of the day. The full and most interesting report of Principal Armstrong to the corporation gave satisfactory evidence of the God-blest success and continuing usefulness of this noble enterprise.

A large and interested audience filled the chapel of Virginia Hall to its utmost capacity to hear the public addresses of six of the alumni. These performances were made in excellent taste, the elocution being exceptionally good, and the views were expressed in a style and range of thought above the average Commencement orator, and reflected honor on the Alma Mater and her sons and daughters.

In appropriate terms General Armstrong introduced General Howard, Dr. Potter and Governor Holliday, of Virginia, whose words of wit and wisdom were enthusiastically received. His Excellency, who is a Christian gentleman of enlarged views and a broad-gauge statesman, gave cordial welcome to the strangers within the gates of the Old Dominion, and in fitting words of sincere and merited commendation approved and indorsed all that had been done and so well done at Hampton.

BEREA COLLEGE, BEREA, KY.—Berea College, Ky., is the only school in the South where white and colored students are found in nearly equal numbers. On Commencement days, large numbers of both classes, with many of the élite of the neighboring towns, gather at Berea. Another like assemblage probably never gathers in the United States from the beginning to the end of the year. Hours before the exercises begin the streets are thronged with those who have come from long distances to be at the great gathering. They come of all ages and in every variety of costume, on foot and with every sort of vehicle, but mainly on horseback—on the finest steeds Kentucky raises, on plough horses and mules and ponies of all sorts and sizes, riding single and double, and occasionally with a child or two between. The exercises are held in a large, open tabernacle, made for summer use, and seating about 3,000 persons. This is in the beautiful college grove, containing twenty acres, and in which are all the college buildings except the Ladies' Hall. The building was delightfully decorated with mottoes and banners, with plants and flowers and miniature fountains. The music was by the college band and the Harmonia Society, and showed that the daughters of Jupiter and Mnemosyne delighted to have their abode in those sylvan shades. The orations and essays were of real merit. The speakers, for the most part, left the impression upon the audience that they had something to say, and so said it, and were not going through a performance. There were three graduates from the college department, young men who will leave their mark behind them wherever they go.

Not the least interesting part of the day's proceedings was the "basket dinner" on the college campus. The people of the South know how to get the most exquisite enjoyment out of an open-air entertainment. In the afternoon an interesting statement of the condition and work of Berea College was made by President Fairchild, and brief addresses were given by several other gentlemen. That made by a colored man, born a slave, was of great force and power. A minister born and brought up in Kentucky showed the nature of the Northern spite against the South in founding and endowing such a college as Berea.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—No one can properly appreciate or understand Fisk University who does not take into account the model school whose unique anniversary exercises occurred on Thursday, May 19, preceding those of the University proper. The school is under the management of Miss Irene Gilbert, who is assisted by students from the Normal Department. A recent graduate from Williston Seminary and of the Sheffield Scientific School, with whom I visited this school one day when it was not on exhibition, and examined the children's work in map drawing, declared that he had never seen any work of the kind that compared with it. The Baccalaureate sermon of President Cravath on Sunday afternoon, from Heb. xi. 27, "For he endured as seeing Him who is invisible," was able and timely.

Space cannot be given for even a full programme of the exercises, which filled to the full Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday; examinations in the mornings until 1 p. m., and exhibitions in the evenings by the Normal School, the Literary Society and the College Preparatory Class; and it would be exceedingly commonplace to say, what simple truth demands should be said, that they were all excellent. One of the visitors said at the close of the Normal School exhibition on Monday, that he did not expect to hear anything better even from the graduating class; but on Thursday candidly admitted his mistake, as there was just such advance as there ought to have been to mark the advanced grade of the pupils.

The address from Rev. C. H. Daniels, of Cincinnati, which followed the graduating addresses of the class, was able and timely. His theme was "The dignity and value of the individual man."

The diplomas were presented by Gen. Fisk in a brief address full of pathos and good sense, with happy allusions in each case to the theme of the recipient's address. After this came the Alumni dinner, plain and substantial, and the speeches following, which were fully up to those of older and more pretentious societies.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, TALLADEGA, ALA.—The sermon before the graduating class was preached by Pres. H. S. De Forest. On Monday, June 13, the examination began. This Institution is fortunate in having an excellent primary school in the building. It is a constant object lesson to the little army of teachers who go out every summer to teach just such children, and also dignifies primary work, which, in spite of Frœbel, Pestalozzi and the truly wise and good everywhere, is too often considered of minor importance.

The normal work and classes in natural science are in charge of a graduate lately from Beloit College and Whitewater Normal School. The classical department is in charge of an Olivet graduate, whose three years here have proved him invaluable. A most interesting acquisition to the corps of teachers is a scientific farmer, a graduate of Massachusetts Agricultural College. To enjoy the delicious vegetables from his garden is enough to convert a sceptic in scientific agriculture. It really looks as though, under his skill, these unsightly acres of red clay were, in time, to blossom as the rose.

We were entertained, Monday evening, by prize speaking and essay reading; Tuesday evening, by an interesting account of Mr. Ladd's African experience, in place of the expected address by Dr. Willcox; Wednesday evening, by the ordination of two candidates; Thursday evening, by a musical concert.

Thursday was graduating day, and as the class was much smaller than usual, five young men from the preparatory department gave orations. They were all excellent in matter and delivery. What has pleased me here more than anything else, however, is the excellent spirit manifested by the students in the family. There is, especially among the young men, an earnestness of purpose shown that is simply grand. Possibly it is, in part, owing to the fact that so many are from the country, schooled by hard work, away from the follies of city life. At family devotions, the last morning before the school separated, one of the graduates led us in prayer. I cannot think that the thought and tones of that prayer will ever leave me. The ear of the Omnipotent must have heard those pathetic pleadings that his fellow-students might be sustained by the Everlasting Arms as they took up their heavy burdens, often in the midst of terrible temptations.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.—The Baccalaureate sermon was preached June 12, by the college pastor, Rev. Cyrus W. Francis, from 1st Tim. i. 19. Three days of public examinations followed, each day's session being concluded by an exercise in music and light gymnastics. On the last day there was a display of what our girls have learned in the way of bread-making. The walls of the front hall and one of the stairways were covered with specimens of the students' drawing and map-making, indicating great progress in this department during the year. The normal work also has been making a decided advance. No exercise of the examination days riveted the attention of our friends more firmly than the exercise in teaching one of the grammar-school grades by a member of the senior normal class, with following criticisms from the other members of the class.

One of the most valuable exercises of our winter term this year was a three days' Teachers' Institute, in which all the teachers and scholars participated, and in which much light was thrown upon the improved methods of teaching, now attracting such wide attention. A further impetus was given to thought and effort in this direction by the visit of our friend, the Rev. A. D. Mayo, co-editor of the Journal of Education, whose four lectures and one sermon before our students, and whose private talk and counsel with our teachers on certain phases of our work, will not soon be forgotten.

A very large audience, as usual, packed the Friendship Baptist Church on Thursday, to listen to the essays of eleven of the graduating class, and to the address of the invited orator of the day. Five young men and twelve young women received the diplomas of the school. The Commencement address was delivered by Rev. Atticus G. Haygood, D.D., President of Emory College at Oxford, in this State.

The Alumni meeting, Thursday afternoon, brought together a goodly number of the graduates of former years. The spirit of the remarks made at this gathering gives, every year, an increasing assurance of the stability and self-propagating character of the work in which we are engaged.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—We have had 328 names upon our rolls, with a large average attendance. There has been a marked advance in scholarship. The examinations showed thoroughness of instruction, and aptness in learning and retaining what was taught.

In the afternoon of Commencement Day, our University chapel was filled with an intelligent and interested audience. The exercises, consisting of orations, compositions and recitations, were entirely by the undergraduates. It furnished a pleasant entertainment to the citizens, and identified the entire school with Commencement Day.

At night Central Church was packed in every part, pews, aisles, vestibule and gallery, with an eager, expectant audience, comprising the best element of the colored population of New Orleans. Such an assembly was never gathered in Central Church before. The audience itself was an inspiration and showed a deep and intelligent interest in the holy cause represented. A goodly number of our white friends were present, and were among the most enthusiastic in their congratulations. Rev. H. M. Smith, D.D., editor of the South-Western Presbyterian, offered the prayer, in which he thanked God for the existence of Straight University and the good it had done. The five young men composing the senior class, who made their salutations to the audience, represented three of the Southern States, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. Their orations were well written and well delivered. One of the orations was solicited for publication by two of the New Orleans papers represented in the audience by their editors. The music, both in the afternoon and evening, was exceptionally fine, and so pronounced by all. In was entirely under the direction of Professor J. M. McPherron, and reflected great credit upon his method and excellence of instruction.

TOUGALOO UNIV., TOUGALOO, MISS.—The annual examinations in this institution began on Thursday, May 26, continuing Friday and also Monday forenoon. Many friends of students were present from various parts of the State.

On Monday evening the Preparatory School Exhibition, under the management of the teachers of the Primary and Preparatory departments, was held in the chapel, presenting to a crowded audience a varied programme, made up of recitations, declamations, songs, etc. A prominent feature of this exhibition was a strong and well-appreciated temperance dialogue.

It was a manifest disappointment to all when Tuesday dawned cloudy and dark, with every prospect of a rainy time. The exercises of the day were accordingly held in the barn, instead of the grove, for which all arrangements had been made. The forenoon was taken up with the Commencement exercises of the Normal department. The orations and essays were presented by members of the Middle and Junior classes, with the single exception of an oration by the one graduate from the Normal course. As was said on that day, what the graduating class lacked in quantity was well made up in quality. We expect a very high order of work and Christian influence from Henry Lanier.

TILLOTSON INSTITUTE, AUSTIN, TEXAS.—Tillotson Institute is situated just outside the limits of the city of Austin, Texas, upon a fine elevation. It is a large brick building with stone trimmings, 104 feet in length, 42 feet in depth, and five stories high. It has a dining hall, a beautiful and airy school-room about 37×48; three large recitation rooms, with other smaller ones, which are probably the most complete in their appointment of blackboards, maps and desks of any in the State. (See illustration on page 67.)

Owing to delays in completing the building, the opening of the school was deferred from October, 1880, till January 17, 1881. It closed with an attendance of one hundred and seven pupils. The boys and girls in the careful and prolonged examinations to which they were subjected displayed an accuracy of information and a fulness of understanding highly commendable. The examination in English grammar, including analysis and parsing, was excellent, as was that also in geography. The result of the examination in arithmetic, algebra and Latin showed an uncommon proficiency on the part of the students, considering the fact that they have been at this school and under this training scarcely more than six months.

AVERY INSTITUTE, CHARLESTON, S. C.—The school year at Avery Institute closed Thursday, June 30, the last three days being given to public exercises. Tuesday was "examination day." The bright, eager eyes, the earnest faces, the neat, appropriate style of dress, and the respectful scholar-like behavior of the students, even the tiniest ones, are a strong contrast to the appearance of the street children. Every scholar was given a chance, as far as possible, to show what he had done in every study he had pursued; and, to take the words of those who visited the different classes, the result was satisfactory. Wednesday was "children's day," when the little ones in the lower rooms gave the entertainment, and the older scholars attended as guests, with other friends of the small entertainers. The affair was very child-like and pretty. The recitations and dialogues were such as the children could appreciate; the songs bright, airy little things; and the singing a half-shy dainty rippling of very sweet music. On Thursday was the Anniversary. The course of study having been extended one year, there was no graduating class. The exercises consisted of essays by members of the upper classes, the recitation of a few poems, one or two dialogues, and music. The music was very good, the dialogues natural, the recitations well chosen and well spoken; but the most interesting part of this entertainment was the essays. Three prizes had been offered, and three gentlemen of the city acted as judges, to decide on the merits of the different essays. All were called good, and with reason. In the evening of this same day the Normal exhibition was held. Every part of the programme was well executed.

LEWIS HIGH SCHOOL, MACON, GA.—The closing examinations occupied nearly two days, May 31 and June 1. The attendance of parents and other visitors was larger than at any previous occasion for some years past, showing perhaps an increasing interest in educational matters. Most of the older scholars (about fifteen of them) had left previously to teach country schools; but the classes which were examined acquitted themselves remarkably well. The questioning by the teachers threw them upon their own resources, and proved the excellent instruction they have had. The noticeable quickness and readiness of answer, and the mastery of each branch of study, showed that they have been trained to think for themselves, and not merely to learn by rote.

One thing highly commended by all the visitors, and an important feature of the instruction, was the constant use of writing. The scholars spell out their lessons by writing on slate or blackboard. They frequently prepare written compositions or reviews of lessons in grammar and geography, and in many ways are taught to express in written characters the thoughts drawn from their studies.

The literary exercises were held in the church at 4 p. m., June 1, in the presence of a large and attentive audience. The school, marching in to organ music, were massed together upon the pulpit platform, one tier above another, making a very striking and memorable group. They sang beautifully the song "Our Motto," in which the chorus of each verse was "Be faithful, firm and true." Then repeating together the Twenty-Third Psalm, and chanting the Lord's Prayer, they took their seats in the body of the church, and the literary programme went on. The reading of selections and compositions, the declamations and music, were all well rendered. During the year there have been 162 pupils enrolled.

BEACH INSTITUTE, SAVANNAH, GA.—The year has been one of interest and profit, although of trial, on account of severe and, in some cases, protracted sickness on the part of nearly all the workers in this field. The school has prospered, and the progress made by some of the pupils has been very marked. Differing degrees of attainment, as well as of ability to express their knowledge, were clearly shown in the examinations. The closing oratorical exercises in the presence of an audience which crowded the chapel were interesting in every particular. Without any special expenditure of time and strength in preparing for these, the most creditable results were shown. There was almost no prompting. The original productions, chiefly having relation to some country and the people inhabiting it, were well conceived and well expressed.

BYRON, GA.—I recently attended the closing exercises of Rev. P. W. Young's school at Byron. People in these country places are slow in getting together, at night especially. After working hard all day in the fields (it was just the busiest "cotton-cropping" time) they have to go home, get their suppers, dress up in their best clothes, and then go, perhaps, three or four miles. So it was half-past ten o'clock before the audience arrived in sufficient numbers; but finally the curtain was drawn and the exercises began. Declamations, readings, dialogues and music were given by the school, with much credit to themselves and their teachers. It was after midnight when the exercises closed, and then your reporter was called on for a speech, which at that hour of the night (or rather morning) turned out to have one merit—that of brevity. A young neighboring teacher also made a speech, and the session was closed.

Next morning came off the examination of the classes, which showed commendable progress and encouraging attention to the studies. A picnic dinner was spread in the church, as the rain prevented its service in the beautiful grove surrounding. After bountifully satisfying the inner man, and a little more speech-making, we returned home well pleased.

EMERSON INSTITUTE, MOBILE, ALA.—Two days were given to the final written examinations, and in some of the departments three days were so used. Thursday was devoted to oral examinations. About thirty visitors favored us, among them Rev. Dr. Burgett, whose name is becoming familiar to your readers as one that appreciates this work of the Association; another, the Rev. W. G. Strong, pastor of the largest colored church in the State.

Eight hundred people crowded the Third Baptist Church to witness the closing exhibition. Although the aisles were filled with people standing, down to the middle of the house, many turned away from the door. Dr. Burgett offered the opening prayer, and Rev. Mr. Strong pronounced the benediction. All the exercises that came between astonished many, especially the white people present, and gave pleasure to all until the weariness of standing made many persons about the door restless and unduly communicative. The popular judgment is that much progress has been made during the year.

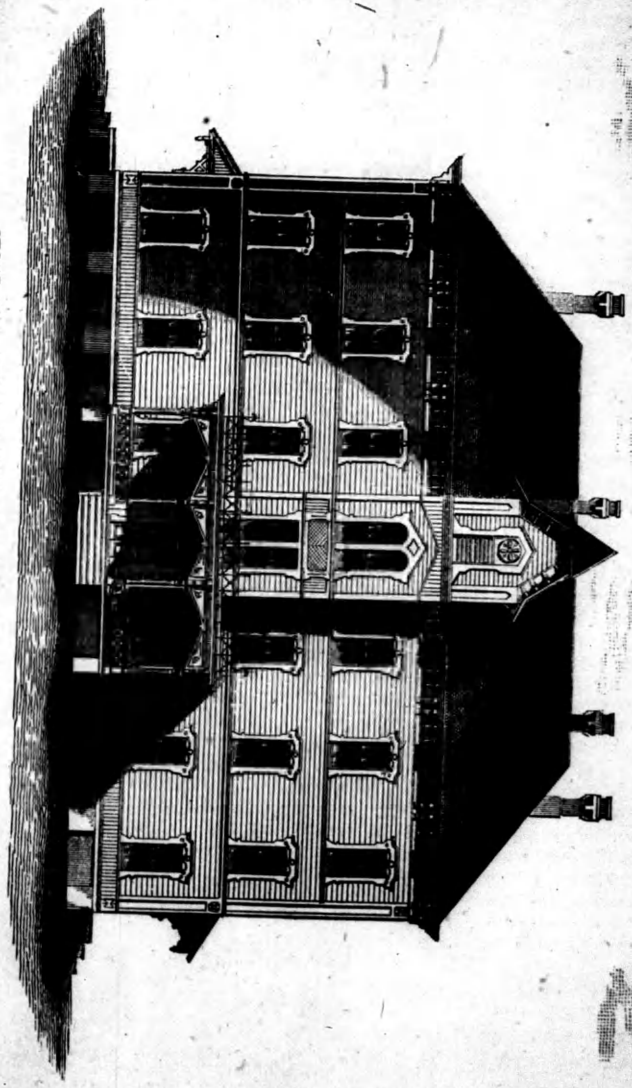
SWAYNE SCHOOL, MONTGOMERY, ALA.—On the principle that what is good for a part is good also for all, there was no favoritism shown in the assignment of parts in the closing exercises. All, "from the least to the greatest," were given a speech. With more than three hundred to take part, it will readily appear that the Commencement Exercises of Swayne College (as the patrons call it), could not all be crowded into a single day. Consequently, in order that a good thing might last a good while, it was arranged to devote three evenings to the speaking. The Congregational Church proving too small on the first night, the exhibition was held the second and third nights in the M. E. Zion Church, with an audience on the last night, which, admitting all members of the school free, and charging an admittance fee of a nickel for adults, netted more than seventeen dollars. These exercises, consisting of declamations, dialogues, solos, choruses, etc., were creditable entertainments, and gave evident satisfaction to the members of the City Board of Education and other white visitors in attendance, as well as to the patrons of the school.

Monday and Tuesday, May 30 and 31, were occupied with the examinations of the several departments. These were entered into by the pupils with a good deal of genuine enthusiasm, and evidenced to the goodly number of visitors present that the efforts in "drill," on the part of the teachers had not been in vain. The "Swayne" is doing good work.

LE MOYNE INSTITUTE, MEMPHIS, TENN.—The year has been one, on many accounts, unusually successful and satisfactory. Never before have we known our pupils so susceptible to all good influences and so ready to receive instruction and guidance from their teachers. In way of school work we have never before secured so satisfactory results as this year has shown. Our attendance has been more constant, and consequently our work more thorough. A class of eight—five young men and three young ladies—this year complete the course of study, and go out to work at teaching in three different States, one taking a prominent place in the schools at Fort Smith, Ark.

INDUSTRIAL WORK.

ATLANTA, GA.—The girls in the Senior Normal Class are taught cooking. A separate kitchen and dining-room have been provided for them. Meals are prepared for teachers, and some member of the class always sits at the head of the table to oversee and manage. Specimens of their cooking were sent to the State Board of Examiners, and tested and tasted by them with much pleasure.



MEMPHIS, TENN.—Our industrial work has developed to our entire satisfaction, and by all our patrons and friends is now regarded as a very important and valuable feature of the school. A class of girls has had careful instruction, with actual practice in the experimental kitchen, in the nature, relative values and healthful methods of cooking different articles of food, including vegetables, meats, breads, pastry, etc., etc. Classes in needlework, knitting, use of sewing machines, etc., have had daily lessons and practice.

We are confident that instruction of this nature can be given in connection with a day-school, without interfering with regular school work, and at slight expense and small increase of teaching force. I am anxious to have a work-shop fitted up where the boys and young men shall receive instruction in wood-working and the ordinary use of tools for that purpose. Instruction will also be given to a class in the care of the sick. It is a fact that a great majority of our pupils must continue in very humble positions and circumstances: our aim must be to fit them to fill well the lots that must fall to them in life; and whatever positions they may fill, they must know how to build up, and even adorn, homes that shall be very different from those their parents have known.

MACON, GA.—Mrs. Elizabeth Lathrop, wife of the Macon missionary, has been doing an important work in the industrial line among the girls during the year. Laboring simply as minister's wife, she has accomplished a good deal of missionary work, not the least important of which has been the sewing school. Beginning last December with twelve pupils, the number increased to 133 on the roll, with an average weekly attendance of 55. Northern friends have contributed thread, needles and other material, and during the seven months the class have made, under the instruction of Mrs. Lathrop, three hundred and six garments (aprons, dresses, handkerchiefs and under clothing), besides twenty-six patch-work quilts, all but three of these completely finished. On June 4 there was an exhibition of these articles at the Lewis High School, an astonishment to all who beheld. The mothers sat there with glad, grateful tears rolling down their cheeks, at the thought of the benefits received in this manner. Speeches of eulogistic gratitude were made by the colored Methodist preachers, and the day closed with the distribution of the garments to the girls who had made them.

SOUTHERN APPRECIATION.

the races, and adds: "I am glad to say negroes are becoming more industrious and thrifty."

He refers, with satisfaction, to their industrial fairs held at Raleigh, and to the encouragement shown them by the whites, and urges it as an imperative duty that full and equal justice shall be done the blacks, and that they shall not be left to work out their destiny unaided. He favors greater provision for public schools, and recommends that the school-tax shall be 2.5 mills on the dollar.

Hon. Joseph E. Brown, of Georgia, who has recently been elected United States Senator, has for a long time manifested an interest in our work. On the night before his election, in an address to the Legislature, he expressed his appreciation of the importance of education in the following words:

"I have the educational question very much at heart. * * * We must also educate the colored race, and they ought to be educated for the benefit of the Union and by the friends of the Union. I would devote the proceeds of the public lands to this purpose on a basis of illiteracy. The colored people are citizens and we must do them justice. Let us give them every legal right. Social rights will take care of themselves."

ATLANTA, GA.—The report of the Visiting Committee, appointed by the Governor of the State, has just been published. It furnishes renewed evidence of the growing favor which our work is meeting with among the people of Georgia. The remarks made to the school on the last day of the examinations, by Rev. Mr. Wilkes, the chairman of the sub-committee, who prepared this report, were full of good sense and kindly feeling. The speaker told of his life-long service as a teacher, and how it had begun with the instruction of a little colored boy, his father's slave, in the safe seclusion of the corn-crib, in the days when such teaching was a criminal offense. None who heard him could doubt the entire sincerity of his words of sympathy and encouragement.

EXTRACT FROM AN EDITORIAL FROM THE American, THE ABLEST AND MOST INFLUENTIAL PAPER IN TENNESSEE.—"In the proceedings at the Fisk University, yesterday, another step forward was taken in the way of providing material means for that moral and intellectual growth which is going on silently as a great institution grows and roots itself firmly in the society around it. Universities are not created in a day, nor at all by money, although money is a necessary agency. They grow. The Fisk is passing through with comparatively the early stages of growth, when we compare it with the ideal which finds place in the dreams of its enthusiastic laborers—dreams which enfold the future result. We doubt if the public, although it lend a hearty sympathy and approval, and expect good to flow from it, begins yet to realize the work this institution is to perform. We doubt if there is such appreciation anywhere existent or possible except in the dreams of its enthusiastic laborers. These in some way comprehend its future. * * * It has a great and widening field, which it is worthily filling, and in the labor of regeneration of a race no agency will have a higher or indeed so high a place as this conservative school, which is filling so difficult a position."

HAMPTON, VA.—By a Virginian.—The Hampton Institute is becoming more known and appreciated in Virginia and the neighboring States. Its alumni are occupying positions of practical usefulness, and discharge the high duties of good citizens well and faithfully. Virginians believe that Principal Armstrong is emphatically the right man in the right place, and that, with General Marshall, Miss Mackie and others on his staff, he will push forward the good work in which they are engaged, and will continue to merit and receive the grateful appreciation of the people of the commonwealth. Above all, they invoke that blessing of God in the future which has been so signally manifested in the past.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—Col. Power, who with other gentlemen from Jackson had been present through Commencement day to witness the exercises, was called upon to speak. He alluded to the exercises of the forenoon with appreciation of the orations and essays presented, referring to one of the former as "eloquent," and added a glowing word of tribute to the sweet music rendered by the students. He assured all present that the white people of the State are now in hearty sympathy with the work of the education of the colored race. Immediately after the war, he frankly admitted, the people were not attracted by the idea, but now a better opinion prevails, and they see that education must be given to all, white and black.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY.—Many kind words of appreciation and pleasure were spoken by the visitors and trustees. One of our merchants, who attended Professor Jewett's examination of the class in botany, said: "What would the planters up in Ouchita Parish say if they should happen in here now and hear a 'nigger' analyzing a morning glory?"

LEWIS HIGH SCHOOL.—Several leading white citizens attended the examination exercises, and expressed themselves as much pleased. Among them were Professor Williams, principal of the State Asylum for the Blind, located here, a firm friend of negro education; and Professor Link, a professional teacher of many years' experience, who said, significantly, in private: "I attend all the white schools, and I don't see any difference"—which is quite an admission for a native Southerner. There was also Rev. J. W. Burke, a leading Methodist Episcopal clergyman, publisher and assistant editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, well known as an excellent Christian man and a true friend of the negro.

LE MOYNE INSTITUTE.—We have for the entire year had the active sympathy and hearty encouragement of the best people of the city. General Humes, a very prominent lawyer and formerly a major-general in the Confederate army, giving the annual address, and the daily papers making full reports of lectures, graduating exercises, etc.

RELIGIOUS CHARACTER OF SCHOOLS.

HAMPTON, VA.—Twelve students united with the church on the 1st Sabbath of January, nearly all of them on profession of faith. Seven of these were Dakota Indians. It was a beautiful sight.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A deep religious interest has obtained among the students in Jubilee Hall. It began soon after the opening of the fall term. New students, especially, seemed to be deeply interested in their own spiritual welfare, and when the opportunity presented itself, offered themselves for prayers.

The week set apart by the International College Y. M. C. A. for prayer was observed by the members of the association in the Institution in a half-hour prayer-meeting each evening. During the week several persons were hopefully converted.

The day of prayer for colleges was a good one. Several of the students are doing good work among their people in this vicinity, preaching where there is opportunity and holding prayer-meetings in private houses, so far as they can without interference with their studies, and with good effect both upon the people and upon themselves as looking forward to their future work.

ATLANTA, GA.—Since the day of prayer for colleges on the last Thursday of January, we have had a very marked and general interest in religious things. Nearly every one in the family, numbering about two hundred students, who was not already a follower of Christ, has been affected and confessed an interest in the subject, and not many have drawn back thus far. About sixty have attended inquiry meetings, and we hope a large proportion of them will hold on their way. We have held meetings every night for five weeks. Regular school work has not been broken in upon to any great extent, and there has been no tendency toward undue excitement; but a deep and solemn attention to the claims of God has characterized the experience of most.

We cannot tell how many have become decided Christians, certainly more than twenty, and perhaps twice that will upon trial be found steadfast. Some have already gone away to distant places to open schools, and will, we trust, carry the light with them, and others will go soon. If they had not been reached just at this time we should probably never have had opportunity to lead them again.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—Of the thirty girls boarding at Foster Hall, all are Christians, as are the forty boys, with two or three exceptions. Very few of those who come under our Christian influences so far as to be members of our family and Sabbath-school fail to indulge a hope in Christ. We had meetings every night for three weeks. So far from interfering with regular school duties these meetings quickened to highest endeavor in study, and led to the most careful and conscientious use of time. All the meetings have been unusually quiet; not a case of noisy demonstration, no great "sights," no "dreams," but a thoughtful surrender to Christ, very much, I think, as in the revival meetings I have been accustomed to all my life.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Our evening prayer meetings, held for the past week each day immediately after school, are being greatly blessed. One of the students, a young man, professed Christ three days ago; the earnestness since then has deepened. The meetings of yesterday and the day before were especially blessed, and this morning two promising girls of the school rose directly after devotions, and before the entire school gave most earnest and clear testimony to Christ as their Saviour. In this afternoon's meeting, to which nearly the entire school remained, two smaller girls and two prominent young men professed, with rejoicing. The entire school seems moved; many are seeking most earnestly.

Later.—During the year past, the school has experienced a most precious revival, over forty of our young people professing conversion. In our closing prayer meeting for the year, it was found that there were but about a dozen students of the Normal department who had not accepted the Saviour.

STUDENT-TEACHING.

ATLANTA, GA.—It is astonishing how rapidly and widely the work of Atlanta University is coming to be appreciated. Among the applications for teachers which have lately been received have been several from county school commissioners, who say, in substance, "The teachers we have met with from your Institution are of such a quality that we desire now to supply all our schools from the same source."

Every pupil who was competent and desired a situation in the public schools obtained one, and many were taken who had made but little progress in studies, and after all were gone more than a score of applications were made for teachers to be sent from here, which could not be met from any source, and the schools were disbanded.

THE CLASS OF '80, FISK UNIVERSITY.—Ernest H. Anderson has been elected Principal of the State Normal School for the training of colored teachers, located near Hempstead, Texas. This is the most important position open to a colored teacher in the State. It gives a large field of usefulness for which Mr. Anderson is well qualified. Laurine C. Anderson is in charge of a school in Chapel Hill, Texas. Joseph Anderson is at the head of a school in Leesburg, Camp County, Texas. J. J. Durham is studying medicine at the Meharry Medical College, Nashville. J. E. Porter is teaching in one of the public schools of Jeffersonville, Ind. R. P. Neal is in charge of the school at Humboldt, Tenn.

STATISTICS OF TEACHING BY STUDENTS NOW IN FISK UNIVERSITY.—From reports carefully made out by students now in attendance on Fisk University the following facts are ascertained:

Ninety have at some time been engaged in school teaching. Of these, sixty-two are members of the collegiate department and twenty-eight of the normal department. The time taught in all, including the past year, is 1,630 months, or reduced to school years of nine months each, 161 1-9 years.

It is found that during the year 1880, seventy-two have taught school, the sum of the months being 309. This reduced to school years of nine months each, gives 34⅓ years.

The sum total of salaries earned in 1880 is $9,129. From this must be subtracted for cost of board and travel, $3,236, leaving a net gain of $5,893.

The entire number of pupils taught during the year is 5,641, and the sum of average daily attendance is 3,717.

Of the seventy-two who taught these schools sixty-seven did labor in Sunday-schools, forty-four as teachers, seven as superintendents and sixteen as both teachers and superintendents. The total attendance on these Sunday-schools was 3,963. Besides this, four did labor in preaching, twelve held prayer-meetings and one held Bible readings. The number of conversions reported is 151. It is found that eighty per cent. of the students in the collegiate department have taught.

During the last year, when a less number of students than usual were engaged in teaching, they had under their training an army of between five and six thousand children, and performed the labor of more than the ordinary lifetime of a man; and, including former years, they have done the work of more than a hundred and sixty years. According to estimates derived from reports given by former students not now in connection with the University, the number of pupils taught annually by them cannot be far from 10,000, making a total, with those before mentioned, of more than 15,000.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENTS.

HOWARD UNIVERSITY, WASHINGTON, D. C.—Commencement exercises of the Theological Department of Howard University were held in the Memorial Lutheran church, Fourteenth street and Vermont avenue, Washington, D. C., Friday evening, May 6, 1881, at 7:45 o'clock. A large audience of white and colored friends was present, including various U. S. senators and other persons of influence. The addresses were of a creditable character, and gave promise of future usefulnesss. The following persons, connected with the Congregational, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian denominations, having pursued studies in the Theological Department, now leave the University to engage in the work of the ministry in their respective churches: George V. Clark, Atlanta, Ga.; Thomas H. Datcher, Washington, D. C.; Jarrett E. Edwards, Columbia, S. C.; John H. T. Gray, Prince George's County, Md.; Thomas H. Jones, Baltimore, Md.; William A. Shannon, Washington, D. C.; Emory W. Williams, Prince George's County, Md.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—The joy and pride of this institution is its theological department, and well it may be. Its class of eleven were examined two hours of one of their hot days, and nobody seemed weary. The clear, simple topics, recited in such an interesting, lucid style, tolerated no hovering fog, that I had supposed always, more or less, mystified a recitation in systematic theology. The accuracy of their knowledge in Bible history, too, was wonderful. None but a born teacher could have secured such results from a class of that grade of scholarship. Classes in geometry and rhetoric told unmistakably of thorough work.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—While the Theological department has been in existence for eleven years, we have never graduated a student until this year. The theological and literary attainments of the students would never have justified us in doing it. It is little less than a crime to confer an unmerited degree upon a young man. It would not only be a fraud, but a source of constant embarrassment to him. This year we had as a student Mr. A. E. P. Albert, who studied some time at Atlanta University, and who joined our senior class of the University and the Theological school in October. He is a regularly ordained minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, a young man of culture and ability. On Sunday night he delivered his address, taking as his subject, "Like Priest, Like People." It was able, impressive and appropriate for the time and the people. The President followed with a plea for an "Educated Ministry;" and then the degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon Mr. Albert.

NEW CHURCHES AND BUILDINGS.

CHURCHES ORGANIZED IN 1881.—Lincoln Memorial, Washington, D. C.; Plymouth Church, Louisville, Ky.; First Congregational Church, Little Rock, Ark.; Little Zion, Thibodeaux P. O., La.; St. Rock, Houma P. O., La.

CHURCH BUILDINGS ERECTED IN 1880-81.—Christ's Church, Wilmington, N. C.; Promised Land Church, Lassiter's Mills, N. C.; First Congregational Church, Little Rock, Ark.; St. John's Church, Peteance, La.

CHURCH BUILDINGS IN PROCESS OF ERECTION.—Caledonia, Miss.; Luling, Tex.; Frausse Point, La.

PARSONAGES BUILT.—Florence, Ala.; Flatonia, Tex.

PRESIDENTS' HOUSES BUILT.—Tougaloo, Miss.; Talladega, Ala.

FLORENCE, ALA.—Rev. W. H. Ash, with aid from this Association, has put up a neat parsonage by the side of the new and tasteful church edifice.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Lincoln Mission of this city has blossomed into the Lincoln Memorial Church, which was organized by council on the 10th of January, with Rev. S. P. Smith installed at the same time as pastor. The sermon was preached by Dr. Roy, Field Superintendent, and the other parts were by Dr. Patton, Dr. Chickering, Dr. Rankin, Rev. Mr. Grimke, of the Colored Presbyterian church, Rev. T. J. Holmes, of Baltimore, and Prof. Fairfield.

CYPRESS SLASH, LIBERTY CO., GA.—The Cypress Slash church was dedicated the 10th of April. An audience of 150 was comfortably seated in the new church. A brief sketch of the history and formation of the church was given, going back to the time when the first public meeting was held in the public road. The church is now in a growing condition, and the church building is completed except the ceiling.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—On the 28th of February, after preaching on the Sabbath previous, in the "Sons of Ham" Hall, the Superintendent organized the First Congregational Church of that Capital and of the State, with 46 members and ten more educated and influential persons ready to come, and "more to follow." On the Sabbath, April 24, by a Council, Rev. B. F. Foster was ordained as pastor of this new church, which has now reached a membership of 69, and which has purchased a lot for $400, half of which has already been paid. Superintendent Roy, Rev. J. W. Roberts, of Paris, Texas, and Rev. L. A. Roberts, of Memphis, led in the services of the sermon, charge, right hand and address. It was a great day for the new enterprise.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—The new meeting-house for the First Congregational Church of Wilmington, in connection with the work of the A. M. A., was dedicated on the evening of March 12. Something like a year ago, a gentleman who signed himself "Howard," and whose real name was only known at the Boston office, gave $3,000 to build the house, afterward adding $600 more. The house will seat 450 people, is 72 feet in length by 36 in width, and measures 22 feet in the clear. It has a corner tower rising 100 feet from the street below, and is the highest object in the city, and the first seen on approaching the city from the Sound. The brick is of a deep red, and, though not pressed, looks as if it were. The proportions of the building could not well be more perfect or more pleasing to the eye. Both the local press and the people speak of it as an ornament to the city, and express surprise that it could have been built for a sum less than eight or ten thousand dollars.

The services of dedication occurred in the following order: 1. Anthem by the choir. 2. Prayer, by Rev. Mr. Dodge. 3. Reading of the Scriptures, by Rev. Dr. Taylor, of the First Baptist (white) church of the city. 4. Singing. 5. Sermon, by Rev. C. L. Woodworth, from Luke xiv. 23. 6. Dedicatory prayer, by Rev. Dr. Wilson, of the First Presbyterian church (white). After the dedication proper, "Howard," who turns out to be the Hon. James J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, Mass., was introduced as the giver of the house. In an address full of feeling and of good sense he offered the salutations and the fellowship of the northern Congregational churches. Drs. Wilson and Taylor followed with words of kindly greeting and assurances of sympathy and co-operation from their respective churches. The house was entirely filled, and among the audience were forty or fifty of the best white citizens of the city, all of whom showed interest and some of whom expressed warm sympathy.

REVIVALS AND RELIGIOUS INTEREST.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Lincoln Memorial Church was organized the 10th of last January with eleven members. In April the Lord poured out a special blessing upon it, the result of which was eight converts. The church has doubled its membership since its organization.

HAMPTON, VA.—There have been admitted to church membership in Bethesda Chapel during the year 31 persons—28 on profession of their faith and three by letter. Of these, 15 were Indians, one white, and the remainder colored students. With the growth of the school the congregation at the chapel has so increased as to make it necessary to add another wing to the building.

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—We have been highly blessed by the Lord this year in our church work, both temporal and spiritual. In April we enjoyed a revival season, during which seven persons were converted to Christ, five of whom have united with our church.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ATLANTA, GA.—March 13 was a memorable Sabbath, 28 uniting by profession and two by letter. In April, seven joined by profession, and in May four more by profession and three by letter, making an addition of 44 in the three months.

ATLANTA UNIV. CHURCH.—The Church of Christ in Atlanta University now numbers 88 members, having received larger accessions during the past year than in any other year of its history, 22 having joined, all save two upon profession of faith. A very gracious revival prevailed for the last five months of the school year, during which time more than 50 persons were converted, several more of whom will unite with this church after longer experience, and the rest with churches at their homes. It was a delightful and precious work, affecting nearly every member in the school, quickening the religious life of former members, and gathering in a harvest week by week up to the close of the year.

CYPRESS SLASH, GA.—We have a church of sixty members, and our work is growing in favor both with white and colored; five have recently been added by profession.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—Twenty-three connected themselves with our College Church yesterday, March 6, twenty-two of them by confession, and one by letter; fruits of a revival scarcely yet ended. All but two of them are children or young people. Twenty-one are members of the Sabbath-school and of the College. Twelve are children of church members, now a long time with us. Two are wives for whom faithful and godly husbands had hoped and prayed, lo! these many years; there had been the secret hope but never before the open confession.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—With our church the past year has been one of more than ordinary encouragement and blessing. Special meetings were held during the week of prayer and three weeks following. Twelve have united with the church, six by letter and six by profession.

SELMA, ALA.—This church observed the week of prayer with a good degree of interest, which was followed by a series of meetings continuing through the month of January. At the annual church meeting, the reports showed that 18 persons had been received on profession of faith during the year 1880.

CHILDERSBURG, ALA.—Revival work has been very encouraging. Most of the youth have been led to embrace religion in consequence of our meetings. Thirty have joined the church.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—There has been no special revival this year. Steady progress, however, has been made, resulting in frequent conversions. Eleven have been added to the church on profession of faith, and four by letter.

CENTRAL CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—During the past winter a revival of great power occurred in the church, resulting in 50 conversions. Crowds of young men attended constantly. Some of them were won for God—others were impressed—and with very many, let us hope and pray, the truth they heard and the scenes they witnessed will prove to be "bread cast upon the waters," to be gathered in some future day to the glory of God.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—The work here is in its very infancy; organized 27th of February, 1881, with 40 communicants. Since then 32 more have been received by recommendation or letter.

FISK UNIVERSITY CHURCH, NASHVILLE, TENN.—This is a University church, and the work done by it is so intimately connected with that done by the University that they cannot be separated. Its membership is now 171, and is composed largely of students. It was organized in 1868, and since that time no year has passed in the history of the University without from 12 to 70 conversions. During the past school year two powerful seasons of refreshing resulted in the conversion of 68 students. The additions to the church have been mostly on profession of faith, and have averaged more than 20 annually.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—The year has not passed without giving us tokens of God's special favor. The hopeful conversion of four persons, who are standing firm in the faith and doing good service in the church, and the renewed quickening of the whole church, are some happy results of the Holy Spirit's special presence.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—I can only speak of special interest awakened last fall and early winter, carried on mainly among the young people of the American Missionary Association School (Le Moyne Normal). Many of these pupils were also our Sunday-school scholars. Of perhaps 40 converted, six united with our church. Since Nov. 1, 1880, seven have united with this church on profession and nine by letter.

GOLIAD, TEXAS.—After a meeting of fifteen days we received five persons into the church on profession of faith, all from the Sunday-school, two of whom are teachers. After a few days' rest we opened a meeting with the church in Helena that continued eleven days. As a result we received seven members. These, too, were connected with the Sunday-school. In both meetings the interest continued till the close.

PRAYER MEETINGS.

HAMPTON, VA.—Two prayer meetings have been kept up by the colored students, one on the Sabbath and one on a week day evening, the attendance and interest being well sustained. The Indians have their own prayer meetings, where they take part in their own tongue. They manifest a most earnest desire to know the Bible, and spend much time in reading and studying it.

MARION, ALA.—Our large room is filled every Monday afternoon at the ladies' meeting, and all hearts are full; and the dark faces look beautiful to me, shining through smiles and tears, as we talk of the dear Saviour. The same room is filled to overflowing with young people and children Saturday afternoon.

The children and young people who were converted last spring hold out well, and form the principal part of our number at prayer meeting.

ATLANTA, GA.—It is refreshing to one's soul to get into a live prayer-meeting like ours last night. One good brother said, "This thing what you call Christianity is no small thing. It starts small, but it grows and grows and grows till it reaches out of this world into the land we call Heaven." Another faithful brother always prays much, and especially for our school, and in his remarks last evening gave as his opinion—"If 'twan't for what's ben done on this yere block this city would be ten times worser'n it is in ignorance 'n superstition. I hain't no chillun o' my own and I dunno much about dealin's with chillun, but I know dealin's with chillun ain't no funny thing." This evidently showed his appreciation of our labor, and our hearts echoed his sentiments, while we smiled at his quaintness and originality.

One who is spending his first year at the South writes as follows: "When I listen in the prayer meetings to remarks and prayers, especially the latter, I cannot help wishing that the churches of the North could be present to be 'edified,' for they surely would be. I know those who have given largely to the A. M. A., both as men count largeness and as the Lord counts it (and His way is not always man's way), and they would have more than felt satisfied with their investment just to have been present for one hour in some of the meetings at which it has been my privilege to be in the last two months. I am satisfied that we are building wiser than we know when we are seeking to introduce a 'colored element' into the Congregationalism of the Republic; but how much wiser, I do not profess to be able to measure even in imagination."

CHARLESTON, S. C.—I wish I could take you into one of our prayer meetings, such an one as we sometimes have, for they are not all of the same degree of spiritual fervor, but one of our good meetings is exceedingly enjoyable. The songs are so weird and the prayers are so fervent and frequent, and their attitude so devout—well, perhaps your fastidious taste would be shocked, but somehow I am drawn a little nearer Heaven here than anywhere else. I can't help saying "Amen" down in my heart. And when they sing my body sways with theirs, just as the sailor rolls his gait with the motion of the deck. We sing a good many of the old time tunes, and some that have not yet been translated into written song. Our people sing their good old household hymns to these tunes.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Our Sunday-school is very large in the winter, but it thins out in the summer. The largest attendance during any time through the winter was 530.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The most encouraging feature of our work is the Sunday-school. We have 120 in attendance, with an average of 82. Some difficulty is found in procuring teachers. We manage, however, to keep up a good degree of interest among the children.

FIRST CONG. CHURCH, ATLANTA, GA.—The Sunday-school is prospering; over 50 in the infant class; sometimes over 200 are present in all.

SAVANNAH, GA.—The Sunday-school work is prospering finely, the pennies outnumbering the attendance every Sunday but two from January 1 to June 1. The average attendance at the Sunday-school for January was 112, which gradually increased until in May, the average was 162½. The average collections of the Sunday-school for May were $2.12½ for each Sunday.

MACON, GA.—The Sunday-school reported 220 names on the roll, of whom 175 were present at one time, and the average attendance for the year was 115. Ten of the scholars united with the church, and the school has raised about $60 in weekly contributions.

SELMA, ALA.—The Sunday-school has been steadily increasing, as shown by the following figures, which give the average attendance for six months: January, 82; February, 77¾; March, 83¼; April, 84¾; May, 112; June, 101¾.

CHILDERSBURG, ALA.—We are going on in the work of the Lord. We have a good lively Sabbath-school every Sabbath, and all seem to enjoy the lesson. All are Christians but six, and I hope to gain those for the Lord.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Sunday-school is vigorous with enthusiasm, numbering 175 pupils. Decided improvement both in attendance and contributions has been made during the year.

MARION, ALA.—All the Sunday-school children—not already members—have been forward for prayer. Nearly every one of our Sabbath-school now think they are Christians.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The Sunday-school is well attended, averaging from 100 to 140 during the latter part of winter and spring, and now in vacation about 75; general interest good.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—The Sunday-school is full of interest; average attendance about 90 scholars, with eight earnest teachers who were once our scholars. The Sunday-school has a library of 70 volumes of good books, which are quite generally read by the school.

TEMPERANCE WORK.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is quite a large temperance work here carried on by Mrs. Babcock. This temperance society is known as the Lincoln Mission Band of Hope.

HAMPTON, VA.—Most of the students of the school have been enrolled as members of the temperance society during the past year. Considerable work has been done in the country about. One of the students organized a temperance society in the village of Hampton, and several interesting meetings have been held. The subject of local option is likely to come up in the fall, and the society hopes to make itself felt on the right side.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—We have a Band of Hope that numbers 120, mostly children, growing up to take part in the future conflict over alcohol in this State.

The white people are waking up to more effort in missionary work. They have commenced in the temperance reform, and already a petition with 5,000 names attached has been presented to the Mayor and Council, asking that no more licenses be granted for the sale of intoxicating drinks.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, GA.—The temperance work is made a special care, as the need for it is so great, and all who go away to teach during their summer vacation, as all do save six or eight of the younger members, have furnished them a package of selected temperance literature, and are instructed in the best methods for its use, after careful advice upon the general subject, so that all are engaged in mission work of that character in the schools which they teach and the families which they visit.

MARIETTA, GA.—The following quotation respecting temperance forms a part of the constitution of the church: "Any member convicted of using intoxicating liquor other than as a medicine shall be liable to discipline."

TALLADEGA, ALA.—A temperance society has been organized, embracing in its membership those not connected with the college church, with a pledge of abstinence from the use of tobacco in all its forms, as well as from the use and sale of intoxicating liquors.

MARION, ALA.—The temperance agitation here has not been without fruit.

A monster petition was sent to the Legislature, praying for prohibition, and a law was passed prohibiting all traffic in intoxicating drinks within five miles' radius of the court-house. The effect of the new law upon the colored people has proved very salutary

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—A healthful sentiment in favor of temperance prevails throughout the church and congregation, cherished by special services and efforts through the year. Not one person to my knowledge is addicted to the use of drink.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—It is a rare thing for any of our students to hold themselves outside of the temperance work. They not only become temperance men and women here, but temperance workers when they leave. From 1,000 to 1,500 signers of the pledge are secured by them each summer vacation. Supplied in this way, the students from this school are the means of disseminating through the State a great deal of good temperance literature, and are enabled to organize a multitude of little temperance societies.

BEREA, KY.—We have here, conducted and managed chiefly by members of the church, the most vigorous temperance association in the State, including over 1,600 pledges.

FLATONIA, TEXAS.—Over 45 of our young men and women have joined the temperance union.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.—The whole church is a temperance society.

RECORD OF SELF-HELP.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Lincoln Mission building in which this church worships has been greatly improved. The large hall has been re-plastered and painted inside and out. This church also sent $4.06 to the American Missionary Association.

HAMPTON, VA.—The Missionary Society of the school has raised $229. As the last winter was of unusual severity, the most of this amount was spent in the relief of the misery at our very doors. During the winter the students went out every week to mend the huts of the poor, to carry them bedding, clothes and food.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The people have raised about $500 for various purposes, about $200 of which went to repair the church, $100 to pay the debt, and the rest for current expenses.

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—New hymn books have been purchased, the church has been repaired, painted and plastered, and a chandelier secured.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, ATLANTA, GA.—With the aid of the American Missionary Association and Northern friends we have a fine new bell. Church property is valuable and in good order. We have paid up our church debt, and have now a fine church costing $5,000, with a seating capacity for 500, and a basement under the whole for Sunday-school rooms. During the year ending January 1, 1881, the church raised for debt and current expenses about $800.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY CHURCH.—About $75 was raised during the year at the monthly missionary meetings, which was given to promote the temperance work.

SAVANNAH, GA.—From January 1 to May 31 the congregation raised for church and missionary purposes $83.71; and the Sunday-school, during the same time, $36.73. This does not include some $25 raised to provide an excursion for the Sunday-school and its friends.

WOODVILLE, GA.—In 1877 the church purchased a bell and an organ.

In 1878 the American Missionary Association built a neat little parsonage.

In 1879 the church was ceiled and painted inside.

In 1880 the people, with aid from the American Missionary Association, raised the meeting house on a brick basement; also the church was repainted and new seats were added.

In 1881 a new fence was put around the lot, and the meeting house was improved on the outside, trees were set out, and a lot was purchased at the Five Mile for mission work. Pilgrim church has had revivals every year.

MARIETTA, GA.—The Sunday-school of the church in Marietta, Ga.—Rev. E. J. Penney, pastor—has sent forward a Christmas offering of four dollars. One boy picked cotton to earn his dime. One girl darned stockings for a gentleman to raise her part.

CYPRESS SLASH, GA.—Our church property has been improved and a parsonage erected at a cost of about $230, in connection with which there are ten acres of land.

MOBILE, ALA.—The church building was moved through the street to its more eligible location on the Institute grounds, and improved by a large front door and steps and cornice.

Out of their deep poverty the people raised about one dollar at each monthly concert of prayer for missions.

SELMA, ALA.—An effort has been made to raise a special donation for the A. M. A., that the Association may receive the $50 pledged as a duplicate from a friend in Massachusetts. The "Mission Workers" of the church and Sunday-school have made by sales, and given for various purposes, $30.45.

CHILDERSBURG, ALA.—We have plastered our meeting-house and added a church farm worth $250, and a bell worth $45.

SHELBY IRON WORKS, ALA.—Our building is now being newly painted, and we hope to finish plastering by the 1st of October.

CENTRAL CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The annual expenses of the church, averaging $650, are always paid promptly, and this year, in addition, the church has remitted $100 to the treasury of the American Missionary Association.

NEW IBERIA, LA.—St. Paul's church is one of the strongest and most stable in the Association. The September gale leveled their old building. It was a blessing in disguise, for a new and substantial church has risen in its place. Situated in the midst of one of the most fruitful sections of the State, and almost every colored man owning his homestead, and some of them in the realization of the Freedman's ambition, "forty acres and a mule," there is a look of prosperity about church and people that is refreshing. They are now self-supporting.

TERREBONNE, LA.—This church was built and paid for by the voluntary offerings of the people. I think they have never solicited a dollar of outside aid. They have built just as fast as they could pay for the work. No shadow of debt has ever dimmed their joy.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Since January 1st money raised for missionary purposes, $20.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—The church has paid $26.10 toward missionary purposes.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—We have purchased a lot in a very desirable part of the city (corner lot) at $400, have paid $140 toward it, and have laid the foundation on it for a church. We are now negotiating for lumber, etc., with which to erect the superstructure. Hope to go into it November 1st, and also to lay the corner-stone very soon. Have raised since organized $468 for church purposes.

PARIS, TEXAS.—We have recently purchased a very desirable church lot not far from the centre of the city, on which we expect to erect a new church.

BEREA, KY.—During the past year we erected here a neat plain building as a church house and college chapel. It will seat some 500 people.

PUPILS FROM THE CHURCHES.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—We have sent two from the Lincoln Mission to Howard University.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—We have among our pupils nine teachers, several others preparing to teach, and two preparing for the ministry.

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—Three members of our church are absent teaching. One young man is engaged in missionary work.

MARIETTA, GA.—Three of our members spent the past six months in Atlanta University.

CYPRESS SLASH, GA.—One young man has gone to the Hampton Institute to fit himself for a teacher.

1ST CONG. CH. ATLANTA, GA.—Many of our young people are in Storrs School or Atlanta University. One has just graduated from the theological department in Howard University; six or more, now or formerly members of our church, are at work in the Gospel ministry, and two score or more are, or have been, engaged in teaching among their people.

ATLANTA UNIV. CHURCH.—About 75 members of the church are now engaged in teaching their summer schools, most of them taking the lead in Sunday-schools, and so exercising a genuine missionary influence over a great number of people.

HAMPTON, VA.—Forty students have been engaged in the Sunday-schools in the vicinity, three as superintendents and the remainder as teachers. One of the schools where the students have become interested has increased in numbers from 40 to over 200. Thirty Bible students go out from the school on Sunday afternoons to read to the old people. They are everywhere received with a hearty welcome by those who have been deprived of the privileges which their children enjoy.

CHILDERSBURG, ALA.—Four of our church members are studying at different institutions.

FLORENCE, ALA.—We sent one pupil to Fisk University last year, and raised $160 for building and repairs.

MOBILE, ALA.—Two lady members are engaged in teaching in public schools acceptably.

SHELBY IRON WORKS, ALA.—Five pupils from the church have been sent to some institution of learning. Number engaged in missionary work, five.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—Besides the mission churches which have grown out of the College church, the students and teachers have sustained five Sunday-schools in needy districts.

SELMA, ALA.—Six of our pupils are at school at Talladega, two at Tougaloo. Ten members are engaged in teaching or missionary work.

MARION, ALA.—Ten of the young people of our church have been at Talladega during the past year, two at Fisk and one at Tougaloo. Four of our members have been teaching school with good success and one is preaching.

This church has also put five young men into the Christian ministry. Three Sunday-schools have been kept up in the country by members of the church who had day-schools in those districts.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Nine of our members have been in attendance at Talladega College and Fisk University during the year; three of these are studying for the ministry.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—During vacation it is estimated that our students instruct about 4,000 Sunday-school scholars. Fifty-eight of our church members have been engaged in teaching during the year.

BEREA, KY.—Four other Sabbath-schools are under the supervision of members of the church; in these there is a total average attendance of 208.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—In connection with the institution, of which the church is a part, are a Sunday-school, a college, Y. M. C. A., and a missionary society for the evangelization of Africa. Five of the students have already gone as missionaries to Africa; others are preparing to go, having consecrated themselves to the work of African missions. Many of the students, members of the church, are now engaged in the work of preaching the Gospel in the churches of the South; others are preparing to preach.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—About 12 pupils of Le Moyne school are from our church, some of them members, others from families in part or entirely connected with it. One young man is teaching during the summer; will be in school next year. Not less than seventy of our students will be teaching during vacation, those of former years with those going out from this year's work.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—Twenty-one persons have left us at different times to engage in study either in Atlanta or Fisk University, nine of whom are teaching and doing good work otherwise, while one is over in the southern part of France preaching the gospel.

PARIS, TEXAS.—Two of the male members are carrying on missionary work in the country with encouraging success. We sustain a neighborhood prayer meeting, which is doing much good.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.—Already two ministers have gone forth from us, one of whom is doing good work for four Baptist churches which he has in charge. The other one also is a great power for good.

CONFERENCES.

SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE.—The Association met with a most cordial welcome by Brother Clay and his church at Terrebonne, April 6-8. Every church but the smallest mission church was represented, and several delegates came 100 miles to the meeting.

The reports from the churches were hopeful: There have been seasons of refreshing and ingathering, as at New Orleans and New Iberia. In all there was a desire and purpose manifest to bring the churches to a higher standing of intelligence and holy living. There is something of the old conference element in our meetings which is healthful; to examine critically the ministers and their churches, and to have their "characters passed." So men are here judged by actual results, and vital defects in administration are criticised with kindly severity and impartially condemned.

The session of Thursday morning was devoted to the subject of employing missionaries at large. A decision was reached at a subsequent session that a missionary committee be appointed, representing the northern, central and southern portion of the Association limits—New Orleans, Terrebonne and New Iberia—to exercise wise missionary oversight over the parishes adjoining their own, to report opportunities of planting new churches, and to make temporary provision for them. Two new churches were received—St. Rock, in the town of Howma, and Little Zion, near Thibodauxville. These churches were regularly organized, with the assistance of Congregational councils.

It was decided, after faithful examination regarding the character, doctrinal views and qualifications of the candidates, to license for the term of one year Mr. Squire Williams, of Thibodauxville, and Paul Martin, of New Iberia. In the case of Father Benjamin Fields, of Terrebonne, who has suffered for his faith in Christ and his fidelity to His service in the darkest days of bondage, the Association, by a unanimous and cordial vote, granted him a license without limitation of time.

One of the new churches received, the St. Rock Congregational Church, earnestly requested that Mr. Humphrey Williams, one of their number, be set apart to the work of the ministry by the solemn rite of ordination, that he might serve them as pastor, and administer to them the sacraments of the church. The examination of Mr. Williams was approved, and his ordination secured in the evening.

After the ordination service, Rev. Isaac H. Hall, of New Orleans, the delegate of the Association to the National Council at St. Louis, made his report. His address was grand. As he described his visit to the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association at Norwich and to the National Council, giving the salient features of each as they impressed his own mind, the audience were aroused to a high state of enthusiam; smiles and tears were commingled; and one loud "Glory to God!" broke forth from hundreds of lips.

The Association adjourned on Friday morning to meet in New Orleans, with Central Church, the first Wednesday in April, 1882. Dr. Alexander was appointed to represent the Association at the autumn meeting of the Congregational Church in England. The religious interest awakened by our annual meeting deepened to the last, and at the urgent request of Brother Clay, several of the ministers remained after the adjournment. At the meeting on Saturday night, 35 were brought under conviction of sin, and asked for the prayers of the church.

SOUTH-WEST TEXAS ASSOCIATION.—This Association met with the church at Goliad on the 14th of July. Only four churches and four ministers are connected with this Association. All the churches were represented by delegate and minister, except Flatonia. Rev. Mr. Strong was chosen Moderator, and Rev. B. C. Church, Clerk. Harmony and progress is the watchword. Three churches have enjoyed the reviving of God's Spirit, and eighteen persons have been received on profession. The prayer-meetings, sermons and discussions of important resolutions were better appreciated by the people than at any previous meeting. The house was too small to accommodate the crowds that came on the Sabbath. The next meeting will be at Corpus Christi on the Thursday before the third Sabbath in July, 1882.

CENTRAL SOUTH CONFERENCE.—This religious body held its autumn meeting with the Second Congregational Church, Memphis, Tenn. Delegates representing the churches in Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee were present. The following programme illustrates the orderly way and the practical character of the brethren engaged in our church work South: "Annual Sermon," Rev. Wm. H. Ash, Florence, Ala.; "Church Extension," Rev. Jos. E. Smith, Chattanooga; "Education," Rev. G. W. Moore, Nashville; "Missions," Professor H. S. Bennett, Fisk University; "How to Develop the Benevolence of the Churches," Professor A. K. Spence, Fisk University; "Absolute Necessity of Education for the Colored People," President Magoun, of Iowa College.

In addition to the foregoing exercises the Conference examined and licensed for one year Mr. B. F. Foster, of Arkansas, a former student of the theological department of Fisk University. It also renewed the licensure of Rev. W. H. Fuller, a student of the theological department of Talladega College. During the session a council was organized for the examination of Mr. B. A. Imes, a graduate of Oberlin College and Theological Seminary, with reference to his ordination and installation as pastor of the church in which the Conference was convened.

This young Conference, which already numbers twelve churches, possesses the elements of a steady and helpful growth, indicative of a better era for pure religion at the South.

KENTUCKY CONFERENCE.—This Association embraces the churches at Berea, Big Hill, Cabin Creek, Hillsdale, Camp Nelson, McKee and Williamsburg, all in Kentucky. It was organized in September, 1871.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—This Conference was held at Mobile, commencing March 25. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. A. W. Curtis, of Marion. Saturday was devoted mainly to reports from the Sabbath-schools, which brought out a valuable discussion on the question of the establishment of mission-schools and the benefits of the visitations necessitated thereby. An address on "The Teachers' Meeting," by Rev. O. W. Fay, was mentioned as a paper of choice thought. A general discussion followed the reading of the paper. Saturday evening was given to a sermon from Prof. G. W. Andrews, of Talladega.

On Sunday, ministerial fellowship and courtesy were shown by a number of the pastors of the city, both white and colored, by sending in requests that their pulpits might be supplied by representatives from the Conference. Monday was occupied chiefly by papers and discussions, which appear to have been of unusual interest. Monday evening Dr. Roy gave a full and most instructive account of the origin and progress of the A. M. A., and was followed by President DeForest, of Talladega, and several others, who urged the need of education for the 600,000 who, in Alabama, are sitting well nigh in midnight darkness.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.—The Conference of this State held its annual meeting in Atlanta, at the First Church—Rev. C. W. Hawley's—from the 2d to the 5th of December, Rev. Jos. E. Smith Moderator, and Rev. S. E. Lathrop and Prof. S. B. Morse, Secretaries. Rev. J. R. McLean preached the opening sermon, upon the encouragement to run the Christian race from the example of Christ.

As a good example for other Conferences, one evening was given to addresses in behalf of the several Congregational Societies, with alternation of color as to the speakers, but not as to the speeches. Superintendent Roy reported the anniversary of the A. M. A and the St. Louis triennial, and gave an address upon the independence of our churches as related to their fellowship. Rev. F. Snelson and Prof. C. W. Francis led off on "Church Discipline." President Ware opened on "The School and the Church," showing their natural relation as evangelizers. A half day was given to a visit at the Atlanta University, and one evening to a sociable. Two "church houses" have been built during the year at Marietta and Cypress Slash.

On Monday the members of the Conference, called by letters missive, repaired to Marietta, twenty-one miles out, to sit in Council for the installation of Mr. E. J. Penney, a graduate of the Atlanta University and of Andover Seminary.

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.—This Conference, organized two years ago at Raleigh, held its third meeting with Bethany Church at McLeansville. The churches were all represented. Rev. Islay Walden and his delegate, Deacon Potter, together with three others, came 50 miles in a one-horse wagon to attend the Conference. One of the party, Mrs. Hill, now a widow, has had 12 children, 40 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. She had never seen the cars nor heard a railroad whistle till she came to the Conference.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. David Peebles, of Dudley. On Friday the Conference was organized by electing Rev. G. S. Smith, of Raleigh, Moderator, and re-electing Rev. David Peebles, Clerk. The morning meeting for prayer and reports from the churches was a precious season.

Saturday night the Conference held a rousing temperance meeting and took strong ground, by a unanimous vote, in favor of total abstinence, the use of unfermented wine at communion, and in favor of prohibition, as submitted to the people of this State by the last Legislature for their ratification next August. The leading temperance speech was made by Deacon Jones, of Raleigh, whose grave was gratuitously dug for him at Chapel Hill some years ago by the Ku-Klux, but which he declined to occupy. He tells us the Congregational Church at Raleigh is known as the prohibition church.

WOMAN'S WORK.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Mrs. Babcock, Newburyport, Mass., has commenced missionary labor with this church, with every prospect of wide usefulness. She is supported by the W. H. M. A., of Boston, under commission of the A. M. A. This mission, in its Sunday-school work, runs back to the day of the nation's martyr, whose name it bears. It has done a vast deal of good, which has been garnered up in other churches round about, and now it turns to care for its own. It has been sustained, as it is now, mainly by Dr. Rankin's people. The colored population of the district is 60,000 with only 3,000 outside of the city. The National capital carries its share of the "wards."

MACON, GA.—Although Mrs. Lathrop has had no special commission as missionary, she has done considerable in that line. During three months, she made over two hundred and fifty visits, being confined to the house by illness for one month of that time, and being much hindered otherwise by incessant stormy weather. She also gave away over 400 garments within the same time, and many shivering bodies have been warmed. Besides the clothing above referred to, she has distributed hundreds of papers, tracts, cards and texts, reading and talking with the women and children. Her sewing-school, meeting weekly, has steadily increased, sixty being present at the last meeting.

MARION, ALA.—We moved here January 17, and at once revived the meetings at "The Home" for the ladies, the children and young people, Mrs. C. taking charge, with the one aim from the first of winning their hearts to Christ. As many as forty young people have been present at some of her Sunday evening and 3 P. M. meetings, and at the close frequently several of these would ask leave to stay and talk personally about becoming Christians. Of course, we were soon obliged to have special meetings, and have just closed a session of seventeen nights' consecutive preaching. The Holy Spirit has been working in many hearts.

SELMA, ALA.—We have formed a society called "The Mission Workers," the object of which is to awaken a greater interest in home and foreign missions.

In the last two months I have called on 188 families. When convenient, as in most cases, I have read the Bible and tracts or papers to the women, also offering prayer with them; have established a weekly prayer-meeting for the women, some distance from the Home; also one weekly in my room, in which white and colored lead by turns. They are precious seasons to us all, and we feel that a blessing is for us. Several of our members, whose husbands are unconverted, meet in their homes to pray for their conversion. Friends frequently present requests for prayers.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I have made, up to December 31, one hundred and twenty-five calls, and have succeeded in relieving some suffering with gifts of fuel and food, although the little accomplished in that direction is as one drop in the sea.

In addition to my visits, I have tried to reach the women by means of cabin prayer-meetings, and to help the girls and young women by the medium of sewing-schools. I have two schools in successful operation in different parts of the city. One numbers twenty pupils, the other nearly forty. We begin with prayer and short Scripture reading, and then with great eagerness the girls set about their sewing, or lesson in cutting, as the case may be. When a garment is finished, each girl purchases her own work for a dime or fifteen cents.

WOMEN'S MISSIONARY MEETING AT MOBILE.—MRS. O. D. Crawford, as acting President, opened the meeting. Reports from local societies at Selma, Montgomery, Talladega and Mobile were given. Selma sent in a very interesting report. Many good results seem to be growing out of their missionary meetings. In the women's meeting $80.45 has been raised during the past year, and among the "Mission Workers," who are under the care of Miss Lunt, $27.85.

The Montgomery society reported a discouraging state of affairs at the beginning of the last, its third year, having but twenty-five names on the roll; but the "royal remnant" rallied to the front and succeeded in creating a good degree of interest by various ingenious plans, until now the roll of membership numbers forty, and the outlook for the coming year is hopeful.

The report from Talladega was encouraging. In connection with this society are three committees, one for visiting the sick, one for visiting in general, and the third, called the "Highway and Hedge Committee," consisting of young men, who report any destitution which they may find. A mothers' meeting is held, and also a girls' mission band.

From Mobile the report from the mothers' meeting showed an enrollment of thirty-two, nine of whom have been added this year, while the average attendance has been eight; the great disparity between the enrollment and the average attendance being mainly due to the great disadvantages under which the mothers labor, many of them being widows obliged to toil hard for the support of their families. It is only owing to a faithful and earnest desire that some are enabled to gather at the weekly meeting for prayer. By much self-denial this year the mothers have contributed $3.50 for the Mendi Mission. The Emersonian Mission Band, formed from the girls of Emerson Institute, was reported in a state of progress; thirty-nine members enrolled.

AFRICAN MISSIONS.

PROPOSED ARTHINGTON MISSION, EAST AFRICA.

Supt. H. M. Ladd and Dr. E. E. Snow sailed the 15th of September with a view of locating this mission on the Upper Nile.

The following extract from the instructions of the Executive Committee will give an idea of the general plan of the mission:

"We furnish you a letter from the U. S. Secretary of State, which, in response to a request from this office, assures you that upon arriving at Cairo you will find the U. S. Consul General stationed there—Mr. Simon Wolf—instructed to facilitate the labors of your expedition and to protect your rights as American citizens in such ways as are consistent with his duties and with due regard to local laws. With his assistance and your English indorsement you will seek from the Khedive of Egypt the essential protection of his authority.

"It is our impression that near the mouth of the Sobat, where the Nile comes in from its great western bend, within the Arthington district, and perhaps upon the very spot where Sir Samuel Baker had his camp, you will locate the headquarters of the mission, whose stations in time will be extended into the country beyond; but we leave this matter of location to your discretion. In determining it you will consider the navigability of the river, the elevation and healthfulness of the site, and the friendliness and condition of the people. You will negotiate with the heads of the people, among whom you locate, for the use of land needed by the mission. You will investigate the feasibility of our owning and running a small steamer between Berber and Sobat.

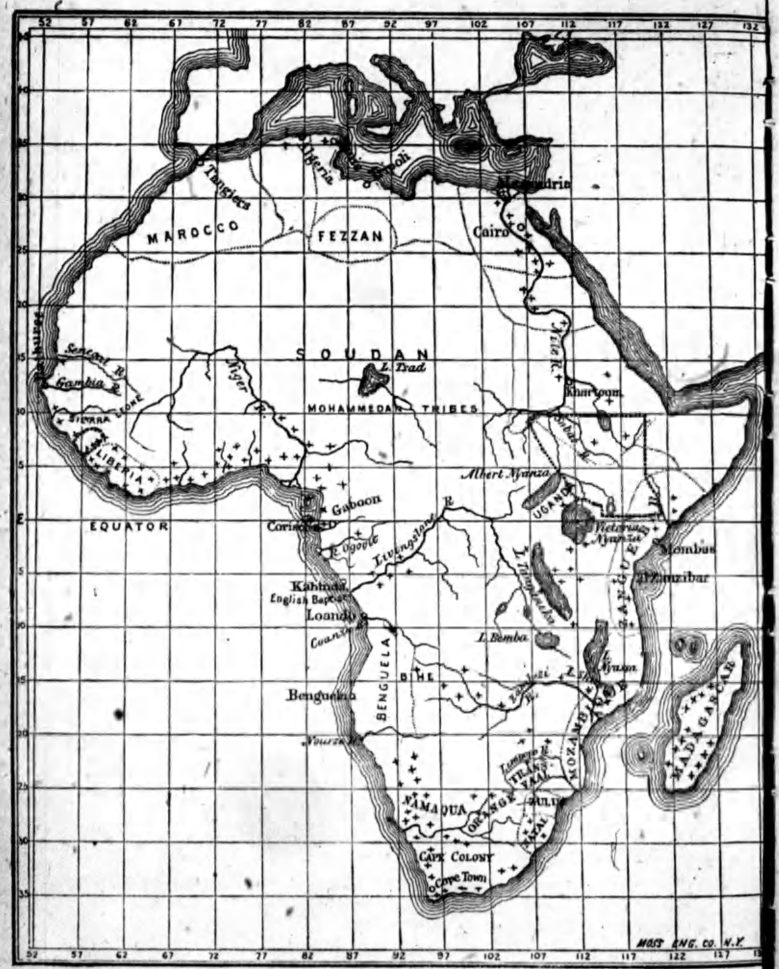
"If the way shall not appear closed up, the plan for the second expedition will be that, with your recruits, you take along your steamer as freight to Berber, where you will put it together and launch it to carry your party and materials for building and for subsistence to the chosen site, upon which you will set up the house of the mission. * * * *

"We bless God that he has given you a heart to assume this great undertaking in the name of His dear Son. We commend you now to the Divine care, and shall ever pray that you may be preserved in health and life, and prospered in your mission, until you shall see that heathen people coming to the standard of the Cross which you shall have set up in equatorial Africa."

MENDI MISSION, WEST AFRICA.

Missionaries.—Rev. A. E. Jackson, Rev. J. M. Williams, Rev. Kelly M. Kemp,* Mr. A. E. White, Mr. Nathaniel Nurse, Mrs. A. E. Jackson, Mrs. J. M. Williams, Mrs. Kelly M. Kemp.*

Native Helpers.—Rev. George N. Jowett, Mr. Samuel H. Goodman, Mr. Joseph E. Gerber, Mrs. Lucy During, Mr. Buel Tucker.



Under Appointment.—Mr. I. J. St. John, Rev. J. M. Hall.

(Brief Extracts from the Journal of Rev. H. M. Ladd.)

GOOD HOPE.

Thursday, March 31, we were all up at an early hour, and went out before the intense heat of the day to inspect the grounds and buildings. The fine property of the mission had evidently suffered in many ways from neglect. All the buildings stood in need of repairs, and a large portion of the grounds, including the little cemetery where Barnabas Root is buried, was overgrown with bush. The spiritual condition of the church and station seemed also to bear some resemblance to its outward condition. It was not hopeless, but somewhat depressed. The grounds in the immediate vicinity of the mission house gave evidence, however, that the missionaries had neither forgotten to exercise their taste nor been wasteful of the small force and slender means at their command. So also the spiritual condition of the station presented some encouraging features. The warm reception which Mr. Kemp and his wife received on every side gave some reason to hope that the church would yet flourish under his judicious care.

Friday, April 1, was emphatically a day of calls. It had been quickly noised abroad that the new missionaries from America had arrived, and many availed themselves of the first opportunity to bid them welcome to Africa. Possibly a little curiosity was mingled with their politeness, but we did not care to analyze too closely, and were glad to see them all. The people we met were generally fine looking, of a rich, brown color, and not burdened by any superfluity of clothing. They talked a broken English, which was almost as difficult to understand as a new language.

AVERY.

On Monday, April 4, we went in the "Olive Branch" to Avery Station on the Mahna River, a branch of the Barroo, forty miles inland. The trip took all of one night, the boatmen rowing and keeping time to their oars with a weird, monotonous singing all the way.

The inspection of the station at Avery consumed the early morning hours of Tuesday. We visited the mill, the boat-houses, the coffee farm, the cassada fields, the rice houses, the boys' department, the store, the church and school-room, and last, but not least, the "faki," or native village, situated on the mission grounds, and under the control of the missionary. The situation of the mission house is a fine one, but the adjacent country is wilder than at Good Hope. The house stands on a high promontory, and commands a very picturesque view both up and down the river. This river abounds in fish and alligators, while the banks are alive with monkeys.

I was up at three A. M. on the 7th to help receive Mr. Kemp, who arrived from Good Hope Station at that hour. Later we visited the school together, examined the pupils in their various branches, and gave them a little talk, which they seemed to enjoy. Some of them were honored by such names as Wm. E. Gladstone and M. E. Strieby. Their appearance and behavior were very gratifying. The prayer meeting in the evening was fully attended, and indicated a marked degree of earnestness, the leader having some difficulty to bring it to a close. If hand-shaking is a means of grace, we enjoyed special privileges at the end of this meeting.

DEBIA.

The school at Debia under Mr. Samuel Goodman is in a prosperous condition. But he wants a school-house and clothes and books for the children. He is a good man and an earnest worker. Besides teaching he holds services, and preaches to the people on the Sabbath. He does all this in his own house. He was brought up in the mission, and has taught 12 years. He wants to take a few children into his family to keep them under proper influence, and would like a small allowance to enable him to do it. He is situated half way between the villages of Debia and Yorny, with about 20 houses in each, and reaches them both. The people are of the Sherbro tribe. Barnabas Root worked here among his own people. Land has been offered for a school-house, and is still available. Mr. Goodman thinks a school-house could be built for $125. I promised him that if this was all it would cost he should have one.

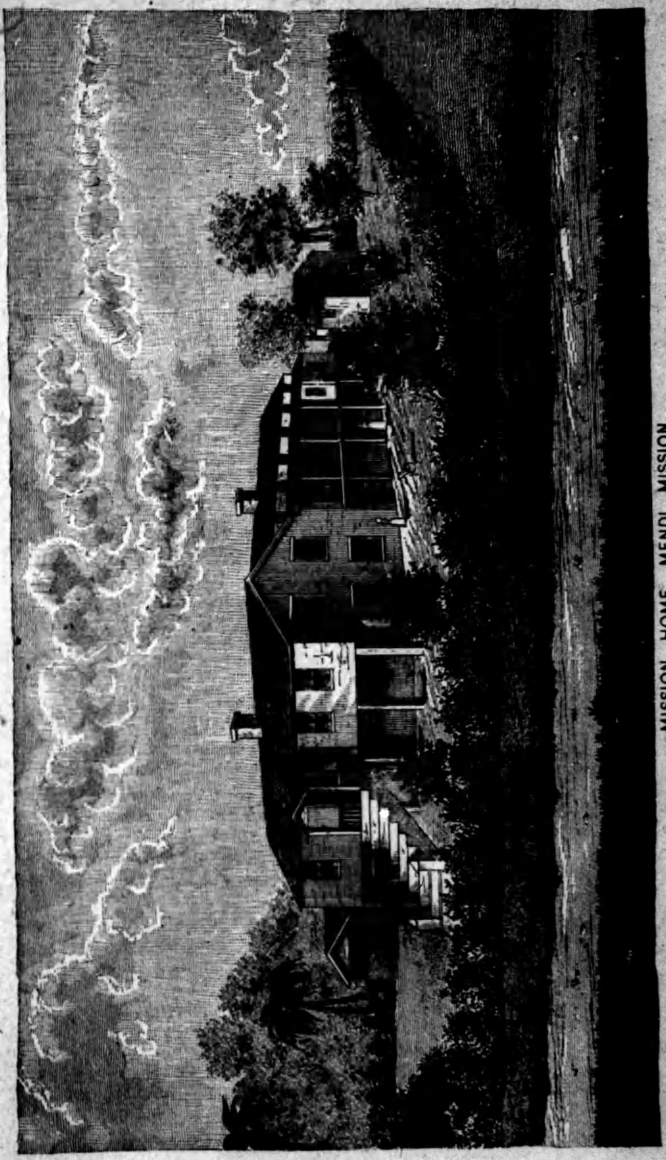
'KAW MENDI STATION.

From this station, Mr. Williams writes that he has a family of 27 boys and girls in his boarding school. His day-school numbers 41 pupils and his Sunday school 48. In the church there are 20 members, while 12 candidates for membership are under instruction. This school has been started on an industrial basis. The scholars live upon the cassada and potatoes raised by themselves. They also raise and manufacture arrow-root and cultivate corn and yams.



THE ORDINATION AT GOOD HOPE.

No little interest centered about the ordination of Kelly M. Kemp. It took place at Good Hope Station, Sherbro Island, West Coast of Africa, Sunday, April 10. Being the first ceremony of the kind in which the church and community had ever participated, it was naturally looked forward to by many, not only as a matter of deep interest in itself, but also as the harbinger of a better state of things for the enfeebled and almost discouraged church. Yet the field was an important one and must not be given up. Mr. Kemp is a graduate of Lincoln University, and ably represents the thorough and practical training of that institution.

The examination took place on Saturday evening, April 9, and was well attended, and although Mr. Kemp was feeling somewhat unwell at the time, he stood the long and searching fire of questions, theological, wise and otherwise, with credit to himself and with great satisfaction to the council, which, besides the "my-doxy" members, was composed of representatives of various shades of theological opinion. This fact, indeed, formed one of the pleasantest features of the council. Here in the midst of a heathenism, rendered fouler and more corrupt by contact with an immoral civilization, and in a common work for a common Master and a common people, party names were wholly forgotten. One of the best and most earnest prayers that I have ever heard was offered on this occasion by an excellent brother of the Church Missionary Society, and he had no book before him or gown on his back. The ordination exercises on Sabbath morning were attended by a full house, while the deep sense of the solemnity of the hour seemed to pervade every heart. After the benediction, pronounced by their new pastor, the people, with tears of gladness in their eyes, flocked around him and his good wife, whom they had already learned to love, for a hearty hand-shaking, which, as some one has truly said, is also one of the means of grace.

INDUSTRIAL WORK.

Much of the mission work in Africa, at least upon the West Coast, has a basis in industrial work of some kind. Many causes have conspired to hinder this branch of civilizing work at the Mendi Mission. Without stopping to specify what these may have been, no one can doubt that the chief reason why the saw-mill at Avery has failed to be a source of income to the Association is the difficulty of transporting the lumber to market. This mill, with a circular and an upright saw, with a good head of water during the larger part of the year, and with timber near at hand, is the only mill of the kind on the West Coast. There is a good demand for such lumber as the mill can produce, but the chief market is 120 miles distant.

What is needed to insure the best success of the mill, and of all the industrial departments connected with it, is an easy and quick means of transportation. This would not only make the mill a really civilizing institution and a paying piece of property, but if a small steamer or tug-boat were thus in use, it would more than pay its own way in the regular trips it would make, and by the incidental services it could render to other mission stations where similar industrial work is carried on. There are promises enough to insure the successful running of such a steamer. It should be adapted to towing a lumber boat of large capacity to and from Freetown, and should also be adapted to carrying passengers up and down the rivers. It would accomplish more work in a given time than any other project yet proposed on this coast, would dispense with the small army of boatmen and fleet of boats now maintained, and would be the solution of the question in regard to the mill.

But how shall the steamer preach its practical sermon unless it be sent? Some one must send it. Many hands make light work, especially when they contain the contributions of willing hearts. The many little rills, and springs, and even drops of love for the colored race may flow together and float this steamer. We may send, as some one has suggested, old John Brown, of Harper's Ferry, in a memorial steamer over to Africa, to carry forward in a higher sense the work of freedom which he began here, and which shall never end till his soul has ceased its marching on. About $10,000 are needed to furnish such a steamer as is required, and an appeal has been issued for that amount to be secured in shares of four grades as follows: First grade, $100; second grade, $10; third grade, $5; fourth grade, $1.

THE INDIANS.

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY, DAKOTA—Jacob Kauffman, Agent.
SISSETON AGENCY, DAKOTA—Chas. Crissey, Agent.
S'KOKOMISH AGENCY, WASHINGTON TERRITORY—Edwin Eells, Agent; Rev. Myron Eells, Missionary.

Mr. Frissell, the pastor at Hampton, Va., writes:

I have very pleasant meetings with the Indians here. I let them read the verses from the English Bible and then explain them. When I first came I used to read myself, but I found that they liked better to take a part in the services. Then we sing together from Dr. Robinson's songs of the sanctuary. After that I give the meeting into their hands. They suggest their favorite hymns and lead in prayer, usually in their own language. They all seem attentive and devout. It is very pleasant to see their faces light up as they get some new thought from God's word. I have seldom seen men more earnest in the study of the Scriptures. One of those who united with the church at the last communion has been confined to the house with sickness. The nurse tells me that he often sits for two or three hours at a time patiently spelling out the words of the English Bible, and asking her the meaning of that which he cannot understand. I am pleased to see that they are interested to work for one another. I found the other day that one of the older boys, Jas. Murrie, had been accustomed to get a number of the others who were not Christians together, and read the Bible and pray with them. Excellent work, isn't it, for a young chief who will soon go back to take charge of his own tribe? They have a meeting of their own on Wednesday evening, of which they take charge themselves. I could give you instances of how these Indian boys have resisted temptation in a way which seems to me really remarkable.

Miss Eustis writes of a communion service at Hampton, when six colored and eight Indian students confessed Christ. Ahuka (White Wolf) comes first for baptism. As he stands there quiet and reverent, a sudden memory of the first time we saw and knew him flashes across our minds. We see again the school-room the day after the arrival of the new pupils. They are seated in a semicircle around a teacher, who stands by a blackboard on which some easy English words have been written: "Stand up; Walk; Stop; Look up;" which she has been teaching the scholars to illustrate. On the front seat at one end sits Ahuka, a somewhat alarming-looking pupil. His thick, shaggy, black hair hangs down to his waist over the blanket which he holds wrapped tight about him, while he casts now and then stealthy but keen glances from under his heavy eyebrows. Teacher points to the first word on the blackboard, on the pronunciation of which she has been drilling the class, and looks at the brave for a response. Brave looks at her, then at the word, back again, more sharply at her, says nothing, till suddenly, whether in despair or rage she cannot tell, he throws his head back, bends forward again, and utters a prolonged howl.

Harry Brown, Chief White Horse's manly little son, stands by the font now. We came near making a bad mistake about Harry. The day that the minister had appointed to talk to the cholars who were to unite with the church Harry went skating; almost the first chance he'd had since he left Dakota. There was no way to tell the time; he was having splendid fun. When he came back it was too late for the meeting. The next day, when the minister kindly made an appointment for him by himself, one of the first questions he asked was, "Harry, do you pray?" "No." "Not pray?" "No." "Did you ever pray?" "Yes." "And you don't pray now?" "No." "Why not?" And then Harry shut himself behind his Indian reserve and his inability to talk English, and didn't say anything more. It certainly didn't look as if he was far on the road to saintship. And yet if there was a boy in the school who was commending himself by his faithful, kind and manly conduct it was Harry Brown. "We think you had better wait till next Communion Sunday," was finally said to him. "How long?" said Harry. "Two months." "Too long. Can't wait. Must come now," said Harry, decidedly. "How long have you been trying to do right, Harry?" "Two years." Then I think a good angel put a thought into the mind of Harry's teacher. "Harry, have you changed your room lately? Do you stay now with those seven boys up-stairs?" "Yes." "Is that the reason you don't pray? Are you ashamed?" "Yes." "Doesn't any boy in that room pray?" "Just one." "Well, if you are going to be Christ's soldier you have got to fight for Him sometimes when it's hard. Will you pray to-night?" "Yes." A few weeks afterward we asked Harry one day, when the interpreter was by, "Harry, do you pray now?" The little interpreter himself looked up with a quick, bright smile: "All we boys in that room pray now every night." It was a good victory, surely.

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.

The school work has steadily increased during the time of my short stay here. For the year closing the 30th of June the average daily attendance was 30. The largest average for any one month was 49. Progress seems slow, but taken from the untutored state these children, with no knowledge of the English language or the meaning of words, cannot be expected to make rapid progress. Much more could be accomplished in educational work if a boarding-school was established in a suitable locality remote from the Indian village.

SISSETON AGENCY.

There have been three schools in operation on the reservation during the year, two boarding-schools and one day-school. The schools have been very efficient in their work, and are now so popular that it will be difficult to accommodate all who wish to attend during the winter. The day school has now been discontinued, as it was impossible to get a full attendance, owing to the scattered abodes of the Indians obliging some of the children to come a distance of five or six miles. In its place has been opened a small boarding-school capable of receiving eight scholars.

These people are fast learning the benefits derived from the cultivation of the soil, and can soon make themselves self-supporting in this manner. They have raised during the year about 70,000 bushels of grain, etc., and there is a prospect of a large increase over this next year.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY.

The church has been considerably weakened by an order from Government, which, on the 1st of July, discharged all the white employés, except the clerk, physician and those engaged in school, their places being filled with Indians. It is a satisfaction, however, to know that it was done because the Indians have progressed so that they are believed to be able to take care of themselves, under the agent, in the places of carpenter, blacksmith and farmer.

Two of our Christian young men were active in helping to break up the gambling on the reservation last winter.

Last spring these Indians received the long-promised and long-desired titles to their land, which has had a favorable effect upon them religiously, for they, as other people, connect the white man's acts and the white man's religion, judging of the latter by the former; nor have they distinguished altogether the fact that their Christian teachers are not responsible for the acts of the authorities at Washington.

We have lost during the year three Indian members by death, all of whom had made their influence felt for good. There have been two or three cases of discipline, resulting favorably. The whole number of services held has been 223, of which 166 have been for the benefit of those connected with the reservation.

The church numbers 35. The additions this year have been seven, while three have died and five have been dismissed by letter. The average attendance at Sunday-school at S'kokomish has been 59, at Dunginess 26; average attendance on public worship at S'kokomish 80, at Dunginess 43; benevolent contributions at S'kokomish $97.80, at Dunginess $27; pastor's support at S'kokomish $22.60; church improvements at Dunginess $56; Sunday-school expenses at S'kokomish $26.80, at Dunginess $2. Individual members of the church have also given away to benevolent objects in addition $178.57, making a total for all objects of $614.67.

At Dunginess, where several members of the church reside, the school-teacher resigned about two months ago, but they have constantly kept up their Sunday-school, led by their own members. They have procured a small melodeon and a small church bell, the first in the county, and they have the only church building in the county, although it has a population of 537 whites, and was sufficiently populous in 1854 to be organized into a county.

II.—REMARKS ON THE STATISTICS.

A part of what was said last year in view of the statistics then presented may be repeated as being still true.

The figures will cease to look dry, and the statistical table will begin to glow with even a celestial light, if our readers will but reflect that every unit in these numbers stands for an undying soul, and every unit in some of them for such a soul brought out from the dark bondage of Chinese paganism into the glorious liberty of the Son of God.

1. It is often said that "figures cannot lie," and yet they can and do; and however conscientiously they are prepared, they may convey a false impression, unless explained. Respecting the figures given above, it ought to be said that our Chinese pupils move about a great deal, and thus, in the course of a year, their names come to be enrolled in several schools. This tends to swell the totals, particularly in the second and the last two columns. On the other hand it should be said that many are in our schools for very brief periods without becoming enrolled, but not without seeing and hearing something to set them thinking—and thinking in the direction of the true light and the higher life. And so, too, there are many who profess to have ceased from idol-worship, and many who give evidence of conversion, who have removed to points from which our schools are inaccessible, and who are, therefore, not counted in their respective columns, so that the over-statements, which cannot be avoided on the one hand, may be, and in respect to those giving evidence of conversion we know are, more than counterbalanced by the under-statements on the other. In blessed fruits "gathered unto everlasting life," the past year's work has seemed to be especially rich.

2. The schools at Tucson, and at Plymouth Ave., Oakland, were experiments, the former a very promising one at first. But in one case the impossibility of securing a good teacher, and in the other case the impossibility of gathering any considerable number of scholars, caused the effort to be abandoned. The school at Point Pedro has been started again under better auspices, and we hope it may become permanently useful.

3. The total number of workers employed at the close of the year is 27. During one or two months of the year about 30 were in the service. Number of schools in operation at some time time during the year, 15; number of schools in operation, August, 1881, 12. The aggregate number of months of labor is 286 more by 40 than ever before. And I believe that the character of the work, as well as its volume, improves from year to year.

4. If we compare the statistics of this year with those of last, we find an improvement at all points. The total enrolment last year, 1,556; this year, 1,682. The aggregate of largest enrolments last year, 765; this year, 771. The aggregate of largest average attendance for the year then 354, now 380. And so the aggregate enrolment month by month was then 484; now 562; the average attendance for the whole year then 252, now 288. The figures representing those who profess to have ceased from idolatry, and those giving evidence of conversion, are for the month of August alone, except as certain believers at Tucson are included. We find gains here also; in the one case from 180 to 194, and in the other from 127 to 140; but in neither case do these figures give the full number of those brought thus towards the light in our schools. Many are scattered and cannot attend the schools. The whole number of whom we have hope that they are born of God, in connection with our work from the first, cannot, I think, be less than 325.

III.—FINANCES.

I cannot make an exact financial statement at this time. Special labors—as engrossing as they were unexpected—force me to delay the making up of my report until the month of November. But the following statements approximate the truth, and are sufficiently exact for all practical purposes.

Our resources have consisted of $5,900 drawn from the treasury of the parent society in New York, and $4,216.40 contributed directly to the treasury of the auxiliary. Total, $10,116.40; of which $1,400 were appropriated towards the purchase of a lot and the erection of a mission house for our West Mission in San Francisco, and $8,716.40 to meet the current expenses of the work. The property of the mission has now an aggregate value of $8,600, against which there are debts aggregating $4,700. The interest on this debt, together with the cost of insurance and taxes, is met by the income from the property.

may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York, or, when more convenient, to either of the Branch Offices, 21 Congregational House, Boston, Mass., or 112 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill. A payment of thirty dollars at one time constitutes a Life Member.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION."

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Any person of evangelical sentiments,* who professes faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, who is not a slaveholder, or in the practice of other immoralities, and who contributes to the funds, may become a member of the Society; and, by the payment of thirty dollars, a Life Member; provided that children and others who have not professed their faith may be constituted Life Members without the privilege of voting.

ART. IV. This Society shall meet annually, in the month of September, October or November, for the election of officers and the transaction of other business, at such time and place as shall be designated by the Executive Committee.

ART. V. The annual meeting shall be constituted of the regular officers and members of the Society at the time of such meeting, and of delegates from churches, local missionary societies, and other co-operating bodies, each body being entitled to one representative.

ART. VI. The officers of the Society shall be a President, Vice-Presidents, Corresponding Secretaries (who shall also keep the records of the Association), Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee of not less than twelve members.

ART. VII. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds; the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing missionaries and agents; the selection of missionary fields; and, in general, the transaction of all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies; the Committee to exercise no ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the missionaries; and its doings to be subject always to the revision of the annual meeting, which shall, by a reference mutually chosen, always entertain the complaints of any aggrieved agent or missionary, and the decision of such reference shall be final.

The Executive Committee shall have authority to fill all vacancies occurring among the officers between the regular annual meetings; to apply, if they see fit, to any State Legislature for acts of incorporation; to fix the compensation, where any is given, of all officers, agents, missionaries or others in the employment of the Society; to make provision, if any, for disabled missionaries, and for the widows and children of such as are deceased; and to call, in all parts of the country, at their discretion, special and general conventions of the friends of missions, with a view to the diffusion of the missionary spirit, and the general and vigorous promotion of the missionary work.

* By evangelical sentiments, we understand, among others, a belief in the guilty and lost condition of all men without a Saviour; the Supreme Deity, Incarnation and Atoning Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of the world; the necessity of regeneration by the Holy Spirit; repentance, faith and holy obedience in order to salvation; the immortality of the soul; and the retributions of the judgment in the eternal punishment of the wicked and salvation of the righteous.

Five members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies, churches or individuals agreeing to the principles of this society, and wishing to appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, shall be entitled to do so through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present at a regular annual meeting; nor unless the proposed amendment has been submitted to a previous meeting, or to the Executive Committee in season to be published by them (as it shall be their duty to do, if so submitted) in the regular official notifications of the meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with, or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers, and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable, and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised, or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same; provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose that that for which the property was originally donated.

Sec. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more t hen one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

Sec. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. Section four of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

Sec. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

Sec. 2. This act shall take affect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Tuesday of each month at 3.15 o'clock p. m. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting, and the notices sent out, shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman, and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.

2. A Committee on Southern Work.

3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work, to report to the Executive Committee at its regular meeting every month such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments; and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures, viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association, shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1.) Finance. (2.) Southern Work. (3.) Indian and Chinese Work. (4.) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished Business. 8. New Business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

THIRTY-SIXTH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Thirty-sixth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association was held in Plymouth Church, Cleveland, Ohio, beginning Tuesday, October 24.

The Association was called to order by the President, Hon. Wm. B. Washburn, of Massachusetts. Devotional Services were conducted by Prof. John Morgan, of Oberlin. After an opening address by President Washburn, the organization was completed by the election of Rev. George R. Merrill, of Ohio, as Secretary, and Rev. S. M. Newman, of Wisconsin, as Assistant-Secretary.

The following were announced as the Committee on Nominations.—Rev. G. S. F. Savage, D. D., of Illinois; Rev. R. S. Greene, of New Jersey; Prof. J. M. Ellis, of Ohio.

The Treasurer's report was read by H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer of the Association, and, on motion, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The report of the Executive Committee was presented by Rev. M. E. Strieby, D. D., Cor. Sec. of the Association, and, on motion, its several portions were referred to the appropriate committees.

The Nominating Committee made the following report, which was adopted:

Committee of Arrangements.—Rev. C. T. Collins, Rev. N. M. Calhoun, Rev. H. M. Tenney, Rev. J. E. Twichell, D. D., Rev. O. D. Fisher, Rev. S. B. Shipman, Rev. J. M. Merrill, Rev. E. A. Hoffman, Rev. W. P. Edwards, L. F. Mellen, Esq.

Committee on Finance.—J. G. W. Cowles, Esq., Col. C. G. Hammond, F. C. Sessions, Esq., Col. T. F. Cooper, Rev. G. W. Phillips.

Business Committee.—Rev. N. M. Calhoun, A. L. Williston, Esq., Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D. D., Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, D. D., Charles L. Mead, Esq., Rev. E. C. Barnard, Rev. M. W. Fairfield.

Committee on Educational Work.—Rev. G. F. Wright, Rev. W. A. Waterman, Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D. D., Rev. Moses Smith.

Committee on Indian Missions.—Rev. A. H. Ross, D. D., Rev. S.

Gilbert, D. D., Rev. S. R. Riggs, D. D., Gen. E. Whittlesey, Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D. D., Rev. A. H. Plumb, D. D.

Committee on Chinese Missions.—Rev. James Brand, D. D., Rev. Thos. G. Grassie, Rev. L. W. Bacon, D. D., Rev. H. L. Hubbell, Rev. W. T. Eustis, D. D., S. R. Heywood, Esq.

Committee on Work in Africa.—Rev. M. McG. Dana, D. D., Rev. J. W. Hough, D. D., Rev. J. W. Cooper, D. D., Hon. A. C. Barstow, J. W. Scoville, Esq.

Committee on Church Work.—Rev. Arthur Little, D. D., Rev. E. V. H. Danner, Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., Rev. F. A. Noble, D. D., Dr. L. C. Warner.

The remainder of the session was spent in devotional services, conducted by Rev. C. L. Woodworth, District-Secretary of the Association, and participated in by various brethren.

Special remembrance was made of the workers in the field, who, in accordance with custom, were observing with us this hour of prayer.

On motion, recess was taken until 7.30 P. M.

TUESDAY EVENING.

After devotional services, led by Rev. Arthur Little, D. D., of Chicago, the annual sermon was preached by Rev. C. L. Goodell, D. D., of St. Louis, text Matt. xxviii., 18.

At the close of the sermon an address of welcome, in behalf of the churches and people of Cleveland, was made by Rev. J. E. Twichell, D. D.

The observance of the Lord's Supper followed, at which Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., of St. Louis, and Pres. J. H. Fairchild, D. D., of Oberlin, ministered at the table, and the following brethren served as deacons: J. G. W. Cowles, of Ohio; A. C. Barstow, of Rhode Island; J. S. Peck, of Ohio; E. P. Wright, of Ohio; C. L. Mead, of New York; H. W. Hubbard, of New York; S. R. House, of Ohio; H. D. Smith, of Connecticut.

The Committee of Arrangements reported the order for the next morning, and, on motion, the Association adjourned to Wednesday morning, at nine o'clock.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The morning prayer-meeting was conducted by Rev. H. L. Hubbell, of New York.

The Association was called to order at nine o'clock, and prayer was offered by Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D. D., of Connecticut. The minutes of the first day were read and approved.

The report of the Committee on the Constitution was made by Rev. George M. Boynton, of Massachusetts, as follows:

ARTICLE I. This Society shall be called "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION."

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations.

ART. III. Members may be constituted for life by the payment of thirty dollars into the treasury of the Association, with the written declaration at the time of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a Life member, and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed.

Churches which have within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and State Associations or Conferences of Churches may appoint delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association, each of such Churches and Associations or Conferences to be entitled to two delegates; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they are thus appointed.

ART. IV. Members shall be entitled to vote by ballot in the election of President, five Vice-Presidents, the Board of Directors and on Amendments to the Constitution; and they shall be entitled to be present at all meetings of the Board of Directors, and to take part in the proceedings, but not to vote.

ART. V. The annual meeting of the Association and of the Board of Directors shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Executive Committee.

ART. VI. The Board of Directors shall consist of fifty persons, of whom fifteen shall constitute a quorum. They shall be chosen by ballot, at the annual meeting of the Association, the votes of absent members being receivable under such safeguards as may be prescribed in the by-laws. At the first election of this Board, ten persons shall be elected for the term of one year, and a like number for terms of two, three, four and five years respectively; and each year thereafter ten persons shall be elected for the full term of five years, and such others as may be needed to fill vacancies.

If any Director shall fail to attend two annual meetings in succession, and to report the reason for such non-attendance, his place on the Board shall be regarded as vacant.

ART. VII. The Board of Directors may make by-laws for the management of the property and the regulation of the affairs of the corporation, and in general shall direct and control the operations of the Association, and shall elect the Secretaries of the Association, the Treasurer, the Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members of the Association, the powers and functions of all of whom shall be prescribed in said by-laws.

ART. VIII. No person shall be made a Director or Officer or member of the Executive Committee who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. IX. Missionary bodies, churches, or individuals agreeing to the principles of this society, and wishing to appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, shall be entitled to do so through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. X. Proposals for the amendment of this Constitution, sustained by the signatures of not less than fifty members of the Association, shall be published for not less than three months in the official periodical of the Association, and shall thereafter be submitted to the vote of the members, at the annual meeting, under such conditions as shall be prescribed in the By-Laws; and if the proposed amendment shall be sustained by two-thirds of the ballots cast, it shall be declared adopted.

ART. XI. The foregoing Articles shall have effect as By-Laws of the Association, adopted under the powers conferred on it under Section 2 of its Charter.

The general discussion was limited to ten minutes for each speaker, and closed at 10½ o'clock, having been participated in by Rev's. W. T. Eustis, of Mass., L. W. Bacon, of Conn., A. H. Ross, of Mich., A. P. Foster, of N. J., C. L. Woodworth, of Mass., C. O. Brown, of Mich., and A. H. Plumb, of Mass.

On motion, the report was made the order for two o'clock in the P. M.

After singing "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord," Rev. F. L. Kenyon, of Iowa, presented a paper on "The Relation of the A. M. A. to Civilization."

The assembly joined in singing "In the Cross of Christ I Glory."

Gen. S. C. Armstrong of Hampton, Va., read a paper on "The Indian Problem," which was followed by a few appreciative words from Father Potter, of Ohio, formerly, for twenty-years, a missionary among the Cherokees.

After singing "Work for the Night is Coming," Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., of New York, presented a paper entitled "Caste in Education." On motion of Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., it was voted, that Dr. Ward's paper be accepted with the hearty endorsement of the Association.

After notices, and the benediction by Rev. A. G. Haygood, D. D., of Georgia, a recess was taken until 2 P. M.

WEDNESDAY, P. M.

The afternoon session was opened with prayer by Rev. E. V. H. Danner, of Ohio.

The order of the day was taken up, and on motion of Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., of Ohio, it was

Resolved, That the report of the Committee on the Constitution be referred to a committee of thirteen, who shall consider the whole question of a new Constitution for this Association, and report at the next Annual Meeting;

That they be requested to finish their report and refer it to each of our State Associations and Conferences, in time for them to place the same on their programme for consideration at their next succeeding meeting, so that the mind of the churches may be manifested, for the information of this Association, at the next Annual Meeting.

Rev. C. T. Collins presented an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Dan P. Eells to members of the Association to visit Oakwood on Friday morning, by the recently opened N. Y., St. L. & C. R. R.

Voted, That the thanks of the Association be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Eells for their courtesy, and that members who wish to avail themselves of it, leave their names with Rev. C. T. Collins.

Rev. F. A. Noble, D. D., of Illinois, read a paper entitled, "God's Way of Vindicating Human Brotherhood."

The Association joined in singing, "Jesus shall reign where'er the Sun, &c."

The Committee on African Missions reported by Rev. M. McG-Dana, of Minnesota:

The Committee to whom was referred the general report on Africa would submit the following:

Little that is new or very noteworthy has occurred during the year past. The Mendi Mission, which has been so long, and at such sacrificial cost, maintained by the Association, was reinforced by a graduate of the theological department of Howard University, Rev. Mr. Hall, who took charge of the church at Good Hope station, and has brought to his work such qualifications as promise to make him a valuable worker in this growingly hopeful field. Mr. St. John, who went out to become the business manager of the missionary steamer John Brown, though obliged temporarily to return to this country, has accomplished some useful exploration, and demonstrated that the proposed steamer will become a most timely and invaluable assistant to the missionaries in the way of facilitating transportation and inter-communication. There are encouraging signs that the influence of the workers at this mission is extending to the interior, and that the representatives of its schools and churches who are engaged in secular callings are a credit to the same, and are advertising the value of Christian training and character to those who are as yet strangers to both. One faithful laborer has, during the last twelvemonth, fallen at his post, after a service of fifteen years, Rev. J. M. Williams. His name will go to swell that ever-increasing list of heroic workers, who sacrificed their lives for Africa's redemption. A native preacher has taken the vacated place, and so the holy work goes on, though the brave workers here and there are summoned to leave their toil and go up to their exceeding great reward. It is a token at once significant and prophetic, that this successor of Mr. Williams, at the Kaw Mendi station, has a son now in Fisk University who will keep up the succession of workers in Africa, by in due time returning to the land of his fathers as a herald of the gospel of Christ. Three other youthful representatives of the Mendi Mission are at school at Hampton and Atlanta, their very presence here being fraught with good to fellow-students from the colored people of this country and to the land from which they came as the first fruits in the way of missionary consecration. At the last Annual Meeting, great interest was excited by the expedition of Superintendent Ladd and Dr. Snow, which had just been entered upon, to find on the upper Nile a suitable place for the proposed Arthington Mission. Much was hoped for from this resolute attempt to locate a new station in the region of the Sobat. These pioneers have safely returned, and bring their mature recommendations as to what is expedient to be done in the district, where that generous patron of African missions, Mr. Arthington, was so urgent something should be done. On the whole, this Association has made a noble record, in concert with other missionary societies in the dark continent. The chapter of what has been endured and achieved by its representatives will be one of imperishable glory in the annals of this body. Whatever changes the future may bring, for the good brave work of the past, we and all lovers of Africa will praise God. Never was its mission work in the far-away land more promiseful, and we can but believe that days of large ingathering and of immediate advance are before it, so that past sacrifices and toils will not have been in vain, and the speedier successes of coming days will justify a missionary policy of the boldest and broadest character. M. McG. DANA, Chairman.

After singing "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus, &c.," Rev. H. M. Ladd, D. D., of New York, gave account of explorations on the Upper Nile undertaken under the auspices of the Association.

The assembly sang "Yes! the Gospel Light is breaking," and Rev. M. E. Strieby, D. D., Secretary of the Association, presented a paper on an Exchange of Missions with the American Board. Voted that a special committee be appointed, to whom this paper shall be referred.

Rev's M. McG. Dana, A. P. Foster, Geo. Thompson, Hon. A. C. Barstow, Albert Salisbury, Esq., Rev's O. H. White, H. M. Ladd, J. H. Fairchild, and T. D. Robertson, Esq., were named as such committee.

After singing "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone," Rev. James Brand, D. D., of Ohio, presented the report of the Committee on the Chinese Missions as follows:

Your Committee on the Chinese Missions of the Association have agreed upon the following report:

There are three points which demand special thanksgiving to God.

First. The manifestly wise policy of the Association on the whole question of Christianizing the Chinese. This appears (1) in the noble stand it has taken and the work it is doing for education and Christianity on our Pacific coast, thus uttering a perpetual rebuke to the intolerable selfishness and barbarism of political parties in the passage of the anti-Chinese bill; (2) in the admirable disposition made of the proposed mission in China itself.

The desire of earnest Christian Chinamen in California that a mission be started in Southern China, which might be a "rallying centre" of Christian influence for converted men on their return home, and from which they could "go forth to carry the gospel to their countrymen," is a desire which must commend itself to reason; and the readiness of these Christian Chinamen to aid such a movement with contributions of their own is worthy of the highest commendation. Moreover, that Hong Kong, that great gateway of Chinese emigration, that district wrenched away from the Chinese by English selfishness and rapacity forty years ago, in the ignominious struggle of the opium war, should be the place agreed upon for that mission, seemed peculiarly fitting. But that this Association should be the body to establish the mission there, thus distracting attention from its great peculiar work at home, and dividing the contributions of American Congregational churches between two foreign Congregational boards in China, could hardly seem wise to any. How gratifying then to learn that this Association, holding to the purpose of no more missions abroad, has successfully arranged with the American Board to accept and carry forward this movement at Hong Kong. The principle of simplicity of arrangement and economical division of labor among our great benevolent societies is thus endorsed once for all.

Second. The second point calling for thanksgiving is the marked success of the work among the Chinese on the Pacific coast. There is no more promising work for China, as a whole, in all the world, than that now being done by the California Chinese Mission. Its fifteen schools, with thirty-one teachers, eleven of whom are converted Chinamen, twenty-five hundred scholars—an increase of almost a thousand over last year, and a hundred and six conversions to Christ, all show that it is no longer a mere experiment. The efficient Christian organization known as the Congregational Association of Christian Chinese, with its missionary spirit and liberal contributions, demonstrate the fact on our own soil that the Chinamen, like others, when touched by the spirit of Christ, are a power for righteousness.

Third. The recent influx of 25,000 Chinamen, hastening to reach our shores before the pagan bill of Congress should go into effect, has suddenly increased the demand for laborers and money.

The work on the Pacific coast ought not to receive less than $13,000 the coming year, that the 125,000 Chinese already in the country may, during the ten years of national disgrace, be quietly fitted to become a great Christian power for the elevation of their countrymen.

While the anti-Chinese outcry from California has filled the ears of the nation, your Committee wishes to recognize with thanksgiving the noble work which many of the Christians of that State have done and are doing for China and for Christ. The Chinese missions of the Association are at present restricted to the State of California. But your Committee are impressed with the importance to the Association, in this part of its work, of full and exact information as to the condition of the Chinese population throughout the country, and as to the work done in their behalf by various Christian agencies, and especially by the local churches of various denominations. And we recommend that a systematic inquiry be instituted on this subject, the result of which shall be reported at the next annual meeting.

The report was adopted, and after singing "Jesus, lover of my Soul," and the benediction by Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., recess was taken until evening.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The services of the evening were begun with prayer by Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., and the hymn "Christ for the world we sing."

An address was delivered by Rev. A. G. Haygood, D. D., of Georgia, after which the assembly sang, "Blest be the tie that binds."

Addresses followed by Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, of New York, and Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D. D., of Rhode Island, with the hymn, "My Country 'tis of Thee," and after the benediction by Rev. L. T. Chamberlain, D. D., of Connecticut, a recess was taken until Thursday morning.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The morning prayer-meeting was led by Rev. Moses Smith, of Michigan. The business service was opened with prayer by Prof. A. H. Currier of Oberlin.

The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

Pres. W. E. Brooks, of Tillotson Normal School in Texas, presented the claims of that institution.

On motion Rev. C. T. Collins, of Ohio, and Gen. E. Whittlesey, of the District of Columbia, were added to the Committee on the Transfer of African Missions.

The report on Indian Missions was presented by Rev. A. H. Ross, D. D., of Michigan, as follows:

The Committee on Indian Missions would report:

First. That the work of this Association among the Indians—a work so small that the expenditure for it is only about one-fifth that for the Chinese in America—has been prospered during the past year. The blessing of the Master rests upon it, and our thanksgiving and prayers should be stimulated thereby.

Second. We heartily approve of its plan to combine an industrial with a literary education, that the boys and girls may take the lead in Christian arts as in Christian culture. Yet the experiment of training them in schools far from home should be carefully watched, lest there be formed a gulf of separation between the tribe and its educated youth, a gulf so deep that those returning from Hampton shall, through social longings, lapse into the customs of their fathers, or else shall stand aloof from their people in cultured isolation. We should subordinate individual advancement to tribal advantage; the benefit of the few to that of the many; and for this purpose schools are being established nearer home. Hence we recommend the careful study of the results of the experiment.

Third. We would earnestly press the evangelistic work among the Indians. They are to stay with us. They are soon to be of us, citizens with us of this Republic. So much is written in the providence of God. To educate them is not enough. The federal government is increasingly engaged in this. But its Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Hon. H. Price, in his forthcoming report says: "Civilization is a plant of exceeding slow growth unless supplemented by Christian teaching and influence." "In no other manner and by no other means, in my judgment, can our Indian population be so speedily and permanently reclaimed from barbarism, idolatry, and savage life as by the educational and missionary operations of the Christian people of our country." Christianized education is the watchword, the vitalizing of all the truth of God with the love and spirit of God. This means more than schools; it means Christian schools and Christian churches. For this very work this Association has been ordained of God, and it should enlarge its work to the demands of the hour. The proposed exchange with the American Board means, for this society, enlargement. The rapid progress of the Indian towards citizenship demands enlargement. God calls this Association to enlarge its Indian missions that it may prepare both the negro and the Indian for citizenship and God.

Fourth. We believe that the welfare of the Indian demands the abolition of both tribal and reservation relations, the allotment of their lands in severalty, their amenability to State and federal laws and courts. And while we recognize with gratitude the past attempts of our national government in these directions, we need to press upon Congress the duty of renewing its endeavors and enlarging its appropriations for schools, that it may speedily turn these wards into industrious citizens. And for this end we would recommend that a committee of nine be appointed by this Association to memorialize Congress to place the Indian by the side of the negro and other citizens in the right to buy, own, and sell property, real and personal, to work at what he pleases, and live where he pleases, to have the same standing before the law, to vote and hold office, in short to possess all the rights and obligations of citizens of the Republic.

On motion, the report was adopted.

The report of the Committee on Educational Work was presented by Rev. Geo. F. Wright, of Ohio, as follows:

The Committee to whom has been referred the subject of the educational work of this Association, beg leave to report that we heartily approve the policy of the Association by which it has put its main efforts upon the Christian education of teachers for the colored people. Our Congregational churches, while it is important to plant them, are not the first need. They can enter but slowly. The people do not appreciate them nor ask for them. Education they beseech us for. The lower common-school education we can supply only here and there. We thank God, and we recognize it as a blessed evidence of the growth of healthy public sentiment, that every year more and more attention is paid in the States of the South to free public education, and that in this the colored people are having their part, and that the expense of supporting their schools is more and more cheerfully borne. But the States which are willing to educate children are not all ready as yet to educate their teachers. Whether the common schools of the South are good, depends on whether the schools for teachers are good. We believe there is no other agency which is doing so much to secure teachers for the colored youth of the South as the American Missionary Association. This is a task which does not carry with it ecclesiastical profit; but it carries the blessing of the Great Head of the Church, as it has the good will of good men in every communion.

Apprehending the paramount importance of this work, we would impress upon the officers of this Association, what they doubtless feel, the importance of raising their chartered institutions and normal schools to the very highest possible grade. Bricks and mortar are necessary, good buildings are noble, but the first demand is for good teaching, for the very best instruction which Northern culture can secure. A few extra hundreds paid to a competent principal may be of more real use than many thousands paid for a building. Our consecrated wealth will provide the buildings. That we do not fear for; but it needs great and rare executive wisdom to see that these buildings shall be put to their best use for the best instruction. Now is the molding time for the colored people, and they need to be molded aright. Good education in barracks is better than poor education in a palace. It has been the boast of our constituency that they have known how to educate. They have supported the best colleges in the North. They are now supporting the best schools in the South. We are glad that, apprehending these duties, the Association has just appointed a competent Superintendent of Education, whose special business it will be to see to it that the standard of education shall be raised to the highest possible grade. We would especially recommend that all our institutions be carefully examined, that we call nothing college or university whose course of instruction falls below the grade which belongs to the name, and that, if it be necessary in any case, inferior teachers be weeded out and their places supplied by such as are competent and earnest. This we urge, while knowing that our institutions, as a rule, are models in all the South, because we would not have the Association satisfied with that to which we have already attained, and because we believe that our schools can and should be made so superior to other institutions that they shall attract white pupils as well as black, and break down the walls of caste.

We see with satisfaction the progress made in Howard and Talladega in theological education, which has been followed by the organization of numerous prosperous churches. We would urge that, as soon as possible, Fisk and Straight universities be supplied with similar active departments of theological instruction.

Industrial departments have been made very useful in Hampton and Tougaloo. These institutions are models in these as in other respects. The explanation rests in part in the great enthusiasm or ability of the gentlemen whom we are so fortunate as to have in charge of those institutions, and who have a special gift in developing these departments, and in part in the fortunate locality in which these institutes are placed. While we would be glad to have similar instruction given in Fisk, Atlanta, and elsewhere, we recognize the great difficulty of doing similar work in cities. Domestic labor should be encouraged, to relieve the expense of board; but experiments in establishing schools of carpentry, blacksmithing, nursing, etc., while excellent, need to be made with the greatest care, and under the supervision of such teachers as possess the requisite enthusiasm and faith.

We would especially urge, in this connection, on those who manage our institutions, that they impress on the pupils the virtues of thrift and self-support. The students who have come to us are no longer ex-slaves. They have all been reared in freedom. They should be required to pay a reasonable amount for tuition. This should be imposed as an educating influence. They should be made to understand that when education is given it represents a money value as well as does the food that goes into the stomach. More and more should they be required to pay their tuition, if it be but a dollar a month, that they may understand its value. The aggregate of this will be of considerable help, as it will elevate the educational notions of the people.

We are glad to see that our chartered institutions are making progress toward independence of the Association. For this they should work by the increase of their endowments for instruction. We express our great thanks to the generous friends who have so nobly given for these purposes, and especially to the wise and generous benevolence of Mrs. Stone, which has made this a marked year in the history of our institutions. May the Lord reward her, and may her example stir up many more.

Our work would not be complete without a more formal and a most cordial recognition of the thanks we owe to the self-denying teachers of our institutions. They are men and women of most admirable culture; they have made the greatest sacrifices; they have entered with the warmest enthusiasm into their work. We have been greatly pleased with the professional enthusiasm of those at the head of some of our excellent normal schools, to whom no words of praise can be extravagant. The progress in nearly all our institutions has been such as to merit our heartiest appreciation. We commend this, our great work, to the generous hearts of our Christian constituency.

Mr. B. F. Ousley, a graduate of Fisk University, was presented to the Association, and spoke upon the report. He was followed by Prof. A. L. Salisbury, recently appointed Superintendent of the school work of the Association, who gave an interesting sketch of a visit among the schools at the South. On motion the report was adopted.

Rev. E. M. Cravath, of Tennessee, read a paper on "Higher Education."

Rev. Arthur Little, D. D., of Illinois, presented the report of the Committee on Church Work as follows:

The church work of the Association during the year has been steady growthful, and encouraging. Quite the average of progress has been attained. This will readily appear by reference to a few statistics. Six new churches have been added to the list, making in all eighty-three. Ten houses of worship have been erected. It is a remarkable fact that every one of the eighty-three churches, except one whose minister died a short time ago, has a pastor. And equally remarkable that fifty-one of these pastors are native preachers. As showing the value of the theological seminaries established by the Association, and the ability and usefulness of trained colored men, the average membership of sixty-eight in each church exceeds the average of all the Congregational churches west of Pennsylvania. The addition of 709 on profession, and the conversion of about an equal number who have found other church homes, make an average of seventeen conversions to each church, an increase of 20 per cent. Where else can an equally good exhibition be made? Only about one to a church throughout the country. There are seven churches which have added from twenty-five to forty-five to their membership. There are only six that report no additions. So far as reported all but eleven churches contribute money for church purposes. Thirty-seven report benevolent contributions. One church reports $350, another church reports $158, another church reports $86, another church reports $83, another church reports $60, another church reports $50. Seventy-four Sunday-schools are reported. One Sunday-school has over 500 members, another 400 members, ten schools 200 members, and seven schools 100 members. These figures indicate vitality in the churches, for Sunday-schools do not thrive very well, excepting where there is activity in the churches with which they are associated. In nine localities precious revivals have been enjoyed. The local associations indicate growth in fellowship and power. When we remember that these results have been reached amid manifold hindrances and discouragements arising from ignorance, prejudice, superstition and vice, we may well exclaim, "What hath God wrought?" "Thank the Lord and take courage." But the best results of the year do not admit of tabulation. The unwritten history of these churches are the tears, the struggles, the sacrifices, the prayers, the burdens silently, uncomplainingly borne. This is their real history. God knows it all, and those who have been the patient workers in its making will be remembered in that day when he counts up his jewels. Then it must not be forgotten that these churches represent almost infinitely more in the South than their small number would indicate. They are tonic in their influence upon all the other churches around them. Their simple New Testament polity, which encourages self-government and self-development, their high standard of ethics, which is a constant rebuke to an emotional religion apart from morality, make them peculiarly lights shining in dark places, and invest them with that quiet, but inscrutable transforming power that belongs to good leaven.

In this has been vindicated the wisdom of the policy which has preferred quality to quantity, good character to great numbers, intelligent piety to ignorant devotion, a pure life to a noisy profession. Without doubt the Association might have doubled its present number of churches during these seventeen years. It has cost something to move slowly in this matter.

We have said that the past year has witnessed the average growth. The rate of progress during the last seventeen years has been uniformly very constant, about five churches a year. Ten years ago six new churches and ten houses of worship were reported. The question now comes whether it is not quite time to change the rate by doubling it, at least to quicken the pace. The church work is initial and fundamental. It underlies all else. The Association is in the South for no other purpose than to make Christian manhood and womanhood. For this glorious work the church of God is the divinely appointed agency. Others are auxiliary. There is but one opinion as to the sore need of more churches. The Macedonian cry is heard in many directions.

It has been demonstrated that Congregational churches can exist and thrive west of the Hudson and south of Mason and Dixon's line.

The polity and faith of the Pilgrim Fathers is not for the elect few but the unsaved many. And if the methods, influence, and example of our churches in the South are greatly stimulating to the churches round about them, that is an additional argument for their multiplication.

It can hardly be doubted that the schools and universities, by their direct and indirect influence, have prepared sufficient material for more churches. What are eighty-three among the millions who sit in darkness? It must be kept distinctly in mind that educational facilities are multiplying in the South, and that to educate without Christianizing is possibly to augment the perils instead of the defenses of the Republic.

The sanctifying and consecrating forces must be held in close contact with the secular, so that education may be hallowed, or it will end in defeat. We must hold steadfastly to our fundamental principle that nothing but the gospel of Christ will uplift and save the South. And while our educational institutions are thoroughly Christian, yet the church must be the energizing and radiating centre of Christian influence and power. Brethren, does not the church work need and deserve a fresh impulse? Ought not the momentum gathered during the seventeen years to accelerate its progress very greatly now? Would not all hearts be gladdened, if the next annual report should bring tidings of twelve instead of six churches organized under the favoring auspices of this society? Opportunities are (I was about to say waiting, but they don't wait) passing. Much has been irrevocably lost. Much yet remains. Ideas are changing rapidly. We had feared that crystallization would occur earlier than this, and society become so incrusted with prejudice and hardened by vice that the helpful activities of this and kindred societies would be hindered or defeated. But God is mercifully holding the elements still in solution that churches and schools, like ours, may become the dominating centres of the new civilization. Let these blessed centres of light, healing, influence, be multiplied, surcharged with transforming energy, with assimilating power. The multiplicand already exists; men and money must furnish, under God, the multiplier.

The adoption of the report was seconded by Rev. C. O. Brown, of Michigan, and after brief addresses by himself and Mr. Geo. W. Moore, a graduate of Fisk University, the report was adopted.

After the benediction by Rev. W. H. Ward, D.D., of New York, a recess was taken until 2 P. M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The afternoon session was opened by singing "All hail the power of Jesus' name." Prayer was offered by Rev. T. E. Monroe, of Ohio.

The Committee on Transfer of Missions reported, through its Chairman, Rev. M. Mc G. Dana, of Minnesota, as follows:

The Committee to whom was referred Secretary Strieby's report, recommending the simplification of the work of the American Missionary Association, by withdrawing from the foreign field, and assuming more fully the work among the Indians to which it is now providentially invited, approve in general of its proposals; but beg to recommend to the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, in considering and settling the questions involved, the following points which they suggest as conditions in effecting the changes contemplated:

1. That the entire Mendi Mission, with its long and checkered history, representing such heroic sufferings and achievements, and in the sustenance of which our British friends have so generously aided us, be continued by transferring it to the A. B. C. F. M. or to the United Brethren, who have a mission near by and who will entertain overtures for the same, and that to this end the churches, schools, and other property be made over to either party, with the interest of the Avery fund, in the one case at once and in the other for a limited time, as the Committee may arrange. That the steamer John Brown, to which the Sabbath-schools of our churches have contributed some $7,000, be built, and be given over to such parties as will use it for the purposes originally contemplated.

2. That the interest in, and funds for, the Arthington Mission be, so far as may be, transferred to the A. B. C. F. M., and that failing, to the United Presbyterians who are doing such excellent work in the Nile Valley.

3. That this Association will assume the Indian Mission in Dakota offered it by the A. B. C. F. M., and will withdraw from the foreign fields, and arrange ultimately for the transference of the interest of the Avery fund to the American Board.

And your Committee propose for your adoption the following resolution, covering the adjudication of this question:

Resolved, That the matter of accepting the Dakota Mission from the American Board, and of transferring our African Missions to that Board or some other organization, be referred to the Executive Committee with power, provided that it be made certain that the Mendi Mission, so dear to the hearts of many of the Association, be in some way sustained hereafter.

Voted to accept and adopt the report with the resolution accompanying.

President E. A. Ware of Atlanta University presented the following petition:

We, the undersigned ministers and teachers, representing the work of the American Missionary Association, mainly in the State of Georgia, respectfully petition the annual meeting of the Association about to assemble at Cleveland, Ohio, that they appoint a committee of five, more or less, who shall report at the annual meeting in 1883 with reference to the policy that should govern the Association and its representatives in matters suggested by the following questions:

First. Is it the mission of the Association to work solely among the three despised races, so called, or through its work for these races to labor for the upbuilding of other people without distinction of race as rapidly as they can be brought within the sphere of its influence?

Second. Should it or should it not be the policy of the Association to establish separate churches or schools for different races?

Third. What should be the relations of comity between the Association and our other benevolent societies when undertaking to do missionary work of the same nature in the same field?

Fourth. What light, if any, is shed upon the foregoing questions by the history of the foundation and early work of the Association?

We would suggest that the committee be instructed to invite correspondence from the officers of the Association, from the officers of our other missionary societies, from all workers in the field, and from others interested, and that the report be published in the religious press at least two months before the annual meeting of 1883.

Voted to refer the petition to the Executive Committee.

The Nominating Committee reported the following as the Committee on the Constitution: Hon. W. B. Washburn; Rev. G. M. Boynton; Rev. A. H. Plumb, D. D.; Rev. L. W. Bacon, D. D.; Rev. W. T. The report was adopted and the officers declared elected.

The Association was then addressed by Rev. J. M. Gregory, D.D., of Washington, D.C., representing the missionary work of the Baptist Churches in the South; Rev. R. S. Rust, D.D., of Ohio, representing the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Mr. Elkanah Beard, of Indiana, representing the work of the Society of Friends in the Southern field.

A resolution was offered by Rev. S. Wolcott, D.D., of Ohio, and unanimously adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That, having listened with deep interest to the statements of honored representatives of several Christian denominations respecting the mission work which these churches are prosecuting among the colored people, we place on record, as an Association, our hearty sympathy with the benevolent work prosecuted by others; that we extend to these brethren our cordial fellowship, and bid them our fervent Godspeed, and that we will gladly coöperate with Christians of every name, in extending to the colored people of our land the benefits of a Christian education and the blessings of the Gospel of Christ.

Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., Field Superintendent of the Association, read a paper on "The New South."

The concluding address of the afternoon was made by Secretary Strieby, of the Association, representing the Congregational Churches.

The report of the Committee on Finance was presented by J. G. W. Cowles, Esq., as follows:

Your Committee on Finance beg leave to report that they have examined the Treasurer's statements of receipts and expenditures and find them properly certified as correct by the auditors. Also the trial balance, and the list of trust funds, and the books of accounts are so certified.

The trust funds appear to be securely invested and wisely administered for the purposes for which they were created.

We find that the accounts of the Treasurer are carefully kept and that the control and disbursement of the current funds of the Association are conducted in a thoroughly systematic and business-like manner, with ample safeguards against error and loss.

Your Committee take pleasure in commending the wisdom, fidelity and economy of the officers and Executive Committee in the financial administration of the great trusts confided to their care.

It is gratifying to find that the expenditures of the Association have been so carefully guarded and distributed that for six consecutive years last past they have not exceeded the annual income. During this period a large indebtedness previously incurred has been wholly paid and no new indebtedness created in any department of its work.

The balance in the treasury is $789.83, after paying all bills due to September 30.

There is every reason to expect that this satisfactory condition of things will be continued through the generosity of the churches to this cause.

At the last annual meeting, your Committee on Finance recommended that the churches increase their contributions from $243,000 to $300,000 for the then current year; and the reports submitted at this meeting show that this was done within $3,000. This additional sum of $54,000 has been used partly in completing the college buildings at Talladega, Ala., and Strieby Hall, at Tougaloo, Miss. It has also greatly helped in the support of needy students, besides materially increasing the working force and general church and school efficiency.

It is worthy of remark that almost every dollar of this increased contribution has done effective work in the mission fields, since, while the receipts for the past two years have been more than $100,000 larger than in the two years next preceding them, the expense of raising and disbursing these funds and managing the affairs of the Association has increased less than $400 per annum, thus showing that the Association is fully equipped for a much larger work without additional cost for the machinery of administration. This fact constitutes a strong appeal to the benevolent who wish their gifts applied without waste or diminution to the good ends for which they are bestowed.

These more ample facilities for church and educational work bring with them larger demands for funds, so that simply to preserve its efficiency in fields already occupied the Association requires an annual increase in contributions. Besides, new demands are continually made for new foundations in different places.

From the reports and papers submitted at this meeting, we gather that $5,000 more than last year will be needed to increase the work among the Chinese in California; $20,000 more for the enlargement of the work among the Indians; $25,000 more for the support of schools and churches among the Freedmen, and $25,000 more towards the building of Smith College at Little Rock, Ark.

In view of all these facts and reasons, the urgency of which all friends of the Association will readily appreciate, your Committee recommend that at least $50,000 be added to the current income of the Association for general uses during the next fiscal year, and express the earnest hope that the further sum of $25,000 may be obtained for special purposes, making a grand total for 1882–3 of $375,000.

J. G. W. COWLES, Chairman.

On motion, the report was adopted.

The minutes up to this point were read and approved, and referred to the Executive Committee for publication.

Voted, That the Secretaries be authorized to complete the minutes, and that after the evening session the Association stand adjourned.

THURSDAY EVENING.

A mass-meeting was held in the Tabernacle. The music was furnished by a choir of Oberlin students, under the leadership of Prof. F. B. Rice. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Phillips, of Massachusetts, and addresses were delivered on "The National Problem of Southern Education," by Ex-President Hayes, of Ohio; President White of Cornell University, and Hon. J. L. M. Curry, of Virginia.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Resolved, That the hearty thanks of this Association be extended to the pastors and members of the Congregational churches and to the citizens of Cleveland, for their generous welcome and hospitality to the large number of representatives in attendance on this its thirty-sixth anniversary; to W. H. Doan, Esq., for the use of the Tabernacle, and especially to the Plymouth Church and Society for the use of its beautiful house of worship. It also desires to express its sincere gratitude to the choir of Plymouth Church, and to Professor Rice and the students of Oberlin, who have assisted in the service of song; to the press of the city for their reports, and to different railroads for their liberality, and to Rev. C. T. Collins, Rev. H. M. Tenny, Rev. N. M. Calhoun, and L. F. Mellen, Esq., for their untiring and efficient services, which have contributed so greatly to the grand success of this meeting.

GEO. R. MERRILL,
S. M. NEWMAN, } Secretaries.

REPORT

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Coming to this Thirty-sixth Anniversary of the American Missionary Association, again to give account of its trust, the Executive Committee, in its first words, would present an offering of devout thanksgiving to the God of Missions for His abounding blessings bestowed through the year upon the labors of its officers and missionaries at home and abroad.

OBITUARY.

Dea. John C. Whitin, Vice-President of the Association, died at Whitinsville, Mass. April 23, 1882. He was born March 1, 1807, and devoted the most of his life to the manufacturing of cotton goods. As a business man he exhibited great intelligence and integrity, while as a Christian gentleman, his sympathies were quick, warm and abiding. He was a deacon of the church with which he was connected for 48 years, and Superintendent of the Sunday-school for about 40 years. His gifts to benevolent objects were frequent and sometimes large. The Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute received from him $10,000 for the completion of the audience-room in Virginia Hall, and $2,000 additional at a later period. At his death, he made suggestions as to donations to different missionary and educational objects, which were carried out with promptness by his family. He held many offices of honor and trust, and was a power for good wherever he was known.

Wm. E. Whiting, Vice-President of the Association died June 3, 1882. His name was one of the most familiar in the annals of the American Missionary Association, no complete list of officers ever having been published without his name. He was on the Executive Committee from 1846 to 1871 and served as Assistant Treasurer from 1865 to 1875; from 1876 till his death he held the position of Vice-President. In all Mr. Whiting's relations to his associates in the office and to the workers in the field, he was ever gentlemanly and courteous; in the discharge of his duties, he was faithful and conscientious. He was among the first to enlist in the great anti-slavery struggle, and in the martyr age of that contest, he bore his share of contumely, reproach and danger. In private life and as a member of the church of Christ, he rendered himself a brother beloved and one long to be remembered for his good words and work.

C. D. Talcott, Vice-President, died at Talcottville, Conn., July 17, 1882. He was a large manufacturer of marked ability, and identified with the industrial enterprises of Tolland County, contributing to its many improvements for educational and material progress. For many years he was deacon of the Congregational Church, and a well-known and liberal giver to its various objects of charity.

Edgar Ketchum, Esq., Treasurer of this Association from 1865 to 1879, died March 3, 1882. His position was one of responsibility and supervision, but not of active duty, and was without salary. He was also the legal counsellor of the Association for many years. Mr. Ketchum was admitted to the bar in 1834; in 1841 he was made Commissioner of Public Funds for this State; in 1861 he was appointed by President Lincoln, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Ninth District of New York; and in 1867 he was made a Register in Bankruptcy by Chief-Justice Chase, which position he held till the time of his death. He early identified himself with the anti-slavery cause, and was ardent and constant in his endeavors to promote it. His house was fired by the rioters in 1863. He was for a long time President of the Board of Managers of the House of Refuge, on Randall's Island, to whose interest he gave untiring and uncompensated time and attention. He was a man of fine personal presence, of very genial manners, of active business habits, and a devoted Christian.

Rev. J. M. Williams, of the Mendi Mission, died at Freetown, Feb. 21. He was born in British Guiana in 1828. His grandmother was a native of West Central Africa, and during Mr. Williams' childhood exacted from him a promise that when he became a man he would carry the word of God to her native country. He was educated in Ebenezer Chapel School, where he became assistant to the minister with whom he studied theology. In 1861 he went to Africa, and with the exception of three years spent in England, remained there till the time of his death. Five years of his mission life were spent at Kaw Mendi, the first station occupied in Africa after the return of the Amistad captives. He was regarded by those visiting the missions on the West Coast as a missionary of uncommon efficiency and usefulness.

GENERAL SURVEY.

FREEDMEN.

These our fellow-citizens are proving the wisdom of the Government in putting upon them the responsibilities of the elective franchise as at once their defense and their process of education. Taking into account their own aspiration and the force put beneath them by the scheme of Christian schools, we should expect, as we find, a tremendous uplift among them. In this we have assurance as to the future, provided the appliances be worked with increasing vigor. There is in this matter no halting place for the nation. We must lift them up, or they will drag us down. As one of these helping forces, we come to our own

Educational Work.

Our system of schools during the year has been working with its full force, and its appliances have been materially extended. The large additions made to our accommodations provided the year before were at once taxed to their utmost, thus proving that our appreciation of the necessity was correct, and that our appeal for the extension had not been made too soon nor too strong. And the enlargement secured during this closing year is now met with the response, "we, too, are full to overflowing." Of the buildings put up the year before, the two dormitories at Hampton, one for Indian and one for colored youth, have had no empty rooms; at the Atlanta University, the wing built to the Girls' Hall by the Stone Fund did not have capacity enough for the overflow of the main structure; the Strieby Hall at Tougaloo, brought to completion and dedicated since the opening of the year, had to be supplemented in an extempore way; the Stone Hall at Talladega for boys was filled; the Stone Hall at New Orleans for girls, and for the family of teachers, was only opened to find the need of a boys' hall; and the Tillotson Institute at Austin, turning the ends of halls into apartments, calls loudly for another building.

During this year, at the Fisk University, the Livingstone Missionary Hall has been brought to completion and furnished, providing dormitories for 121 male students, also a chapel, library, and recitation rooms. The total cost, $60,000, came from the Stone Fund.

This structure, which, in its name, embraces the highest idea of the greatest African explorer, is next Monday to come to its dedication, and some of our friends are to go hence to participate in that service—the address to be delivered by Professor Northrop of Yale College. At the Atlanta University, the Stone Hall, as the central building of the group, has been erected at an expense of $40,000, and will soon be ready for occupancy. Greatly commodious, and comely enough to relieve the plainness of the Halls on either side, it will furnish a chapel, library, reading room and recitation rooms. This structure, as well as the Stone Halls at Nashville, Talladega and New Orleans, has had the wise supervision of Prof. T. N. Chase, who has occupied, meantime, his favorite chair of Greek, and who, as a builder, has shown the rare gift of always keeping within his appropriations. At Macon, Ga., to the Lewis High School we have built a two-room "annex," to which also was added a wing for the library which is there growing up. At Athens, Ga., our Knox Institute has been renovated, and in it a chapel fitted up for the new church. At Mobile, Ala., our Emerson Institute, that had been burned the second time, has been rebuilt upon an enlarged scale, and at an expense not far beyond the insurance money. At Talladega, the President's house has been finished, and two cottages on land adjoining our premises have been bought for the use of two of our mission families, one of them being named after Mr. Seth Wadhams, of Chicago, who gave the $1,500 for the purchase. At Marion, a house was built for a parish school. At Athens, the Trinity School Building, to accommodate 150 scholars and the family of teachers, has been completed at a cost to the Association of $8,000. For this the colored people themselves made the needed two hundred thousand brick, mixing the clay by the tramp of their one small steer, and they have their proportionate interest in the property. At the laying of the corner stone, the local editor, the post-master, and the Principal of the Ladies' Seminary of the place, made appreciative addresses, and Miss Wells had her Jubilee. In Little Rock, Ark., at a cost of $5,500, we have bought and fenced a tract of 14 acres, overlooking that city, as a site for the Edward Smith College, which has been chartered by the State, being so named from a gentleman in Massachusetts, who gave the money to buy the land, and who to a surplus now in hand intends to add enough to make his donation $19,000. This institution is greatly needed in that grandly opening State, where there is, as yet, no provision for the higher education of the colored people. This last planting will about complete our circle of State institutions. At Fayetteville, Ark., our Howard School Building has been overhauled, and in it we have re-opened our own school. So at Lexington, Ky., we have refitted our High School Building, and have resumed our own school, the city for the last six years having had the use of the house. At Camp Nelson, the trustees of the Academy are erecting a new three-story building under the lead of the Rev. John G. Fee.

At the South we count 8 chartered institutions, 11 high and normal schools, and 38 common schools—in all 57. During the year we have employed 241 teachers, an increase over the last year of 11. Of these, 13 have performed the duties of matrons and 15 have been engaged in the business departments. The number of students has been 9,608, a gain of 500 over last year. Of these, 72 have been in the theological department, 28 in the law, 104 in the collegiate, 139 in the preparatory, 2,542 in the normal, 1,103 in the grammar, 2,185 in the intermediate, and 3,481 in the primary.

The theological departments at Howard, Talladega and Straight have been doing their good work in training upon the ground just the sort of men who are needed for the peculiar work to be done. Fisk University has three of its graduates in the study of theology at Oberlin, and one in a divinity school at Yale. The law department of the Straight, with a faculty made up of five of the best lawyers in New Orleans, has had 20 students, who are of both races, and who upon their diplomas, by the statute, are admitted to the bar of all the courts of the State. We are pushing more and more the lines of industrial training. The two farms at Talladega and Tougaloo have this year been put into better shape than ever before. Tougaloo raises fine fruits for the Chicago market and fine stock for the surrounding country. Both raise much of the beef and pork and vegetables for their own use. Atlanta University is pushing fine gardening, teaching the girls of the senior class cookery, and is planning to go into a school of carpentry. The Fisk this year, under a trained hospital nurse, introduces hygienics and cookery. The LeMoyne, at Memphis, teaches cooking, nursing and sewing. All of our boarding-schools require a certain amount of work. The Storrs school, in Atlanta, has opened this fall a genuine kindergarten under an expert teacher. The Avery Institute, at Charleston, is going into the same, with training also in the use of tools.

But to all intellectual and secular training there needs to be added moral and religious cultivation. This is kept as our steady aim. No teacher is sent out who is not in fellowship with some church and who does not profess to be actuated in going by a missionary spirit. The large number of conversions, the frequent revivals in these institutions, and the developed fruit of good living, attest the fidelity of these missionary teachers. The judgment day alone can reveal the influence of these consecrated workers, the most of whom are women, upon the life and character of the multitude of youth who have been under their care. The pupils are watched over in the class-room, in the place of religious assembly, and out of school hours. They are invited to private conferences for the correction of habits and views, and there the concerns of the soul are considered; scholars are prayerfully followed up even into vacation by correspondence, until not a few in these ways are led to Christ and into His church. The most of our young men, who are examined for entering the ministry, in giving their religious history, trace it back to the time when they were led to the Saviour by some of their teachers, whose richest reward it must be to see these young men coming into the ministry with ample equipment largely through their own influence. Women's work for women is the modern discovery of missions. Of those who go abroad, their work is largely that of teaching. Our lady workers, of whom we have 200, besides the 40 in Howard, Hampton and Berea, who are reckoned as teachers, are usually missionaries as really as those who go abroad, or go South under that title. Of this last class of workers, of whom we have twelve, there are some who are very apostles, in the garb of womanly delicacy. They teach mothers and daughters things which belong to their sex; they lead to the tidiness and comfort of home; they gather the maternal meetings and lead in the same; they labor in revivals; they become assistant pastors, being often, as the young pastors testify, their own best teachers and guides. The soldiers of the Union are worthy of all the praise and the gratitude they have received, but here has been a small army of heroines, who, forgetful of the best chances, came after the pomp of war, to serve not for three years, but for ten, twelve, fifteen, seventeen years, growing gray by work and by the anxieties and privations of the field, breaking down in health and wearing out their lives, ostracised and despised by those about them, who ought to have given sympathy and succor, and not sustained as they should have been at home, of whom the world is not worthy, but who must have a large place in the heart of Him, who, in their isolation, has been the companion of each one, and who, at the last, shall say, "She hath done what she could, she hath chosen the good part."

Before the war and since, the wealthy people at the South had a full supply of colleges and seminaries, besides the free use of the best institutions in the North, so that their children were well educated. But there was a class of white people who could avail themselves of no such advantages and for whom there were no free public schools. As a consequence they fell into a distressing state of ignorance and poverty; they lost aspiration; they felt themselves in a hopeless class; and they are just there now. From the beginning, our institutions have been open to pupils of all races. As yet the colored youth have been almost alone in entering them. But it is thought that, as they shall be seen shooting ahead, as prejudice shall wear away, many of these worthy white young people will go where they can get an education, a better one, and at a less cost, than anywhere else. A Confederate colonel says that this will come about in ten years. Already in the medical department of the Howard University, of the 93 students two-thirds are white, while some of the Professors are colored, though accomplished in their profession. In the law department of the Straight at New Orleans, there are more white than colored students. Some of the best teachers in the white public schools of Atlanta have visited the class-rooms of our University there, with the purpose frankly avowed of making improvement in the art of teaching. In the country white teachers have gone to those who had been trained at Atlanta to learn their normal methods of instruction and of management. May not such yet say, we will go to that training school for ourselves, and get those improvements at first hand? We have one notable illustration of what may be done, and that is at Berea, Ky. This college planted before the war by the Association, upon being opened after the war, allowed colored scholars to come. After some effervescence the institution settled into its color-blind method, until it has become a great power in the State with the colors in about equal proportion among the students and at the grand commencement convocations. Some of the young folks coming down from the mountains to Berea, say they would rather go there than to endure the manners of the aristocratic colleges. The citizens of Cabin Creek, Ky., our old ante-bellum battle ground, are just now erecting an Academy, with the money subscribed upon the condition of no caste. The influence of Berea College is felt up in all the mountain country. White youth come down there to get stores of knowledge to carry back. The Professors have gone through that region lecturing on education, holding teachers' institutes and preaching. At Clover Bottom, 20 miles out, they have gotten up such a mixed school, which is a success, and is now under the patronage of this Association. The Committee have decided to offer those mountain people the aid of our system, if they will only allow the very few colored scholars to enter the schools. Up there the colored children in a whole county are scarcely numerous enough to call for more than one school, and so the law forbidding such mixed public schools is a virtual closing of the doors of knowledge to this class. The Committee have made an appropriation for this work and have already had their Field Superintendent upon a tour of exploration—his report being favorable to kind, patient, persevering endeavor to get the school-master abroad through a region where in whole counties the few schoolhouses are cabins with scarcely a glass window in them.

In the growth of the educational department and in the purpose of the Committee to do the very best work in our institutions, it has been found needful to secure the service of an expert in school processes who should help to the most approved methods of organization, discipline, instruction and unification. Accordingly Mr. Albert Salisbury, who had been a Professor in the State Normal, at Whitewater, Wis., and a conductor of teachers' institutes, has been appointed Superintendent of Education, and has already entered upon service, giving promise of great effectiveness in his line. Doctor Roy will continue in his position as Field Superintendent.

Church Work.

At the first some of our best friends thought that the Association was too slow in its church work; but all now, we think, agree that the wisdom of experience justifies the process which mainly through our schools grows its own timber, out of which to build its churches, taking the young people thus trained and the adults who are converted to the standard of Christian living and away from the superstitions and immoralities of the old time. At first view this would seem to be a tedious process. But it is surprising how soon the youth run up to maturity and to become the leaders of churches, the best of which have come on by this nurture. Then there are some adult people, noble natures, of a childlike spirit, who gain by absorption and take on the ideas of the younger folks. In this way, through these seventeen years since the war, our churches have come on from two or three to number 83, which is an average of five a year. Nor are these merely skeleton churches. Every one of these 83 has a pastor, except one whose minister died a short time ago. Of the 73 ministers who serve these 83 churches, 22 are from the North, and 51 are native preachers. Every one of these churches except seven has its own house of worship, or chapel, and there are only four of these that depend upon the college chapels for their places of religious assembly. Some of these are rude in structure; the most are plain but comely; four or five are of brick and of commanding appearance; all are blessed sanctuaries. Many friends, in going through the South, are pleasantly disappointed in finding these churches so well housed. Nor, for young churches, are these deficient in encouraging numbers. They have a total of 5,641 members, an average of 68, while the average membership of the Congregational churches west of the Mississippi River is only 45, and of all west of Pennsylvania, 63. The additions on profession were 709; the Sunday-school scholars numbered 6,835; the amount raised for church purposes, $9,306, and the benevolent contributions reached $1,496.50.

It is beautiful to see how readily these plain people take up the New Testament idea of church government, and how this natural process tends to their education and discipline of character. Herein we find confirmation that the Apostle made no mistake in setting up such churches among the Christians of his day who had not been trained in New England. These churches in the South are known everywhere as insisting upon a high standard of ethics. Their example, their methods, their influence, are greatly stimulating to the churches round about them, so that by quality they make up in part for want of quantity. These churches are organized into seven conferences. Many persons have smiled upon reading the reports of these convocations, and have wondered how such an ecclesiastical body would seem, whether its members were not simply playing at an ecclesiastical parliament. Our suggestion is, come and see. If you were to come, you would find a fulfillment of the Saviour's words, "All ye are brethren," the white and the colored being members of the same body. You would find a rigidity of parliamentary usage. You would find literary exercises, discussions, reports, Sunday-school assemblies, devotional services going on after the manner of those with which you are familiar. Some of our brethren testify that these meetings seemed to afford as much intellectual and spiritual stimulus as those which they were accustomed to attend before going South. An additional feature of these gatherings is the presence and participation of the lady missionaries and teachers, whose reports are greatly interesting. In Alabama the conference has associated with it a Ladies' Missionary Society with auxiliaries in different parts of the State. The exercises of these women's meetings are not only to cultivate the missionary spirit, but to help the wives, mothers and daughters of this people to be missionaries of sweetness and light, of order and comfort, in their own homes. These ecclesiastical assemblies become not only a representative of our work in its spirit and extent, but they become occasions for drawing out the fellowship of the pastors and churches, white and colored, where they meet. At first these bodies were ignored. Now it is a common thing for the local pastors to drop in upon them, to participate in the exercises and to offer their pulpits for supply. This has been done at Wilmington, Macon, Mobile Marion and Selma.

During the last year, six new churches have been organized, those at Williamsburg, Ky., Cedar Cliff, N. C., Athens, Ga., Meridian, Miss., Eureka and Topeka, Kansas. All of these are supplied with pastors. Athens uses the assembly-room of our Knox Institute, Meridian for the present rents rooms for the church and school, Eureka and Topeka have both built houses of worship. New meeting houses have also been built at Caledonia, Miss., Fausse Point, La., and Luling, Texas. Paris, Texas, has replaced its big shanty by a fine church edifice. Childersburg, Ala., burnt out, has rebuilt with great self-denial on the part of the people. Mobile, burnt out, is to be accommodated for a time in the assembly-room of the Emerson Institute, rebuilt since the fire. The church at East Savannah, blown down, has been rebuilt. The suburban church at Louisville, Ga., also blown down, is still in its ruins. At Five Mile, out from the city, a mission house has been built. By the wonderful enterprise of their pastor, Rev. A. A. Myers, the people have put up a commodious house at Williamsburg, Ky., in the mountain country. The town is sixty years old, and this is the first church brought to completion, three others having rotted down during the process of building. The church at Clover Bottom, Ky., has been supplied with a school-house sanctuary through the aid secured by Pres. Fairchild, of Berea. The great church at Midway, Ga., has been finished up. The church at Anniston, Ala., has been enlarged. So during the year ten churches have been erected.

The closing year has not been without its comforting measure of spiritual influence. The dew has been in the fleece of most of our churches and schools. In some of them individual cases of conversion have been the reward of large faith and zeal. In others, clusters of souls have been won to Christ. Distinctive revivals have been enjoyed at Chattanooga and Memphis, Tenn., McIntosh and Macon, Ga., Marion, Ala., New Orleans, Talladega College, and in the Fisk, Atlanta and Tougaloo Universities. The total number of additions to our Southern churches on profession is 709. Those who in our missions have been led to Christ but who have gone to other churches would nearly double that number. The total number of members in all our Southern churches is 5,641.

AFRICA.

When our last annual meeting was in session we had two parties upon the ocean on their way to Africa. Mr. I. J. St. John and Rev. J. M. Hall were going to reinforce the Mendi Mission, and Superintendent Ladd and Dr. Snow were going to explore the Upper Nile with reference to locating the Arthington Mission if the project should prove feasible. Mr. St. John was to be the business manager and to have charge of the John Brown steamer which was to be built. Mr. Hall, from the theological department of the Howard University, was to take charge of the Good Hope Station. He readily got hold of the work and proved himself an acceptable and successful missionary. He has the church, and a native teacher has the school under his supervision. Mr. Hall, being of the sturdy mountain stock of East Tennessee, has endured the climate well, and we can but hope that an extended career of usefulness is before him. Mr. St. John, by his own unavoidable exposure on his voyages between Freetown and Mendi, and up the rivers to our stations, was himself made sick, and so was confirmed in the judgment that called for the steamer as a means of preserving the health of our missionaries. The English Governor-General of the West Coast agreed with Mr. St. John to give the steamer the carrying of the mail and of all Government freight between Freetown and Mendi, which is an English dependency. The transportation of supplies for the Mission and the marketing of the lumber of our mill, the only one on the West Coast, call for this steam craft. All views conspire to put down the "John Brown" as one of the most effective missionaries to be introduced to that region, where there are no roads nor beasts of burden and where the water highway is the main reliance. It was thought best that Mr. St. John should not take the risk of the first wet season at the Mission, and so he returned to this country, coming over by a sailing vessel to save expense. He makes the gratifying report that in his intercourse along the coast he found many evidences of the good influence of the Mendi Mission in its training of men who have gone out into the ways of business, and who retain their integrity of character. He named the noble chief of a tribe where is located the vigorous Shengay Mission, who, with his son, had been educated at our Good Hope Station. Rev. A. E. Jackson has continued in charge of the Avery Station and boarding-school. During the year the Mission was afflicted in the death of Rev. J. M. Williams, of the Kaw Mendi Station, who, after having endured fifteen years of service in Africa, succumbed to the disease of diabetes. Rev. Mr. Jowett, one of the native preachers, is acceptably supplying Mr. Williams' place at Kaw Mendi. Mr. Jowett has a son now in the Fisk University, who gives promise of making himself a useful man in his native land. The other three lads from the Mendi Mission at school at Hampton and at Atlanta, are doing well. The Debia Station is under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Goodman.

Dr. Ladd and Dr. Snow, having made their long and perilous tour, which took them up the Nile 2,500 miles, have returned. They report no sufficiently inviting location for a mission in the region of the Sobat. They recommend that Khartoum be occupied as a base of operations, and that a school be established on the east bank of the river opposite the city, which lies in the junction of the Blue and White Niles. That site is quite healthy. They would have a steamer by which to communicate with the Arthington district of the Upper Nile. The Executive Committee, of course, had to submit to the inevitable, as indicated by the double revolt, and voted to put the mission into complete abeyance for the time.

THE INDIANS.

Though the Indian once had the continent to himself, he yet seems to be "the man without a country." And the Christian missions which have sought to identify him with his native land have with him been driven along before the advancing tide of the white man's migration. So has it been from the days of Jonathan Edwards, John Eliot and David Brainard down to these times of the Riggses and Williamsons. The Indian missions of this Association have fared in the same way, those at Northfield, Mich., and those at Cass Lake and Red Lake, Minn., which were served by some fifteen missionaries, among them Revs. S. G. Wright, J. B. Bardwell and A. Barnard. Of these the venerable Mr. Wright still abides in the service, being now at Leech Lake. Returning this year to his field, he writes: "We were very happy to find the little company of earnest, devoted Christians, whom we left two years before, still faithfully pursuing their work for God. They are truly the salt of the earth, burning lights in this great darkness, the spiritual power in the place." Again he says: "I wish I could attend the annual meeting. I should love to give the friends a short history of the conversion and rich Christian experience of numbers of those around us." Our church at S'Kokomish, Washington Territory, Rev. Myron Eells, pastor, during the year has swarmed, seven of its members having taken letters to unite with four other Christians of the Clallam Indians to form a Congregational Church at Jamestown. One infant was baptized. A half-dozen white neighbors came in and communed with them. Mr. Eells says that the services were held in Chinook, Clallam, English, Chinook translated into Clallam, and English translated into Clallam, a Pentecostal gift of tongues. The work of the mother church has been more encouraging this year than the last. Five have united with the church on profession of faith. The service of the agents at the S'Kokomish, Fort Berthold and Sisseton agencies has been about as usual in routine and in outcome. The work that is now going on at the Hampton Institute in the educational and industrial training of 89 young Indians of both sexes is truly encouraging; not only as to its immediate accomplishment, but as to its future bearings upon the welfare of the Indians, and upon the Indian question itself. At the last commencement, the Indian classes claimed their full share of attention, and showed an improvement in the general character of the pupils over last year. One noted speech was made by an Indian youth. Rev. Dr. Bartend, referring to that speech in his address, said: "Two hundred and fifty years ago there came floating into this beautiful harbor vessels from the old country. What was their object? What was their hope? The prayer that arose from their decks was this: 'God give us strength that we may educate and Christianize the Indian.' William and Mary College, now almost ready to perish, is the monument of their endeavor. They did not see the answer to their prayer. God works in His own way, in His own time, with His own men. Could they see what we to-day behold, they would say, as do we, Speed on. God speed this glorious school." Although the Association, which founded and developed the Hampton, has surrendered its control to a Board, yet besides aiding in the support of the pastor, who cares for the three races, associated in the one church of the place, it also makes a special appropriation toward the Indian department of the Institute. The Association will be ready to co-operate with the Government under its new appropriation, using some of its own institutions for the instruction and training of Indian youth. It has been proposed that the Association take up a new mission among a neglected tribe in the deep Northwest. Gen. Armstrong, by his recent tour among the several Indian tribes of that region, has been able to make judicious suggestions which will be duly considered.

THE CHINESE.

But a little while ago we were praying God to open the door of China; and now the Chinese are pressing in at our own back door, having a steam ferry between our shore and theirs. Even the building of our Chinese wall, while China has been tearing down hers, has had the immediate effect of hastening 25,000 of these people in at our Golden Gate before the law should go into effect, and this influx has been felt already in our schools, which for the last few months have had a total larger than that of any former months. Mr. Pond certifies that even the enforcement of the law will not for some time occasion any let up in the pressure upon our school accommodations. We have as stock on hand, as raw material, these 125,000 people whom we should work up in the Christianizing way, so that they may be prepared, some for their own mission work at home and some to receive the masses who may come by-and-by when the embargo is lifted. So that while our government stands at the Golden Gate to warn off any Mayflower immigrants, it may be that this enforced quiet and isolation will become a mighty factor in the scheme for Christianizing China. But none the less is it a ludicrous object lesson that the nation which stands with its front door wide open to receive 90,000 Europeans a month, should yet shudder over the 125,000 Mongolians who in many years have sought admission at the back door. It is a humiliating confession that 50,000,000 of Christian people, compacted as a nation, should shrink from having their system come into contact with the effete superstitions of 125,000 sojourners. But the politicians' law is only for ten years. The principle, the conscience of the nation will be at work. The law may become a dead letter or be repealed. Before we are aware of it, the flood-gates may be raised and a great tide may set in. So, in any event, we have herein a grand opportunity, a mighty obligation.

Our last Annual Report mentioned a desire on the part of the converted Chinamen in California and their friends, that a mission be located at some well-chosen point in Southern China, from which their Christian brethren going back to fatherland might go forth to carry the Gospel to their countrymen. Further consideration has settled it that Hong Kong, the centre of the district from which most of our California Chinamen come, is the proper location. Such a mission could give a Christian greeting to the returning Christian Chinamen, would furnish an atmosphere and an instru-mentality for keeping up their spiritual life, would be a training school for those who should become missionaries, would be a rallying centre there, and would be the point of juncture between our work on the coast and that heathen empire. But, as it is the purpose of this Association not to extend its operations abroad, we made a distinctive proposition to the American Board that it take up the proposed mission at Hong Kong, and so work in harmony with us on this side the Pacific. We are glad to report that this overture has been cordially acceded to, and that that venerable missionary body accepts this "sacred trust." Our brethren of the Chinese Christian Association out there, have in hand already a fund of $700, which they intend to put into that mission as an offering of the first fruits.

In its work on the Pacific Coast, the Association is represented by its auxiliary, the California Chinese Mission, whose President is Rev. Dr. John K. McLean, and whose Secretary is Rev. Wm. C. Pond, who, in addition to the care of his city parish, has the supervision of our operations there. Taking up the work into his own mind and heart, he gives to it an amount of study, watch-care and service that is marvelous. With a Pauline spirit, he goes the round of the missions, cheering and directing the workers, healing divisions and laying new plans.

Our fifteen schools are located at Berkeley, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Petaluma, Point Pedro, Sacramento, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Stockton, and at San Francisco, where are the five missions, No. 1, No. 2, Barnes, Bethany and West. The work of the year has been greatly encouraging. These schools have been taught by thirty-one teachers, of whom eleven are Christianized Chinamen.

The total number of scholars enrolled during the year was 2,567, a gain over the previous year of 935, while that year had a gain over the former one of 76. Of these during the past year 156 have ceased from idolatry and 106 have given evidence of conversion. Nor do these figures give the full number of those who are brought to the light in our schools, for many are scattered and cannot attend them. The whole number of those of whom we have hope that they are born of God in connection with our work from the first, Mr. Pond thinks cannot be less than 431, and wisely does he add: "The figures will cease to look dry and the statistical table will glow with even a celestial light, if we but reflect that every unit in these numbers stands for an undying soul, and every unit in some of them for such a soul brought out from the dark bondage of Chinese paganism into the glorious liberty of the sons of God."

It is proposed now to re-establish our mission at Los Angeles, which, as the original, gave way for a time to another that came in but has turned out a failure. Chico, where there are many Chinese, and no one to care for them, is another place where the Superintendent could start a mission. So also the door seems to be opening for yet another school in San Francisco at the great Pioneer Wooden Mills, where 600 Chinese are employed. And so the expanding work demands the additional appropriation which the Committee have already voted, making a total of $13,000 to be used.

FINANCES.

At our last annual meeting we reported a total of $243,795.23, which was a gain of $56,815.12, or 20 per cent. over that of the previous year. One year ago the Committee felt constrained to ask that this sum should be carried up to $300,000 for the support and enlargement of the varied work in charge. We started out well. Then in the spring our chariot came to dragging heavily with a debt of $25,000 upon it. Then there was a rally, and the fiscal year came to its close, Sept. 30, with $297,584.45, which is a gain of $53,789.22 over the last year, or 22 per cent. Besides the current receipts, we have received toward the endowment of the President's chair in Talladega College, $15,000; and for scholarships in the same, $6,000; also a scholarship note for $500, in behalf of Fisk University, which makes a total of $319,584.45 received into our treasury during the year. This leaves the treasury out of debt, with a balance in hand of $789.83, and an increase of endowment fund of $21,500. For this accomplishment we offer devout thanks to Almighty God.

The exigencies of the work, the enlargement of the expenditure made almost inevitable by the new buildings and increased facilities, will scarcely be met by $300,000 the coming year. An increase of that amount by 20 per cent. could be most economically and wisely expended without any attempt at undue enlargement. The legitimate and almost irresistible progress of the work demands that. But we are the servants of our constituents, and assume not to decide. We can most efficiently use the increase, but will faithfully work as best we can with the means entrusted to us. We can only add that the work will suffer if less than the $300,000 be secured.

As boys run backward that they may jump the further forward, so we may profitably compare the receipts of this Association in its earlier years with those of this last year. The nearly $300,000 just announced is equal to the total of contributions for the first ten years. And the total for the year, as given by the Treasurer, of the contributions from the same constituency for the general work in which the Association is engaged, more than $500,000, is equal to the receipts into our treasury for the first fourteen years.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The American Bible Society.—The Constitution of our Association provides that its "object shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures." Even so reads the divine charter of missions: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." The first thing in work abroad is to get the word of God into the language of the people. At the South we found a great hunger for knowledge, that it might unlock to those lowly poor the door of God's word. "O, Lord, we thank thee for de open Bible," were the first words of the prayer of an old man whose hairs had been whitened, whose form had been bowed under bondage. His open Bible was the symbol of God's great deliverance. As usual, we are glad to express our gratitude to the American Bible Society for a prompt and gratuitous supply of Bibles and Testaments for use in our schools and churches. We can scarcely conceive of a wider or more effective means of circulating the Scriptures than to put them into the discriminating hands of our teachers and preachers, who can tell where the blessed word will do the most good.

The American Missionary, which is issued monthly, furnishes a good report of the work of this Association in all its departments. Endeavors have been made during the year to add to its attractiveness in the quality of paper and by the introduction of pictorial illustrations relating to the people for whom we labor. The printing has been done in a very acceptable manner by Messrs. Atkin & Prout, whose kindly fidelity to their work is worthy of mention. Efforts have been made to increase the circulation of the Missionary with fair success, while the cost of its publication has been somewhat lessened by its advertising department. It is the aim of the Association to make the American Missionary equal in interest ot the best missionary magazines of the day, and we fully believe that the cause of Christ would be greatly furthered by an increase of its circulation.

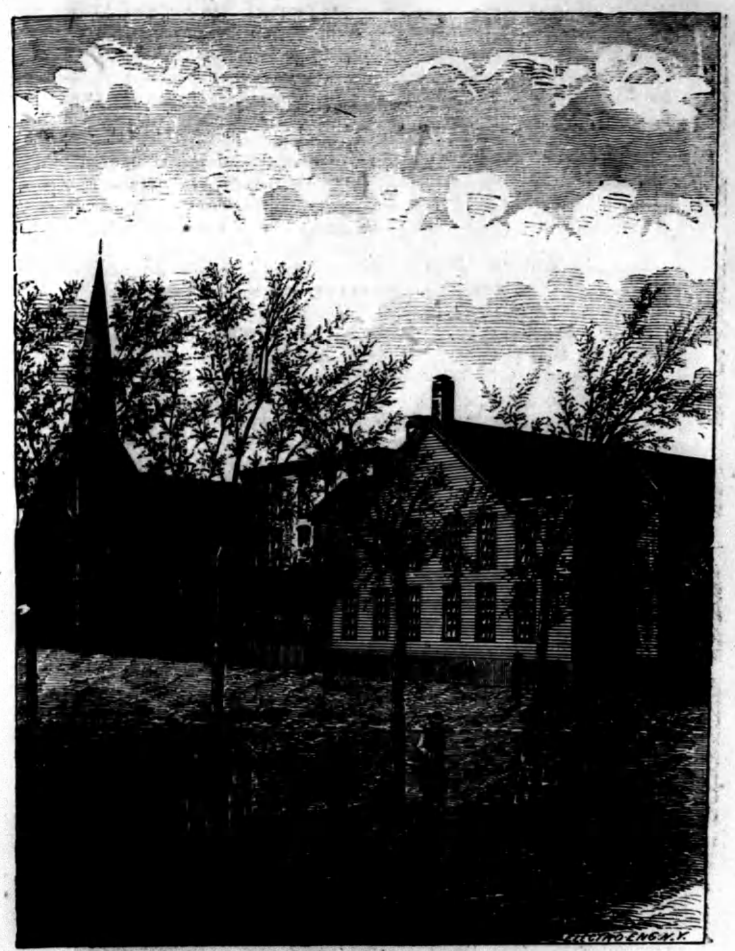
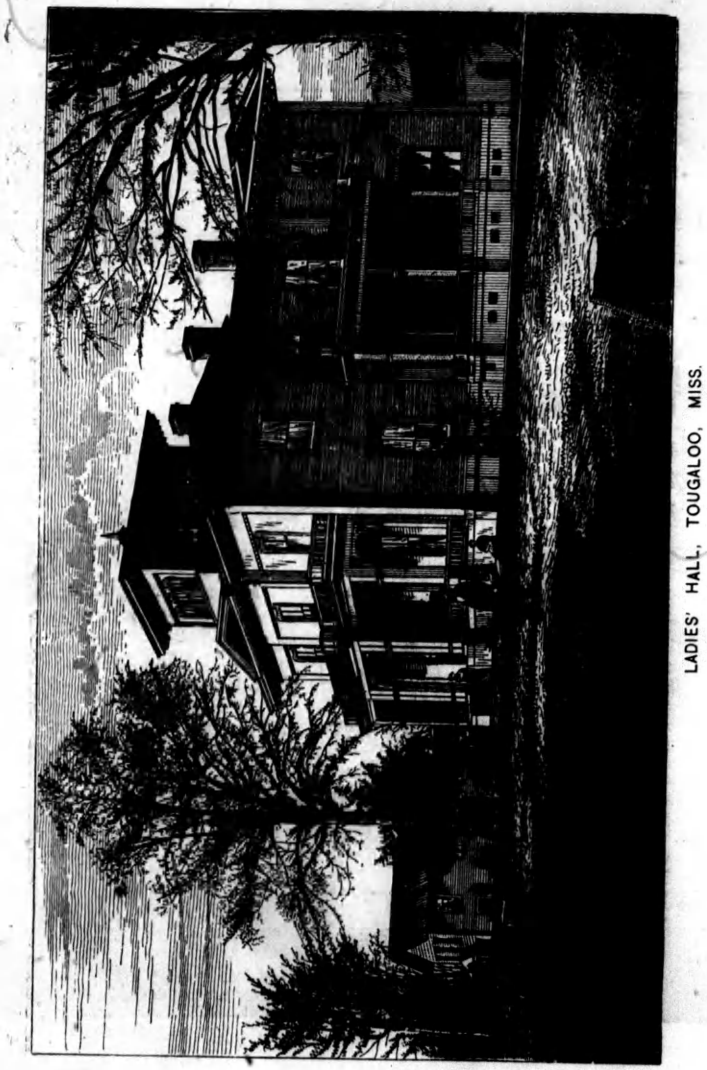
NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—In our last report was a picture of Christ's Church, at Wilmington. The same generous friend who built that church, Hon. Jas. J. H. Gregory, has furnished the means for the building of a new Teachers' Home, and the re-building of the school-house during the past year at this point. We now give a picture of the three buildings.



The school-house has been flanked by two wings, each 54 × 16, two stories high, having a front of 116 feet, with room for 300 or 350 pupils. The lower story contains three school rooms, first and second primary and grammar; also room for lady missionary, in which she holds sewing classes, prayer-meetings, and deals out books, papers and clothing to the needy.

The upper story contains high-school room, principal's room, assistant's recitation room, and a hall capable of seating between three and four hundred, and which can be used, if necessary, for a still higher grade of school in the future.



The Mission House is a wooden frame in a brick "jacket," the main part three stories high, and each story containing four rooms fifteen feet square, with an open fire-place in each. The L has nine rooms, exclusive of store-room, pantry and wash-room, the latter of which is in the basement. The roofs are flat, that on the main building having, beneath the eaves, eighteen ventilators, which insure fresh air for the house and coolness for the chambers. The house is finished throughout in pitch-pine, merely varnished, no paint being used inside. The window sashes and door frames are of cypress, and with care will last a century. The brick is deep red, laid in one-half cement and one-half mortar, a mixture which has hardened like stone. The walls are plastered with the same, with the addition of hair to give it proper tenacity and cohesion. The whole structure is solid, airy and imposing, admirably arranged for convenience in domestic work and for the comfort of the teachers and the missionaries. The entire cost of the Home, and of the extension and repairs on the school house, is $12,550, not including the church (which is seen on the left hand of the picture), the whole group of buildings has cost the donor $16,150.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—Something of external enlargement has fallen to the lot of Tougaloo within a year past. When every available room apparently was full, and shortly after a number of studen s had been sent away, the "chapel," with its second floor devoted to rooms for twenty-eight young men, took fire and burned to the ground. There was an insurance on the chapel of $3,000. Something had been previously accumulating through special solicitations and the benevolence of friends, for enlarging the hall for young women. That addition was in progress at the time of the fire. This building contained the boarding and laundry departments of the school. It had rooms for thirty-two young women. It was proposed to enlarge it by adding another story to the long two-story structure already on the ground, and also a three-story wing, furnishing in all accommodations for seventy-two girls, besides containing two good-sized sitting-rooms, a pleasant sewing-room, and private apartments for the matron and five teachers. This has been completed.

Early last spring, funds were forthcoming for a new hall for young men. Work was immediately begun. A fair crop of "Mississippi brick" was raised on the spot. A sufficient number of men were employed to push on rapidly the work of building. A commodious and pleasing hall 41x112 feet stands ready for students. A deep, roomy basement extends under the whole building, furnishing rooms not only for uses connected with the hall, but also those connected with certain of the industrial departments. The first floor affords a large room for chapel, two convenient recitation-rooms, an office, and apartments for a small family. The second and third floors are used as dormitories. The rooms, 34 in number, are of good size, light and airy, neatly and substantial, though simply, furnished. While in the construction of Strieby Hall strict economy has been studied, modern ideas of convenience have been introduced. Water is brought to each floor from large tanks underneath the roof. A large bath-room is on the second floor.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Livingstone Missionary Hall has been completed during the year. The building is 203 feet in length and 52 feet in width. The central part is ten feet wider, and the whole building is four stories, with a basement. The building contains a chapel, a library room, museum, scientific lecture room 40x30, Treasurer's office, President's room, thirteen class and lecture rooms and sixty-six dormitory and living rooms. It is heated by steam.

The completion of this new hall nearly doubles the capacity of Fisk University. The movement for the erection of this building was begun in England in 1876, and its final success is due to the munificence of Mrs. Stone, who gave, for the erection and furnishing of the hall, $60,000. (See page 53).

RELIGIOUS CHARACTER OF SCHOOLS.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—All the college students are professing Christians, and out of the thirty-two, twenty-one have become so while students here. One is a licentiate for the ministry, and several, we hope, will enter that calling.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, TOUGALOO, MISS.—There has been a great deal of religious interest among the students here. At the meetings, which have been held nearly every night for two weeks, twenty-nine persons have told of their determination to serve God for the rest of their lives. Many of those who have lately begun this new life are young people, who have a good deal of influence over their classmates and associates. Not only have sinners been converted, but Christians have been stirred up to do better work.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.—Professor Francis writes from Atlanta University: "For some days past our school has been much moved by the presence of the Holy Spirit, who has brought quite a number to confess their need of a Saviour, and quickened greatly the zeal of many who had before borne the name of Christ. We are holding extra meetings, and the interest deepens from day to day, so that we have reason to hope that a good harvest may be gathered in, if we exercise due fidelity and patience. The impressions of the gracious work we enjoyed last year have remained with us, and already quite a number have this year taken their stand for Christ, and we rejoice greatly at the good dealings of the Lord with us, and seek greater blessings."

LATER.—The religious interest in Atlanta University, which was reported some time since, has continued for five weeks without any abatement, and a good harvest has already been gathered. The meetings have been well attended, in spite of some sickness and bad weather, and have been marked by an earnest attention to the truth and a fervent spirit of prayer. Many more than a score of souls have chosen the service of Christ, and they show a tenderness of devotion and a carefulness of demeanor which promise well for their stability. Scarcely one is left among those who made their home here who has not been deeply affected, and who has not taken some steps in advance. We do not expect any reaction or falling away from the uplift which the whole school seems to have experienced.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The third week of our continuous services was exceedingly precious. The Holy Spirit came in power. The truth preached in great simplicity was owned of God in the awakening of nearly one hundred souls. On many occasions thirty were on the anxious seats, weeping and calling upon God for mercy. From these seats on two successive evenings nine persons arose and said they felt the assurance of forgiveness and a change of heart. During the five weeks of continuous services sixty-six professed hope in the Saviour, of which number twenty-five were students of our University. From our family of boarding students, at Stone Hall, eleven were brought under conviction, who have joyfully consecrated themselves to the service of the Saviour.

LEWIS HIGH SCHOOL, MACON, GA.—The work spread remarkably among the children, many of whom have started out in the new life. For more than three weeks the scholars of the Lewis High School would voluntarily leave their play and spend the whole half hour of noon recess in prayer and religious instruction at the parlor of the Mission Home to the number of sixty and upward. At one memorable prayer-meeting in the school-house, there were twelve or fifteen of the students who gave their hearts to God. It was a Pentecostal season, a time of great rejoicing to the faithful teachers who had so long prayed for their pupils. The clear, decided testimony of one bright little Sunday-school boy, eight years of age, who was converted in one of the Sunday-school prayer-meetings, would put to shame the half-way, timid professions of some older people.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VA.—The prayer meetings at Hampton are well sustained, and the religious feeling in the school is good. There has been a marked increase in our prayer meetings this year. We often have 200 in our Sunday morning meeting, conducted by the students, where last year there were only thirty or forty. We have kept up two Indian meetings during the week, in which a verse of the Bible is read in English by one of the students, then by all who can read English in concert, then by one in Dakota. Then it is explained. After trying several ways, this seemed to be the most satisfactory. Prayers are offered in Dakota, in Arizona and in English by the students. A meeting is kept up by the English-speaking students among themselves in order to fit them to take part when they go back to their homes.

CLOSING EXERCISES.

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VA.—Anniversary day at Hampton was cool and comfortable. The steamers from New York and Boston for several days previous had been bringing the friends of the institution from the North, and the morning of Thursday, May 25, found a good number assembled to witness the anniversary exercises. At 8.30 A. M. the battalion was drawn up in front of Academic Hall and the regular morning inspection was held by the U. S. A. officer who has charge of the military drill of the school. The students and visitors then passed to the large assembly room of the New Academic, where morning prayers were held and the news of the day was read. The rest of the morning was spent in visiting the classes and looking at the various industries. The Indian classes claimed their full share of attention, and showed an improvement in the advancement and general character of the pupils over last year. The kitchen garden, the cooking classes for girls and the class in the new "tonic sol fa" system were filled with visitors. The training class, where the seniors had a chance to show their skill in teaching a row of ten urchins brought up from the primary school, was one of the features of the day.

After a pleasant lunch in the "Stone building," the procession, headed by the trustees and re-inforced by a large party from Norfolk, made its way toward Virginia Hall, where the graduating exercises were to be held. In a few moments the large hall was crowded. A few words from Gen. Armstrong explained the change in the graduating exercises inaugurated the previous year, by which the speakers of the day were for the most part members of classes that had graduated in previous years, and had come back to tell of work done and experience gained. Only two speakers, the valedictorian and salutatorian, were from the class of '82. This change of plan has been found to work well, and has made the exercises of the last two years especially interesting. Between the speeches, the great chorus, massed in the front part of the hall, swelled out in the national hymns of the different countries and the pathetic slave songs so full of power and feeling. After the valedictory, Rev. Dr. Strieby, the President of the Board of Trustees, presented the diplomas to the graduating class with appropriate remarks. Sixty students came forward to receive their diplomas. After the parting hymn had been sung by the class, Rev. Dr. Bartend paid a glowing tribute to the school and to Gen. Armstrong's work. He said: "For many years after the beginning of this institution, we were accustomed in this part of the country to speak of the Hampton school as an experiment; to-day, by the help of Almighty God, we can say that Hampton school is a magnificent success."

BEREA COLLEGE, BEREA, KY.—The Sixteenth Annual Commencement of Berea College was held in the Tabernacle, June 21st, 1882. The morning was threatening, but the clouds soon broke away, and the weather was all that could be asked. The morning showers had some effect upon the attendance, but not less than 2,500 were upon the grounds.

The forenoon was given to the orations and essays and the conferring of diplomas. Six essays and seven orations were presented, and without a break or hesitation. Ten participants were from six different counties of Kentucky, one from Michigan, one from Mississippi and one from Montana Territory. Three gentlemen graduated from the classical course and one lady from the scientific course. Five exercises were distinctively religious, five others educational, and nearly all breathed a spirit of patriotism. The conferring of degrees by President E. H. Fairchild was preceded by an address showing even more than his usual depth of feeling.

At the afternoon exercises President Fairchild, owing to chronic illness, was unable to preside, and Prof. D. V. Dodge, previously designated by the faculty, occupied the chair. The feature of the occasion was the regular address by Dr. Jos. E. Roy, Field Superintendent of the A. M. A. for Southern work. This was followed by short addresses from Revs. J. G. Fee, A. A. Myers and R. T. Stephenson, and Prof. D. J. H. Ward, of New Lyme, Ohio.

The audience was two-thirds white and one-third colored, and sustained the position that the character of our audiences improves from year to year.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Friday, May 19, the first public exercises were held. A class of thirteen, having completed the Common School Normal Course, gave an exhibition and received certificates of fitness to teach the common English branches. Sunday morning Prof. Bennett preached an appropriate sermon from Matt. 25:34. The Baccalaureate sermon in the afternoon by President Cravath was from John 3:19. Dr. Haygood, President of Emory College, Georgia, delivered the annual sermon before the Missionary Society of the University. His sermon was listened to with close attention as he presented anew the setting apart and sending out of Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary tour.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M., oral examinations of the various classes were conducted by their respective teachers. These were visited by quite a number of friends and strangers from different parts of the country, some of whom took part in the work by asking questions as opportunity was given. Monday evening the two literary societies of the university held their anniversary exercises. In a debate between representatives of the two societies on the question "Should the State assume the payment of bonds issued in aid of railroads," their ability to grapple and handle a living subject in a masterful and convincing manner was fully demonstrated. Tuesday evening the Senior Preparatory exhibition, and Wednesday evening the graduating exercises of the higher normal department and the Alumni Address by John H. Burrus were attended by large and enthusiastic audiences. Mr. Burrus is a member of the class of '75. He described the "man for the times" in a way to inspire those preparing for usefulness. Four higher normal graduates received their diplomas, and ten from the Senior Preparatory class enter college.

Thursday, the "day of days," to the two college graduates, dawned clear and beautiful. The audience assembled promptly at ten o'clock. The exercises opened with a number of distinguished guests on the platform. The music by the Mozart Society elicited much praise, as did the music given on other occasions by the same society. The two young men who were that day to take their degrees delivered their orations in a self-possessed and dignified manner that was a prophecy of future success. The subjects

"True greatness of republics" and "Atheism destructive of man's nobility," sufficiently indicate the line of thought. The commencement address by Dr. Scott, President of the State University, Columbus, Ohio, was worthy of the occasion, and crowned the whole with its beauty and grace of diction and the scholarly treatment of the hackneyed subject, Time. After a few remarks by Gov. Hawkins and the Hallelujah Chorus by the Mozart Society, came the alumni dinner. The after-dinner speeches by the Governor, Dr. Scott and Mr. Stewart, who is finishing the new custom-house, were evidences that "the world moves." The Governor spoke of the solicitude he felt at the close of the war in regard to the future of the colored people and his questions as to what would really be the outcome of the struggle. His presence and remarks were well calculated to help on the good work of breaking down the walls of caste prejudice in which many minds are still inclosed. Dr. Scott referred to the condition of things during and at the close of the war, in which he had a part. He expressed his delight in being permitted to see the growth and progress of the last seventeen years. His words of appreciation and sympathy were especially grateful to the workers.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.—On Sabbath morning, June 11, President Ware preached to a crowded audience, the sermon to the graduating class. The examinations were continued for three days, and were attended by a committee of the Board of Visitors, appointed by the Governor of the State, who, at the close, made to him a highly favorable report, which has been published with his approval. Two evenings were occupied by the exercises of the two literary societies of the school, which were favorably received by good audiences. On Thursday the commencement exercises were held at Friendship Baptist Church, one of the largest in the city, kindly placed at our disposal for this purpose, which was filled with a closely packed audience of about 2,000 people, well dressed, orderly, attentive, and evidently having a personal pride in the results exhibited. A class of twelve was graduated, ten young women from the normal course, and two young men from the College course, all of whom presented pieces which received much commendation for their simplicity, directness and good sense. The annual address was delivered by Rev. E. W. Bacon, of New London, Conn., and was a forcible and eloquent plea for self-education.

As an evidence of the increasing favor with which this school and its work is regarded in the community, there may be appropriately quoted some of the remarks of Rev. C. A. Evans, of the M. E. Church South, pastor of a large church in the city, formerly General in the Southern army, who spoke at the close of the class examinations: "There is no enmity between the white and colored people in this State. There is a growing desire of the white people, as you will find, for your welfare. They are anxious that you should have the best in social life, the best in intellectual life, and in moral life, to which you can attain. I have looked upon these exercises with great interest as a fellow citizen. I am glad for all I see and know." Remarks in a similar strain were made by several other prominent gentlemen in attendance.

EXTRACTS FROM REPORT OF THE STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS.—We do not believe that we have ever seen better teaching than we find done at the Atlanta University. Evidences of the same thoroughness appeared in all grades of the grammar school and throughout all the classes of the higher departments. We were particularly struck with one feature in the method of instruction adopted in this institution, and that was the accuracy of the language in which every question was required to be answered. The answer is not only to be given correctly as to substance, but it must be expressed in words both grammatical and appropriate; if not, the pupil reciting is asked to correct it, and if unable to do so, it is passed to others of the class. Your committee noticed another feature in the management of the university to which they desire to call your attention as worthy of high commendation, and that is the manual labor training that is here afforded in connection with the literary course. Every student, male and female, is required to work an hour each day at some useful labor, either on the farm connected with the institution, or in the household and kitchen department. The tendency of this regulation is not only to greatly reduce the expenses of board, etc., but to induce habits of industry, and impart valuable practical information for every-day use in after life. The farm, including the beautiful grounds immediately surrounding the college buildings, contains about sixty acres, and is under the direction of a thoroughly practical and energetic gentleman, who keeps everything in admirable order and brings out the best possible results. Specimens of field and garden crops, embracing a great variety of grasses and forage plants, cereals and vegetables, were exhibited to your committee, evincing great efficiency in this department. Samples of the culinary art were also shown us, and if our eyes and our palates did not deceive us, they reflected great credit on those who prepared them for our inspection and entertainment.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, TALLADEGA, ALA.—The prelude of our twelfth anniversary exercises came Friday night, June 9, in the form of a school exhibition by the lower departments, consisting of declamations, recitations, concert exercises, etc. In lieu of the usual baccalaureate sermon Sunday morning, Rev. Edward W. Bacon, of New London, Conn., delivered a missionary discourse. At night, President De Forest gave one of his practical talks to the students about to go out for the summer. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday forenoons public examinations were held in the various departments. They seem to have passed off satisfactorily to examiners, examined and visitors. One of the latter who spent his whole time in seeing and hearing as much as possible said: "I have not been into an examination which does not reflect credit on teacher and scholar alike. Everything shows that most excellent work has been done." Theology is still the high water mark of scholarship, but the "small Latin and less Greek" of the institution are gradually rising, and are not to stop short of the line of a full college course. Wednesday afternoon occurred the prize declamations and essays.

The evening entertainments for the week were, on Monday night, a scholarly and uplifting address by Rev. Mr. Bacon upon self-education; on Tuesday night exercises by the young people's literary societies, which showed commendable efforts in the way of self-improvement; on Wednesday night, the usual church prayer-meeting, one of the most enjoyable of all our Commencement gatherings; and on Thursday night, a concert by the Musical Union, who rendered the Cantata of Esther, the Beautiful Queen, to the satisfaction of a densely packed house and with an income to the Union of nearly fifty dollars which they pledged for a new piano.

Talladega sends out no graduates this year. Though according to previous standards, students were ready to receive their diplomas both in theology and normal studies, they voluntarily chose to spend another year in further preparation for life's work. The exercises of Thursday morning consisted of eight orations by representatives (four each) from the college preparatory and theological departments. In discussing standard and current themes, they showed a grasp of thought, a clearness and vigor in presentation certainly far from discreditable to any public rostrum.

Talladega College looks back upon the year just closed as the most prosperous one in her history. It has seen new buildings reared, others repaired, greatly needed improvements made and a fair beginning in the way of endowments; to the many friends throughout the North, whose gifts have caused these things to be, we are unspeakably grateful. It has seen most thorough work done in all departments of study, more than a score of its pupils confess a newly-found Saviour and much activity in mission and Sunday-school work on the part of the more advanced.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Our commencement began properly with the examination of the Law Department and the graduation of eleven law students. The list of graduates from this department now numbers 50 names, of whom 43 have been awarded their diplomas within the last six years. It is an interesting fact that, of our 50 law graduates, 35 have been white and 15 colored. Side by side they have been gathered in the lecture rooms of the professors, and have met in the crucial test of the final examination. The Faculty is admirably constituted, both on account of legal attainments and real genuine interest in the young men. Four lectures are given each week. The prospects for the incoming class are excellent, both as to numbers and quality, the white element predominating as usual.

This year, in the academic department, we had no graduating class. Our anniversary exercises have been somewhat out of the usual order, but thoroughly interesting and successful. Perhaps never have we met the popular taste more fully than this year. The old graduates were invited to return and take part in the first public anniversary meeting of the Alumni. Seven accepted the invitation and entered heartily into the project, and others sent the cordial expression of their regrets. The meeting was held in Central Church. A large and intelligent audience was present, and entered fully into the spirit of the occasion. Wednesday noon occurred the Literary Exhibition in the University Chapel. What a storm raged without! It seemed as though the flood-gates were opened. We had it almost entirely to ourselves, only a few good friends venturing to face the tempest. The orations, compositions, dialogues and select readings evinced decided talent in writing and speaking. In the evening a concert was given at the church, with a few literary exercises. The musical programme was judiciously arranged, and was thoroughly appreciated by an audience of six hundred people. The year has marked an advance in scholarship, and the University has acquired a firmer foothold in the city and state.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, TOUGALOO, MISS.—The final examinations occupied the 25th, 26th and 29th of May. The attendance increased from day to day. On Sunday a Sunday-school institute was held and the throng seemed about as great as the chapel would hold, but the absolute limit of its capacity was not reached until the exhibition, Tuesday evening, when the people were fairly wedged in. A beneficent down-pour of rain Wednesday morning prevented the crowd from being any greater on that day, and rendered the air so cool and pleasant that people did not suffer from being closely packed. A class of six earnest, faithful Christian students, three young men and three young women, having completed the normal course, were to receive certificates. President Pope addressed his sermon to them Sabbath evening—his theme being "Serving One's Generation." At 10 o'clock, Wednesday, the 31st, the commencement exercises began. As these young people have been, in accordance with the avowed aim of this institution, educated for usefulness in practical life, it was fitting that their essays and orations should be, as they were, on subjects of every day interest, and treated in an intensely direct and practical manner. The music was inspiring, especially the class song, composed for them by the Rev. B. A. Imes, of Memphis, a fine scholar and talented gentleman of their own race. In presenting their certificates, the President gave them five "Remembers" from the Holy Scriptures, as his final charge to them.

In the afternoon the annual address was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Truman M. Post, of St. Louis. Despite the rain, a carriage load of gentlemen came out from Jackson, and added materially to the interest of the exercises—Mr. Lemly, a trustee of this institution; Col. Power and Gen. Clifton, members of the State Board of Visitors. In the close of his witty and eloquent speech, Col. Power, editor of the Clarion, spoke of the progress he had witnessed in this school since its establishment, and expressed the hope that a few years hence the enrollment will have increased from a couple of hundred to a thousand, and that a spacious chapel will have been erected, capable of holding them all and their friends. Gen. Clifton stated that in asking the Legislature for an increased appropriation for this school he had said that he believed it was doing more good than any other school in the State, and he could repeat that as still his conviction, because it is doing a work so vitally needed.

TILLOTSON INSTITUTE, AUSTIN, TEXAS.—The Tillotson Collegiate and Normal Institute has closed its first full year since the building of Allen Hall, and its Texas friends are full of congratulations on the progress made. The Baccalaureate Sermon on June 4, by President W. E. Brooks, was listened to by a large and attentive audience. On June 5 and 6, occurred the examination of the classes. Listening to these students, and considering the time they had spent at school, one could not see that they exhibited that mental inferiority so often attributed to their race in the past. On the evening of the 6th, a crowded audience being in attendance, there were declamations and readings, with vocal and instrumental music at suitable intervals. Then came addresses by Rev. Dr. E. B. Wright, a trustee of the Institute, and by other prominent clergymen and educators. The evening closed with a general reception, in which visitors, students and faculty gave themselves up to a happy hour of congratulations and whole-hearted social intercourse such as colored people so much delight in. On the 7th, essays, declamations, readings and music were listened to with unwearied attention by another large audience, including many distinguished visitors, who stayed from the beginning to the end of the exercises.

The oration by A. S. Green, on "The Possibilities of Our People, and how they may be Realized," was received by the audience with special interest. At the conclusion of the exercises, addresses were delivered by Gov. O. M. Roberts, Ex-Gov. E. J. Davis and other leading citizens. All the speeches were of deep interest, and whether from Democratic or Republican lips, they were alike full of appreciative good will toward the noble work done by such agencies as the American Missionary Association. A noted feature of the exercises was the good elocution of the students, resulting mainly from the brief training received at the Institute. To one accustomed to the old-time thick and indistinct plantation pronunciation, the change seemed indeed wonderful.

NORMAL SCHOOL, WILMINGTON, N. C.—The examinations closed Thursday, June 1. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, quite a number of interested parents and friends came in to inquire and see for themselves what their children had been doing for the year. After listening to various recitations and exercises, they expressed themselves highly gratified. Friday evening the annual exhibition took place in Memorial Hall. About 400 were present. No special attempt at decoration was made, yet the stage was not wanting in floral adornments, two large, tall baskets of handsome flowers standing one on each side. The wall back of the stage was prettily and tastefully decorated with green boughs, moss and a little white drapery. At a little past eight o'clock the school marched into the hall, and took seats as near the front as possible. The children made a good appearance, being neatly and some of them prettily dressed. The programme consisted of about twenty parts, interspersed with good music. The selections specially attractive were the cantata, "Grandpa's Birthday," three recitations upon the subject of temperance, a concert declamation entitled "A Leap for Life," given by seven young men, and the recitation "Auction Extraordinary." Some of the pieces given by the little folks were very pleasing. The selections were all well rendered, and won many complimentary remarks from those present. Rev. Mr. Dodge being called upon, responded with a few well-chosen words appropriate to the occasion, after which the benediction was pronounced.

AVERY INSTITUTE, CHARLESTON, S. C.—The public exercises incident to the closing of the school year at Avery Institute began Monday evening, May, 29, with an exhibition by a portion of the intermediate department. Though this was not a usual or most prominent feature of anniversary, it was enthusiastically received by one of the best audiences of the week, which have all been large and indefatigable. They were well repaid by the bright recitations, well-drilled singing and tasteful appearance of the pupils. Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, began what is called "Children's Day," being a similar exhibition of accomplishments by the primary department. The performances in dialogue, recital and music of these little ones did not differ from those in Northern schools of the same grade, which is enough to say both for the culture received and the faculty displayed.

Tuesday night saw a rendering of a lengthy and varied programme by the scholars of the upper grades not graduating. The News and Courier in a report printed the next morning, says: "Of the essays it may truthfully be said that they were written with neat rhetoric and obvious originality; of the recitations, that they were given without a faltering of memory, and some with admirable distinctness of enunciation and winning hold upon the listeners."

The regular Commencement exercises were held on Thursday, and attracted a large crowd of persons of both colors and were of more than passing interest. After the essays, songs and choruses, the diplomas of the Institute were awarded to the three graduates by the Principal of the Institute, who took occasion to commend the graduates for their perseverance and to congratulate them upon their success. The Rev. E. J. Meynardie then delivered an eloquent address on "National Responsibility," arguing that no civilization is perfect which is not founded upon the fundamental principles of revealed religion.

BEACH INSTITUTE, SAVANNAH, GA.—The work at Beach Institute is taking on more definite shape. This year a class has graduated, and the course of study for the remaining grades has been brought into something like symmetry. The Savannah public schools graduate the colored pupils from the grammar grade, above which no provision is made for their education. For the white pupils, however, a High School is maintained. Hence the ambitious colored youth, many of whom are as fair as their white neighbors, turn hopefully to the "Beach" as a school which will give them what the city fathers have denied them. The first of the public exercises which have just closed the academic year was a public examination, held Friday, May 26. The programme was the regular daily programme, so far as the order of classes was concerned, but the questions put were given at random and without previous preparation from the work of the entire year. By this plan, of course, a few failures occurred, but the visitors felt that they had seen the classes fairly tested, and their hearty commendation was duly appreciated. The second public exercise was a sermon preached in the Congregational Church to the graduating class on Sunday evening, May 28, by the pastor, Rev. Dana Sherrill. The third public exercise occurred Wednesday, May 31, beginning at 11 o'clock A. M. An extensive programme of declamations, dialogues and songs was rendered in a most satisfactory manner and listened to by a crowded house. Upon the platform, during a part of the exercises, were the Hon. J. O. Ferrill and Mr. Murray. The former is a member of the City Board of Education and a firm friend of the colored people. Mr. Murray is a representative of the Savannah Daily Recorder. The music was furnished entirely by the pupils, and included songs, quartets, duets, solos and two instrumental pieces. The exercises were closed by the graduation of a class of two girls.

EMERSON INSTITUTE, MOBILE, ALA.—Emerson Institute has rounded out a year of peculiar disappointments and has crowned the last days with a brighter bow of promise than ever. A fire early in the year consumed the school building, and the school was removed to the Third Baptist Church, kindly offered for that purpose. The marks at the written examinations fell below those of last year, as might have been expected in the midst of such privations. But at the oral examinations, on the 25th, the various classes gratified their teachers and visitors. Among the latter were our staunch friend, Rev. Dr. Burgett, and three colored pastors. The brightest color in the bow appeared in the anniversary exercises. The preparation had not interfered with regular lessons, but their thoroughness was manifest in the hearty testimony of the leading white M. E. pastor in the city, Rev. J. O. Andrews, who had offered the opening prayer. The exercises were witnessed by over 800 people, some of them outside at the window. The New Music Department was justified by its fruits, especially in a short cantata in which the Queen of the Fairies crowned the virtues.

The advanced point made was the presence and remarks of the Recorder (Mayor) of the Port, R. B. Owen. He was accompanied by his wife. As his honor came upon the platform, before the closing song, the Superintendent grasped his hand, exclaiming, "The North and the South, one and inseparable!" to which he responded, "That is my sentiment." In a few well-chosen words he expressed his pleasure in the efforts of the colored people to gain an education; declared that the time had come for intelligence and morality to be the recognized mark of a man, and said he was "infinitely gratified" with the performances of the young people at this time, and grateful for the opportunity of witnessing the results obtained.

LEWIS HIGH SCHOOL, MACON, GA.—The Primary Department closed on Friday, May 26. The little folks did well with their songs and speeches, and were neatly dressed. This department has been crowded into a low basement room in the Teachers' Home this year, for lack of accommodation elsewhere. We all rejoice with teacher and scholars that there is hope of more roomy quarters next year. On Monday and Tuesday, 29th and 30th, were held the closing examinations. These were more rigid and thorough than for a long time before, but the classes generally did well, and acquitted themselves with much credit. During the year there have been held monthly examinations, and the classes have been more thoroughly graded than ever, so that there will be less confusion than usual in opening the next school year. On Wednesday, the 31st, occurred the closing exercises, beginning at 9 A. M. The school went through with their essays, declamations, dialogues and songs in a way that reflected credit upon them and their teachers. The church was well filled with spectators of all colors. Three students received certificates of graduation from the High School course, and these will probably go to Atlanta University or elsewhere in the fall. After the programme was finished, some of the visitors were called on for speeches. On Wednesday night came the grand finale in the shape of a closing concert, conducted by our music teacher. Although the night was very rainy and stormy, the church was full, with quite a number of white people, who expressed their great gratification. The singing was good, and the concert well carried out to the end, showing decided musical ability on the part of all in solo, duet and chorus singing. We are glad to report that both school and church have prospered during the year. The total enrollment of students is 199, and we rejoice to know that additional school rooms, so greatly needed, are to be provided before another year begins. Fifteen or twenty of the scholars were converted during the precious revival in March last. Quite a number will engage in teaching during the summer, and several will go to higher institutions of learning in the fall.

LEMOYNE INSTITUTE, MEMPHIS, TENN.—The close of the year brings us also to the close of the first decade in the history of Le Moyne Institute. The founder of the school has gone to his reward and his works do follow him. The institution which he founded is but at the beginning of its usefulness and of its possibilities. This year we graduate a class of ten from the full course (four years), the largest class yet sent out, and the fourth. The public exercises at the closing this year were unusually interesting, judging from the attendance, not only of colored people, friends of the graduates, but also of prominent white families of the city. Formerly gentlemen of this latter class only came, now quite as many ladies as gentlemen are seen in the audience that fills and overflows the church. For want of room and accommodations we have, during the year, had to turn away over fifty pupils who applied in person for admission; a more regular and steady attendance has told for good on the scholarship and work of the school; the Spirit has blessed us in the conversion of not less than thirty of our pupils.

Our outlook for the coming year is most assuring, and our only serious difficulty would seem to be want of room for all who come to us. Our building must be enlarged.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT, HOWARD UNIVERSITY, WASHINGTON, D. C.—Our theological anniversary exercises passed off very pleasantly May 5. They were held in the Assembly Presbyterian Church, which is of convenient size and centrally situated. Though the weather was unpleasant, the attendance was good, both of the white and colored races, and included various persons of distinction. The number of theological students this year has been thirty, not including eight others, who study principally in the classical department. The graduates were five, connected with the Congregational, Presbyterian and Methodist denominations. Three go to the Southern field, and two look towards Africa. Their addresses were most creditable in matter and manner, and were warmly received by the audience. On behalf of the Washington Bible Society, Rev. Dr. Butler presented each of them with a neatly bound copy of the Holy Scriptures. Rev. Dr. Bullock, the chaplain of the United States Senate, made an excellent, practical address to them, on their coming life-work, and Rev. Dr. Craighead, Dean of the department, added some felicitous closing remarks. Owing to the endowment by Mrs. Stone, supplemented by the large aid of the American Missionary Association, and in a less degree by that of the Washington Presbytery, the Theological Department of Howard University is in vigorous operation, and is prepared to receive and train young men, white or colored, for the Gospel Ministry of all Evangelical denominations.

FACTS ABOUT STUDENTS.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Nearly all the students in college are dependent on their own efforts, with the aid so kindly given by friends in the North, in acquiring an education. Only one has property, and two live at home with their parents in the city. Several have others dependent on them. One, a lady, has care of the family, both parents being dead. During the last summer all were at work—three as porters on railroads, two as clerks, one had charge of a church, which, under his ministry, enjoyed a revival of religion, and the rest taught school. Some teach classes in the university and some do manual labor. Nearly all are compelled to be absent a part of the college year, thus increasing their toil when they return. Twenty-four have already graduated from college, one of whom is dead. Of the others, one is a lawyer, one is a minister, five are learning professions, three being the ministry, and all the rest are teaching, many of whom occupy important positions, one being a professor in this University.

ATHENS, GA.—Three of the principals of the Knox Institute were students at Atlanta University, S. B. Morse, John McIntosh and J. G. Hutchins. The last named received an appointment to a clerkship in Washington, Morse has a position in the Custom-House at Savannah, and McIntosh is a representative of Liberty County in the Legislature.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Thus far the graduates of the school, excepting one only, have taught almost continuously since completing the course. The ten members of the present class will teach; some of them expect to pursue their studies further at Fisk University, after working a year for the means.

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—Judge Garland writes of one of the students of the Tillotson Institute: I was so much struck with the solid intellectual qualities of one young man, a coal-black negro, that I sought him out and advised him to study law. Conversation with him elicited the fact that his only schooling of account had been during the last five months at the Institute, while his attainments would indicate a good common school education, such as is ordinarily the work of ten years.

INDUSTRIAL WORK.

HAMPTON, VA.—The new stone building erected for the industries of the school with the money given by Mrs. Stone shows this department to the best advantage. The shoe shops, the printing establishment, the tailoring and knitting department have gained a new impulse now that they have gotten into their large new rooms. The saw mill, the harness-making shop, the tin, carpenter and wheelwright shops are all in full blast.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—The industrial department at Tougaloo University embraces: General farming, strawberry culture, gardening, stock-raising, general housework, work in laundry, work in sewing-room.

In our general farming we have confined our work to those crops that we can consume on the place—corn, oats and potatoes. We expect to cultivate cotton hereafter, rotating it with other crops. Corn yields fairly, but not equal to the West, of course. The oat crop, I think, can be made equal to the western crop. We have done enough with grasses to satisfy ourselves that grass can be very profitably grown and marketed.

The strawberry crop can be grown, picked and marketed almost entirely with student labor. We have to hire a little outside help during the picking season. This is both a pleasant and profitable industry. We can begin shipping about April 10 or earlier, according to the season. Chicago is our market.

The general housework and the work in the laundry and sewing-room have been well managed under the oversight of our matron and others.

Four years ago we ventured to purchase a little thoroughbred Ayrshire and grade Jersey stock. We had no appropriation for such purchases, but felt that we must make a beginning. We have not only awakened interest in the minds of the students, in the matter of stock-raising, but also in the minds of some of the old planters about us.

I have no balance sheet to present with this paper, but the milk goes from the stable to the pantry by the bucketful, the vegetables from the garden to the kitchen by the basketful, and the strawberries from the field to the fruit-room by the crateful. Besides the berries used in our family, we receive from $25 to $100 net per acre from those shipped. We have raised this year $700 worth of sweet potatoes. At very moderate prices we have on hand now at least one thousand dollars worth of thoroughbred and grade stock over and above what has been paid for it.

ATLANTA, GA.—Special contributions have been obtained for the establishment of an industrial department for instruction in the more useful trades.

At a recent meeting of the trustees of the university, a resolution was passed to institute forthwith a post-graduate course of two years for graduates of the normal department. This course, while not neglecting intellectual culture, by providing for courses of reading and for attendance upon recitations and lectures, and for practice in teaching, is to provide special training in nursing the sick, sewing, cutting and making of garments, care of household affairs, the inauguration and management of mission work, and in general whatever training seems likely to prepare young women of culture for the responsible duties of actual life. At the same meeting the trustees directed the executive committee to select, as soon as practicable, a suitable person as principal of this course of study, who shall also be matron of the family of young women who may be gathered for this purpose; and they are further directed to prepare plans for the suitable accommodation of such a family.

The trustees also voted that an industrial department for boys be at once organized, which shall provide for training in carpentry and other mechanical work; and the executive committee were authorized to make the necessary arrangements.

MACON, GA.—On Saturday, May 27, was the closing exhibition of the sewing class, under charge of Mrs. Lathrop. Seventy-six girls this year have been in the class, meeting on Saturday forenoons. Friends in the North have helped by contributing patchwork, basted garments, etc., and the girls have been taught plain sewing with the making of mottoes, book-marks, etc. Only sixteen sessions were held, but the amount of work accomplished was surprising. There were displayed in the main school-room eighteen patchwork quilts and one hundred and twenty-one finished garments, dresses, aprons, underclothing, etc., all neatly made, and showing decided improvement in sewing. There were some short readings, recitations and singing, and then a few brief talks from Prof. Hodge and others, and afterward the garments were distributed to those who made them, amid thankful hilarity.

NEW CHURCHES AND BUILDINGS.

EUREKA, KAN.—The Second Congregational Church of this place within the first year of its existence has built a plain house of worship at a cost of $850, and it will be ready for use the first of October.

PARIS, TEX.—A church has recently been dedicated here. Dr. Reed preached the sermon, and all the white pastors took part in the services. The house could not begin to hold the people; $313 was subscribed towards paying the debt.

CEDAR CLIFF, N. C.—At this place Rev. A. Connet organized a Congregational church of a dozen members, using the Confession, Covenant and Constitution of Roy's Manual, inserting a temperance clause. A white citizen gives half an acre of land for the church.

LULING, TEX.—On the 26th of February the new Congregational church edifice was dedicated, Supt. Roy assisting Pastor Hillson. The house is 24 × 46 feet—is tastefully built. The lot was given by Mr. T. W. Pierce, of Boston, the President of the Galveston & San Antonio Railroad, "The Sun-Set Route;" and this Association assisted in the building. The people have recently hung upon their church a sixty-dollar bell that is a delight to them.

ATHENS, GA.—The Superintendent finds that the time has come to start a church. The building is repaired, and one of its rooms fixed up for a chapel. Mr. George V. Clark, a student of the "Atlanta" and a graduate of the Theological Department of the Howard University, is secured. He starts a Sunday-school, a prayer meeting and preaching services. Affinity draws to them friends who are longing for something more quiet, orderly and intelligent in church life. Then a revival adds eight disciples to the nine who are ready to come into a new church by letter. And so a Council meets here on the 14th of April to recognize the church and ordain the pastor. They find everything in an orderly condition. The church process and the examination of the candidate are heartily approved.

By the courteous invitation of the African M. E. Church, the public services are held at night in their house of worship, which is packed with an assembly of 500 people.

The moderator propounds the Confession and Covenant, and gives to the new church the right hand of fellowship. Mr. Lathrop then presents a royal octavo Bible printed in Boston in 1822. Mr. Lathrop also presents, from the Congregational church at Chagrin Falls, Ohio, a communion set in good condition, although it has been used by that body of believers for forty years. The crowning gift of the occasion is that of Mr. S. D. Smith, of Boston, of one of his American organs, which is used for the first time on this occasion.

REVIVALS.

MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—In a revival in the church at this place nine have found the Saviour and thirteen more are among the inquirers.

PARIS, TEX.—There was during the year a special work of grace at Paris. Nineteen gave evidence of having been born by the Holy Spirit and were added to the church. All these converts, with two exceptions, were from the Sunday-school.

MCINTOSH, GA.—Extra meetings were held here about four weeks. The result was the conversion of fourteen persons, among whom were several of the most promising scholars. Nine of these converts united with the church.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—The pastor of this church writes: The first day of this year and the first Sabbath in the month was our communion season. A delightful season it was, too. We had intended beginning a series of meetings to last four or five weeks, but the cold and inclement weather prevented us from putting on the plastering, and we could not, therefore, commence with any hope of success. We decided to defer till warmer weather. Notwithstanding this impediment, the word found lodging in the hearts of twelve of our young people, all of whom connected themselves with the Congregational Church. We also received one by recommendation. All of these seem to be hopeful conversions. Our Sabbath meetings are well attended.

MACON, GA.—There was a growing religious interest among the children of our day-school and Sunday-school, and early in February we were enabled to secure the aid of Rev. E. E. Rogers, of Orange, Conn. The neighborhood prayer-meetings and house-to-house visitation by day were followed by powerfully impressive meetings at night. Sixteen members of our Sunday-school have joined our (Congregational) church. Twenty-two in all have united, of whom eight are heads of families, while eight or ten of the students have joined other churches, where their families are connected. The daily meetings continued for six weeks, with the efficient help of Rev. D. Sherrill, of Savannah, for a few days after Brother Rogers' departure.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—At a regular Wednesday evening prayer meeting, a young man announced that he had made up his mind to turn and live a Christian life. A meeting for the next night was appointed. Two or three more at that time came out on the Lord's side. Then a meeting every night was agreed upon, with a sermon from the pastor, and every night souls were hopefully born again. The series continued two weeks. Over two score souls were numbered among the believers. Forty were examined and approved by vote for membership in the church.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The first week in January was marked by growing earnestness on the part of God's people, but no real case of inquiry among the unconverted. The second week brought some to the "mourners' seats," but no important break in the ranks of sinners. We all felt that the Lord was drawing near. The congregations greatly increased until the audience room was entirely filled. The third week of our continuous services was exceedingly precious. The Holy Spirit came in power. The truth preached in great simplicity was owned of God in the awakening of nearly one hundred souls. On many occasions thirty were on the anxious seats, weeping and calling upon God for mercy. From these seats on two successive evenings nine persons arose and said they felt the assurance of forgiveness and a change of heart. During the five weeks of continuous services 66 professed hope in the Saviour, of which number 25 were students of the University. From the family of boarding students at Stone Hall eleven were brought under conviction, who have joyfully consecrated themselves to the service of the Saviour.

It was a very tender and impressive scene where among the inquirers after God were so many of our bright, mature students. We hope most earnestly that they all may be strong for God and everything that is good.

On the first Sabbath in February, 31 were received to Central Church on profession of their faith, and on the two succeeding Sabbaths four more, 35 in all. I mention, as a fact showing the prevalence of infant baptism, that of the 35 admitted on profession only nine received baptism, the remaining 26 having been christened. Our friends in the North will be glad to know that of the nearly 100 awakened and the 66 converted only six manifested any undue excitement, and but one of the number had been an attendant upon our church services. The church is stronger in every respect. The average attendance upon our Sabbath services is larger by nearly 100, and there is every indication of a steady and healthful growth.

HOW THE FREEDMEN CHILDREN DO IT.

Mr. E. C. Silsby, of Selma, Ala., writes:

Our Sunday-school have been interested in the proposed missionary steamboat "John Brown," for the Mendi Mission. Several Sundays ago we voted to take the contributions of subsequent sessions until they should amount to $10, to be sent on for the boat. A picture of the boat was drawn on the board and the contribution of classes recorded as given. The result is shown by the enclosed order for $10.20. A class of little girls who have a "mite box," not only voted its contents, but held a fair for the sale of articles which had been prepared by their own deft fingers, under the direction of their teacher, applying the proceeds to the fund. May the boat do much toward carrying the "glad tidings."

Rev. Evarts Kent, of Atlanta, Ga., writes:

I send you draft for the amount of our annual collection for the A. M. A. You will be interested to know that the contributions were mainly in small sums, from five cents to one dollar, and that there were eighty-five different contributions. I enclose you specimens of the envelopes I had printed for the purpose. I think they added somewhat to the amount. One little boy of ten years of age brought his envelope with five cents in it—the most generous contribution of all. He is the eldest of three brothers, all in the Storrs school, kept there by a mother who is not a Christian, and extremely poor—so poor that when visited in sickness, the other day, by Miss Stevenson and Mrs. Kent, the only dishes in the house were a tin plate, a tin spoon, one cup and a broken knife; we are helping them just now; but it was most touching when they called at the house last Saturday evening and found this lad getting his missionary envelope, received the Sunday before, "ready for to-morrow." I doubt if our Saviour has seen anything like it since that day when in Judea He was looking into the treasury.

First Congregational Church, Atlanta, Ga.—Acting upon the suggestion of the pastor at the Sunday-school concert, Christmas evening, the school brought birthday gifts to the Saviour in the form of remembrances for the poor; more than 100 packages were brought to the table; clothing, groceries, etc. It was most touching to witness the gifts brought to the Lord Jesus in this way from some of the very poorest of our children. The next morning, in a pouring rain, the pastor and deacons distributed these offerings. I hope our people gained some insight into the real meaning of the day.

Savannah, Ga.—The Sabbath-school has begun to yield excellent fruit. Having $30 in the treasury they voted to send one of their number to Atlanta University for a year. After a spirited contest on the part of several members of the school to win the prize, the decision was finally favorable to Palmer Lloyd, a boy of about 15 years. He went to Atlanta in time for the opening of the term. Fifty dollars in all were needed to insure him a year's study. To raise the remaining $20 the Sabbath-school gave a musical entertainment and ice-cream supper, and were successful in securing the amount needed.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL INSTITUTES.

Tougaloo, Miss.—It was thought that the last Sabbath of the school year could not be better spent than by calling in the Sunday-school workers, among the colored people, and holding a Sunday-school Institute.

Providence smiled upon the exercises with a most beautiful day, and at an early hour the chapel was filled with an attentive though miscellaneous throng, whose intelligent looks and interested, orderly demeanor were a surprise to some of the newest workers and evidence of progress to all.

The regular exercises of the Sunday-school were first attended to. The lesson, "Following Christ," with its golden text, "Whosoever will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow Me," seemed to furnish a peculiarly appropriate theme for the last conference of the teachers with their classes, and called forth thoughts and experiences, exhortations and warnings, calculated to be helpful alike to the Christian of years, the score or more of young converts, and the few who, with all their calls and opportunities, still refuse the yoke of Christian service.

In closing the review the superintendent gave a blackboard exercise suggested by the verse "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" This formed an impressive introduction to the first subject brought forward—the use of the Blackboard. Other topics presented were: Opening and closing exercises, Duties of the superintendent, Use and abuse of lesson helps, How to get the children in, Conversion and training of pupils, Individual responsibility.

Two of these topics were well presented by former graduates of this institution. The only topic which evoked general discussion was that of success in gathering the children in and winning them to continued attendance. Of the many who volunteered a statement of methods to this end, all spoke briefly, pointedly, correctly and sensibly, and the question-box when opened revealed nothing but practical, intelligent queries.

The Institute closed with the repetition by Miss Koons of one of the regular Sabbath-afternoon course of lectures, a lecture on Temperance, illustrated by Sewall's charts. A quantity of temperance literature was distributed, to be carried away for circulation.

MARION, ALA.—The Sunday-school Convention, held previous to the Conference, but in connection with it, was opened by a sermon from Rev. G. W. Andrews; text, "The word of the Lord is tried."

Sunday-school reports given by delegates from the various schools were never more interesting. The work of temperance in all the schools was a chief feature. One colored brother expressed it pithily, if not grammatically, when he said, "Dere seems to be a skim ober de eyes of mos' of my brederen on dis gret subjec." In the temperance work among the children, to save them we must keep this "skim" from forming. In the afternoon an interesting map-lesson, "The Journeys of our Saviour through the Holy Land," was given by a colored brother, though of the Anglo-Saxon race. If a query arises in the minds of my readers, it may help to make it clear when I say that though black he is white.

CONFERENCES.

SOUTH-WEST CONFERENCE.—This conference includes the Congregational churches of Louisiana, and convened June 1st in New Orleans.

There were 31 pastors and delegates present. The reports from the various fields were cheering and hopeful. It has not been a harvest year, though some churches have been refreshed by the gracious visitation of the Holy Spirit, and all have, we hope, felt the quickening of a new life. A revival of wonderful preciousness and power was reported from Central Church, New Orleans, beginning with the "Week of Prayer," and continuing five weeks, during which time nearly 100 souls were awakened.

Rev. Mr. Clay's church in Terrebonne has been blessed and strengthened. There have been many hindrances in the year. The floods have caused great suffering among the poor. Cabins have been washed away, crops destroyed, and the plans of labor disarranged. When the laboring classes of the colored people suffer, the churches suffer in their resources.

The next meeting will be held in New Iberia the first Wednesday in April, 1883.

SOUTH-WEST TEXAS ASSOCIATION.—This Association embraces the Congregational churches of the A. M. A. in Texas. No new churches have been organized during the year, but two houses of worship have been built, one at Paris and one at Luling. The churches of this Association are becoming greatly interested in sending their young people to the Tillotson Institute.

THE CENTRAL SOUTH CONFERENCE.—This Conference, embracing the churches of Tennessee, Mississippi, Northern Alabama and, now, Arkansas, met in Nashville, Tenn., November 10–12.

The Narrative of the State of Religion was exceedingly interesting, and occupied the whole of the first forenoon with a large part of the afternoon following. The reports were on the whole very encouraging; while some of the churches have enjoyed an especial presence of the Holy Spirit, as that at Memphis and at Fisk University. In both of these, more than fifty students were converted. The report from Fisk University was that, since the opening of the term, eight of the students had made a profession of their hope in Christ.

Prof. D. I. Miner, of Tougaloo, was examined for licensure and approved to preach. The examination was very thorough, and was admirably sustained.

KENTUCKY CONFERENCE.—This association embraces the churches at Berea, Big Hill, Cabin Creek, Hillsdale, Camp Nelson, McKee and Williamsburg, all in Kentucky. It was organized in September, 1871.

THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.—This conference assembled at Marion. A Sunday-school convention of much interest was held previous to it, but in connection with it. The conference opened Saturday night with a sermon by Dr. Roy. The next day was communion Sabbath, and nineteen joined the church. On Monday the reports from the churches were given, followed by several well-written papers. Three candidates from the Theological Department of Talladega College were examined for licensure. Tuesday morning was given to pastoral work and ministerial culture, and the question How to promote revivals, was participated in by all the brethren, who were limited to ten minutes in their speeches. Some thought this the richest morsel of the feast.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.—This conference, embracing the churches in Georgia and two in South Carolina, held its annual meeting with Rev. S. E. Lathrop's church in Macon. Rev. Wilson Callen was at the time ordained by a council called at that place. The meeting was one of great interest in its literary and devotional exercises.

NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.—This conference met in Wilmington. Every church was represented and every one of the seven schools of the State. To the five churches were added two, those at Troy and Pekin, with two more coming on. During the conference, a council called in the regular way ordained as the pastor of these two churches, Mr. W. H. Ellis. An evening was given to the subject of temperance, especially to the business of reconstructing, re-organizing and resupplying the temperance army after its recent defeat in the State. Our two lady missionaries for the State were present to report their work and to add to the inspiration of the occasion.

WOMAN'S WORK.

TOPEKA, KANSAS.—The relief work proves quite a tax on our time and strength. Six mornings out of the seven are devoted to the people for their instruction and improvement. Monday evening we hold prayer meeting; Tuesday evening is devoted to Bible study for the young people. A good number attend. Friday evening I have a class in singing. The Sabbath is a busy day for each of us. We have a full Sunday school and need twice as much room, and Sabbath evening the Chapel is well filled With not a few worthy exceptions the people are ignorant and wicked, but this does not discourage us. Already we can perceive a change for the better. In all our exercises the people are more orderly and attentive.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—I have organized a Doing Good Society in the girl's school, which is doing effective work and interesting all. We appoint a committee of two to visit the sick every week. I give them something to carry in food and clothing, playthings and picture-books, for the sick, and taking the Bible and song-book they read and sing, often gathering a whole family in to hear them. Each Saturday a report of their visits is read, and once a month the school brings pennies to buy food. My prayer meetings among the mothers and girls are often very full of tenderness. And yet, among this people it is so easy to have good prayer meetings that I don't think as much of it as I used to at the North. More and more I feel the importance of teaching them that temperance, purity and a desire to do something for others is true religion.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—During this month I have held my weekly meetings with the women, taught my Sunday-school class, sometimes numbering fifty, all under ten years of age, held sewing schools for a part of our school girls, made twenty-five calls and arranged a library of nearly three hundred books, which have been sent to me from various places at the North. These are none of them new books, but are such as I think will interest and instruct the children and young people. Tuesday evenings I open my mission room for a reading room, having papers and books for them to read while there and take to their homes. By the kindness of friends at home last summer I obtained the "Library of Universal Knowledge," which the older scholars use and appreciate highly; and those outside the school are learning to consult it also as they come in Tuesday evenings.

MACON, GA.—Mrs. Lathrop's sewing school is also very interesting. As we walked into the room last Saturday morning, two old ladies, who were sewing just as busily as the children, arose from their seats and came across the room to greet us. One of them whose sprightly manner and unwrinkled face would never have betokened her great age, said to us: "I am ninety-two years old if I live till Monday. I can't do much, my hands are so stiff; but I thank the Lord that I can come here and sew a little;" and she showed us her patchwork squares with as evident satisfaction as any of the younger pupils. Ninety-two years old and learning to sew! Ah, thought I, most old ladies are through with their needle at that age. These sewing schools must bring comfort into many homes.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The meeting of this Association was held at Marion, Ala.

Mrs. H. S. De Forest, of Talladega, President, called the meeting to order, and after the opening exercises, welcomed representatives of sister societies and visitors who had come in to listen to the reports of the harvesters. Letters expressing interest and good cheer were read from the President and Corresponding Secretary of the Women's Missionary Association of Boston.

Mrs. Andrews, of Talladega, made an address on Women's Home Missionary Work, giving an account of the organization of the State society, the motives which prompted and warranted it, with a summary of the organization of the parent society in Boston and the number of missionaries first commissioned to the South and Southwest, reviewing the home work in our own State.

Reports from the local societies at Marion, Mobile, Montgomery, Selma and Talladega were given. The Marion society, with its thirty names enrolled, meets once a week. The Mothers' meeting has been conducted by Mrs. A. W. Curtis, whose illness prevented her presence at this time.

The girls composing the Emersonian Mission Band of Mobile, are doing their part in the work of helpfulness and uplifting, by making articles for a fair, the proceeds of which are to be given to a missionary in South Africa. The Mother's meeting, under the influence of Miss Clark, visiting missionary, gives promise of increasing interest. The Women's Missionary Association has received fifty names since its organization, thirty-two reporting themselves this year. Missionary subjects are presented once a month, and a collection is taken.

Montgomery reports forty members. Since late in the winter they have been engaged in making garments for the destitute. A special case of destitution, discovered by one of the members, was the means of rousing to greater activity. The meetings of the society aim to elevate in literary culture, as well as in other directions. Mrs. Fay offered suggestions in regard to the manner of increasing the interest of these meetings. Miss Fairbanks and Miss Curtis followed with remarks, sensible and practical, in regard to the training of the girls in our churches and schools. The contributions amounted to $39; $5 of which was donated to the Mendi Mission, the remainder to home work.

Selma has an enrollment of thirty-two. Many of the members had been unable to attend regularly on account of business and family cares. Missionary tea parties were introduced, proving quite successful. Select reading, singing, conversation and simple refreshments occupied the hours of meeting. In response to a call from Tougaloo, two quilts were made and sent to help replace those lost by fire. In connection with the mission workers, they have contributed the sum of $50; $26.75 of which was sent to the A. M. A., as a special gift, the balance being expended for the church. A ladies' prayer-meeting, three sewing classes and childrens' meetings had been sustained weekly. A Young People's Literary Society was held on alternate Monday nights.

Talladega showed a very prosperous year in the monthly gatherings of the Mission Band, mothers' meetings and two sewing classes. With funds collected they had purchased a carpet for the platform of the chapel, secured a share in the John Brown steamer, defrayed the funeral expenses of a poor woman and aided many needy and destitute around them. The young people of both sexes are being educated in the direction of missionary labors through the different committees which have been formed for that purpose.

GOOD HOPE.

The mission buildings at this station have been thoroughly repaired this year. The mission-house, or "home," has been renewed inside and out. The church has been partially pulled down and rebuilt, and painted inside and out. The farm has been cleared up, fences repaired and all the grounds put in good condition. A new boat-shed has also been built.

The church work is in a prosperous condition under the faithful care of Rev. J. M. Hall, the missionary at this point. He has been undergoing the acclimating process, but in the face of many discouragements has held bravely and hopefully to his work, and is already permitted to see some of the fruit of his labors.

The School now under the care of Mr. O. J. Thomas and Mrs. Lucy During shows a constantly increasing attendance.

AVERY.

The industrial department at this station has been much improved this year under the efficient management of Mr. I. J. St. John. The mill has done more than its usual amount of work, and has been extensively repaired and refitted, and is now in better shape for work than ever before. All the buildings are in good condition. A fine spring of never-failing water has recently been discovered on the mission grounds close to the "Home," which cannot fail to add greatly to the health and comfort of the missionaries.

The church, which has been under the care of Rev. A. E. Jackson, has been strengthened by the exercise of Christian discipline upon several of its members. There have been eight additions to it on profession of faith from among the young men and women who have been under the Christian influences of the "Home." Eight new preaching stations have been opened, and considerable evangelistic work has been done. During the last month Rev. A. E. Jackson and wife have returned to this country. The church has long been in need of a bell. At last it has been procured, and its Sabbath invitations will soon be heard calling the heathen out of darkness into light.

The school at Avery is well conducted by Mr. Samuel B. Morrison and his wife. It has just been furnished with a fine, new blackboard. Twenty of the mission boarders have been removed to the school and "Home" at

* Deceased.

Good Hope station, and yet the work goes on with those that remain and more that are being gathered, steadily and hopefully.

Two of the brethren of the church here, James Miah and James Minah, have been commissioned as evangelists to go from village to village to read the Bible and explain it to the people, and to preach and teach as they have opportunity, among the heathen tribes who have not yet been brought in contact with the truth.

KAW MENDI.

Early in the year, Feb. 21, 1882, Mr. Williams, the earnest and efficient missionary located at this station, died of diabetes at Freetown, where he had gone for medical treatment. His death is a great loss and will be felt in the mission. Rev. George N. Jowett has taken his place. The school, which numbers 23 boarding pupils and 9 day scholars, is now under the care of Harry Tucker, son of the old chief. The church which was gathered by Mr. Williams numbers 15 members.

DEBIA.

The Association needs a better building here for school and church purposes. The school has at present 20 pupils, and is under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goodman.

GENERAL VIEW.

On the whole, the work of the year is not without its encouragements. There have been no deaths resulting from the climate, and none of the missionaries have been obliged to leave the field for this reason. There have been several additions to the churches. New preaching stations have been opened, and the schools are better attended than last year. The head of the Industrial Department has also been active, and the property and facilities of the mission have been greatly improved. More missionaries of the right sort with sound bodies, clear heads and warm hearts, filled with missionary zeal and the Holy Spirit, are needed, at once, to man this mission and extend its blessed influences far into the uplands of the interior.

ARTHINGTON MISSION—CENTRAL AFRICA.

The exploration by Rev. Dr. Ladd and Dr. Snow of the region assigned by Mr. Arthington for this new mission has been successfully carried through. The party, which started out about a year ago, met with many obstacles and delays and incurred great personal danger, but were able to reach their destination and accomplish their ends. They were gone over nine months. They found the whole country in a state of insurrection, and narrowly escaped with their lives. They, however, reached a point 2,500 miles up the Nile, went up the Sobat and beyond it, studied the country and its inhabitants, took a large number of photographs of favorable points for mission work and of the wild, naked, heathen tribes among whom they sojourned, and made maps of the country and plans of the towns along the route. Extracts from Dr. Ladd's journal have appeared in the American Missionary from time to time. He has also made a preliminary report, and submitted plans for the development of the mission. The war in Egypt, and the less easily subdued insurrection in the Soudan under the "False Prophet," Mohammed Achmet, have made it impossible to do anything in this mission till order is restored. It is not now safe, and probably will not be for some time, to attempt to enter the Soudan. This mission must now await the unfoldings of God's providence. The work of survey has been faithfully done. The victory of the English in Egypt may be taken as an indication that the time will surely come when this great work for the uplifting of Africa may safely be undertaken. An elaborate report of the expedition, with maps, plans and photographs, is in course of preparation for future reference.

THE INDIANS.

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY, DAKOTA—Jacob Kauffman, Agent.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY, WASHINGTON TERRITORY—Edwin Eells, Agent; Rev. Myron Eells, Missionary.

We make the following brief extract from the Report of Indian Education at Hampton, Va.:

There are at present 81 Indians in the school—27 girls, and 54 boys; 7 have been returned during the year to their homes for ill-heaith, 1 has died, and 2 have left for other reasons; 47, more than half of the number at the school, are Sioux, from Dakota Territory, the tribe for whom Hampton's previous work has chiefly been done. Five more Indian students are expected soon.

The distinguishing feature of this year has been the return to their homes in the fall of a party of 30—25 boys and 5 girls—after 3 years' training, and the reception of a new party of 45—31 boys and 14 girls—gathered from the same Agencies.

The effect upon the school of the return of these scholars to Dakota has been of great value. The remaining scholars have faced the fact of their own return. They watch the reports from Dakota with interest, and seem to be stimulated by the failures, as well as by the successes, of their former comrades.

The more accurate knowledge of Indian life, gained by those who took the party back, has been valuable, from the light thrown on the work to be done, and the moral effect produced upon the scholars, who are now certain that the conditions of their old life are known.

The new party was carefully selected, and has proved of excellent material. Its members are, for the most part, physically strong. There are many minds among them surprisingly quick and retentive, and, in general, a determined, patient, and earnest spirit characterizes both their work and their study. They have made better progress in the school-room than any previous party.

Mr. Frissell, the pastor, adds:

We have kept up two Indian meetings during the week, in which a verse of the Bible is read in English by one of the students, then by all who can read English in concert, then by one in Dakota. Then it is explained. After trying several ways, this seemed to be the most satisfactory. Prayers are offered in Dakota, in Arizona and in English by students.

A meeting is kept up by the English-speaking students among themselves in order to fit them to take part when they go back to their homes.

Our communion on Sunday was very interesting. There were added to the church four colored students and three Indian boys. These three are representatives of three different tribes. One of them was an Apache. He came to us sixteen months ago with no knowledge of Christ, and none of God, with the exception of what he had gained from an old medicine man. He told me that God was like the wind that came in at one window and went out at the other. He has been very earnest in his study of the Bible and has come to my study night after night when he had had a hard day's work, and an evening study hour that he might read the Bible with me. Not long ago he told me he wished to pray in meeting, and asked me if I would write out what he wanted to say. So I took my pen, and after long pauses he told me what he wanted to say to God. I wrote it down just as he gave it to me. He has carried it away to learn so that he may take part in our weekly meeting in English. The other two boys have come to me twice before and asked to join the church but I have told them to wait. But now it seemed as though they could wait no longer, and they were glad to profess their faith in Christ.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY.

On the 1st of July, 1881, all the workingmen employed at this agency for the last fifteen or twenty years were dismissed by order of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and their places filled by Indians, young men who had grown up at the agency, attended its schools, worked in its shops as apprentices, and were thus prepared to take the white men's places. The Agent writes: The experiment, for such it may be considered, has proved measurably successful. The young men have performed their duties with fair success. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, they have done as well as the same number of white boys would have done of similar age, education and surroundings. This indicates the advance which these Indians have made in the past ten or twelve years.

The church at S'Kokomish numbers 31. The average attendance at Sabbath School is 47, on church prayer meetings 30, on other prayer meetings among the Indians, 36; on public worship, 67. Families under pastoral care, 52. Total contributions for benevolence $451.05. A church of eleven members was organized at Jamestown, April 30th. Here, the average attendance on Sabbath-school is 35; on public worship, 50; on prayer meetings, 25; families under pastoral care, 40. There has been considerable religious interest among the Indians. The Indians on other reservations have been more interested than usual, and intercourse with these has caused a similar interest here. Then the most severe sickness which has visited the reservation since my residence here, came upon us last winter, and awakened serious attention in the minds of many. This additional interest has caused increased work, so that I now hold prayer meetings at two logging camps regularly. Some of our young people are taking hold of the work, and at times conduct meetings with the Indians during my necessary absence.

New hymns have been made in the Twana and Clallam languages, the native languages of the Indians. Hitherto, we have used hymns in the Chinook language, which is generally understood by most of the Indians, yet it is by no means so good a language to convey religious truth as the native languages.

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.

From Agent's report: The number of Indians engaged in doing farm work is constantly increasing. In issuing wagons last fall, I required that each man receiving a wagon should farm five acres of land for himself, or forfeit his wagon. All, with one exception, complied with this condition. Agency Indians farmed this year 832 acres; they prepared the ground in the spring under the direction of my farmer in excellent manner, and sowed 146 acres of wheat, from which I estimate a yield, from two days' threshing now in progress, of 2,600 bushels of very good quality. This is the first effort of my Indians in raising wheat, and they are greatly elated with their success, and many are already asking for more land for next spring sowing. This improvement in farming by the Indians is gratifying to myself, as two years ago an Indian rarely cultivated to exceed from one-half to three-quarters of an acre; now some have cultivated this year twenty acres, others from four to twelve, and ask for more land for next year. Twenty Indian men, heads of families, have consented to go this fall twenty-two miles west of the agency, build houses and remain to farm 133 acres of land which I have had broken this summer.

These Indians are peaceable and friendly; many would assume the position of citizens and compare favorably with the average white man if they could have lands in severalty and the protection of the law. During May and June last I had flouring gearing put in position in the agency mill for grinding wheat raised at this agency last year, and manufactured 44,000 pounds of flour of good quality; there were also sawn during the year at the agency saw-mill 20,812 feet of lumber.

SISSETON AGENCY.

From Agent's report: The changes most noted here are in the mode of dress, the work performed, the treatment by the men of their wives and children. The estimated amount of wheat raised in 1878 was 12,000 bushels. In 1879 I put forth all the efforts I could, and it resulted in 17,000 bushels; in 1880 it was 25,000 bushels; last year 40,000, and this year it will reach 50,000. When I came here to take charge of this people they had issued to them 25 or 30 per cent. of all the food they needed from the warehouse. Now nothing is issued in this way except to the schools and the apprentices. The number of machines the Indians have bought for themselves is large; reapers and mowers combined in the last four years, about 60; sulky plows, two; fanning mills, 20; horse-rakes, six; and one man has a twin binder-reaper, and this year he cut grain for whites just off the reserve. At least ten of our young men have purchased a part of the material to build themselves houses, and one or two have furnished all the material.

LEECH LAKE, MINN.

FROM REPORT OF REV. S. G. WRIGHT.

Twenty-seven children were boarded and clothed about eight months of the year, and fifteen attended very regularly as day scholars. The text books used were elementary speller, model reader, first, second and third readers, mental arithmetic. Several of the most advanced pupils are also familiar with the four ground principles of written arithmetic. Nearly all made good progress in their studies. There is no lack of ability in the Indian child to comprehend any branch of learning. The only obstacle in his way is that all his knowledge of books must be acquired through a strange language. The lessons must be explained all through the second and third years of his schooling in his own tongue; otherwise he gets no new ideas from his books, though he may read and spell and write ever so well. I explain the meaning of the words they spell, and translate the lessons read in the different readers. Much religious instruction is given in the school-room and in the morning and evening worship. I returned to this place a year ago, after being absent about two years, and was very happy to find the little company of earnest, devoted Christians whom we left still faithfully pursuing their work for God.

SPOKAN FALLS, WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

FROM REPORT OF REV. H. T. COWLEY.

With but few exceptions I have held services twice every Sabbath for worship and Scriptural instruction, and on Thursdays and Saturdays are the regular prayer and conference meetings. In the day school, I teach the scholars, of whom there are sixteen, singing and Biblical History. The celebration of the Lord's Supper is greatly honored among these people, and as I find it to be a means of spiritual help to all the tribe, the occasions are monthly and diligently attended. The number ordinarily present at religious services is from twenty-five to forty, but on communion seasons from seventy-five to a hundred and fifty.

*February, March, April and May. †September to May inclusive. ‡September to March inclusive. §The great size to which the Central School had grown, compelled us, on June 1st, to divide it. Two school-rooms are occupied, both in the same building. The schools are virtually two, but the numbers are more exactly accurate if given as above.

NOTES ON THE STATISTICS.

1. It will be seen that fifteen schools have been sustained during a part or the whole of the year. This is the same number as that reported last year, but of last year's fifteen, only nine were sustained during the entire twelve months, against eleven this year. All of these eleven may be regarded as permanently established and as giving promise of continued and increasing usefulness.

2. At the close of our previous fiscal year (Aug. 31, 1881), 27 teachers were employed, of whom nine were Chinese. At the close of this year, 31 were at work, of whom 11 were Chinese. The total number of months of missionary service last year was 286, being more by 40 than in any preceding year. The total for this year is 356, exceeding that of last year by 70 months, or nearly six years.

3. Last year's statistics showed the total number of pupils enrolled during the entire twelve months to be 1,632; and we were greatly cheered at the notable increase over the year preceding. This year's total is 2,567, an increase of 935, or more than 57 per cent. Corresponding gains appear in the footings of all the columns, except the last two, where, strange to say, a marked diminution appears. This would be very discouraging but for two facts. One is that our gains in attendance have been almost wholly from among those who have recently come from China, in whose heart the seed is being sown, but the harvest time has hardly yet arrived. The other is, that our Christian Chinese, in consequence of labor troubles, and for other causes, have been moving, in large numbers, northward and eastward, while many have returned to China. These diminished figures do not indicate a smaller number of Christian Chinese who regard our Missions as their spiritual birth-places and their religious homes, but only that just now, in August, 1882, a smaller number of them than usual are able to be at home and in the schools.

4. It is too soon for me to be able to state accurately the results of the year's work in souls actually brought—according to our hope—from darkness to light. I trust that it will be found to be not less than thirty; making the total number of whom we have cherished this hope since our mission-work began, about 355. I dare not say that in all these cases this hope has proved to be well-founded. Of many of them we have lost sight entirely. They are in China, or in the Hawaiian Islands, or on the frontiers in our own country, or in the centres farther East. It is simply impossible to maintain our hold upon them by correspondence—at least without largely increasing our working force: and we must comfort ourselves with the confident belief that the Great Shepherd who knows his sheep, still keeps them in his care and love.

I do not think, however, that this year can be characterized as specially fruitful in conversions. Compared with some previous years, it seems to have been unfruitful. One reason may have been that our largest school has been so crowded that it has been almost impossible for the teachers to get opportunities for that close hand-to-hand and heart-to-heart work, by which, most often, souls are won. If we could somehow secure a Central Mission House more commodious and better ventilated (for, as that wise man and prince among preachers, Dr. George Shepard, used to say, "Oxygen is one of the means of grace.")—without such change of location as would reduce materially the attendance on the school, I should look for more and better spiritual work than now seems possible.

THE FINANCES.

This large increase in work accomplished, has involved inevitably some increase in expenditure. Our total resources on Current Expense account for the year have been as follows:

Balance from last year	$12.90
Incidental receipts (sale of furniture, etc.)	28.50
Drafts on New York	6,420.00
Contributions to the treasury of the California auxiliary	3,582.30
Total	$10,043.70
Our disbursements have been for salaries of teachers and helpers	7,395.60
Rents	1,978.60
Incidentals, including expenses for fitting up and furnishing mission houses, printing annual report, traveling, fuel, lights, water, postage, etc., etc	819.95
	$10,194.15

The excess of expenditures above the resources is thus, at this date (Sept. 19), $150.45. But the books are not yet closed, and it is hoped that further offerings may yet be made sufficient to wipe out the deficit entirely.

Besides the amount above acknowledged as contributed directly to the treasury of our California auxiliary, the sum of $600 has been received on permanent property account, making the total receipts to date amount to $4,121. The property of the Mission consists of two mission houses in San Francisco and a lot in the town of San Leandro. The aggregate value of this property may safely be said to be $8,750. The indebtedness remaining upon it is $4,250.

SERMON.

MORE POWER FROM CHRIST FOR THE WORLD'S LARGER NEEDS.

BY REV. C. L. GOODELL, D. D.

Matthew xxviii., 18: "And Jesus came and spake unto his disciples, saying: All power is given unto me in heaven and earth."

"Our Lord," said Vinet, "instituted little, but inspired much." He gave the least attention to forms and the highest possible attention to the spirit. His great aim seemed to be to put the kingdom of heaven into the heart of a few men, and by the aid of the Holy Spirit to diffuse this grace of divine love throughout the world recovering the soul from sin and restoring in it the blessed life of God. This is the one essential mission which our Saviour confers upon the Christian. To this end Jesus said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth." This promise of power for the world's redemption is the last word on the lips of the world's Redeemer before he vanished into the skies. He adds only a pledge of permanent personal help. Jesus is giving his little company, who love and follow him, their final mission and message: "Go ye, therefore, make disciples of all nations." "And lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world." This is the parting promise of the Almighty Saviour, that he will stand by his disciples, and their writings, and their successors, in their redeeming work to the end of time. This was spoken after the treachery of Judas and the denials of Peter; after the thorns and lashes of the tormenters beyond Calvary, and the resurrection under the open skies, as he departed by cross and cloud from the earth into the bosom of the heavens.

No greater weight of meaning could be put into words. Sin is the soul's corrupter and destroyer. Nations fall to ruin under it. Men, beneath it, incur the displeasure of God, and waste away into eternal death. "Christ was declared to be the Son of God with power"—Romans i., 8—to save souls from it, and with just such power as is required; the power of an infinite love and sympathy, the power of expiation for human guilt, of satisfaction for sin, of atonement for all transgression, unlimited power of regeneration and healing for the wants of the world. There is no stint to this power. Our Saviour's purpose was not to save himself from suffering, but to save souls from sin. "He tasted death for every man." The sheep were so far astray the Shepherd must come for them by the way of the cross, or they never could be brought back to the fold.

How we belie the cost of Christ's sacrifice when we represent the littleness of a man's need in sin, and disparage the greatness of Christ's deliverance. Our Lord bestows this wondrous power on men; God saves men, through men endued with His might. He left His disciples to represent Him in the world to all nations and generations, "according to the power that worketh in us." With great power gave the disciples witness, because the invincible Christ walked by them unseen.

The book of Acts is a record of this power. It is for believers to continue the book of Acts. This power of God unto salvation is offered now and here to men in this life every day and hour, and to those who feel their sins this grace of our Lord Jesus Christ is inexpressibly sweet. "He satisfieth the longing soul and filleth the hungry soul with goodness." The redemption of the world can advance only as the disciples of Christ receive strength and consecration from him. In me, says Christ, is all power in heaven and in earth. Apart from me ye can do nothing. Our subject is therefore before us: More power from Christ for the world's larger needs.

First. More power from Christ. I am here to say that nothing can take the place of this gospel power; neither the machinery of societies nor any human method; neither philanthropy nor eras of good feeling. These are as moonlight unto sunlight. We must have new life in the soul. This power may be limited by shallow views of the evil of sin, "Healing the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly," by inadequate conceptions of Christ's atoning work, and by loss of faith in the supremacy of God's word.

This power may be weakened by putting speculative thought above revealed truth, saying what God ought to do, what man's moral nature demands of God, and what relief must be given to the thinking and cultured circles of this century from the pressure of the problem of future retribution, else they will all become infidels; as if the sufferings of Christ for men were not the one eternal answer to all questions of doubt concerning both God's justice and love toward transgressors.

Wait on God, and trust his word; neither judge him, nor anticipate him. "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" Shall man, who has suffered nothing for transgressors, be more tender than our Lord, "who hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows," or know better how to deal with them?

"By wisdom, the world knew not God," and when the supper which Christ has spread is all remodeled by the critics to suit the wise according to their own conceits, they will be no nearer accepting the feast. "The natural man, learned or ignorant, receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him."—Cor. ii., 14. Of all the folly of Christian learning, so-called, in this age, this is supreme, the dream of conquering the thought and speculation of this world, and laying it at the foot of the cross, other than as the hearts of men are changed by the power of God. Clear the field of every infidel objection to-day, and there will be a new crop to-morrow. Because "when men know God they glorify him not as God, and they do not like to retain God in their knowledge."—Rom. i., 21–28.

The seat of vain thought and speculation is in the heart. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit."—John iii., 7.

"Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again." The skeptical philosophy of this world will be converted to God just as fast as the human heart is born again, and no faster. Paul says concerning himself before conversion: "I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus." "I verily thought." What were Paul's thoughts? It was God's thoughts that the world needed. Paul thinking by himself was no better than modern theorizing; some think not as good. It was Paul, the apostle to the Gentiles, saying: "The life that I now live in the flesh I live by faith in the Son of God;" and "I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me." That was the mighty power of God in the world, and not his uninspired thoughts. Christ is neither conservative nor radical. He is the life and the truth. There is no hiding of power in ancient theologies, nor in modern, as such. Dead orthodoxies are no better than living heresies.

It is not advanced thought, nor mediæval thought that saves souls, but a present anointing with power from on high, by the Mighty One. The divine spirit is ever old and ever new, always the same gift of God to faith. This power of saving men may be dissipated by an absorbing worldliness—in prosperous times men make money and forget Christ—by men sitting in the seats of Moses, and neither acknowledging the reliability of Moses, nor the authority of Jesus; by spiritual apathy, saying in theory to souls in need, "I go, sir," and then practically going not, or running with no tidings, having taken the offense of the cross out of the gospel, leaving no story to tell, no message of vast and momentous urgency to convey; by sinking into the dull routine of formalism while ministering at the altars of the living God; and by engrossing ambition and love of preferment, seeking who shall be greatest instead of exalting Christ.

This gospel power may be destroyed by a fading faith; the edge of conviction dulled by doubt; professing Christians saying of Christ, as Peter did: "I know not the man," and soon going through the whole creed of agnosticism; I know not the word, if it be truly inspired and infallible; I know not what I do know, Christ before the tribunal of nations and ages, their universities and libraries, and all the achievements of the Christian centuries, and so many leaders of the blind making a merit of their own blindness.

"I am the light of the world," says Christ, "whosoever followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life," and this light of life is just what the world needs. "None but Christ, none but Christ," said the martyr Lambert as the soldiers lifted him upon their halberts in the flames. No earthly agony can dispel the darkness and sweep away the mists of doubt, but they that rise up into Christ shall be above the darkness and have the light of life.

Throwing discredit upon systems of faith, because they come from Paul, and are old and outgrown, or rallying enthusiasm for novelties and vagaries, because they have come from Plato, and are new and up with the times, this has no building power in it. Drifting on varying currents of human reason, in Christian ranks, now this way, and now that, is always away from God, toward self, glorifying man, and disowning Christ; human gospels of culture and science, and socialistic brotherhood taking the place of Christ. Thus the witnesses for Christ become mute. The eye no longer on the eternal verities of sin and salvation in Christ turns to the consensus of the world's religions and builds a modern pantheon, admitting only the shadow of Paul's unknown God. The speed of chariots along the highway of salvation slackens, power wanes, and over the fairest fields of the world's hope the shadows are lengthened out and not lifted.

The world can be converted only to the living, loving brotherhood of Christ, and never to an iceberg of doubt and unbelief, with a ministry dreary as a philosopher's club, and a worship like communion with the north pole. Meanwhile, human help for man who is down is no more effective than ever. It is Christ and not Socrates and the latest theological toy that saves. The power of sin is no less deadly. It does not soften and yield to our more engaging theories. It has its grasp on man's heartstrings and holds him. It is cruel as the grave. A garment may mend its own rents, but evil does not cast out evil from the soul.

On Calvary, sin struck down love itself. The world does not yet want Christ, and chains and prisons still await his disciples, where his grace has not gone. In the noon of this Nineteenth century, the waste and woe of sin is terrible. It floods our street with the wrecks of rum, fallen often from palace to gutter. The country is smirched with social vices that neither divorce courts nor revolvers cure. The government bends under the weight of corruption; money-power and demagogism in civil service. Notwithstanding the school and the printing-press, and the latest theory of evolution that man is descended from "the zoological gardens, and not from the garden of Eden," race lines still shut out light and help from the lowly, and bind on grievous burdens. Whole tribes and nations are decaying under debasing wickedness. Seven hundred million heathen are without the Gospel. Through the blight and curse of sin, Africa is still the "dark continent." Everywhere the ways of the transgressor are hard, and the wages of sin is death. Now, two millenniums after Christ, as in the days of Nero, sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death. Till sin relaxes its grasp and shows mercy; till it begins to heal its own wounds, and restore its wretched victims, casting out selfishness, and lust, and passion, and covetousness, and deceit, and treachery, and impurity, and infidelity, and blasphemy, and hatred, and malice, and murder, how can we lay aside that Gospel, radiant with centuries of victory, mighty through God from the first to the pulling down of strongholds, still mighty in justice that smites, and mercy that saves, and that is able to save unto the uttermost them that come unto God through Christ; that Gospel which recognizes both God's moral image in man and the sin that has wrecked him, cleansing away his leprosy and giving him immortal kingship with God, a dignity no human theory ever has conferred on man? How can we lay aside this Gospel of salvation that is filling earth and heaven with glory for the doctrines which take man's side instead of God's side, in the only salvation which mercy has ever offered to the lost?

I am aware that while I thus speak of the power of sin in the world the sunrise of God is on all the mountains of the earth, and that the world's new day is breaking, and I rejoice. It is so because the current of redemption flowing through history has held its course, blood red, from the pierced heart of Calvary to this hour. This power has the omnipresent energy of the Holy Spirit. It resides in consecrated men. It works through loving souls, mighty in God, knowing nothing save Jesus Christ and him crucified. To do our work Christ must get a higher place in the heart. Our hindrances are chiefly with ourselves. We need moral elevation of character, and fresh supplies of spiritual life. Faith is power, the word of God is power. The disciples whom Jesus directed to go and find the colt tied tell us they found it even as Jesus had said. In all our work in seeking the lost and uplifting the down-trodden, it will be in promise, and prophecy, and fulfillment, and power, and victory, even just as Jesus has said. Not one word of all He has promised to the nations shall fail. Prayer is power. The church can pray down the world's salvation as fast as it is ready to accept it. Nothing hastens such readiness like Christly character. Self-sacrifice is power; service is power. Christian benevolence is power; love to men is power. Highest work on earth is done by highest love. Fellowship of Christian hearts associated in Christ's work is power. The power Christ gives through the spirit flows through all these channels. In order to have full power, there must abide in the soul a full Christ, from the angel song over Bethlehem to the Redeemer that ascended triumphant from Olivet, and is now seated on the throne of power.

John the Baptist saw the truth: "He must increase, but I must decrease"—more of Christ and less of self. The highest Christian experience possible is simply more and more of Christ, and less and less of self. Backsliding from God and loss of power is simply less and less of Christ and more and more of self. As the disciples increase in pride, and worldliness, and self-consciousness, the kingdom of God decreases, treasuries become empty, ministers and missionaries few, and missionary work powerless. As Christ increases in the hearts of His people the roots of selfishness wither, power revives, and all things relive. There is bloom and growth of victory everywhere; the dew of Hermon, and the excellency of Carmel, and the fullness of Him who filleth all in all. Let our prayer be, "None of self and all of Thee."

O to follow where his feet led the way;
To the thresholds few have crossed, foul and bare,
Where the stranded wrecks are tossed,
The jewels he hath lost, to be gathered there.

Our work lacks momentum because our piety has too little spiritual force to carry it. It is under weight. We shall make progress in work as we make progress in grace, and wrestle our victories in our own souls on our knees. Dr. Bainbridge says the question of missions is largely a prayer question.

Every addition to Christian character is enlargement on the field. More of Christ in the heart, more missionaries, and teachers, and money. Greater the power from God, greater the triumph over opposing forces all along the line. The opposition is mostly in our own hearts and exchequer, not with African, Indian, or Mongolian. If Congress were converted it would be felt in Canton the next steamer.

The delay is not because of miasmic fevers and Chinese walls, but because of the unreadiness within; spiritual force is spent. The next era of advance must be by invigorating our Christian love and zeal. American missionary work was born through wide-spread revivals. Revivals are needed for its continuance and expansion. Shafts of Christian life must be sunk deeper into the Rock of Ages. Our wells of salvation must be lowered where spiritual drought never comes. We must so live in Christ that the water of life shall be ever flowing. We carry too much sail for the ballast of self-denial and love of souls. The root of missions needs more soil of Bible doctrines in the fundamentals of Christian giving and service, of the claims of Christ and the demands of a lost world. Mission work at home and abroad will not advance as it ought, until this fallow ground is broken up, and disciples lay hold of the power of God with all their souls, and count nothing gain to them which is withheld from Christ and His work.

There must be power at home, or lessening power everywhere; more lives of high devotion, more agony for souls, or barrenness and death. "Some use Christ as a medicine to cure their diseases," said an ancient disciple. "Christ should be the soul's food." When Christ is the feast of the soul, and not its medicine, how mightily the heart leaps to its work, and takes in the world as love's trophy for the Lord. This is the power needed for service.

A steam engine is far away out of sight in a busy factory, a throbbing heart of fire. But it moves every wheel, and communicates life and power and activity in every part of the great building. When it stops business ends, and the workmen are called in and discharged. So if we have the power of the Holy Spirit, the love of the meek and mighty Christ, it will reach every mission school in the South, every Indian wigwam in the West, every Chinaman that wears a queue, all the regions which you are striving to make as the garden of the Lord. Who is a child of God and does not know this? Who is not praying for this power? Glance briefly at the larger needs of the world requiring more power from Christ. The great hour for Christendom has come. Missionaries are confronted with growing opportunities, and plead for men and means. The slumber of ages is broken in the wide pagan empires. The heathen mind is awake, and the whole world open. Highways are cast up all around the globe for the swift messengers of salvation.

The condition of the dark nations is not of iron bars, but of open doors. These are years of destiny. To see, in time, the greatness of our opportunity, to feel the weight of our responsibility, is to save ourselves as well as others. The men of the old world and the men of the new world have, through Columbus, met together. What has come of it? A larger world, a larger providence, a larger life and thought and development, a larger future. The new world is doubled in power, and in all the elements of Christian manhood and better life. Shall it double its allegiance to that Lord who turned this new page in the world's history? Everything hinges on this. My country is the world, said a Roman senator—so must say the American Christian. We must keep in line with Providence, or lose power with God. The Jews failed to see their coming king in the prophesies of God. They read between the lines, and beheld only a temporal ruler and worldly aggrandizement. So they lost connection with Jehovah, and came to sit in dust and ashes among the nations they had boasted over. So, if we lose God's plan of redeeming work for us in our history, and fail to hear His call to us from the needy races and nations He has brought to our door, we shall fall down in utter weakness and desolation. All our strength and success is in keeping step with God's appointing providence, interpreting our duty, assigning our mission, and providing our means and methods. The whole of our heritage is greater than a part. We see how our fathers might have wrought better had they seen farther. Good men open their eyes to apprehend the greatness of God's purposes on this continent so slowly. Unless we arise and meet the hour it will be seen that our failure is greater than theirs. God honors us by putting great duties on us. He loads the people He loves with His own precious burden of souls. He makes His people great by giving them great responsibilities. He builds His people grandly by setting them grandly to building others. The hard work to be done keeps their piety warm, strengthens the bond of fellowship, maintains their doctrines pure, preserves from divisions, saves from formalism and hurtful idling with the truth, and compels them to dwell at the fountains of power.

No grass can grow on the path to the prayer circle. No spider can weave his nets in the "secret place" where the Christian meets his glorious Lord, and wrests new victories over the hosts of sin. Earnest service for God is the soul's best physician. More than we give will come back in vital forces, conserving the nation. In less than a century we shall owe more to what we do for the despised races among us than to anything we could do simply for ourselves.

Such love for souls will solve the vexing question of labor and capital, the rich, richer, and the poor, poorer, the difficult problem of over-crowded populations, and the mystery of a broken seal, and the world flooding to our doors.

When the producing forces of Christianity give place to a cold, critical age, and plain living and high thinking are succeeded by luxury, there is always waning power. Fortunate are we that our building era must run through decades and centuries of earnest work, keeping our piety from stagnation, the currents of our spiritual life warm and active and living, our tree of life all the time making new wood, instead of being polished and refined into a mere "Gospel of taste." If we do our work our piety will have robustness and power, and all the great qualities that have built this new world thus far for God will be preserved and improved. We live in an age which has set the coronet of manhood on four millions of slaves, which has united a nation of forty millions of people, sundered at the heart, into one, which has received one million immigrants a year into its bosom, which has paid off its debts at the rate of $150,000,000 a year, which has constructed three overland railways across the continent from sea to sea, like the golden rings of Saturn, and sails its fleet of steamships from Liverpool to Hong Kong, smoking the pipes of peace among the nations. We want power from God to work up to that level, and to utilize for Christ's kingdom the fruits of these achievements. It is God's hand in history, and these great furrows turned by His plowshare must be seeded by His word. Christianity turned in upon this prepared soil, what golden harvests will wave. The new world, whose discovery doubled all things in the march of man's destiny, must quadruple the working power of the Gospel in the age before us. The plans and purposes, the sympathies and longings of the Christian, must become universal. Sublimer thought and endeavor never engaged the heart of man.

Let the army of Christians give themselves to it, as Christ, the great Captain gave Himself for the world, bearing the red standard of the cross everywhere, and how swift and mighty will be the consummation. Let us begin now. There is no time to lose. When we plan more we shall do more. The more Christ has given the more he requires. Clear out the Christian wells that are dry, choked up with worldliness and wealth, and draw living water. Follow up advantages now in our hands. Stand not delaying in the presence of such duty. Increasing unity and strength will come as we move on. Our benevolent work is our strongest bond of Christian union, and our best hope as God's people. Love to lost men is the greatest builder, and it cements as it builds. Open, then, the paths for Christ's crimsoned feet, near and far; spread the feasts of redeeming love everywhere, in cabin and hall, and say, "Come, for all things are now ready." The work of this Association is great and urgent. It supplies a want for God's obscure and neglected ones, which bears an incense of peculiar sweetness up to the throne of God. It seeks to remove some of the heaviest weights of guilt and crime which hang upon the progress of this nation, and blot its fair escutcheon. As I have followed the record of its faithful and effective work, multiplying at a thousand points, and seen to what wronged and needy ones it was bearing the staff of life, my heart has flamed to heaven for God's blessing upon its workers and its work. This society has a most sacred mission. It goes to the least of all God's little ones in the esteem of this world, the bondsmen scarred with fetters, the Indians oppressed with the wrongs of two centuries, and those whose crime is that they have left the darkness of Paganism and come to a Christian land, bright with the fires of God's own kindling. God loves those who love and toil for such as these. Fra Angelico, the great artist, painted angels with wonderful skill. It is said he made them so living and real he thought that they looked out with their beautiful eyes from the canvas, on him, as he painted.

As you go on in this work, preachers and teachers and Christian workmen, restoring the Divine image in these marred souls, you shall find the good angels of God looking out of the dark faces upon you in gratitude and love, your reward and crown of rejoicing.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves. Since Emancipation it has devoted its main efforts to preparing the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as missionaries in Africa. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy toward the INDIANS.

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches—the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing numbers of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers here, and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY.

This magazine will be sent, gratuitously, if desired, to the Missionaries of the Associations; to Life Members; to all Clergymen who take up collections for the Association; to Superintendents of Sabbath-schools; to College Libraries; to Theological Seminaries; to Societies of Inquiry on Missions; and to every donor who does not prefer to take it as a subscriber, and contributes in a year not less than five dollars.

American Missionary Association,

No. 56 READE STREET, NEW YORK.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

relating to the Association should be addressed to Rev. M. E. Strieby, D.D., Corresponding Secretary, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Editor of the "American Missionary," to Rev. G. D. Pike, D.D., at the New York office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. Woodworth, Dis't Sec., 21 Congregational House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. James Powell, Dis't Sec., 112 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of Thirty Dollars at one time, or several payments to that amount within a year, will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution).

AUXILIARIES.

Any number of persons desirous of promoting the interests of the Association may often do so effectually by forming auxiliaries, and appointing committees to increase the number of members and present the wants of the Association to every Christian in their neighborhood. Christian women may aid us in this way by co-operation with their brethren, or by forming auxiliaries themselves.

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give the full name, "The American Missionary Association." The following form of bequest may be used:

I bequeath to my executor (or executors) the sum of ——— dollars, in trust to pay the same in ——— days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some States three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A. B.) as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves. Since Emancipation it has devoted its main efforts to preparing the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as missionaries in Africa. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy toward the INDIANS.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION."

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons by the payment of the same sum may be made life members without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association and every State Conference or Association of such churches may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years, and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting, five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an annual meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with, or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers, and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable, and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same; provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month at four o'clock P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each;

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE. It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work, to report to the Executive Committee at its regular meeting every month such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments; and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures, viz.: those (1) of the Chairman or (Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1.) Finance. (2.) Southern Work. (3.) Indian and Chinese Work. (4.) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished Business. 8. New Business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

THIRTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Thirty-seventh Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., Tuesday, Oct. 30, 1883.

At 3 o'clock P. M. the meeting was called to order by Secretary Strieby, and the President, Hon. Wm. B. Washburn, being detained at home by illness, Rev. J. E. Rankin, D. D., of Washington, D. C., one of the Vice-Presidents, was called to the chair and opered the meeting with devotional services. The organization was completed by the election of Rev. C. P. Osborne, of Conn., as Secretary, and Rev. F. E. Snow, of Conn., and Rev. J. P. Lane, of Mass., as Assistant Secretaries.

The following were appointed the Committee on Nominations.—Rev. G. R. W. Scott, D. D., Rev. Wm. A. Robinson, Hon. David N. Camp, Rev. E. O. Bartlett, and Rev. P. B. Davis.

The following were appointed the Business Committee.—Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D. D., Rev. W. W. Scudder, D. D., Rev. Frank Ayer, Rev. E. B. Palmer, H. H. Ricker.

The Committee of Arrangements were appointed as follows.—A S. Barnes, Charles A. Hull, Rev. G. D. Pike, D. D., Wm. G. Hoople, Richard M. Montgomery, Jeremiah Johnson, Jr., Rev. S. B. Halliday.

The Report of the Business Committee was presented by Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D. D., and was adopted.

The report of the Treasurer was read by H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer of the Association, and was referred to the Committee on Finance to be appointed.

The report of the Executive Committee was presented by Rev. J. E. Roy, D. D., and was referred to the various Committees to be appointed for its consideration.

The report of the Committee on Constitution was presented by Rev. G. M. Boynton, and was referred to a special committee consisting of Rev. W. S. Palmer, Charles A. Richardson, Rev. A. H. Bradford, Rev. John C. Labaree, Rev. G. F. Stanton, Rev. Gowen C. Wilson, Rev. S. G. Willard. This Committee was instructed to report at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The Nominating Committee reported the following Committees, which were appointed:

Committee on Indian Missions.—Rev. Joseph Anderson, D.D., Rev. C. C. Painter, Gen. S. C. Armstrong, Rev. Cushing Eells, D.D., Mr. William Harrison McKinney.

Committee on Chinese Missions.—Rev. Wm. Alvin Bartlett, D.D., Rev. George M. Boynton, Rev. Evarts Scudder, Rev. S. L. Blake, D.D., Rev. George S. Smith.

Committee on Educational Work.—Pres. S. C. Bartlett, Rev. Washington Gladden, D.D., Rev. C. G. Fairchild, Rev. John L. Ewell, Rev. E. W. Bacon.

Committee on Church Work.—Prof. Llewellyn Pratt, Rev. T. P. Prudden, Rev. C. L. Woodworth, D. D., Rev. Isaac Hall, Rev. J. F. Gleason.

Committee on Finance.—Dea. Eliezur Porter, Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D.D., Rev. D. O. Mears, D.D., Hon. H. D. Smith, Rev. Erastus Blakeslee.

The remainder of the session was occupied by devotional services in concert with the workers in the field, led by Rev. J. E. Twitchell, D.D., and at five o'clock the meeting took a recess until 7:30 P. M.

TUESDAY EVENING.

After devotional services, led by Rev. Joseph Anderson, D.D., of Waterbury, Conn., the annual sermon was preached by Rev. John L. Withrow, D.D., from Luke ix., 24.

At the close of the sermon, Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D.D., gave an address of welcome on behalf of the churches and people of Brooklyn.

The observance of the Lord's Supper followed, at which Rev. Samuel Scoville and Rev. W. S. Palmer, D.D., officiated.

The order for the next morning was announced, and the meeting took a recess until Wednesday A. M., at 8:30 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The morning prayer meeting was conducted by Rev. R. B. Howard.

The Association was called to order at nine o'clock. Rev. J. E. Rankin, D. D., the presiding officer, offered prayer, and followed with an address upon "The Gospel of Christ our only Solvent for Race Differences."

On motion of Rev. J. E. Twitchell, D.D., chairman of a committee appointed at the annual meeting of the American Home Missionary Society, a committee to confer with the Committee of the American Home Missionary Society was appointed as follows:

President S. C. Bartlett, Rev. J. L. Withrow, D. D., Rev. Washington Gladden, D. D., Rev. D. O. Mears, D. D., Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D.

Rev. D. K. Flickinger, D.D., Secretary of the Board of Missions of the United Brethren in Christ, gave an address upon the progress of the Mendi Mission in Africa.

Rev. A. H. Bradford read a paper on "Woman's Work in Modern Charity and Missions."

After singing by the congregation, Rev. G. M. Boynton presented a paper on "The Place of Missionary Literature in the Conversion of the World."

Professor Albert Salisbury, of Atlanta, Ga., read a paper entitled "For What are We Sent?"

The congregation united in singing one verse of a hymn, after which Rev. A. A. Myers, of Williamsburg, Ky., read a paper on the "Mountain White Work."

Rev. Edward Beecher, D. D., offered prayer.

The rest of the session was devoted to volunteer speeches of five minutes' length, Rev. Isaac H. Hall, of New Orleans, La., Rev. George S. Smith, of Raleigh, N. C., Rev. Alfred Connet, of McLeansville, N. C., participating.

At half-past twelve the meeting took a recess until two o'clock.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The session was opened by singing, followed by prayer by Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D. The records of the previous sessions were approved.

The Report of a Visit to the Dakota Mission was presented by Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., as follows:

At the last annual meeting of the A. M. A., the Executive Committee were authorized to go forward and complete arrangements with other Boards for a transfer of missions. At that time the work of the A. B. C. F. M. was entirely in foreign lands, with the exception of missions among the Indians; while the work of the A. M. A. was entirely in the United States with the exception of the Mendi Mission, West Africa. It was believed that a transfer or exchange would simplify and unify the work of each society. The A. B. C. F. M. would not have to confuse its appeals for foreign nations by mixing therewith appeals for Indians at home, while the A. M. A., by transferring its African mission, would cease to be duplicating and thus interfering with the A. B. C. F. M.'s appeal for its special field of labor. The American Board would have the monopoly of the foreign field with our churches, while the A. M. A., which already had some Indian missions, by taking also all others supported by our Congregational churches, would in this direction once more simplify the appeal and unify the work. To have more than one society working in the same field and appealing for funds to carry on the same work is necessarily confusing. These considerations compelled the A. M. A. reluctantly to give up the beloved Mendi mission to the care of another society and with more readiness to accept all the Indian mission work of our churches. During the winter the transfers were made, and the appropriations for the Dakota Indian mission by the A. B. C. F. M. were assumed by the A. M. A.

But such appeals as we had the right to expect came to the Executive Committee for enlargement. The Committee were, however, in ignorance of the nature of the work among the Dakotas, and of the kind of labor or of enlargement toward which they should look. It has been the habit of the Committee, a habit approved by the successes of the past, to have a close supervision by personal inspection of their missions. They are thoroughly known by being frequently visited by the Secretary, or by one of his associate superintendents in the field, or by members of the Executive Committee. The Committee did not dare to grant or to refuse considerable enlargement without a better knowledge of the field than could be gained by a few weeks' correspondence, either with the secretaries of the A. B. C. F. M. or with the missionaries in the field. The Secretary, with such members of the Executive Committee as could command the time, was therefore asked to make a personal inspection of all the missions in Dakota. Accordingly, the Secretary, Dr. Strieby, with the Rev. Addison P. Foster, Charles L. Mead, Esq., and myself, devoted the month of June last to this task, and made a careful and thorough examination of the condition of all the schools and missions received by the A. M. A. from the A. B. C. F. M., and, so far as was possible, of their prospects and their needs.

The chief problems connected themselves with the development of the educational work among the Sioux Indians, which has its centre at Santee, Neb., the extension of the evangelizing work, which has its main centre at Peoria Bottom, Dakota, and the retention of our mission operations at the Sisseton Agency. I will speak of these in their order.

We went first to Santee, Neb. We found the place to be just across the Missouri River from the great body of the tribe who are gathered in bands about a number of widely separated agencies in Dakota. The whole Sioux tribe or tribes embrace about 25,000 souls, of whom seven or eight thousand are at the Pine Ridge Agency in the southwest part of the Territory, as many more at the Rosebud Agency in South Dakota, and the remaining 8,000 or 10,000 are scattered about in a number of other agencies extending northward two-thirds across the State and embracing nearly all that part of the Territory which lies west of the Missouri River. For most of these Indians very little missionary work had been accomplished. The great labors of Drs. Riggs and Williamson and their associates were done in territory now occupied by the whites; and the hundreds of converts whom they made, and whose children have grown up in Christian civilization, are to be found either in little islands, we may call them, of Indian settlements surrounded by whites, like Sisseton and Flandreau, on about the extreme southeastern part of the great Sioux or Dakota reservation. It is in this corner, yet separated from the main portion of the reservation by the Missouri River and the boundary line which divides Dakota from Nebraska, that the Santee settlement is found.

Santee is an educational centre. There the A. B. C. F. M. established its chief school for instruction. There the Episcopalians have an excellent small school for 25 or 30 girls. We remained in Santee for nearly a week, the guest of Mr. A. L. Riggs, carefully examining the condition of the school and of the Indians. The latter are all Christianized and are engaged in farming, being spread about the country, settled on their farms and having their chapels, or places of worship, with their native preachers. We met them in their worship, heard them preach, conversed with them and found them growing in intelligence and enterprise. They have their own missionary organization, and carry on their own missions among the uncivilized bands. The largest church but one in the Dakota Association with over 200 members, is here at Santee, presided over by a native Indian.

The Rev. A. L. Riggs is at the head of the school, which numbers about 100 pupils of both sexes and all ages. Here little children are brought from all the wilder bands to receive the rudiments of their education; and here they come from Sisseton and other more civilized communities to complete their studies. These 100 scholars are gathered into four different dormitories—one for the little boys, another for the little girls, another for the large boys and another for the large girls. These all have their separate kitchens and boarding departments, so that the pupils meet together only in their daily recitations. They are well supplied with experienced teachers who can instruct them both in the English and the Dakota languages, there being several Indians, both men and women, among the instructors, and classes were heard in both languages. This opened one of the most difficult questions which came before us. Of course all the children must be taught the English language. It is the language of civilization and of books. But many of the most earnest friends of the Indians insist that all instruction must be in English, and that the Indian youth must be weaned as speedily and as completely as possible from all his savage associations, of language as well as of habits. This is a very seductive notion, and at first sight seems reasonable, as it is adopted by nearly all who look upon the Indian problem from the side of simple civilization rather than of evangelization. We found Mr. Riggs very strenuous that the Indian language should not be neglected, but that it should be Christianized. More than ever before we appreciated the force of the appeal when we visited, a little later, the settlements of untaught Indians. If the problem had to do only with the few hundred children who can be brought into schools probably the best way would be to make them forget their native tongue. But there are the old people as well as the young to be cultivated. The great mass of these 25,000 Indians in the Sioux Reservation, to say nothing of the Gros Ventres, Mandans, Arickarees, the Devil's Lake Indians and the Crows in other portions of Dakota or near by and interrelated, will not learn the English language for several generations. Even when the tribal system is broken up, and the people are settled on their farms, they will still talk the native tongue, Dakota, for many years. They will want the Gospel in their own language, or must have teachers and preachers who will use the Dakota tongue. It is necessary, therefore, that those who are to be their teachers shall be able to teach arithmetic, geography and religion in the Dakota; and for that purpose they must use that tongue in part, while being instructed, and learn in that tongue the educational and religious vocabulary really foreign to that language, but which they must use in it. Mere philanthropy might bid us throw away the old savage language as soon as possible, but the necessities of Christianity forbid. At the same time it must be carefully guarded that the children under education are taught a fluent use of English. Their influence must be exerted to replace Dakota by English just as fast as can be done.

Our attention was given, in good part, to matters of detail as to the arrangement of duties, the enlargement or repair of buildings, etc., which would be uninteresting if enumerated here. It will be sufficient to say that it was our conviction that economy of labor required that there should be erected a commodious central building for a general boarding hall. This will set free a considerable number of rooms in the four dormitories, and will provide accommodations for 40 or 50 more pupils. It also seemed to us best that the industrial department should be considerably developed by adding instruction in blacksmithing. The Executive Committee have since adopted these recommendations and made appropriations for these improvements.

The great question was also continually before our minds while at Santee, whether this was the best place for our principal large school for the Indians of Dakota to be located. To this we gave very careful study. We considered the eligibility of position, ease of access, relation to white communities, and quality of soil for instruction in farming. We had this especially in view when we went from Santee to Peoria Bottom. This is situated two hundred miles up the Missouri River, and near the centre from north to south of the great Sioux Reservation. There we were met by Mr. T. L. Riggs with the same hospitality as we had received at Santee from his brother, Mr. A. L. Riggs. We carefully examined the mission work and studied the capabilities of the field for school development. Whether the A. M. A. should establish at either of these points an institution to be compared with Hampton Institute is a matter yet to be decided. Should such be the case there are reasons which point to Peoria Bottom as a most beautiful and eligible site for it, supplying admirable land for agricultural purposes. But while this question remains unsettled it is clear to the Committee that for a long time to come there must be a good school maintained at Santee, so that enlarged facilities should there be provided.

Peoria Bottom is, like Santee, on this side of the Missouri River. It is not in the limits of the Indian Reservation. Here some twenty-five Indian families have settled as homesteaders, and half of these will qualify and receive patents for their farms in a few months. They have shown quite as much persistency as the average whites. They are Christianized and conduct their meetings with fervor and decorum. This settlement is of value chiefly now as a pattern to the Indians still in the reserve and as a centre for missionary operations among them. Under the guidance of Mr. Thos. L. Riggs two of the Committee spent between one and two weeks exploring the missionary stations among the wild Indians. We found encampments of savages utterly untamed, but a year or two off from the warpath with Sitting Bull, living some of them in tents which can be moved at a moment's notice, and others in log huts, but nearly all uninstructed in the arts of agriculture and fed wholly by the Government. They were in their beads, feathers and paints. At the most eligible points Mr. Riggs has established teachers (natives for the most part) who gather the children so far as they can and preach to them on the Sabbath. In this part of the work we felt a peculiar interest. We learned that the Gospel must be spread, not merely by teaching the children, but by sending it to their parents. The Indians are now ready to receive it. They understand that they must become white men. They wish to learn agriculture. They beg for allotments of land. The missionaries have done much by their able and self-denying labors. But it is for the A. M. A. to extend this work. We were very anxious to have reinforcements of missionaries and teachers sent for this pioneer work. There is abundant room for enlargement. The field is occupied in part by the Presbyterians and in considerable force by the Episcopalians, while in the northern part of the reservation, at Standing Rock, the Catholics are at work. Our relations with all these are friendly. We are on the closest terms of friendship with the Presbyterians, who have the advantage of the experienced Mr. Williamson. Certainly the sons of Father Riggs and Father Williamson, who were for so long a time associates in the early days of the Dakota Mission, could not do otherwise than work on the friendliest terms. Bishop Hare told us that he would welcome any enlargement of our work in Rosebud or Pine Ridge, where the Episcopalians are doing something, but where there is call for much more to be done. At Standing Rock is one of the best Indian agents in the field, a Roman Catholic, who will give us all the aid in his power. It is greatly to be desired that the means may be supplied to enlarge the direct evangelistic, as well as the educational, part of the work.

Mr. Riggs kindly accompanied us as we left the great Sioux Reservation and went to the northern edge of Dakota Territory, almost to the British line, to visit our station under the care of Mr. Charles L. Hall, of Fort Berthold. Here is an old encampment of Indians of three different tribes, speaking entirely different tongues from that of the Dakota Sioux, and who were for years their bitter foes. They settled in this fortified village for protection against the Sioux, and have developed, within the last few years, a great love for agriculture. They are hardly at all affected yet by Christian instruction. Schools have been provided, but need much development. Mr. Hall reasonably expects to see before long the fruits of his work, but they are yet small to any other eye but that of faith. Such is the general experience of the early years of missions. It seems, however, that, so far from being discouraged, it is time to consider whether the fine tribe of the Crows, which is kindred to those at Fort Berthold, should not be brought under mission influence. It seemed to the Committee that outstations should be established among the Crows as soon as possible. But one special object we had in view in going to this station at Fort Berthold was that we might examine the buildings or grounds at Fort Stevenson, about 17 miles distant, as a site for a school. We were informed that the War Department had concluded to withdraw from Fort Stevenson or to pass it over to the Department of the Interior for such purposes as it might see best to use it for. To the Secretary of the Interior it seemed that Fort Stevenson should be used for an Indian school, and we visited the place to see whether we could recommend to the A. M. A. to use its influence for the establishment of a school which should have our aid, and whose teachers should be recommended by us. We are happy to say that we found the buildings, though somewhat out of repair, yet sufficient; and it is likely that very soon a boarding school will be established there, to which a large part of the children of the Fort Berthold Indians will probably be sent.

A principal for the school has been nominated to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and will probably be appointed.

There remained the Sisseton Agency to be examined. The situation there was anomalous. Here are Indians of the third generation of Christian culture. It is a civilized community of descendants of those who were the earliest Dakota converts. Here are half a dozen churches, thus including nearly all the churches, and a considerable majority of the communicants who were to be transferred to the American Missionary Association by the American Board. When, however, the A. M. A. came to take possession of these Dakota missions, it was found, to the surprise of the Executive Committee, that the churches at Sisseton had already been transferred by their own act and by that of the missionary in charge to the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions. It was impossible for us to recover them, and the American Board was powerless to turn them over to the American Missionary Association. But there remained there something of a school work, the expense of which devolved on our treasury in consequence of the transfer. It became a serious question whether, now that the churches of Sisseton had been irretrievably lost to our Association, it would be best to retain the schools and educate the children of these Presbyterian churches. The Committee on their visit made very careful inquiries on this subject. They found that for a long time to come most of the native teachers employed in the various mission stations must come from Sisseton, as that is the one developed Christian community. Were it not that the most brotherly relations exist between the Presbyterian and Congregational missionaries, we should have been inclined to recommend the retention of the schools, simply as a nursery for our native teachers. But the perfect unity existing relieves the difficulty. The more advanced scholars at Sisseton will come to Santee for further education, and we shall be able to draw from Sisseton the teachers we need. It seemed best to recommend that the Sisseton schools follow the churches and be transferred to the Presbyterians. This has since been agreed to.

I may speak briefly of one or two kindred topics. While at Santee we made a visit to the remnant of the Ponca Indians, who, with much hardship, returned without permission to their old home from the Indian Territory, whither they had unwillingly been deported. We met their chiefs, Standing Bear and others, and heard their petition for schools and teachers. We have since carried their request to Washington, and have hopes that we can supply them with teachers when the Government shall put up the promised school buildings.

Also while at Santee it was our good fortune to enjoy a meeting with a large number of other friends of the Indians and consult with them on Indian matters. On one evening the parlor of Mr. Alfred L. Riggs's house was filled with a company of gentlemen from missionary and benevolent organizations, who were laboring for the Indians. Among them were our own missionaries; Mr. Williamson, of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions; Bishop Hare and Mr. Fowler, of the Episcopal mission; General Whittlesey and Mr. Albert K. Smiley, of the Board of Indian Commissioners; Professor Painter, from Washington; Mr. Herbert Welsh, of the Indian Rights Association, and others. The harmony of views and the deep earnestness prevailing among these gentlemen were very cheering to us. We were assured that the great heart of Christian America beats warm for the Indian. We are awaking to the subject of his wrongs. We will not allow any treaties to be made which ignore the rights of the Indians. At the same time it is clear to us that the time has passed for treaties to be made with Indians as tribes. The tribe system must be broken up, and the villages and communities now supported by Government rations scattered. The Indians themselves see the necessity and beg for it. They everywhere tell us that they want their farms, which they can hold and own. "Twenty-three years ago" said the Indians of Fort Stevenson, "a white man came to us from the Great Father at Washington, and he told us that now we were Indians, but that in twenty-five years we would be white men. There are only two years more left. Then we shall be white men, and now we want to learn how." They are learning how. As we approached Fort Berthold we passed a long mile of a cultivated field of corn and wheat extending as far as the eye could easily follow, all cultivated by the Indians. There were a thousand acres under Indian cultivation. They had just learned to raise wheat like white people and were very proud of their success. They everywhere petition for land which they can have a Government title to, and can hold against all comers. Then they will scatter over all the eligible bottom land and build their houses and barns and become citizens and white men as they want to be. Now they cannot do it unless by leaving the reservation. It is a matter to be most seriously pressed upon the Government that all the lands in the Indian Reservations be surveyed and laid out in sections and quarter sections and that patents be given to Indians who will settle upon their lands, and their lands be made inalienable for a term of years and rations stopped as soon as possible, and the moneys due to the Indians put into school funds for their use. All this will take time. In some portions of the great Sioux Reservation the Indians are quite ready for it. In some they have already taken their several farms, but they do not feel protected in them. How can they? Even now a movement is pressed under high Government sanction which will drive hundreds of Indians, in the interests of some proposed railroads, off of the farms which they had put into cultivation and where they had been promised that a valid title should be given them. A greater injustice was never perpetrated. On this subject all the missionaries of the various societies are united. They agree that the reservation system is a bad one, and that it degrades and pauperizes the Indians. They agree that this great Sioux Reservation is much too large for the use of the Indians, and that it should be opened in some just way for settlement. But the Indian now holding the ground must first himself be settled. His right of occupancy must be respected. There is no place West for him to go to. He has reached the end of his migration, and must stand where he is and live from the soil or die. We find he can live. Christianity will save him. We add our appeal to that of all who have studied the Indian problem, and beg that in caring for our own we forget not those whom we have made to suffer. Now is the time to make some slight redress. Now is the time to give the Gospel and to give education and civilization to the tribes we have supplanted. In this matter the Congregationalists have their full share of work to do. Since the days of John Eliot their appeal for the Indian has been listened to. To the American Missionary Association has descended the entire responsibility of doing for the Indian all that the children of the Pilgrims are willing to do. I believe the American Missionary Association will accept that responsibility. Providence has given it the choicest fields for Indian labor on the continent—among the most vigorous and promising tribes—among those brave and strong Sioux for whose tribal name of Dakota two coming States are contending. We shall make a great mistake if we do not carry on the work there with energy and with success.

The Report of the Committee on Indian Missions was read by the Chairman, Rev. Joseph Anderson, D. D., as follows:

Your Committee, to whom has been referred that part of the annual statement of the Executive Committee which relates to the American Indians, desire to report as follows:

The chief event of the year, in the Indian department, is the adoption by this Association of the Indian Missions of the American Board. Your Committee look upon this as an event of conspicuous importance in the history of the Association. As long ago as 1872, at the annual meeting of that year, the Committees on the Indian and the foreign work suggested a double transfer—namely, the transfer of the foreign missions of the Association to the American Board, and the transfer of the Indian missions of the Board to this Association. The propriety of such an exchange has seemed obvious to many patrons of the two societies for some time. However satisfactory the explanation of the existing condition of things afforded by the historical development of the two organizations, it was plain that the time had come for such a unifying and concentrating of the work of this Association as would result from leaving the foreign field to others, and assuming the care of those missions in our own country which our foreign missionary society had so well established.

These missions are among the Dakotas, one of the most widely extended and important of the American Indian stocks. The largest of these missions—that at the Sisseton agency, formerly under the care of the lamented Stephen R. Riggs—has chosen for its new mother not our Association, but another missionary board, by which it will doubtless be thoroughly cared for and warmly cherished. The missions which actually come under our care constitute an important group of churches and schools, and should be received with a hearty welcome by an Association with such antecedents as this. The new trust committed to us calls for new purpose and energy in our specific work.

We find that these Dakota missions are not dead or dying, but thoroughly alive. And because they are thoroughly alive they need very real help. The men in charge of them are men awake to their opportunities, believers in a forward movement, and in whatever legitimate experiments may be involved therein. We feel that in all such experiments they should have the ready co-operation of the Christian Church. We therefore heartily endorse the Executive Committee in their plans for enlargement in the Dakota field—for improvements in the mission property and in methods of work, where they are called for, and the establishment of new missions in places which promise success.

One project, your Committee believe, deserves to be regarded with special favor, the establishment of a school—agricultural, mechanical and normal —at Fort Sully. The Executive Committee have secured a delightful site for such a school, and they know the man to take charge of it. What is wanted is money to furnish the proper financial basis, and we can scarcely doubt that this will be forthcoming. The industrial school method of missionary work has already been thoroughly tested at the east—in Hampton and Carlisle—and the verdict is altogether favorable. There is good reason to believe that the adoption of the same method among the Indians themselves would result in real benefit. Let the work of instruction, in all its interesting details, be carried on where the red man can see it, and it will surely make its impression upon him. At all events, we have in favor of this view the opinions of men who may be looked upon as experts in this matter.

In adopting as its own these Dakota missions, and thus enlarging its strictly missionary work among the American Indians, the American Missionary Association gives its approval anew to the attempt, now so long continued, to Christianize the red men. There are those who scoff at the idea of such a work; but history—not to say the Gospel—teaches us better. No race of men has yet been discovered so low that it cannot be reached and moved by the religion of the Crucified, and the American Indians are certainly no exception. The Indians as a whole are by no means the lowest or the least susceptible; and the results on record are far from insignificant. God has blessed the efforts of his church in their behalf throughout the past two hundred years, and we know he will continue to bless them.

The report was accepted, and addresses upon Indian affairs were made by Dr. Anderson, Rev. Cushing Eells, D. D., Rev. Samuel G. Rankin and Rev. Anson Gleason, formerly missionary to the Choctaws.

Prayer for the Indian missions was offered by Gen. E. Whittlesey.

The Report of the Committee on the Chinese Missions was presented by Rev. Wm. Alvin Bartlett, D. D., chairman, who also made an address.

The report of your committee on the Chinese Department of the American Missionary Association is as follows: The keynote of the year's work is success. Four more schools, 256 more scholars enrolled, nine more teachers with an increase of four Chinese instructors. The number of those professing to forsake idolatry in excess of last year, 19. There have 121 given good evidence of conversion—last year 105, making 400 who have embraced Christianity during the history of the Mission. Only seven thousand dollars of the nearly twelve thousand dollars expenses of the mission came out of the treasury of the Association. The number of local churches contributing has doubled. The receipts of the "California Chinese Mission" have gained 37 per cent. These gratifying facts inspire confidence that this work in purpose and method is blessed of God. They should beget a zeal commensurate with the hope they enkindle.

The new mission established by the American Board in Hông Kong—the natural fruit of this work—places peculiar emphasis upon its value, as its initial demand came from Chinamen Christianized by its influence. The Rev. Mr. Hager goes to this important control not only with the prayers of his American brethren behind him, but escorted over and welcomed by the devout supplications of specimen Chinese converts. It is an omen of profound significance that four or five Chinese workers for Christ, trained in these schools, contribute their invaluable services to the enterprise. It is equally suggestive that the Chinese Christians remaining behind cheerfully gave $500, adding to their faith, men, and to men, money, an evidence of the genuineness of their confidence. The past year's experience alone demonstrates that most of the ingenious, infamous charges made against this people are lies. So Providence has opened a golden opportunity. The narrow and bigoted ignorance, lack of patriotism, lack of statesmanship, lack of humanity, lack of equitable dealing exhibited by our Government in its recent legislation on the Chinese question have corraled 75,000 of them on these shores. It is the open day for Christian privilege. Cannot the majority of these be surrounded by our faith, wrought on by the power of Christianity, saturated by a genuine Christian life and made the standing army for whom we shall send officers and soldiers to conquest the empire? If the teeming millions are appalling can we not subdue this installment isolated by inscrutable wisdom for this Christian experiment?

With such a present and pressing basis of appeal this work should have abundant means to reach without delay the limit of its capacity.

If there be not vital Christian warmth sufficient in the United States to resuscitate this waif upon our coasts, how can we hope to rescue the myriad nation? It is floundering in the Arctic Ocean of heathenism.

Dr. S. Wolcott offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That we place on record our thorough disapproval, as an Association, of the exclusive and prohibitory legislation of our government relative to the Chinese.

The report of the Committee on Constitution was presented by Rev. W. S. Palmer, D. D., Chairman, and was accepted.

On motion, vote was taken upon the adoption of the amended Constitution article by article.

After discussion, in which Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., Rev. L. W. Bacon, D. D., Rev. A. P. Foster, Rev. G. M. Boynton, Rev. E. H. Byington, Austin Abbott, Esq., Rev. J. L. Withrow, D. D., Prof. Albert Salisbury, Rev. S. L. Blake, D. D., Rev. Erastus Blakeslee and others participated, the amended Constitution was adopted with no dissenting vote, in form as follows:

ART. I. This society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed; other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

Art. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committees shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

Art. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

Art. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

Art. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

After the Doxology, and Benediction by Rev. L. W. Bacon, D. D., a recess was taken until half-past seven.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

At half-past seven devotional services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Whiton, Ph.D. Addresses were made by a Chinaman, Ju Sing, from Oakland, Cal.; by an Indian, Wm. Harrison McKinney, of the Choctaw Nation, Indian Territory, a recent graduate of Roanoke College; by a Negro, Rev. J. C. Price, of Salisbury, N. C., a graduate of Lincoln University in 1879, and by District-Secretary James Powell.

A choir of Chinese young men, resident in Brooklyn, and members of the Central Congregational Church Sunday-School, assisted in the services of the evening by singing several Gospel hymns, one of which was sung in a Chinese version. Rev. R. B. Howard led in prayer.

After the benediction by Rev. J. C. Price, recess was announced until Thursday morning at half-past eight.

THURSDAY MORNING.

At half-past eight a prayer-meeting was conducted by Rev. George S. Smith, of Raleigh, N. C.

At nine o'clock Rev. Dr. Rankin took the chair, and after devotional services, Rev. M. B. Angier leading in prayer, the minutes of Wednesday afternoon and evening were read and approved.

Secretary Strieby read a paper on "Caste in America."

The report of the Committee on Educational Work was presented by Pres. S. C. Bartlett, D. D., Chairman, who also made an address.

The Committee on the Educational Work of the A. M. A. would respectfully report that they find the history of the past year highly satisfactory and encouraging. It is a record of enlarged accommodations at several of the institutions. Stone Hall, at Atlanta, the fourth of the buildings erected by the munificence of Mrs. Valeria G. Stone, has been completed. New buildings, or very considerable additions to former buildings, have been constructed at Midway, Macon, Talladega, Williamsburg, Hillsboro, Memphis and New Orleans; yet from several quarters the call still comes for more room.

It is a record of increased practical efficiency. Industrial training, which forms so important an adjunct of the work, has been making progress by workshops established at Macon and Memphis, and arrangements for carpentry schools at Tougaloo and Atlanta; while farming education and training in housekeeping go on at various points as heretofore, supplemented at Memphis by instruction in nursing and hygiene; and Hampton continues to teach more vigorously than ever a variety of handicrafts, such as printing, bookbinding, iron and tin work, carpentry and wood turning, the manufacture of sash and doors, shoe and harness making, tailoring and farming. All this is, for the present, a very essential element of the educational work.

It is a record of some degree of expansion, although the main aspect is rather one of consolidation and elevation. The number of teachers has increased by twenty-eight and the number of common schools by four; the number of pupils being but slightly greater than last year. The grade of these institutions is steadily advancing. Among these pupils are found, we are happy to say, ninety theological students—twelve more than were reported last year. The three Teachers' Institutes, held in as many States, may prove to be the entering wedge of another great instrument of power and quickening influence. The crowded halls and interested audiences of the anniversaries of so many of our Institutions are a striking manifestation of genuine progress. When we remember that the oldest of these institutions has seen but a quarter of a century, and practically but twenty years of life time, and that now we rejoice in eight chartered institutions, comparatively strong and effective, twelve high and normal schools and forty-two common schools, with 279 teachers doing their soul-expanding work, we may well say "What hath God wrought!" Far as it falls short of our desire and our duty, so far and more also does it exceed the boldest reasonable expectations of the dark and cloudy time of the beginning.

But far the most satisfactory statement of the annual report is its record of the religious spirit which guides, controls and pervades this whole educational movement. The information that at seven out of eight of the chartered institutions "special religious interest has been manifest, adding scores and scores of these scholars to the number of the disciples of Christ," and that, "as yet, but very few have been graduated from our various courses of study who had not become Christians," is a record of the crowning mercy of God. So may it ever be. The heart and conscience must be quickened with the intellect or there is no good hope for that race, or for any other race. It must be Christian education. The school and the Church must move on together at the South as they started together from Plymouth Rock, and they must extend, as far as possible—certainly must offer—their joint benign influences, not to a portion of the population, but to all classes and races alike. For the part can receive its full benefit only in conjunction with the benefit of the whole. This is no new principle, but the method in which, as our annual reports show, this Association has been proceeding throughout its history. Having always refused to recognize the color-line, it can proceed on no other basis without defeating its own ends, and compromising its own principles. And the recent decision of the Supreme Court has rolled a new burden on the Church.

Hence it is that your committee look with much interest upon the experiment, tried and effectually settled at Berea, and now extending thence among the "mountain whites," of including all classes and races in the purview of our educational and Christian work. We refer to the movement at Williamsburg, a county-seat on the Cumberland River, which is simply a repetition of the movement at Berea of twenty years ago—with this difference, that the abolition of the color-line, both in church and school, at Williamsburg, is fully accepted beforehand by an actual constituency in that place. Here the establishment of an academy to educate teachers for the common schools of the county—of whom, as of the population, but a small portion are colored persons—went hand in hand with the opening of the church to both races alike, and has led most naturally to the establishment of three adjacent preaching places, and the formation of another church at the nearest railway station. This method, when viewed simply on its own merits, seems to be at once the dictate of a wise Christian economy, and an almost necessary sequence, or rather part, of the work of Christian education. Within the particular regions where this Association is planting its schools, exerting its influence and gaining the confidence of the community, it would seem to have peculiar advantages and a special call to leaven the whole community with the institutions of the gospel; while the molding influence of its Christian schools will be left incomplete, except as permanently embodied, fortified and nourished by surrounding Christian churches, built upon the same fundamental principles. Similar in condition, character and wants to this Whitley County, in Kentucky, is a great area of five hundred miles by two hundred, beginning in Virginia and extending to Alabama, occupied chiefly by a white population numbering nearly two millions, of whom more than half the adults can neither read nor write. It is one of the most needy and neglected regions of our country, and presents a pressing call to Christian philanthropy to enter and occupy.

The report was accepted.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher offered prayer.

On motion of Dea. Samuel Holmes, a committee of five to consider Secretary Strieby's paper on "Caste in America" was appointed as follows: Dea. Samuel Holmes, Gen. E. Whittlesey, Rev. S. Wolcott, D.D., Rev. G. M. Boynton, Rev. D. L. Furber, D. D.

Rev. Washington Gladden, D.D., made an address on Illiteracy in the South.

A hymn was sung and prayer was offered by Pres. J. Blanchard.

Rev. Edward W. Bacon made an address on Education at the South.

Rev. A. H. Clapp, D.D., Treasurer of the American Home Missionary Society, led in prayer.

After the singing of a hymn, Rev. C. G. Fairchild, of Oberlin College, made an address on Education among the Mountain White People.

After an address by Rev. John L. Ewell, brief remarks followed by Rev. A. P. Foster and Rev. R. B. Howard.

The morning session closed with the singing of a hymn, and prayer, and the benediction by Rev. S. H. Virgin.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The session opened with devotional services, Rev. John Harding leading in prayer.

The report of the Committee on Church Work was presented by Prof. Llewellyn Pratt, D. D., Chairman, and was accepted.

Your Committee finds in the report of the Executive Committee for the past year, proof of healthy and steady growth in the work of planting churches. The report records the organization of six new churches, viz., McLeansville, N. C.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Birmingham, Ala.; Jackson, Miss.; Fayetteville, Ark.; and Belle Place, La.; and one new State Association of six churches in Miss; making the whole number of churches eighty-nine, and of State Associations eight. The additions to these churches during the past year have been six hundred and sixty-seven: the number of scholars gathered in the church and Mission Sunday-schools has been nine thousand four hundred and four; the contributions for church work $12,027.21 and for benevolent purposes $1,049.35.

We are glad to find it to be the distinct aim of the Society to press its work of evangelization to its consummation in Christian churches, and that while its educational and industrial work must from the nature of the case be general in its character, the obligation is recognized to gather up the result, so far and as fast as opportunity affords, in a more specific and permanent form. An intelligent Christianity, such as is fostered in the academies, seminaries and colleges maintained by the Society, demands a church-polity that gives scope to the developed manhood and retains it in a process of growth. Our work would be but half done did we leave those brought under its influence to fall back into old methods and be lost in the mass of ignorance and superstition.

The Association was debarred from this distinctive work at first, but when soon after the war, others, who had contributed to the funds of this Society, seeing the magnitude of the undertaking, wisely began efforts of their own, the Association was left to the support of the Congregational churches, it directed its labors to this end. This distinctive church-planting work began in 1867. In that year the Society organized three churches. The statistics of its growth in this direction are summarized thus: In 1867 there were three churches; in 1870 there were twenty-three; in 1875, fifty-six; in 1880, seventy-three; in 1883, eighty-nine. The membership now numbers five thousand nine hundred and seventy-four, an average of sixty-seven to each church. Every church but two has a pastor, and eighty of the eighty-nine have their own houses of worship. These churches give promise of permanency. They have not sprung from a division or denominational spirit, and are not the representations of restlessness or the mere desire to try some new thing. Their roots are laid deep in the Christian education of the schools, and their organization expresses the need of the growing intelligence of those who compose them. Churches made of such material, formed upon the New Testament plan, have thus far been stable; those first formed are among the strongest.

Nor are these churches isolated and independent. They have recognized the principle of the fellowship of the churches and have grouped themselves into eight State Conferences, thus giving to our polity an example and an acknowledged position in that great section of our land. It is gratifying to find from the reports that the methods of this church-government are readily apprehended by the members of these churches, and that in the order and discipline of the individual churches and in the management of their councils and conferences, they are showing capacity for self-control.

This body of churches, so well organized and underlaid by Christian schools, presents a record of sixteen years' effort that does no discredit to the Congregational name.

While anxious for a more rapid growth in the future, and wishing to extend the good influences which we believe will be felt by the establishment of such churches, we would commend the wisdom and prudence that have seized upon strong centers and have avoided the hasty multiplication of churches for the sake of members. While urging for the future the utmost watchfulness for opportunity and the pushing of this branch of the work of the Association, we express the hope that what is done be well done, that no discredit may come to the cause of Christ, as represented by the churches of our polity. It is not number but might that tells in the formation processes of a people. A single church of genuine substance, rightly constituted and ordered and working outward, is a germ around which a whole community will take form. More than numbers, the inherent vitality of this molds and fashions after the ideas and principles with which it is charged. It has vitalizing and organic power in it, and kindling the intelligence and awakening the responsibility of its own members, it leads and sways the people around it. It may work dimly for a time amid the surrounding chaos, but presently as the social fabric thus woven is brought to light, the figure appears and it commends itself as a true church of Christ.

But the work so well begun ought soon to be greatly enlarged. The rapid growth of the colored population gives emphasis to this—a growth that so far outstrips the means of education and spiritual improvement as to leave a constantly increasing number of illiterate voters and of degraded people. The benevolent societies of the North, of every name and order, ought to multiply their efforts for training the needed teachers—the business and professional men, the mechanics and the educated and consecrated ministers. Meantime, as the higher education of some advances, there will be more and more demand for churches of our order. We say this not from denominational feeling. We hold no invasive attitude. We stir no controversy. We aim not at division, but believing that the apostolic method of gathering churches is the true one, that in its fluent and free adaptation, its simplicity of form and order, in its investing Christ as the immediate Head of each local church, in its putting the individual members upon responsibility, and thus setting them to the study of God's Word for authority and the dependence upon the Divine Spirit for guidance—that in this free and fraternal way of ordering the churches there is a molding power for good beyond others, and remembering its working and product elsewhere, we desire such fruit of it all abroad.

That Providence which always surpasses our thought in preparing its agencies has given us for this work this Association with its schools and machinery, its knowledge of the needs of the section where its greatest efforts have been put forth. Started with no expectation of founding churches, it yet has nothing in its constitution limiting it to one kind of effort nor to any one class or race. Its schools are open to all. Its churches are simply Christian churches. It goes to teach and preach and to elevate the masses. That is what is needed—no distinction of caste or class, and in the organization of churches the recognition of a regenerate membership on the principle that mankind are of one blood and on the fellowship of all Christians.

While practically its work has been mainly among the freedmen, and while it may continue for some time to find itself limited to them, theoretically its work is for all, and it should hold fast to that principle. It should never form some churches for black men and other churches for white men; but always Christian churches for Christian men and women. We should deprecate any line drawn in the Christian church based on difference in wealth, in social position, in education, in color, in sex, in previous condition.

The only line to be drawn there is between those who give good evidence of renewed hearts and those who do not. We recognize this as the principle governing this Association, and therefore commend it as the adequate agency for the evangelizing work of our churches in the South. May it be abundantly sustained by the prayers and sympathies and means of our churches at the North, and may it soon find an open door through the ignorance and the prejudice by which it is surrounded and be free to work among all classes at the South.

And looking at the work already commenced among the freedmen, what a goodly field is opened before us! What a beneficent influence we can exert, not only on the seven millions in our own land, who are part of our body politic, but upon a whole race counted by its many millions in different parts of the world! What stores of prophetic power are lodged in every true church we establish! We have but the merest hint and initial sign in the little bands now gathered of the possibilities lying before us!

We commend this work to the churches at the North, and plead that these older churches cherish a lively and effective interest in all this outgrowth of themselves. There is danger that there may be abatement of interest in this direction, and that the fostering hand and special sympathy these weak churches, now that they are churches, need in their struggles, be withheld. That distinctive feature of Congregationalism which marks it off from sheer independency needs to be emphasized. There are claims of community in faith and order that should be gladly owned, and perfect understanding and interchange should be cherished between all parts of this fellowship of saints, mutual confidence and the gracious tenderness of a love deeper than any kinship of race should cement us in one.

By our liberal things we shall stand. We have sent men and women and means with large generosity, that inquired not whether they served our own denomination or another, if only Christ's cause be promoted. The work already done is a fair movement to self-forgetful charity. We should now make our beneficence more and more the channel of grace and fellowship to brethren whom we have made brethren. If we do indeed hold this church polity on such terms of intelligence as to make it fit to hold it at all, if it be no fault of the awakened ones at the South that they hold it, then what has been so good and fruitful here we should make strong and fruitful there. And if this Association has come in its legitimate growth to the establishment of self-governed churches, accept them as our own. Our seal is on them from the first. The time is ripe for larger advance, and for more confidence in our own work.

It is with gratitude we acknowledge the liberal plan with which this Association is now supplementing its evangelizing and teaching work with the timely and necessary work of church erection. It is part of the same work. Nearly four-score neat and serviceable church edifices have already arisen under its auspices. No better work and none looking more to permanent results has been done. Many a missionary and pastor has found his work at once enlarged and all his means of good multiplied, when the house of God has been given him by its aid. And every such edifice stands forth as an eloquent witness of your loving care for the people of the South, and serves as a bond of union between the distant parts of our land.

The same divine ordinance that opened this field to us, prescribes our work in it. Now that our mission reveals itself, shall we not accept it thankfully, impress ourselves purposely on this vast field, and let the poor of all classes feel the strength of Christian community and fellowship?—for we are one.

Rev. T. P. Prudden followed with an address.

The report of the Committee on Finance was presented by Rev. Erastus Blakeslee, on behalf of the Committee, and was accepted.

Your Committee on Finance beg leave to report that they have carefully examined the books of account and the various annual statements of the Treasurer, and that as statements of the business done by the Association they find them all in the most satisfactory condition. The books are kept by a simple but comprehensive system of double entry, by which a double system of checks against error is provided, and individual and representative accounts are each kept in proper form. The annual statements of receipts and expenditures, of investments, of permanent funds and of real estate held by the Association are all properly certified to as correct by the Auditors. The Committee commend the financial administration of the Association for its economy and faithfulness.

The permanent funds held in trust by the Association, the income of which is used according to the direction of the donors, amounts to $203,863.60. These funds are invested mostly in U. S. Government bonds and in first mortgages on productive real estate, which are an ample security for the amounts which they represent. The entire safety of these investments speaks well for the financial officers of the Association, and the wisely conservative regulations of the by-laws of the Executive Committee regarding investments warrants the fullest confidence in the continued security of funds committed to their care.

The Association also holds in temporary trust the Arthington Mission Fund of $28,448.18; and various other funds to the amount of $25,000 which have been contributed to the Association to be used under certain conditions.

The Association also has certain amounts which have been given to it by various parties to be used eventually for its benevolent work, but which are at present subject to life annuities to the donors at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. Unencumbered gifts are of course of first importance to the Association, and of the greatest satisfaction to the givers. But in the case of aged or dependent persons these are sometimes impossible. Your Committee would therefore urgently suggest to such persons, who design that their property or some portion of it shall eventually go to this Association, whether they can find any safer debtor or surer dividend-payer than the Association itself. By paying such moneys into the treasury immediately the individual can both be assured that his benevolent design will not in the end be frustrated by any bad investments or losses on his part, or by any setting aside of his will, and also he can enjoy a certain and reasonable income from it during his life.

The permanent investment of the Association in lands and buildings for church and educational purposes in the South, of which it holds undisputed titles in its own name, is inventoried at $483,370. Berea College, Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, and Fisk and Atlanta Universities hold their own property by their own boards of trustees. The estimated present value of all these properties amounts to at least one million of dollars.

Here are a million dollars worth of tools and machinery, all in good running order, exactly adapted to the business in hand and located at the best possible points for doing it. Does not this fact appeal mightily to the churches to see to it that this great investment which they have made be used to the best possible advantage? He would be a poor business man who would invest a million of dollars in a "plant" and then scrimp his business for lack of current funds. That would be a poor business which with that amount of money well invested for its purposes could not secure the working capital necessary to use it to its full capacity.

It takes a long time and much hard work to gather from the benevolent a million dollars and to expend it judiciously in the erection of churches, school-houses and colleges. Every dollar of this money is freighted with prayer and winged with love. It will be found again presently as treasure laid up in heaven. It is like an inspiration to think how much of Christ's spirit is represented in these buildings built for the love of Him. But they must be used. The very stones and brick will cry out against us if we neglect to follow up what has been done with still greater work in the future.

On the taking of the last census we were appalled at being told that after all that had been done during the preceding ten years, the amount of adult illiteracy in the South had actually increased by ten per cent. of the voting population. We have become a little used to this portentous fact. Perhaps it does not trouble us now as much as it did at first; but its fearful significance remains, and its worst fruits will be realized unless prevented by vigorous action on our part. Such a state of things must not be reported in 1890. We do not believe that it will be. The Christian school teacher, educated in the A. M. A. schools, is abroad in the land. His pupils will be coming of age, and the rising tide of ignorance, a legacy of slavery, will begin to recede.

Religion without morality, too, will begin to disappear. Our eighty-nine churches are so many candles set in their candlesticks. Their light shines. If they now make the darkness visible, they will presently drive it away. We have found the strategic points. We have secured standing room. We have roofs over our heads. We have schools, and books, and bells, and Bibles. We have the prestige of success. We have already secured the good will of those who once hated us. They oppose us no longer. They will love us by and by. But not, if after having done all this, we cease doing now. Our million dollars worth of foothold and opportunity must be used.

But it will not be unless the churches contribute to this work more liberally than they have during the past year. Look at the annual statement of receipts and expenditures. You say our receipts were $14,982.84 more than last year, and that the year has closed with the Association out of debt and with $548.32 in the treasury. That is well. We may thank God for it. But it has been a narrow escape. The current contributions from churches, Sunday-schools and individuals were $37,768.54 less last year than the year before, $148,398.08 as against $186,166.62—a falling off of more than 20 per cent.

What caused this falling off? Was it lack of interest in the work? We think not. This cause has been too long and too closely connected with the best benevolence of our churches to suppose that they have ceased to love it now. Was it because of the greater urgency of other claims? Possibly. Other claims are urgent. We would not abate one jot or tittle of their demands. It is not that they ought to have less, but that we ought to have more. Can it be that the churches are dividing instead of increasing their gifts? Are they blind to the signs of the times, which in all Christian work point forward? Are Christians so busy money-getting as to forget the privilege of money-giving? These things ought not so to be. If they have been so let them be so no longer.

With this great falling off in the regular contributions, what saved the Association from a heavy debt at the present time? It was the fortunate receipt of two or three large legacies. The legacy account of this year was considerably above the average, being $126,366.73, as against $78,612.47 for the preceding year. Some saints are not, for God took them and turned their thousands into our treasury for this time of need.

But we cannot expect Him to do it again this year. He has graciously given us a clean balance sheet and bids us go on and keep it so.

The Executive Committee in their annual report call for one thousand dollars a day as needed for current expenses for the coming year. Your Finance Committee approve their action in this regard.

The institutions, they tell us, need endowments, and new buildings are needed at Little Rock, Ark., and Austin, Tex. Your Finance Committee approve of the action of the Executive Committee in these particulars.

Special gifts are solicited for these buildings and endowments. May they be forthcoming. But what about the money for current expenses? Allowing that the receipts from legacies, and from various incidental sources, such as interest on funds, tuition, rents, etc., will amount to the average of receipts from these same sources for the last two years, and we may expect from them about $140,000. This leaves $225,000 to be provided for from the ordinary contributions, as against $148,398.08 from the same source last year. This is an increase of $76,601.02, or almost exactly 50 per cent.

Your Committee appeal to the churches, to Sunday-schools, and to individuals for this increase of 50 per cent. in contributions during the current year.

Think of the million dollars of permanent investment you have already made in this work; think of the threatening and growing cloud of illiteracy in the South; think of all the religious, social and civil issues involved in the thorough Christian enlightenment of the negro, that large and greatly debased, but most rapidly increasing part of our population; think of all the interests for Christ and humanity which are bound up in the future of this great Republic, sitting indeed as a queen between the two great oceans, but sitting on a rotten throne if its supports are vice and ignorance; think how the work of this Association touches all these questions at their vital points as no other does; think of all that this Association has done, of all that it can do, and of all that it wants to do for God and our native land, and then tell us, is what we ask too much? Will it seem half enough when we view this matter from the truer perspective of that other world to which we hasten?

Let this be the key-note of our appeals this year: one thousand dollars a day; 50 per cent. advance on all contributions.

Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., made an address on "What the Bible says about Giving."

After the singing of a hymn,

Rev. D. O. Mears, D. D., gave an address on "The Function and Privilege of the Churches."

Deacon Samuel Holmes led in prayer, and the audience united in singing one verse of a hymn.

Mrs. A. A. Myers, of Kentucky, read a statement regarding the Mountain White People of the South.

Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the American Missionary Association is called upon to ask the churches for a special fund of $50,000 to carry on their great educational and evangelistic work, especially in the mountain regions of Kentucky, Tennessee, and the adjacent States.

After discussion, participated in by Rev. S. H. Virgin, Rev. S. Wolcott, D. D., Rev. A. P. Foster, Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., Secretary Strieby, Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D. D., and Rev. Erastus Blakeslee, the following resolution, offered by Mr. Blakeslee, was accepted as a substitute and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Finance Committee, after careful examination of the needs of the Association, have recommended that the regular contributions of churches, Sunday-schools and individuals for the coming year be increased 50 per cent. above the amounts given by them during the past year; therefore,

Resolved, That we approve this recommendation of the Finance Committee, and urge contributors everywhere to increase their contributions accordingly.

The report of the committee on Secretary Strieby's paper on "Caste in America" was presented by Dea. Samuel Holmes as follows:

The Committee to whom was referred Dr. Strieby's paper on "Caste in America" respectfully report:

That the argument which it embodies against the caste system is impregnable and will be most welcome to our churches. That system is hardly less abhorrent to any of us than the system of slavery out of which it sprung. Under no circumstances whatever will our churches tolerate, in any school or church which may be aided by their benefactions, any recognition of color-line or caste distinction. This principle is settled and inviolable.

In regard to that portion of the Paper which has relation to the work of another and sister society in the Southern field, your Committee does not feel that the Association is called upon to take decisive action or make formal expression on a subject which is referred to a large and able Committee of Conference for whose full consideration and wise decision we may confidently wait.

It was discussed by Rev. J. G. Roberts, D.D., of Brooklyn, Secretary Strieby, Rev. Wm. Kincaid, Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D.D.,

Rev. G. M. Boynton, Rev. S. Wolcott, D.D., and others, and was adopted.

It was voted to proceed to the election of officers for the ensuing year by ballot.

The following were so elected:

PRESIDENT.

HON. WM. B. WASHBURN, LL.D.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Rev. C. L. GOODELL, D. D. — Rev. F. A. NOBLE, D. D.
Rev. A. J. F. BEHRENDS, D. D. — Rev. J. E. RANKIN, D. D.
Rev. ALEX. MCKENZIE, D. D.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

REV. M. E. STRIEBY, D. D.

RECORDING SECRETARY.

REV. M. E. STRIEBY, D. D.

TREASURER.

H. W. HUBBARD.

AUDITORS.

WILLIAM A. NASH. — W. H. ROGERS.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

LYMAN ABBOTT,	SAMUEL HOLMES,	S. H. VIRGIN,
A. S. BARNES,	CHARLES A. HULL,	W. H. WARD,
C. T. CHRISTENSEN,	EDWARD HAWES,	J. H. WASHBURN,
J. R. DANFORTH,	SAMUEL S. MARPLES,	J. L. WITHROW,
S. B. HALLIDAY,	CHARLES L. MEAD,	W. H. WILLCOX.

Rev. E. Blakeslee offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That if the Executive Committee now elected have any question as to their legal status under the Constitution, they be and hereby are authorized to take legal advice thereon, and, if competent to do so, to arrange themselves in three classes, according to the terms of the new Constitution.

Prayer was offered by Rev. A. H. Bradford, and recess was taken until 7:30 P. M.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The evening session was opened with devotional services, led by Rev. A. P. Foster.

The minutes of Thursday morning and afternoon sessions were read and approved.

Rev. S. R. Dennen made an address on "Spiritual Life the Supreme Power in Mission Work."

A hymn was sung, after which Rev. William M. Barbour, D.D., made an address on "Spiritual Vitality the Crowning Necessity in Missionary Work."

The President read the resignations of Charles A. Hull and W. H. Ward, of the Executive Committee. A committee of three to make nominations to fill the vacancies was appointed, as follows: Rev. A. H. Bradford, Rev. R. B. Howard and Rev. Joshua Coit. This Committee reported the names of Rev. Addison P. Foster and Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, who were duly elected

Rev. C. L. Woodworth, D. D., District Secretary, offered the following expression of thanks, which was unanimously adopted:

The American Missionary Association now closing its Thirty-seventh Annual Meeting would put on record its grateful sense of obligation to the pastor and members of the Central Church of Brooklyn for opening its spacious house of worship and putting it at the disposition of the Association for all the services of its different sessions. It would thank the ladies of this church and of the Pilgrim Church, and of the Tompkins Avenue Church and the good people of Brooklyn, who have co-operated with them, for abundant provision for the entertainment of delegates and guests, both within the church and at their hospitable Christian homes. It would gratefully mention and remember the different railroad and steamboat lines which have given reduced fares to this meeting. And especially would it offer thanks to Richard M. Montgomery, Esq., for his most efficient services in providing hospitality and securing the comfort and safety of delegates in attendance upon this meeting.

Dr. A. J. F. Behrends happily responded to this vote of thanks.

The presiding officer, Rev. Dr. Rankin, made a farewell address. The records were read and approved, and after prayer by Rev. D. L. Furber, D. D., and the Doxology, the meeting was dissolved.

C. P. OSBORNE, Scribe.

REPORT
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The Executive Committee, coming to this 37th Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association to give account of its stewardship, would call upon all friends to unite in devout thanksgivings to the God of Missions for the abounding and abiding blessing with which He has crowned the toils and the sacrifices of the closing year. But before gathering up the record of that year, thereby to gain impulse for the demands of the new one, we must name those, who, by our side in the ripened fields, have dropped the sickle to go and share in the heavenly "harvest home."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. M. E. H. Pope, the wife of Rev. G. Stanley Pope, the president of Tougaloo University, died at Tougaloo, Miss., on the 2d of February. For fifteen years she had been engaged in missionary work under the A. M. A., laboring at Montgomery, Louisville, Selma, Talladega and Tougaloo. Mrs. Pope brought into her work rare qualities of mind and heart, and these had been wholly consecrated and used for the good of the lowly poor. Her death was sorely felt, not only by her husband and two little boys, but by the large corps of workers and pupils with whom she had been associated.

Miss Mary Farrand was born in Bridport, Vt., Aug. 15, 1824. In the midst of the war, the Summer of 1863, she enlisted for hospital service at Benton Barracks, St. Louis, where she served for several months. At the end of the war she took a commission from the A. M. A. first to teach in Kansas; then in Palmyra, Mo., where she taught six years. From 1874 to 1877 she served as matron at Tougaloo, and from that last date on to June, 1881, as matron at Fisk University. Her health coming to be unequal to that work she became the manager of a Girls' Industrial School at Adrian, Mich., which position she held at the time of her death, which occurred at Chicago the last summer while visiting her sister, Miss H. A. Farrand, an assistant editor of the Advance. Here were twenty years of absorbing and exhaustive service for her country and for Christ. Her work done, ripe for heaven, she was translated.

The Rev. W. H. Ash, pastor of our church, and teacher of our school at Florence, Alabama, died on the 13th of November, 1882. A protégé of Hon. A. C. Barstow, and a graduate of the Boston University, he began work for us at Mobile, Ala. He was then transferred to Florence, which was in need of such a man as he. Mr. Ash was married to Miss Sarah Hale, of Montgomery, who was his helpmeet, not only as a wife, but as a teacher in the school, which they had developed to the great delight of their people, and to the approbation of all the citizens. Mr. Ash, on behalf of the church and of the A. M. A., had built a tasteful church edifice which was also used for the school, and a parsonage. He had commanded the high appreciation of all the best people in the community.

GENERAL SURVEY.

FINANCES.

The Association, at its last Anniversary, instructed the Committee to strive this year to add to the current income of the last one, which was $297,581. The Committee has made diligent effort to realize an advance. The result, as given by the treasurer, is an aggregate of $312,567.29. Though there has been but this slight increase of $14,983.29, the executive officers have kept the expenditures within the income, so that the year has been closed without a debt, and has a balance on hand of $548.32. In addition to current income we have received for endowment fund in Atlanta University $5,000; and in Berea College, $5,000; for theological scholarship in Talladega College, $1,000; upon endowment fund for the theological department in Howard University, $1,100; on the fund for the proposed Arthington Mission, $1,417.53; and also a balance of the Stone fund expended for Stone Hall, $10,918.70 at the Atlanta University; making a total of $337,003.52.

Senator Hoar, in his address at the Worcester meeting, looking at our financial exhibit, was led to work it out that the receipts for that year, including the Stone fund, at the rates at which the Government can borrow money, were equal to the income of a capital of $9,000,000. And then, with the ken of a statesman, he added: "I do not think you yourselves are entirely conscious of the sublimity of what you are doing, and what you are helping to do." The current income of this closing year is equal to the interest, at Government rates, upon the same $9,000,000. And the aggregate of contributions from the same constituency for the general work in which the Association is engaged, including Hampton, Berea and Atlanta, $474,409.14, amounts to the interest, at the same rates, upon a capital of $13,600,000.

The Executive Committe deem it only fit to make known some of the business principles by which they are governed. The treasurer is required to give bonds. The printed by-laws specify: No investment made without the approval of the Finance Committee; two vouchers for every payment, a check and a receipt; every check signed by the secretary as well as the treasurer; itemized statements of all traveling and other expenses; the entire moneys received by the district secretaries and the treasurer put into the New York bank; no exchange checks allowed to anybody; two systems of auditing, one each month by the Finance Committee, and one each quarter as well as that of the annual, by the two auditors, whom the Association elects, both of whom are expert bank officers, and who for no pay seem to serve this corporation as faithfully as their own. Once each year apportionments and appointments are made. Estimates having been sought from all the leading institutions, the superintendents are brought up, and the executive officers with them work for many days upon the schedule. This is then passed under the scrutiny of the Appropriation Committee, and again under that of the Executive Committee for final adoption. Then through the year there is a constant strain to keep within these sums.

WORK IN AFRICA.

At their annual meetings in 1882, this Association and the American Board referred with power to their respective executive bodies the matter of unifying their work by transferring all that of the Association in Africa to the American Board, or some other missionary organization, and all that of the American Board among the Indians in America to the Association. The result was that the American Board, having on hand as much African work as it thought best to carry, did not assume the care of the Mendi Mission. Then the Executive Committee made an arrangement with the United Brethren in Christ, by which their Missionary Society is to conduct the Mendi Mission for a period of five years, and the income of the Avery fund for that mission is to be furnished toward the expenses of the mission. The Committee has also transferred to that Society for the same length of time the steamer "John Brown," for which the Sabbath-schools of our churches had raised $7,000, and which is to be used for the transportation of missionaries and of supplies between Freetown and the several stations thereof.

The missionary district of these Brethren is separated from that of the Mendi by only a river. Shengay, their headquarters on the coast, is a healthful spot. That being the principal mission of this body of Christians, it has enjoyed a large degree of enterprise and of thrift. Its workers, already acquainted with our Mendi people and language, were able to enter at once upon the nurture of the mission. Their Secretary, Rev. Dr. D. K. Flickinger, was once one of our missionaries at Mendi. Since the transfer he has made a personal inspection of his enlarged field, and has set in order the things that were wanting. In England on his way back he made a contract for the building of the vessel. It is to be of iron, 60 feet long; burden, 15 tons; engine, 30 horse-power; cost, $8,500. The vessel will be launched and sent out upon the voyage to Africa in time for service at the opening of the dry season, November 1st. Surely "John Brown's Soul is marching on."

The Executive Committee has proffered the Arthington Mission, with its fund, to the United Presbyterian Mission Board at Philadelphia. That Board is ready to take up the mission, making Khartoum the base of operations, and not wishing to go beyond that point very soon. Mr. Arthington responds consentingly; but urges the immediate pushing on up the Nile to Fatiko. Here the negotiation stands. That church has a vigorous mission in Egypt. It will be but a natural course for it to push on up into the Upper Nile country. Thirty years ago, at the suggestion of our American Egyptologist, Rev. Jos. P. Thompson, D.D., this Association sent out Rev. Charles Finney Martin, the best scholar in his class at the Union Seminary, to open a mission among the Copts in Cairo. He was well under way when failing health brought him back to this country only, after partial recuperation, while serving the soldiers of the Army of the Union, to lay down his life as a good soldier of the Cross. His work was taken up by the United Presbyterian missionary, who went there about the same time. Then the two streams ran together; and now, again, they fall into the same channel, which is the River of God.

WORK AMONG THE INDIANS.

The American Board has transferred its Dakota missions to the Association. These are at the Santee Agency, Rev. A. L. Riggs, Supt.; at Fort Sully, Rev. T. L. Riggs, Supt.; at Fort Berthold, Rev. C. L. Hall, Supt.; and at the Sisseton Agency, the late Rev. S. R. Riggs, D. D., LL. D., in charge, and his son-in-law, Mr. Morris, in care of the schools. As the six churches of the Sisseton Agency had already been transferred to the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, the Committee has thought it best to transfer the school also of that Agency to the same Board. In the early summer the Committee sent three of their own number, Rev. W. H. Ward, D. D., Rev. A. P. Foster and C. L. Mead, Esq., with the Secretary, to inspect the entire work. They had a month of "roughing it," a part of them traveling between three and four hundred miles in an open wagon, camping out at night, fording the swollen streams, sleeping in an Indian wigwam, driving across trackless prairies by the aid of a compass, preaching to the wild Indians through an interpreter, and spending days in Indian villages, where hideous heathen mummeries were in full view.

The delegation reported that, beyond the $20,000 for current work, there was need of enlargement in three directions:—

1. At the Santee Agency, additional industrial accommodations, and the building of a general dining-hall for 200 boarders, with laundry arrangement; and at Fort Sully, the building of a house for a girls' boarding-school.

2. New missions among Indians now unsupplied, on the Cheyenne River, at Cherry Creek, and among the Crows.

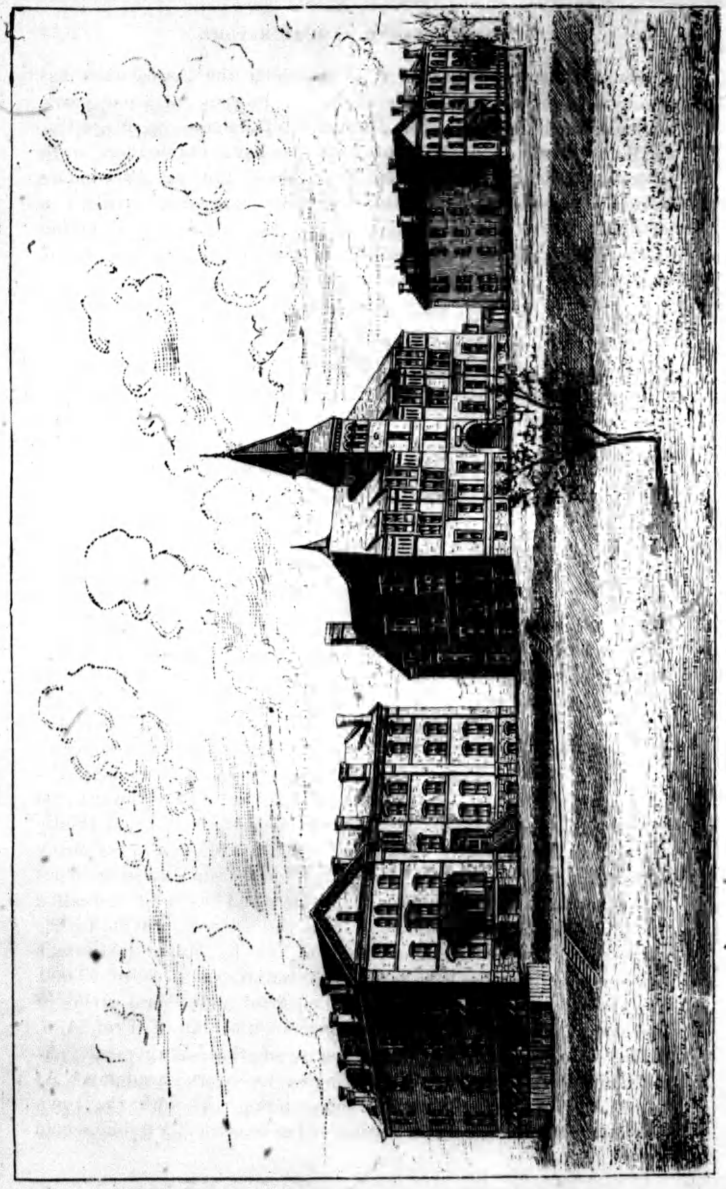
3. An agricultural, mechanical and normal school at Fort Sully, as a new Hampton. The Executive Committee has already made an appropriation of $7,650 to cover the improvements at Santee Agency needed by the Normal and Industrial School. As soon as the means are at command, the other enlargement ought to be entered upon. In this work we shall aim to combine the industrial, normal and religious training, so as to fit the pupils, male and female, for the practical duties of life in the field, the shop, the house, in the school-room, in the pulpit, and in the church. We have undertaken much. The hour has come for it, and the friends of the Indian, we are sure, will not suffer us to fail for want of means.

Referring for the statistics of these missions to the more detailed report, we simply state that leaving out the six churches of the Sisseton Agency, there are 4 stations, 9 schools, 5 churches, 12 missionaries, 25 teachers, 1 native pastor, 12 native teachers, 271 church members, 356 pupils, 584 Sunday-school scholars. Our old Indian mission in Washington Territory has its one missionary, Rev. Myron Eells, its two churches at S'Kokomish and Jamestown, with their 36 Indian members and 13 white, with an addition of 13 during the year on profession, with two Sabbath-schools and 95 scholars. Our missionary has recently published a volume on the History of Indian Missions on the Northwest Coast.

WORK AMONG THE CHINESE.

The last Annual Meeting approved our turning over to the American Board an earnest application from the converted Chinamen on the Pacific coast for the planting of a mission at Hong Kong in China. We are happy to announce that that Board has taken up the work, having found the fit man for it, Rev. C. R. Hager, who is already at his post, and has associated with himself Rev. Mr. Jones, a Welshman, who, having been ordained at Chicago, had gone on to China as a missionary at his own charges. Secretary Clark reports that everything looks favorable for the mission in that quarter. Thus it is manifest that our work is not only doing much good among the Chinamen on the Pacific coast, but that a great and effectual door is opened for them in China itself.

Rev. W. C. Pond, our Superintendent of the work on the California coast, makes report of the year's operations as follows: 19 schools, as against 15 the last year; total enrollment of scholars 2,823, as against 2,567 the former year; 40 teachers, of whom 14 were Chinese, as against 31 teachers the previous year, of whom 11 were Chinese; number of those who have professed to cease from idolatry 175, as against 156 the year before; number of those who have given evidence of conversion 121, as against 106 the former year, and the whole number of those who have turned to Christ during the history of the Mission 400, who are scattered over the United States and in China. Mr. Pond says, "We hear of many of them as doing good work for the Master and for the salvation of their countrymen." The expense of the Mission has been $11,898, of which $7,000 went from our treasury, $730.05 from local Chinese missions, $1,105.05 from the offerings of California churches, and the remainder from individual friends on that coast and at the East. The receipts of our Auxiliary over there, "The California Chinese Mission," have made a gain of 37 per cent. The number of local churches contributing has doubled, being 30 instead of 15 the last year. So the people of our churches on the Pacific are more and more recognizing these strangers from over the ocean as their "neighbors" in the Gospel sense. And so may all the people of this land give heed to the divine injunction, "Love ye therefore the stranger."



WORK AMONG THE NEGROES.

In twelve of the Southern States, in Kansas and in the District of Columbia, we have such work. In Missouri, for a few years after the war, we had common schools in nine of the principal towns of the State, with 18 teachers and 1,000 scholars. West Virginia is the only Southern State in which the Association has never fallen in with missionary work. In Florida, for some years, we had schools at Gainesville, Monticello, Tallahasse, St. Augustine and Jacksonville. At St. Augustine we have resumed our work with two teachers in our Teachers' Home and the Freedmen's Bureau school-house. At Pensacola we are invited to institute a mission. At this place and at others in that State so rapidly taking on the quality of the Northern life, we shall be on the alert to do what we may in the Christianizing process.

Educational Work.

Our institutions are like growing children, who are every year demanding larger garments. But this growth is our joy. During the year the Atlanta University has finished and occupied its Stone Hall, the central structure of its group. This is the last of that series of buildings, which, at the South, have been erected by the generosity of Mrs. Valeria G. Stone. These are the Stone Halls at Atlanta, Talladega and New Orleans, and the Livingstone Hall at Nashville. Add to this expenditure the endowment funds put by the same donor into Berea, Hampton and the Theological Department of Howard University, and you have a total of $220,000 devoted to the lifting up of these lowly poor, whose gratitude of heart will be the benefactor's unfading crown. At Midway, Ga., we have built a home for the teachers of the Dorchester Academy. At Talladega, Ala., through the timely offering of $5,000, made by Mr. J. H. Cassedy, of N. Y. State, we have built for the Primary Department a greatly needed two-story house, which bears the donor's name. The Straight University, in New Orleans, being in need of a boys' hall, and Dea. Seymour Straight, for whom the Institution is named, having made an offer of $5,000 toward that hall, the Executive Committee secured the approval of the family of the late Dea. John C. Whitin, of Whitinsville, Mass., for using the $10,000 paid over to the Association by his estate to supplement that other sum. The building is finished and occupied and called "Whitin Hall." At Memphis, in order the better to provide for the Primary and Industrial departments of the Le Moyne Institute, a two-story addition has been made to the building at a cost of $2,000. We are happy to make record of the cheerful and liberal giving of citizens of Memphis, who, in response to the call of Prof. A. J. Steele, have met one-half the expense of that enlargement. At Williamsburg, Ky., we are erecting a two-story academy. At Hillsboro, N. C., we have built a school-house. Though the town antedates the American Revolution, it has never had a public school building. At Macon, Ga., a library building has been put up, with a work-shop in the basement. At Wilmington, to make room for scholars, the settees of the assembly room have given way to school desks.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS.

Our 8 chartered institutions in as many States, our 12 High and Normal schools and our 42 Common schools report 279 teachers and 9,640 pupils.

The anniversaries and commencements of these institutions are a power in the South. They show the work done; they bring this lowly people to a consciousness that they "are rising"; they make the country alive with enthusiasm; they register the tide-mark of a civilization coming in; they are inspiring, educative, reformatory. The American Missionary for July and August reports seventeen of these public occasions, which, with the wail of the slave yet lingering upon the air, seem to be the song of the coming jubilee. The words with which Prof. T. N. Chase closes his account of the Atlanta Anniversary may be taken as largely true of all the others. "Crowded halls, continued success in old lines of work and encouragement in new, added buildings, generous gifts, growing favor among the people, good reports from graduates, and the constant presence of the Divine Spirit, lead us to thank God and take courage."

In the line of professional education the Theological Department of Howard University, supported and directed mainly by this Association, reports 34 students; Talladega College reports 14 theological students; Fisk, 9, and Straight 13, with 20 law students.

As to industrial training, we are pushing all along the line. Hampton stands as the model. The Avery, at Charleston, has some mechanical processes. The Lewis High School at Macon opens a work-shop. Atlanta, besides its Agricultural Department, has a cottage home in which, under a skilled matron, the girls of the senior class are trained in cooking and housekeeping, and this year a school in carpentry will be opened. Fisk, under a trained hospital nurse, teaches nursing and cooking and hygiene. The Le Moyne, at Memphis, enlarges to add a work-shop to the lines of cooking and nursing; Talladega and Tougaloo run their big farms by student labor, under skilled supervision, and are teaching the girls sewing, cooking and domestic housework; while Tougaloo will add to its blacksmith shops a shop for carpentry.

The school work this year has taken an impulse from the expert service of the new Superintendent of Education, Prof. Albert Salisbury. In the first year it was not expected that he would do much more than inspect the institutions and get the work well in hand.

But, besides this, he has done not a little in giving stimulus to the entire system, in introducing improved methods, in working toward a uniform course of study, in supervising architectural projects, and in holding teachers' institutes. These, held at Fisk, Talladega and Atlanta, were a great success, and only revealed the good yet to come from them.

The fruitage of all this nursery business, in our idea, is the resultant of moral and religious character. Our educational work is a missionary process. It is so easy to slide down to the merely scholastic and secular standard that we feel the need of constant watchfulness on our part, and of the prayer and sympathetic sentiment of all the friends of this work, that it may ever be to us only Christ's work for Christ's lowly poor. During the year special religious interest has been manifest in the schools at Hampton, Wilmington, Berea, Fisk, Atlanta, Tougaloo and New Orleans, adding scores and scores of these scholars to the number of the disciples of Christ. Upon others the dew of the Spirit's influence has fallen. As yet but very few have been graduated from our various courses of study who had not become Christians.

Church Work.

We bring you again the average rate of six new churches. These are at McLeansville, N. C., Knoxville, Tenn., Birmingham, Ala., Jackson, Miss., Fayetteville, Ark., and Belle Place, La. They are all supplied with pastors. Four of them, by the aid of the A. M. A., have secured houses of worship, and the other two are moving for the same. The six new churches reported last year are all doing well. The number of our churches at the South is now 89. Total membership, 5,974, an average of 67; the total of additions is, 667; on profession of faith, 528. Sabbath-school scholars, 9,406; raised for church purposes, $12,027.21.

One new Ecclesiastical Association, with six churches, that of Mississippi, has been added to the family of our State bodies. This is the eighth. The other seven are those of Kentucky, of the Central South, of North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and Southwest Texas. Nor are these merely skeleton bodies. They have an average of eleven churches. They have the attendance, the order, the glow, the missionary enthusiasm that belong to the idea of the communion of the churches. They come to a consciousness of their national fellowship when they elect their delegates to this body, and to the National Council, and when, as at St. Louis, one of their native preachers is elected as an assistant moderator.

We call attention to the fact that our young churches at the South, by the total of their benevolent contributions, $1,049.35, are enlarging the field from which foreign missions and every good cause are to reap, and to reap more and more. One of these churches, the last year, besides raising $687 for home expenses, contributed $90 to this Association, $70 to the American Board and $77 to the American Home Missionary Society.

Seven new houses of worship have been secured, those at Pekin, Oaks and McLeansville, in N. C., and those at Knoxville, Tenn., Louisville, Ky., Mobile, Ala., and Belle Place, La. The brick church at Lawrence, Kansas, which had been refitted after the burning in Quantrell's raid, was found to be yet suffering from that spasm of Satanic rage, and so has again been rebuilt, itself an emblem of that rejuvenating liberty which could not be destroyed by fire and sword. The Annual Report, this year, will contain a succinct history of these churches at the South, compiled from the series of Annual Reports and the volumes of the American Missionary. To the future ecclesiastical historian this will be an invaluable thesaurus of the first things in the history which we are making now so rapidly.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

Berea College and its circle of churches have become the symbol of anti-caste Christian fellowship. It was reported to the last annual meeting that the Executive Committee had decided to test the scheme still further by offering those mountain people the aid of our school and church process if they would allow the few colored folks up there to have a welcome access to the same. Our missionary, Rev. A. A. Myers, was already pushing his church work at Williamsburg, a county seat on the Cumberland River; just then waking up under the whistle of the locomotive from its sixty years in "Sleepy Hollow," in which time it had never built a church. Prof. W. E. Wheeler and wife were sent to start a school. The Field Superintendent followed, with the pastor, to make a two weeks' exploration on horseback. As a result they recommended that the new movement for the present be concentrated upon an academy at Williamsburg for the education of the teachers of the common schools of that country. The color question was tested; and, after discussions, a paper was signed by more than thirty of the leading citizens favoring the open door and open hand for the colored people of the mountains. The only two colored families resident in the place were already in the congregation, and the one Christian family had been invited by members to join the church. It was found that only three of the eighty school teachers of the county were colored; but we hope that these and those in other counties will avail themselves of their welcome to the Academy. The Committee has purchased a fine two-acre site and is erecting a two-story frame building at a cost of $2,500. The school has numbered 108, and has paid on tuition $303. Not one scholar has failed to pay in full. Pastor Myers and Prof. Wheeler with their wives have opened Sunday-schools and prayer-meetings, with preaching, at three other points, and are moving to get a church and build a house of worship at Pleasant View, the next railway station. The work progresses slowly, but hopefully. Multitudes of those people stood by the Union in the perilous times. From an adjoining county went out men to become Governors in Missouri and in Texas, and one a member of the Supreme Court of the United States; and from another went two young men, one to be the War Governor of Illinois, and the other to be the Governor and now one of the U. S. Senators of that same State. There is good material up there, though the illiteracy is appalling and is growing worse. The white illiterate vote of Kentucky in 1870 was 43,826; in 1880 it was 54,955, an increase in ten years of 11,121, while the negro illiterate vote of the State had increased 5,228 in the same time. That is, the total increase of the illiterate vote in the decade was 16,349. The country has no time to lose in meeting this emergency.

THE WOMAN'S BUREAU.

When the Gospel, in its outward sweep, was to pass over from Asia to Europe, who were they who should first receive it? They were the women, whom the great apostle found at Philippi, by the river side, at a prayer-meeting. Soon he had a church, with Lydia and the other women, and the jailer and his household as members. And so, it was quite natural that, a long time after, when Paul was dictating his Epistle to the Philippians, the Christians of that same church, he should run his thought back to that genesis of the Gospel in Europe, and with ardor of feeling break out: "Help those women, which labored with me in the Gospel."

When this Association, the first of all organizations to give this same Gospel of light to the benighted children of bondage, started out, it used the hand of Christian women for its introduction, and all along to this day it has shared with them in this fellowship. As early as September, 1861, under the guns of Fortress Monroe, the work began, to result in the far-famed Hampton Institute. The first female teacher was Mrs. Peake, a colored woman, whom the Lord had ready at hand. The next, in July, 1862, was a daughter of our missionary, Rev. J. S. Green, of the Sandwich Islands; and the next, in the December following, was a lady who went with her husband, Rev. E. S. Williams, to St. Helena Island. Writing at that date he says: "Mrs. W. will go with me and teach them to sew and sweep. They need kind lectures on cleanliness and neatness." Then as the Union lines sweep on, lady missionaries are pushed forward to Norfolk, Beaufort, and to Hilton Head. As the army, in 1863, occupies Corinth, our lady recruits are hurried on to that point, to serve in the Freedmen's school and hospital. And when, in the exigency of war, Corinth must be evacuated, the corps of lady workers follows soldiers and freedmen to Memphis, pursued, fired upon and nearly captured, as the weary trip of several days is made. Once in Memphis, the school and the hospital find them at work again.

And so by the fall of 1864 the Association had on its muster roll the names of one hundred and sixty-nine women. And then only 17 days after our troops have entered Richmond our teachers follow, starting a school which in two weeks had 1,500 pupils, the most of the instructors being women. Then as the military veterans are being mustered out it is found that the Association's Army of Occupation numbers 363, of whom 261 are ladies who had enlisted, not for three months or three years, but many of them for life; and these are found stationed all along the front and in fifteen different States. In 1866 the ladies muster 264; in 1867, 410. In 1870, of the 533 workers, 450 are women. The Annual Report of 1869 brings out the fact that up to that time 2,628 different missionary laborers had been enlisted, of whom at least 2,000 were women. From that time on to this the list of ladies has ranged from 200 to 250, so that in these 22 years it is a safe estimate that not less than 3,000 women have been in this service. What a multitude of Gospelers! It should also be considered that the time when these numbers ran the highest was the Ku-Klux period, when the brave women could stand in places where the men could not live. In Mississippi at midnight one of these heroines is waited on by a Ku-Klux company in masks and gowns. After a hasty robing she is obliged to open the door. The ruffian crew are themselves abashed, as their leader breaks out: "Why, you are a lady," and then gives her 24 hours in which to leave, notifying her that they will be around by that time to see that it is done. "Low-down fellows were they," the citizens said. "No," answered she; "such men don't wear fine top-boots and have soft hands." The lone woman surrenders, saying that she scorns to tell them that, though she is an Illinois girl, she was the grand-daughter of Rev. Dr. Allen, of Huntsville, Alabama. Another woman's school at Austin, Texas, is broken into by the roughs. Then the post commander sends a guard to stand by day at her door and to escort her home at night, and back in the morning. At another place in Alabama the K. K. K. draw up in line before the lady-teacher's castle of a school-house home, and fire a volley of beans and shot through her windows on each side of the chair where she is sitting. But now she is entering the 18th year of service on that same spot. Another, having her school in an old North Carolina rebel gun-factory, when a man offered to be one of twenty to put her on the cars and send her away, gave as her response: "I was sent here by the American Missionary Association; and when that says go, I will, and not before." She is now entering her 18th year of service and is as brave as ever. Time would fail us to relate of these women only such deeds of valor as have come to our ears. The best of all is that they cherish no revenge. Theirs has been the victory of the passive virtue, but a triumph as real as that of military valor. They went down South to do good to the poor and the lowly, to build something of their own noble spirit and character into the life of the outcast. Nobly have they been fulfilling their mission.

"What honor and what dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this?" said the King, as he came, in the restlessness of the night, to the record of the man who had saved his life. "There is nothing done for him," was the truthful reply. In the turning of the books of the Last Day, the Supreme Monarch will say of these unheralded Christian patriots: Let royal apparel be brought, and let it be done to them as to those whom the King delighteth to honor.

The thrill of foreign missions for the last dozen years has come from woman's work for women; and the ninety or one hundred thousand dollars a year put by the women into each of several missionary boards has been the late coming of Blucher to their Waterloo exchequer. With less of parade, and yet upon a much larger scale as far as the work upon the field is concerned, and with more of personal exposure and ostracism, here has been a movement on the part of women sublime indeed. It has been, too, for a people whose original paganism had been indurated by the immoralities inherent in the system of slave-holding. It has been also by the same process—school teaching, Bible reading, house-to-house visitation, instructing mothers and daughters in the duties growing out of the mysteries of their own being. And, as a result, thousands upon thousands of youth have come forward into intelligence and virtue; multitudes of homes have been purified; scores of young men have been led into the ministry; and a generation of youth by these examples have been taught a reverence for woman, which has become a hidden power of their life. The same is true of woman's influence among the Indians. Rev. Dr. Gilbert, having recently attended the Annual Conference of the Dakota Mission, writes to the Congregationalist as follows: "Some of the best missionary work among the Indians is being done by women, married and unmarried. It would be, I suspect, a revelation to some to see how ladies of education, unusual refinement of sentiment and beautiful culture, have given and are giving themselves to this most Christ-like work, captivating the heart of savagery itself and winning it to the new life."

Among the Indians we have 17 of these lady missionaries, and among the Chinese in California 24.

Now it was with a view to some partial recognition of this service and to some increase of its efficiency that the Executive Committee decided to set it apart into a distinct department as the "Bureau of Woman's Work." As the Secretary of this Bureau they have appointed Miss D. E. Emerson, a lady who, having had large experience on the field, has for the last several years been the Secretary's clerk of the Southern work, and so has a familiarity with all its details. Having had the run of the correspondence with the ladies of the North and with the lady workers of the South, she was already the mistress of the work she was assuming. Besides keeping up communication with the ladies missionating among the women of the three depressed races, and so proving their "friend at court," she will furnish information to the ladies in the churches of the variety of work now sustained by the Association, and assist in devising plans of help. She will have correspondence with churches, Sunday-schools and missionary societies or individuals who wish to undertake work of a special character, such as the support of missionaries, aid of students, supply of clothing, furnishing goods and meeting other wants on mission ground; and she will be in the way of sending to churches and associations desiring it some of our experienced lady missionaries, who can address them, giving fuller details of our methods. Already the Bureau has met with a cheering response from the earnest Christian women of the country. God's blessing is upon it.

WANTS.

1. The first want is a full and easy-working treasury for the general expenses—at least $1,000 a day for every day of the year.

2. Endowments for particular chairs in the several institutions.

3. Particularly, an endowment of a Theological Department at the South for the training of the ministers needed. This should be on the ground in order that the anticipant pastors of the churches, being among their own people, may abide in those sympathies and common experiences which make them the power for good they are. Northern seminaries can never do the work for the South, any more than the Eastern can suffice for the West.

4. Ten thousand dollars as a supplement to Mr. Edward Smith's ten thousand for the first hall of the College at Little Rock, Arkansas. As the College takes the name of Mr. Smith, who also gave the $5,500 for the fourteen-acre site, we would like to call the first hall by the name of the second donor.

5. A boys' hall for the Tillotson Institute, at Austin, Texas, is demanded by the crowding and overflowing of the one "Allen Hall." An empire equal to six of the Empire State calls for this new hall.

But while we are facing these wants, we are also confronting certain drawbacks.

1. It is said by some that now, as the Negroes have their freedom and their citizenship, they must take care of themselves.

This, we observe, is not said of the people of the West. They must have aid for the building of churches and for the support of pastors. And yet their starting chance is almost infinitely ahead of that of the colored people. They have intelligence and habits of economy and of managing things, and abundant means of subsistence, and wealth not a little, and the heredity of a thousand years of civilization; while the Freedmen are destitute of all this.

2. It is said by others that the negroes must now depend upon the public schools of the South. But those schools, except in a few of the cities, are kept for only two, three or five months in the year, under teachers of the most meagre qualifications, and in such hovels and by-places that you may travel for days and not see any structure that reminds you of the country school-house. Then the more the public schools are pushed, the more is the demand for our work in training the proper teachers for them. As you introduce one good teacher you displace six poor ones.

3. But another says: The Peabody fund; that must go a great way as a supplement. No; that has been used mostly for white people, and the small amount thus far used for the colored will now be diminished on account of the Slater fund. Then the Peabody fund is used mainly as student aid and does not relieve the institutions.

4. Well, then, says another, that fund of Mr. Slater is all the supplement the public schools may need. We honor the noble man who laid down that plant, and the grand man who is administering it; but Mr. Slater's gratuity, though coming from a man in a Congregational Society, is to be divided irrespective of denominational relations; and so, when the noble charity is passed around, the share which will come to our work will not be much temptation for our friends to withhold their customary benefactions. The Slater income will not run over fifty or sixty thousand dollars a year. Then, as in the case of the Peabody fund, the more it brings forward students, and the more it stimulates public schools, by so much will it make a demand for our work in training up the best teachers. These people, much to their praise, appreciate quality in their teachers and preachers, and the only question is whether, by all our systems and funds and charities we can keep up with that rational demand.

5. But, says yet another, that national aid which Congress is asked to furnish will suffice. It is a grand scheme. The Nation owes it to the South. The officers of this Association have been foremost in effort to bring it about. But the project is even yet problematic. If entered on, it is only for five or ten years. If it be ten millions a year, that is less for thirteen States than New York State alone bestows annually upon its public-school system. So divided up, it will not go far among both the whites and the blacks. But this, also, as far as it does go, will only call upon us for more training of teachers.

But, with all these helps, which threaten to become drawbacks to our charitable contributions, we must confront the appalling emergency of our country. In spite of all that has been done the last ten years, by the Southern States, by the Peabody fund, and the Church organizations of the North, the illiteracy of the South has gained upon us by nearly 200,000 voters, not 200,000 people, but men, men of age, who hold the sovereign ballot.

Recent sweeping charges have enough accredited truth in them as to the immoralities induced upon the native pagan condition by the system of slaveholding to startle the Christian patriot.

The Saviour said of a certain one: "It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea." But as to the result, it would have been just the same had the millstone been hanged about his feet. This millstone of illiteracy and immorality will just as certainly drag down our nation into the depths of the sea, whether it be attached to the foot at Florida, or hung from the neck at New York City. Samuel J. Mills, when under deep conviction of sin, said to his mother: "I wish I had never been born." "But you are born," was the reply of maternal wisdom. This national liberty is born, and with it all its startling responsibilities. We cannot go back. We must go forward. And, as the brave engineer puts on more steam to jump the broken rail, we must turn on the power of money, and work, and prayer, and make the frightful leap, or roll down into the vortex of national ruin.

We owe this to God in gratitude for saving the life of our Nation in the earthquake of civil war. We owe it as only making good the emancipation proclamation, which was the vow we offered to God when we were in distress. We owe it in some way of reparation for the wrongs done to our colored brethren by all the people of the land. We are under bonds to the Indians to make restitution for the centuries of wrong we have done them. We are debtors, in the Gospel, to the Chinamen, who exchange their shore of the Pacific for our shore of the same ocean.

Will the Christian people of our country shrink from meeting this obligation of indemnity? We believe they will not. When Abraham Lincoln made his first call for men, then another, and then another, the drum beat was heard everywhere, and the earth trembled as the response was heard: "We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more." It is the same call of Christian patriotism which now falls upon our ears. The people will answer back with money and with prayers. Teachers and preachers will each continue to respond to the divine call, "Here am I, send me." God's blessing will abide upon them. The delivered bondman will come into the fullness of his liberty in Christ Jesus. The aboriginal inhabitant will assume his real American Christian citizenship. The Asiatic stranger within our borders will become not only a proselyte of the gate, but an apostle to the Gentiles of his native land. Our country, Christianized, will be itself a missionary nation for the evangelization of the globe.

As in past years, we are under continued obligations to the American Bible Society for generous responses to all our calls for copies of the printed Word of God.

LEXINGTON HIGH SCHOOL.

This year the Association decided to re-open the school at Lexington, in the midst of the far-famed blue grass region of Kentucky, and accordingly the building was repaired. The cut given herewith represents the house in its present shape. On the first floor there are two large school-rooms capable of seating fifty pupils each, two large entries and two coat rooms. On the second floor there are two large school-rooms which may be thrown into one by means of folding-doors, thus forming the chapel.

ANNIVERSARY REPORTS.

HAMPTON, VA.—The fourteenth anniversary of Hampton Institute was observed on May 24. The Senior class was examined in political economy and civil government, literature, ancient history, arithmetic and algebra. They did very creditably, stimulated by the occasion, as is usual, to do their best. They had undergone less brilliantly, but on the whole fairly well, a severer test during three days previous, of written and oral examinations, conducted by or before an invited examining committee. The general average of the class in arithmetic and political economy was 70 and a fraction, several standing from 90 to 93.

The under classes had their customary reviews. The Indians also did well in geography, history, arithmetic and an elementary botany class. The little kitchen gardeners from the Butler School were as captivating as usual in their white pinafores and red turbans and housekeeping accomplishments. The centre of the industrial exhibition was the Stone Memorial building; handsome wood work, turned mouldings, flooring, doors, sashes, etc., from the "Huntington Industrial Works;" shoes ready for filling the contract for agency supplies; shining tinware from the "Indian Training Shop," sets of harness from the same; desks, settees, tables and cupboards made for the school, and a neatly painted sign—all the work of Indian and colored apprentices, whose names, with the period of their training, from five months to three years, were indicated on cards affixed to their respective productions. The wheelwright and blacksmith shops showed similarly ax-helves, wheels and iron work, and outside the door two gayly painted farm carts proclaimed the skill of Indian and negro mechanics. The tailoring department showed suits of clothes made by colored and Indian hands. The girls of both races were represented by very neat sewing and inviting-looking cake. The farm products had a table to themselves—early vegetables, grains and grasses. An interesting exhibit was that of the little carpenters from the Butler School, a couple of miniature frame houses, clap-boarded and painted, with sets of tables, desks and chairs for furnishing. The Normal School Press office had its own exhibit of printing and bookbinding. The press was running, the student compositors, boys and girls, at their cases, and the veteran United States soldier at his bookbinder's table.

The afternoon exercises in Whitin Chapel and Virginia Hall consisted, as usual, of essays by the graduating class and former graduates, with music by the school choir, a recitation of one of Whittier's poems by a modest lady-like Indian girl of the Junior class, and a talk in the Sioux language by one of the three young Indian fathers now in training with their families at Hampton. His wife and baby boy stood admiring listeners in the doorway, ready to vanish when the applause of the latter became too vociferous.

Diplomas were presented to the twenty-eight members of the graduating class. Prof. Newell, Superintendent of the Maryland State Normal school in Baltimore, Dr. Eliot, Rev. Dr. Furber, of Newton, Mass., Rev. Dr. Mix, of Fall River, Rev. Dr. Burrows and Rev. Mr. Spiller, of Norfolk, the last a colored minister, all made very enthusiastic and telling impromptu addresses under the inspiration of the occasion.

BEREA COLLEGE, BEREA, KY.—The seventeenth year of Berea College closed on June 20 with most satisfactory marks of the sustained usefulness and increasing importance of the school.

The Commencement festival really began with the joint exhibition of the Ladies' Literary and Phi Delta societies on Friday evening, before a large audience, in the chapel. The pupils of the lower schools gave their interesting exhibitions in the same place on Saturday evening. On Tuesday evening the Literary Societies were addressed on the subject of "Progress" by Col. Swope, who is the Internal Revenue Collector for this district and a native of Kentucky.

On Wednesday came the final exercises, which gathered a great multitude from mountain and from plain. The season had been very rainy, but this was the most perfect of June days—its unclouded sun tempered by a cool breeze from the south. Soon after sunrise, vehicles of every description, and saddle-horses carrying one, two or three passengers, began to pour in toward the Tabernacle, most visitors bringing luncheon for a noon-time picnic in the oak grove.

Besides the three graduates—one from the classical and two from the scientific course—fourteen other students from the higher classes presented orations or essays. All were listened to by the great audience with interest, and some with enthusiasm. In the afternoon nearly as many gathered again to hear a most suggestive and interesting address from Rev. R. T. Hall, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, on "The Abuse of Liberty." Short addresses followed from Rev. Mr. Simmons of the (colored Baptist) Bible Institute of Louisville, and Rev. Mr. Barnett, a Methodist minister from College Hill.

It suggests the interest of our neighbors in the work of Berea that the Kentucky Register, published at the county seat and a representative paper of the Kentucky aristocracy, gave nearly a column the next day to a strongly commendatory notice of the exercises. A gentleman of a well-known old Kentucky family passing this way toward the mountains turned aside to see what the Commencement was like, and spent the day in such unexpected approval of what he saw and heard that he declared at night that he might be set down hereafter as for Berea every time. This is the more noticeable as the appearance of blacks and whites in about equal numbers and with entirely equal respect on the same platform must at first have given a great shock to his Southern prejudices.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Commencement week happened to coincide with "military week" in Nashville, for which great preparation had been made, and the city was gayly decorated with the national colors and crowded with people. We had feared the effect of the excitement on the school, but found no cause for anxiety. Our pupils were too much absorbed in their work to be drawn away by the attractions of the parade ground, and our audiences seemed not to be much increased or diminished by the event. The class admitted to College on Monday evening numbers eight.

On Tuesday there drove up to the door of Livingstone Hall a furniture wagon, from which was unloaded a suspicious-looking rectangular box addressed to Prof. A. K. Spence. Curious eyes watched the opening, and saw with delight on lifting the top, a handsome Steinway square grand piano. Rumor said it was a gift, but nothing further could be learned until Commencement day.

In the midst of the exercises of the higher normal graduation on Wednesday evening, Secretary Woodworth entered and took a retired seat on the platform. His health was so far restored as to enable him to travel, though not in time to reach us, as we had hoped, before Sunday. The alumni address, which formed part of the programme of the evening, was given by Prof. McPherron. After this, Secretary Woodworth was called out from his retirement and spoke for a few minutes.

The last great day, Thursday, was as perfect as clear skies and fresh, dustless air could make it. A large audience of both white and colored people assembled early. The young men marched to Jubilee Hall, and a procession was there formed to return to the chapel. The British flag was draped over the platform on this birthday of England's queen, and the room was bright with terraces of flowering plants. The seven young people who appeared as candidates for a degree represent many years of work on the part of student and teacher; the average length of time spent in the institution by members of the class is seven years. After the graduates had finished their part we listened eagerly to the address of Dr. Washington Gladden on the causes of poverty, ignorance and vice—the threefold evil against which we are fighting.

When the final piece of music had been sung, Prof. Spence asked permission to say a few words, and, after some rapid wheeling of pianos to certain places on the platform, announced that Mrs. General Fisk had presented the new piano for the chapel of Livingstone Hall. Its companion was given by the same lady some years ago for the parlors of Jubilee Hall. Mention was made of the many other gifts of Mrs. Fisk, and a vote of gratitude for her kindness was heartily given by the entire audience.

A prominent Southern gentleman of Nashville, himself a former slaveholder, was present for the first time with other invited guests at the alumni dinner, and spoke warmly, cordially and strongly for our work. The most encouraging comment that I have heard on the exercises of the week was made by a former student, who was present: "It seems to me that every Commencement is better than the last."

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.—Our annual examinations are made interesting and exciting by the presence of visitors appointed by the Governor, who this year, as usual, attended the three days of examination and one day of literary exercises. On each day quite a large number of spectators was present. While numerous complimentary remarks were made we do not think that some features of the school were fully appreciated. Latin, Greek, higher mathematics and metaphysics still possess a charm for scholars, both South and North, while modern methods in the lower grades attract the attention and win the admiration of only an appreciative few.

The specimens of map drawing and of original designs in industrial drawing were considered good by competent judges.

The experiment of the senior normal girls in cottage housekeeping under the direction of one of the teachers meets with universal favor. Everybody in these United States thinks every girl ought to know how to keep house well, and the best way to learn how to do a thing is to do it. The outcome of the work in this department is highly satisfactory, and we wish we had a larger cottage for next year.

The silk culture has been worth the while for the sake of the entertainment and instruction it has afforded, even if no pecuniary benefit came from it. The worms "wound up" their business, at about the same time the rest of us did ours, and everybody said, "Well done."

The competitive gardens formed another feature in our work. These were a rod square and thirty-six in number. Beets, beans, peas, potatoes and onions were the crops. The potatoes were dug on the last day of examination, and it was found that our native African had gained the first prize, having 82½ pounds on his square rod. How about slavery's developing the African race?

As the visitors inspected the new barn, the twelve full kits of carpenters' tools donated by a friend in New York City, though still unused, were not concealed from view. Funds for a shop have now been pledged, and a teacher of carpentering is to be employed, even if some other department is suspended, and the boys are to be taught the use of tools, in obedience to the prevailing sentiment of what ought to be, and in the hope that such instruction will help the colored man to hold his present position in the mechanical field.

On Commencement day "everything passed off well," and a clergyman from Boston was heard to say, "Good thoughts well expressed." Sixteen young men and women received diplomas or certificates, and listened to parting words from the president.

Governor McDaniel honored us with his presence, and sent a verbal message to the graduates, saying that he had been much pleased with their exercises and felt a warm interest in them.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees, Secretary Strieby was re-elected, and one of Atlanta's most prominent men in business, social and religious circles, who had recently declined the office of Mayor, consented to become a member of the Board. Resolutions were passed thanking Messrs. King, Cassedy and Sessions, and the representatives of the late Hon. W. E. Dodge for gifts to the school.

Crowded halls, continued success in old lines of work, and encouragement in new, added buildings, generous gifts, growing favor among the people, good reports from graduates and the constant presence of the Divine Spirit lead us to thank God and take courage, believing that the school is accomplishing its mission in the main, and that the financial clouds that lower will be dispelled in due time, as others have been in the history of the institution.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, TALLADEGA, ALA.—The institution is well equipped for work. Stone Hall, Swayne Hall, Graves Hall, and Foster Hall are solid and comely, and have accommodated more than 298 students the present year. And of the campus, on which Swayne Hall sits, shaded with superb water oaks, it must be said we know of nothing finer in the South. Connected with the college is a farm of some 200 acres, mostly cultivated by the young men. Here they learn the art, as well as the science of farming, and here the supplies for the students' table are principally raised.

It may be doubted whether any school of the A. M. A. is occupying a more needy field, or has around it a larger constituency. Alabama has a colored population of some 630,000, for whom Talladega College is the only institution in the State offering to them the advantages of the higher education. For the supply of trained teachers, of educated ministers, and of intelligent and reliable leaders, for this immense multitude, Talladega must be the main reliance.

Of the general air of the school there can be only words of praise. The quiet of the students on the campus, on the streets, in the class rooms, the self-respect in their bearing everywhere manifest, was a token both of the discipline of the school and of the spirit of the scholars. We heard creditable examinations in grammar, in Virgil, in the evidences of Christianity and in the life of Christ. But the exercise which interested us most was the reading of six or seven essays by members of the theological class. These papers, we were assured, had received scarcely any alteration in passing through the hands of the professor. They were clear, sharp, radical in thinking and independent in style and expression. Two college presidents were brought to the bar of criticism, and it really looked as if the students had the best of the argument. Yet there was no appearance of arrogance or of self-conceit; only the air of honest, thoughtful men.

The class of students as a whole seemed made up of earnest, aspiring youth, eager for an education and willing to make every possible sacrifice in order to secure it. As an instance, I saw a man in the grammar school, somewhere from thirty-five to forty years of age, who will work in the foundry six months or a year, and then will take his earnings and go to school as long as they will last. This he has been repeating for years. Another was pointed out to me who had worked on the farm a whole year, and then was using up his credits in schooling and board. I should not give a complete idea of the college unless I spoke particularly of its religious tone. This is of the highest, and was especially satisfactory.

Talladega, like so many other institutions, needs endowments for its various chairs of instruction. For lack of these it is sadly limited in the good it might accomplish, and its Faculty are badly handicapped and bearing burdens which are making them old before their time. Let me whisper into the ear of men who are asking what they shall do with the wealth committed to their care: Here is an object worthy of their largest charity, and, at the same time, an object most needy and most appealing. Let them give to this thousands and tens of thousands, and they will make no mistake.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—It would, we believe, be the judgment of the Faculty and the public that the past year has been one of exceptional prosperity. Our catalogue shows a roll of 380 names with an average attendance larger than any previous year. The Sumner Literary Society was addressed by Gen. R. B. Elliot, formerly in Congress from South Carolina. He is one of the most eloquent representatives of the colored race. He was a friend of Charles Sumner, and the dead statesman had no more eloquent eulogist than he. Our Alumni Association was addressed by Rev. A. E. P. Albert, of the class of '81. A poem was delivered by Mr. Colwell, of Baton Rouge, of the class of '79. It possessed real poetic merit, and was gracefully delivered. The Annual Exhibition at the University chapel, under the direction of our most faithful and efficient Dean, was a great success. The chapel was crowded to excess, and a happier audience is seldom gathered.

Our Commencement on Tuesday evening in Central Church was an indication both of the excellence and efficiency of the instruction afforded by the University and the strong hold which the school has gained in the public regard and appreciation. The large auditorium was crowded. A fair estimate of the audience would place at at 800, and they remained with delighted attention from 8 o'clock to 11 o'clock. Four young men and one young woman graduated from the Classical Department and two young men from the Higher English Department. Their orations were well and carefully written, showing mature thought and manly convictions. To those who have a chronic habit of detracting from the abilities of the negro we say, "beat him if you can." We departed from our usual custom in conferring upon two of our graduates the degree of Bachelor of Science. It was the judgment of the Faculty and our Board of Trustees that this should be done. The young men have devoted several years to classical and scientific study in the University. Their scholarship has averaged 9¼ on a scale of 10, and they have pursued such special studies as the Faculty have assigned them. At the close of the regular examination a special examination was appointed for them before a committee of the Board of Trustees, in whose presence they also read a scientific thesis, the one on "Applied Electricity" and the other on "The Copernican System."

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, TOUGALOO, MISS.—Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were occupied with the oral examinations of the different departments. These examinations were well sustained by the students, who gave good evidence that their instructors had been faithful and thorough in their work. The attendance of visitors upon the examinations was good, but, as the last day drew near, large numbers arrived by every train. Many came by their own conveyances. One persistent young man, a former student, eager to attend the Commencement, came a distance of thirty miles on foot.

When Thursday morning dawned, many more were added to the number of visitors already present. The audience assembled promptly at 11 o'clock. Members of the State Board of Visitors, with other distinguished guests, were upon the platform. Three young men and two young women, having completed the elementary normal course, were graduated, receiving certificates of fitness to teach the common English branches. Five others were appointed to supplement the programme of literary exercises.

The essays and orations presented covered a wide range of topics. The Principal of the Normal Department presented certificates to the graduating class, setting forth in a few well-chosen and emphatic words the nature of these certificates, of the step the graduates had taken, and that there was more beyond. Col. J. L. Power, editor of the Clarion, a man of wide influence in the State and a stanch friend of the school, spoke on behalf of the State Board of Visitors, of which he is the Secretary. He paid a glowing tribute to the work of the school and of the American Missionary Association. He said it would be the pleasure of the Board of Visitors at the meeting of the next Legislature to ask for at least as large an appropriation as the institution had received for the last two years. Rev. Dr. C.

B. Galloway, editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, was then introduced. He commended the work of the institution and expressed his satisfaction with the original, direct, practical, common-sense way in which the essays and orations had been written and presented.

After the Commencement dinner the graduating class held their "Ivy Exercise," which consisted of a class song, class poem, planting the ivy and an address by a member of the Faculty. In the evening R. W. Jackson, class of '80, delivered the address before the Alumni, on "Decision." It was well written and full of interest.

TILLOTSON INSTITUTE, AUSTIN, TEXAS.—It is due the many donors and friends of Tillotson that a brief report of the work of the past year be made. The land upon which to place the new dormitory and the buildings for the mechanical department, when funds shall be secured, has been bought at a cost of $5,000—of which $1,250 was from the Hon. J. H. Raymond, of Austin. Some progress has also been made in obtaining subscriptions for the new hall. How much needed this is may be inferred from the fact that on the 2d day of last October, one day before the opening of the school, Allen Hall was full to repletion, and the work of turning away began, and continued throughout the year, so that it is safe to say that for every one received one was refused. We had one hundred in our boarding department during the year. This necessitated placing four students in the larger rooms, and three in nearly every other—too many by far, but there seemed to be no other way.

In educational and religious results the past year has been our best. More and better work has been done. The training has been more thorough and systematic, and the real progress more satisfactory. Our religious services have been more largely attended and richer in results. A goodly number found Christ, and gave clear evidence of a change of heart.

Our closing exercises won the praise of the many who were present. Among these were Gov. Ireland, ex-Gov. E. M. Pease, Hon. Mr. Swain, Comptroller of State, Judge Delaney, of the Court of Appeals, Prof. Hogg, at the head of the schools of Fort Worth, and many other prominent citizens of Austin.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT, HOWARD UNIVERSITY, WASHINGTON, D. C.—The anniversary exercises were held in Fourth Presbyterian Church, Washington City, May 4, when six young men who had completed the regular three years' course of study received the usual certificate of the department. Five delivered addresses before a large audience, and were subsequently complimented by many of the most judicious friends of the race who were present, for the discriminating and just treatment of their subjects, and for their evident improvement of the advantages of instruction which they had enjoyed. One of the graduates sails in June for Africa, as a missionary of the Presbyterian Board; another is waiting an opportunity to labor on the same continent; the remaining four go to the wide and needy field in the South—each in a different State, so great is the demand for capable laborers.

The past year has been one of marked favor and prosperity to the department. Thirty-four students have been under instruction, and there has been no interruption in study by reason of sickness, either on the part of professors or students. The location of the institution on the high ground north of the city, overlooking both it and the Potomac River, is most conducive to health, while it secures the quiet essential to educational work. With a complete and regularly systematized course of studies extending over three years; with six Professors imparting instruction in all the branches of study pursued in like theological seminaries in this country, pious young men can here be prepared to become effective workmen for Christ, either at home or abroad.

NORMAL SCHOOL, WILMINGTON, N. C.—The last four days of the school year were given up to the examinations. Four rooms were crowded with anxious workers, telling with tongue or pen what they had been learning during the months past. Some of the pupils, after writing steadily for two or three hours at a time, begged the privilege of continuing their work at the noon recess and after school hours. The papers spoke for the thoroughness of the work they had done.

Upon the walls were hung map drawings, specimens of penmanship and of free-hand drawing, that would compare well with exhibits in rooms of the same grades in the best schools in the North. In the First Primary Room were two things of special interest: a table covered with needle-work made by the smallest girls of the school, and two sets of papers placed side by side, showing the penmanship, spelling, figures, etc., of the same pupil in October, 1882, and in May, 1883. The work of the pupils of that room at the number-table, and their writing and reading, assure us that there is reason for hope in the coming generation of colored people.

The closing exercises of the school were held Tuesday evening, May 29. The hall, the aisles, entries, doors and windows were crowded. The men even climbed the verandas to reach us. For two hours and a half the throng sat or stood, listening to recitations, declamations, dialogues, essays, one oration, songs, etc. I wish the people of the North who question the promise of this race could have been present. There was hardly one hesitation in the recitations; the essays and oration showed thought and good English; and little boys and girls gave concert recitations in perfect unison.

AVERY NORMAL INSTITUTE, CHARLESTON, S. C.—Monday, June 25, was "Children's Day." This day, organized by the present Principal seven years ago, has become almost as popular as "Graduation Day." The leading features this year were selections from the Kitchen-Garden exercises, as taught by Miss Huntington, of New York, and the exhibit of two quilts, a rug, and a quantity of holders, which were made by the children. In these exercises and the use of the needle, the boys have engaged as heartily and successfully as the girls. This industrial showing was enlivened with singing, several recitations, a dialogue and two class readings.

The grammar school exhibition occurred June 26. The first years gave Miss Andrews' geographical play of the "United States" and a dialogue in a manner that reflected credit upon their teacher, who had prepared them. The second years gave two class readings (a scene from "William Tell" and "The Charcoal Man"); and the third years gave the comic opera of "King Alfred." The industrial work of this department has been confined to inventive and perspective drawing. In inventive drawing the pupils made their designs with sticks, first of equal, then of unequal lengths, and when these designs were accepted by the teacher they were drawn first on slates, then in drawing-books.

On Graduation Day, June 29, six young men and the same number of young women read essays. The young men all intend to go to college. The results of industrial work in the normal department were a surprise to all on account of the quantity, variety and beauty of the work displayed. It consisted of colored designs for dadoes, borders and embroidery; useful and ornamental articles of scroll-sawing; leaves, animals, vases, a bust and other articles modeled in artists' clay; samples of printing, including the commencement programmes, and a fine display of crochet and art needle-work. An average of an hour a week was given to the industrial work in the normal department.

BEACH INSTITUTE, SAVANNAH, GA.—Four days of written examinations were very tiresome, but I wish my readers could have seen the earnest workers. Oral examinations occurred on Friday, May 25. A pleasant hour could be spent in the Primary Department. Here are little folks reading now so smoothly in First Reader, who eight months ago knew nothing of A B C work. In another room pupils are engaged in writing a spelling lesson. Hurrying on, we find older pupils reciting in arithmetic and geography; others, more advanced, in algebra and literature.

A new feature of our anniversary exercises was a juvenile concert. On Monday night a goodly company gathered in our chapel. One hundred and forty children greeted them with a song. Of particular interest were the solos and action songs by the little primaries. A solo, "I'se gwine to Alabama," given by one of the older boys, was thoroughly enjoyed. The net sum of $32.00 was raised for the increase of our library fund.

Wednesday came, with clouds in the morning and at the hour appointed for the public exercises, rain falling in torrents. Yet nearly every child was in place, and extra chairs were brought for the gathered spectators. The exercises consisted of recitations, dialogues and songs. As the children performed the parts assigned each, I did not wonder that both teachers and mothers "felt proud." An invitation to examine work done by members of the sewing class was generally accepted, giving the happy parents fresh cause for pride.

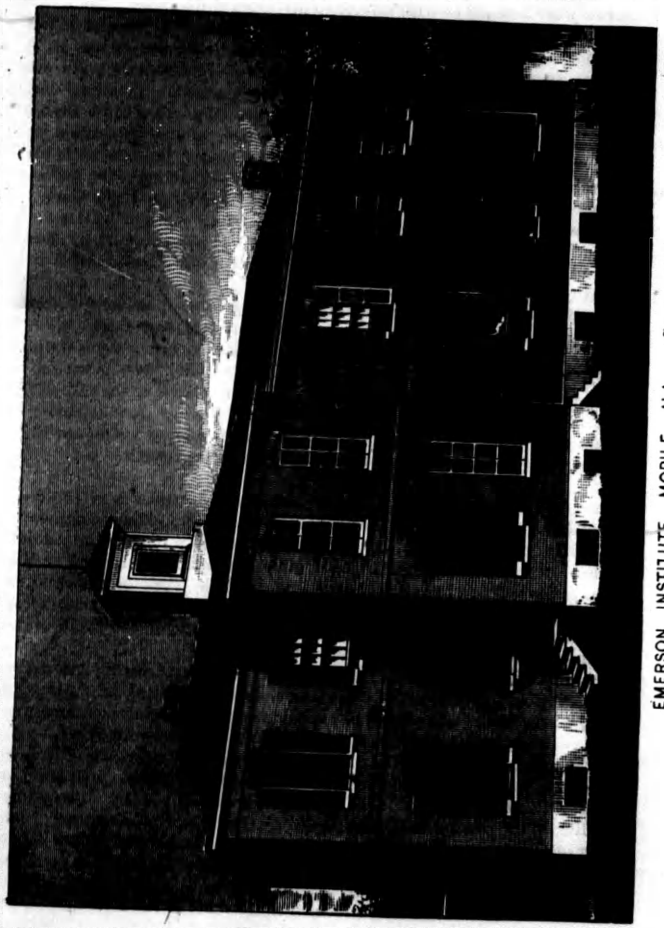
On Wednesday evening the graduates read their essays and received their diplomas, accompanied by kind words from the superintendent. Mr. S., rising, called to him a boy of fifteen years and said: "A scholarship was offered to the one who should excel in general scholarship, punctuality and deportment. I hold in my hand a paper stating that you, having done this, are entitled to the same." Amid hearty applause the gift was received with smiles and thanks.

LEWIS HIGH SCHOOL, MACON, GA.—The Anniversary exercises were inaugurated on Sunday evening, May 27, with a lecture by Hon. Walter B. Hill, a lawyer of Macon. Rev. J. W. Burke, a prominent Southern Methodist clergyman of Macon, spoke a few earnest and well-chosen words.

The examinations began on Tuesday, culminating in an exhibition on Thursday. There have been 298 pupils enrolled, an increase of fifty per cent. The Exhibition Day filled the church with an audience of 400. The exercises were listened to with unbroken attention throughout.

The last feature of the occasion was the presentation of a Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine, costing $65 (through the Macon agent, Judge M. R. Freeman), awarded by the company to the girl who produced the best work, five machines having been furnished during the winter for practice. Mrs. D. W. Job, daughter of the late Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D.D., of Boston, in the name of Mrs. Lathrop and Mrs. Hodge, whom she called the "Woman in Proverbs" and "Dorcas," told the story of the sewing school and awarded the machine. For three years Mrs. Lathrop, the worthy "minister's wife," has met nearly every week with girls to teach them to sew. They have made about 500 garments and one of their patch-work quilts has been given to the oldest scholar, aged 93! Ten competed for the prize. Mrs. Prof. Hodge, matron of the Teachers' Home, has assisted this winter in this benevolent and important work.

Prof. Hodge, with some earnest words of fitting counsel, presented certificates of graduation to the senior class of three boys and four girls.



After a beautiful chorus all were invited to adjourn to the dedication of a gem of a building, which we will call "The Emerald," in chaste tints of green and olive, set in the rear of the grounds on the brow of the hill. This might be appropriately termed "The Lathrop Library," for the pastor in the last two years has collected the books and the money which now constitute a public library for the colored people and their friends.

EMERSON INSTITUTE, MOBILE, ALA.—Anniversary exercises at Emerson Institute were held May 25 in the new building dedicated at the commencement of the year. The two days preceding had been devoted to examinations. A variation from the programme was made again and again, that as far as possible the visitors might judge of the work of the children in whom they are more especially interested. This could be done, as the certificates for promotion were given on the standing of the pupils in the written examinations held the second week in May.

Friday morning the children came together as a school for the last time. After devotional exercises the departments were dismissed to their own rooms, where the teacher read the per cents of the examinations, and presented each pupil with a certificate grading him for the coming year.

At the appointed hour in the evening the assembly room was filled to overflowing with the eager, happy children and their friends. After prayer by Rev. O. D. Crawford the exercises were given by the pupils according to the programme. Mr. Crawford and General Slaughter, postmaster of the city, made brief remarks. Where each one endeavored to do his best it is difficult to mention those who excelled. To critical eyes, no doubt, many defects were evident. But our audience seemed well pleased and congratulations were freely given. I think most of those present would agree with old Aunt Gracie in her remark, summing it all up: "It was delightful to be looked at."

from the Appeal which represents how our work is regarded by the better class of Southern people.

The feeling in this city in favor of universal education was never stronger than it is now. This is plainly shown by the interest everywhere manifested in the Le Moyne Institute or school for negroes, which gave so enjoyable an entertainment at the Greenlaw Opera-House Monday night. A number of prominent citizens who were present expressed the greatest surprise and astonishment, and the opinion was general that the inculcation of ideas such as those of which the graduates seemed possessed was bound to do good to them, and by reflection upon the balance of the community.

"Yes, it is a new idea in the South," remarked a listener, who had been present at the entertainment, "and I find it difficult to say whether I was most surprised or delighted. I heard every essay and recitation from beginning to end, and there was not a break or stumble, no stopping to recover breath, no tedious repetitions. The absence of the parrot was noticeable. The novelty of the affair held my attention at first, but I soon forgot this, and found myself drifting along with the essayists as they waded into their subjects. Another thing that struck me forcibly was the absence of rant in the young men and the failure to giggle on the part of the young women. They seemed to take it as a matter of course that they were there, and that their audience would be interested in what they might have to say. I, for one, am heartily in favor of keeping up the good work."

BREWER NORMAL INSTITUTE, GREENWOOD, S. C.—The eleventh anniversary of the Brewer Normal School, which is located in this town, was observed June 28. This always creates a profound interest in the vicinity, and long before the hour of commencing an anxious throng of every imaginable description of vehicle is seen wending its way thitherward. The students n attendance during the sessions were 157, an advance upon that of any previous year. The programme of the day was inviting. Instrumental music for the occasion was supplied by Mrs. W. W. Frazier. Rev. E. W. Williams, of the Second Presbyterian Church in Abbeville, gave the address, taking for his subject "Reality in Morals, in Education and in Christianity." It enlisted earnest attention during the hour consumed in its delivery. At the intermission between the morning and evening sessions friends held fellowship with friends and betook themselves to the contents of abundantly laden refreshment baskets. Everybody seemed to manifest that the lines had fallen to him in pleasant places.

The afternoon exercises consisted of singing, recitations and dialogues from the little ones of the primary department. The evening was occupied with similar exercises by the older students of the school. The audience room was by far too small to accommodate the immense throng seeking admission. The year's work has been a grand success.

Mission Sabbath Schools reported in part..... 1,100

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH WORK OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION AT THE SOUTH.

The American Missionary Association made the first decided efforts while slavery existed for the religious instruction of the people of the South on an anti-slavery basis. Rev. John G. Fee, a Kentuckian, disinherited on account of his anti-slavery principles, collected a church of non-slaveholders, and applied to the American Missionary Association for a commission, which was gladly given him October 10, 1848. From this movement came the churches at Glenville (organized in 1845), Cabin Creek (1850), and South Fork and Ariel (1864), besides the churches at Berea, Hillsdale and Camp Nelson, of which there is further brief mention below. The Association also commissioned a missionary, Rev. Daniel Worth, to labor in North Carolina, and he preached to six feeble non-slaveholding churches. He was imprisoned for preaching the gospel of freedom, and was released upon the payment of $3,000 bonds by friends at the North. The next year three missionaries were sent to Kansas.

CHURCH OF CHRIST, BEREA, KY.—Organized in 1847, with nine members. At the outbreak of the Rebellion the school and church at Berea were broken up and those connected with them exiled from the State. The church was reorganized in 1865, and in 1869 the membership was 124, of whom 103 united on profession of their faith. The church at that time helped to maintain in the region of Berea six Sunday-schools, and five preaching stations were supplied regularly by members of this church. In 1878 a revival was reported with 20 conversions. Also in 1879 there was much religious interest, and it was reported that all the graduates of the College were professing Christians. In 1881 a neat plain building, seating 500 people, was erected as a church house and college chapel. Present membership, 179.

BETHESDA CHURCH (HILLSDALE), BRACKEN CO., KY.—Organized about 1850. In the very organization it was resolved to have but one communion for all of God's children, and that the pews should be alike open to all. They put up a neat brick building. Continuously were they threatened. At the time of the John Brown raid their pastor and school teacher were driven away. For a long time the church was without a pastor, but they kept up their Sunday-school and prayer meetings, and sent eight pupils to Oberlin College for education. Present membership, 14.

CHURCH OF CHRIST, CAMP NELSON, KY.—Organized Sept. 25, 1864, with 15 members. In 1869 the membership was 185. The people were mostly poor, and quite a number had purchased homesteads which they were trying to pay for. During the war there were gathered into Camp Nelson many thousand colored soldiers, followed by some 3,000 women and children. The Government erected cottages and hospital wards. At the close of the war some of these buildings were bought by friends, and three of the larger were reserved for school and church purposes. In 1875, in a revival 39 persons professed conversion to Christ, and seven who had been dismissed were reclaimed. It was said that nearly every young man in the community was a member of the one church of the place. Present membership, 111.

The war was still raging in our land, and the freedmen were only "contrabands," when Rev. L. C. Lockwood was commissioned by this Association to labor among the ex-slaves at Fortress Monroe who had sought refuge under the national flag. He held three services every Lord's day at different places, besides week-day meetings; and thus in those thrilling times, as far back as 1861, even before the freedmen had been freed, may really be said to have commenced the church work of this Association among the freedmen. Teachers were soon sent, and the missionary and the teacher worked together. Schools were opened in churches, teachers labored in Sunday-school, while the minister preached and taught as opportunity offered in the old colored churches or in the temporary school buildings rented by the Association. Revivals were reported of wonderful power, converts were made and hundreds joined the old colored churches. But it was not until 1866 that any steps were taken toward separate church organizations for the people brought into the light by our missionaries.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Jan. 1, 1866, was a high and glad day to the missionaries in Memphis, for they then saw a humble place of worship, Lincoln chapel, on Union street, opened for the special benefit of the colored people of that city. The meeting-house was crowded to its utmost capacity, and more than 2,000 stood without, seeking to hear from open doors and windows. This first chapel of the Association in the South, built at the cost of $1,000, was that same year, with all the colored churches in Memphis, burned in the riot.

ATLANTA, GA.—In 1866, also, a lot was secured in Atlanta, adjoining the Mission Home, and a large Government building moved upon it, to be transformed from a Confederate commissary building into a chapel 32 × 80, with four school-rooms 32 × 20, to deal out rations of knowledge and of truth to the newly-freed black sons of the South.

CHARLESTON, S. C., PLYMOUTH CHURCH.—Organized April 14, 1867. This was the first church organization of the Association among the colored people of the South. In 1868, on the first Thanksgiving Day, as a church, and the first in which the colored people were ever included in the "call," they came forward and subscribed over $500 toward purchasing a lot on which to build a church, the subscriptions to be paid in weekly installments of 25 or 50 cents each, some even paying half down. In 1870, a lot worth $3,000 was secured and paid for. Friends from the North contributed over $2,000 for the erection of a frame chapel 35 × 65. In 1871, 2,000 people witnessed the laying of the corner-stone of the Plymouth Congregational Church. In the address by the pastor, he alluded to the burning of the old Circular church (Dec. 11, 1861), where his people had been formerly accustomed to worship, and showed the record of their wanderings—not unlike the journeyings of Israel in the wilderness—from the Circular Church to Hibernian Hall, to the chapel of the Central Church, to the Orphan's Chapel, to the Laurel St. Chapel, where they began to worship apart from the congregation of the Circular Church; to the Military Hall, where they entered anew into covenant with God and with one another, and became the Plymouth Congregational Church; and to the Avery Institute. Among the articles placed in the corner-stone were the Emancipation Proclamation and the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution. A collection was taken at the service, the people coming forward and depositing their contributions in the hollow of the corner-stone, which was suspended by a derrick over the spot where it was to be laid. Five years after its organization this church numbered 153. In 1881 the people raised $500 for various purposes, $200 of which went to repair the church. The present membership is 171.

ATLANTA, GA., FIRST CHURCH.—Organized May, 1867. This was the second church organization of the Association among the colored people, and this is the simple record at the time: "May 27, 1867. Yesterday (Sabbath) for the first time we gathered, ten of us, round the communion table of the Saviour as a Congregational 'Union Church,' which organized last week. It is made up of seven males and three females. The service of baptism was administered to four." Dr. Strieby preached the sermon on this occasion, and Gen. Saxton attended in full regimentals, saying that he wished not only Gen. Saxton but the United States to be represented. This church has been so blessed with repeated revivals that hardly an annual report of the Association has been issued without mention of the outpouring of the Spirit upon this people. Even the next year we read: "The congregation has been constantly increasing in numbers and regularity of attendance. During the spring months we were blessed with a quiet and thorough religious awakening, during which 39 were added to the church, mainly from the most promising pupils in our schools." And five years later the following: "The first communion of this church was celebrated five years ago, and at its communion yesterday, instead of ten the number was 116, of whom 90 sat down together. This year the church has raised $50 for the American Board and $60 for the A. M. A." In 1874, 36 persons were added to the church, with a continued religious interest during the year. Ten years from its organization 217 persons had been enrolled as members, 183 joining by profession, 17 had died, 15 had been excluded and 26 dismissed by letter. This church worshipped in the Storrs chapel until 1878, when the church building was erected. This is a beautiful structure in brick, with slate roof and tower, stained glass windows and a $300 Troy bell. All the work was done by colored people. It was dedicated June 20, 1880, the dedication being delayed till all debt was cleared off the house. Dr. Strieby preached the sermon, and the Mayor of the city was present and made an address. Present membership, 199.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—Organized June 9, 1867, with 15 members, "all of good promise as substantial members." In 1869 this church had 37 members, 27 of them under 25 years of age, and the amount raised for various purposes was $400, securing and paying for a well-located church lot. In 1871 the pastor furnishes this brief sketch of the self-denial, energy and success of the people in building their house of worship: "The First Congregational Church of Chattanooga, Tenn., was organized June 9, 1867, with both white and colored members. We have since received additions from both classes. One specialty of our mission is to war against the demon of caste. The church was born in a school-house and there nourished for four years. During this time our prayer meetings were well attended, and we had the largest and perhaps the best Sabbath-school in the city. Our hearts early began to long for a sanctuary. And in Brother C.'s first visit we were encouraged to move forward, for 'the American Missionary Association will help you.' So we began to lay by on the first day of the week as the Lord prospered, and soon we had enough to pay for a good lot well located; and the pennies were saved and brought in till we had $350. Then through our friend, Gen. Howard's mother, we received from a good widow lady of Illinois $100, a valuable 'mite,' and we said: 'The Lord has prospered us, therefore, we, his servants, will arise and build.' July 25, 1871, the first sill of a building 36 × 70 ft. was put in place, and in just four weeks we had meeting and Sabbath-school in our new house, because the brethren and sisters 'had a mind to work,' for while the brethren worked, the sisters brought on the well-stored baskets, and right merrily did hammers ring late and early. Our church fronts east, is 18 ft. between floor and ceiling, has a semi-gothic roof, self-supporting, and instead of a bell-tower a heavy cross, surmounted by a large index hand pointing upward. The audience room is 36 × 60 feet, the pulpit is in a recess, with library room and pastor's study on either side." In 1874 the most marked revival of the year occurred at Chattanooga. Two hundred came forward for prayers and 50 sent in requests. In the Sunday-school 24 began a new life and 14 joined the church. In 1869 the church raised by its own contributions $50 per month, besides contributing nearly $50 to aid yellow fever sufferers in other cities in the early stage of the epidemic. Not many Northern churches could show a better record, considering their income. It amounts to about $3.50 from each resident member, and the income of the whole membership would not average $150 a year. In 1881 it is reported that 21 persons had left the church at different times to engage in study either in Atlanta or Fisk University, nine of whom were teaching, while one was over in the southern part of France preaching the Gospel. In 1882 a revival was reported when 40 persons were examined and approved by vote for membership. Present membership, 118.

This year also saw churches formed at LAWRENCE (present membership, 21), LEAVENWORTH and TOPEKA, KAN. At the latter place, by the aid of the Congregational Union, a comfortable house of worship was built and paid for. It was subsequently disbanded, and the Congregational Union reimbursed. A church has since been organized, growing out of our mission among the "exodus" people. Present membership, 20.

PARIS, TEXAS.—The origin of this church back in the dark days of terror in 1868 was unique, and after the form of the New Testament churches. The colored people were "scattered about as sheep having no shepherd." Separated from the old church edifices of the white people, they had not yet gathered themselves into their own churches. A Mr. Smith, from Illinois, who had gone through the war as a soldier, had settled in business in Texas, and whose life was soon after sacrificed in the turbulence of those times, came up through Paris lecturing to the colored people. He proposed a church that would accommodate all Christians, and the result was the organization above named, with a regular constitution and covenant. This church ran up to a large membership, branched out into the Shiloh, the New Hope and the Pattonville African Congregational Churches. In 1882 it dedicated its second place of worship. The house could not hold the people, and $313 was subscribed toward paying the debt. There was during this year a special work of grace. Nineteen were added to the church, all, with two exceptions, from the Sunday-school. Present membership, 81.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Organized February, 1838, with 21 members. This was a Union Church and formed at the Lincoln Chapel, which was rebuilt after the riot in 1866. During that first year a constant religious interest prevailed, with frequent conversions, and the membership increased to over 50. The year 1875 was characterized by a wonderful revival in this church and the Le Moyne School. In three days nearly 80 professed Christ. These converted students went out into the highways working earnestly till the entire city became interested. In one of the churches 130 rose for prayers. In 1881 there was also a most precious revival, over 40 of the students at Le Moyne professing conversion. In the closing prayer meeting for the year it was found that there were but about a dozen students of the Normal Department who had not accepted the Saviour. Present membership, 120.

NASHVILLE, TENN., UNION CHURCH.—Organized March 22, 1868, with 24 members. Six churches of several denominations were represented. It began its mission with an earnestly laborious and self-denying membership. It proposed to show how far Christians of different creeds and races could unite in harmonious efforts in one church for the salvation of dying men. The next year the church numbered 38, of whom 35 joined on profession. Hopeful conversions in church and school, 30. This church was formed in connection with Fisk University, and their work cannot be separated. The religious interest has been so conspicuous that we might almost say that the revival begun years ago has continued to this present time. The remark of a young man who came into school in 1876, when the church and school had just taken possession of their new quarters in Jubilee Hall, echoes the feelings of many: "I supposed they would have preaching on the Sabbath and open the school with prayer, but I did not suppose they would pray all the time, all over the building; the young men's hall is full of prayer." In 1879 it was reported that there had been several additions to the College Church at every communion season, beginning with January, and that many converts had connected themselves with other churches. No year has passed in the history of the University without from 12 to 70 conversions. The additions to the church have been mostly on profession of faith, and have averaged more than 20 annually. In 1882 we have this remarkable record: "All the college students are professing Christians, and out of the 32, 21 have become so while students here." Present membership, 189.

MACON, GA.—Organized April 11, 1868. April 12 an audience of 600 assembled to witness the dedication of Norwich Chapel, largely built with contributions from the Second Congregational Church, Norwich, Conn. The chapel was 70 feet by 40, Gothic, white with brown trimmings, the neatest chapel in Macon. As the prayer of dedication was about to close there was a hushed silence, while with voiceless gratitude the house was given to God to be His peculiar dwelling place. When again the voice of prayer arose: "These seats we dedicate to Thee; this pulpit we dedicate to Thee; from foundation stone to the broad flag of our country that floats above us we dedicate it all to Thee." In 1870 this church numbered 50 members; two were studying for the ministry. The year 1872 was marked by a revival in which the church rejoiced over 30 new-born souls. Several remarkable conversions occurred; and the effect on backsliders was noted. In 1878 the Norwich Chapel, as well as the Lewis High School building, was burned. These were replaced with one substantial brick building, the upper story being used for a church. This hall will seat about 450 persons, and is neat and tasteful. In 1880 ten united with the church, four of them heads of families. In 1882 there was a special interest among the children in day and Sunday-school; 22 joined the church, 16 of them from the Sunday-school and 8 heads of families, while 8 or 10 joined other churches. Present membership, 88.

TALLADEGA, ALA.—Organized May 18, 1868, with 18 members. In the words of one of the members of the Council: "The facts have been published, but the joy of the people, the full hearts, the tearful eyes, cannot be told. Methodists and Baptists and Christians of other churches seemed to be as full of joy as those who formed the little band." One year later the membership was 38, fifteen of the new members uniting on profession. $100 was raised. One preaching station and 13 mission Sunday-schools were connected with the church. This church has a well-defined plan of evangelization, carried out by the students in the Theological Department connected with the college. This department was organized in 1872, and has been a power for good each year in the region round about, the students preaching in brush arbors, in the very woods, with no covering over their heads, or in hastily-erected tents, often in the night, by the aid of their fat-pine torches. All our churches near Talladega are the outgrowth of this plan. They number eight, the most distant being forty miles away. This church is closely connected with Talladega College, and the following brief report of the work of the students in 1879 may not be out of place: "Talladega College the last year by its students reached 1,200 Sunday-school scholars, in past years, in all, 20,000. Out of these schools, six Congregational churches have grown up. All but two of the girls at Foster Hall are hopeful Christians; and of the 45 young men who board at the same place, but four remain without a hope in Christ. Nine young men, students at Talladega, after examination, were approved to preach by the Alabama Conference. During the year 37 were received into the church." In 1881, 23 united themselves with the College church at one communion. Present membership, 149.

ANDERSONVILLE, GA.—Organized May, 1868. On the last day of May, 1868, a few earnest disciples of Jesus were organized into a Congregational church at Andersonville, that scene of prison horrors. This church was without a regular pastor, being supplied occasionally from Macon and Atlanta, and the services were often conducted by the two Godly women who dared risk their lives where 14,000 patriots had been starved. But in 1871 Rev. Floyd Snelson, the first young man of those trained for the ministry in the schools of the American Missionary Association was set apart to this work. He had been a slave without advantages and first entered the school early in the year 1868, when he was under the care of the two devoted ladies who were the first teachers in Andersonville, by whom he was led to the Saviour. He had spent a part of two years under careful training at Atlanta University. He was examined and ordained to return to that gloomy spot where was left the high-water-mark of slavery, that he might labor to secure for his own people the highest product of Christian civilization, the Christian church. In 1877 this church was united with the church at Golding's Grove, Ga.

SAVANNAH, GA.—Organized in 1869 with 16 members. Within the year it was increased to 60 members. Rev. Robert Carter, ex-slave of Howell Cobb, was its first pastor. Through his efforts the city of Savannah was induced to grant to the church a lot worth from $1,500 to $2,000. This church was obliged to worship for several years in the chapel of Beach Institute, but it proved the nucleus of a cluster of churches which have grown to be vigorous branches. In 1875 the corner-stone of the new building was laid with appropriate ceremonies. The terrible visitation of yellow fever delayed the erection of the building and it was not finished until 1877. Revivals are reported in 1879 and 1880. Present membership, 55.

HAMPTON, VA.—Organized Nov. 7, 1869, with 15 members. This church was formed in the Normal Institute. In 1878, 27 joined the church, and the pastor writes that it is several years since any communion season has passed without some additions. In 1881 there were admitted to church membership 31, 28 on profession of faith. Of these 15 were Indians, one white and the remainder colored students. Two prayer meetings were kept up by the colored students, one on the Sabbath and one on a weekday evening. The Indians had their own prayer meetings, where they took part in their own tongue. They manifested a most earnest desire to know the Bible, and spent much time in studying it. Forty students had been engaged in the Sunday-schools in the vicinity. Thirty Bible students went out from the school on Sunday afternoons to read to the old people. The missionary society of the school raised $229, the most of it being spent in the relief of misery at their very doors. During the winter the students went out every week to mend the huts of the poor and to carry them bedding, clothes and food. Present membership, 245.

MONTGOMERY (ALA.) PLYMOUTH CHURCH.—Organized in December, 1869, with 13 members. "No pastor, no house of worship, few in numbers, but strong in faith," is the record of the next year. But in 1872 the Association purchased 3¼ acres of land near the Swayne School building and erected a beautiful house of worship at a cost of $3,200. The church is built entirely of Alabama pine, has a seating capacity of 350, is well ventilated, and presents a commanding appearance. The pulpit is of self-grained pine, equal to curled maple. The carpenter who contracted for and superintended the construction of this church is a colored man, well known in the community as an industrious and successful mechanic. The chapel was dedicated Oct. 6, and Dec. 9, 1872, the church was reorganized with 16 members. In 1878 there were 77 members, and the pastor writes: "I have more reliable 'prayer meeting' members in proportion to our number than most pastors enjoy. Pauses in the prayer meeting have not yet been introduced." Present membership 82.

In 1869 the churches of the Association had houses of worship of an aggregate valuation of fifty thousand dollars.

In 1869 and 1870 several churches in Louisiana came under the care of the Association. A part of these churches were organized de novo and a part were remodeled, continuing under the leadership of the old colored ministers. Four of these were in New Orleans, the Central, Zion, Howard (or Spain Street) and the Morris Brown. The MT. ZION Church was forced shortly after to relinquish its house, owing to some old dispute of the title, and was disbanded. The HOWARD Church was originally Baptist. This body of Christians had all been slaves. They retained their old preacher of slavery times, but were finally persuaded to call a younger man of education and moral worth. Their house, which was the property of the A. M. A., costing, with the land, some $3,000, was burned, and the insurance recovered was only $1,000. Present membership, 81. The MORRIS BROWN Church was also largely Baptist. It has a comfortable building. Many of the people own their own homes. This church is now supplied by a pastor trained in the Theological Department of Straight University. Present membership, 123.

There were four churches in places suburban to New Orleans—GREENVILLE, JEFFERSON CITY, ALGIERS (present membership, 65) and GRETNA (present membership, 250.) These were formerly Free Will Baptist churches. They have houses of worship, though of the plainest description. Four others, LOCKPORT (present membership, 58), FAUCE POINT, ISLE PIQUANT, LE PEIGNEUR, were nearly 100 miles distant in the interior of the State, and were gathered under the missionary labors of Rev. S. W. Rogers, an educated colored man, partly of Indian descent, who was for some three years under commission of this Association as teacher and preacher. The population in that section is largely colored and well-to-do. Mr. Rogers died suddenly in 1872. Colored ministers were put over these churches who were not educationally fit. Two or these churches died out, while that at Lake Peigneur came to life again in 1874. Present membership, 40.

NEW IBERIA, LA.—This church was formed in 1866, but came under the care of the Association in 1870. In 1873 Rev. Hardy Mobley became the pastor, and during that year 70 or more converts united with the church. In 1874, also, there was a revival, with 40 converts, the oldest about 90, the youngest eleven. In 1880 this church suffered seriously in the loss of their chapel by a furious wind storm. By liberal subscriptions, by mortgaging their property, and by personal labor, they put up a new and substantial church. Present membership, 150.

MARION, ALA.—Organized Jan. 1, 1870, with 16 members. The following year the pastor describes a blessed revival enjoyed. "I have been preaching every night for three weeks. More than 100 are earnest inquirers, and many have found Christ. Among the converts are eight or ten fathers of families who have never before been reached, as they were too intelligent to believe in such a religion as they had been taught in the past." This year they report 66 members. In July, 1871, they determined to build a church. There were then 33 male members, all so poor as to have considerable difficulty in providing the means of support. The Association gave a lot worth $100 and $960 in cash. Citizens of Marion contributed, in money and work, $245, friends at the North, $260. The members themselves did the work, and wrung the rest out of their own poverty, giving, in work and money, $1,462. In the eighteenth week after they entered the woods to cut the sills, the house, worth over $3,000, was dedicated, and of the seven houses of worship in Marion, one of them costing four times as much, this is admitted to be the best in construction and inside finish. In 1881 ten of the young people were in school at Talladega, two at Fisk and one at Tougaloo. Four members had been teaching school with good success, and one was preaching. This church had then put five young men into the Christian ministry. Three Sunday-schools were kept up in the country by members of the church. Present membership, 108.

DUDLEY, N. C.—Organized March 9, 1870, with 16 members. The same month the pastor writes: "We are experiencing the most powerful revival of religion that I have ever witnessed among these people. Thirteen of our best pupils last night came to the inquiry meeting. Many come from miles away and engage lodging with friends to attend meetings." Eleven joined the church in May. The school-house could not hold the congregation, and the platform and seats were placed under the green oaks in the yard. In 1871 this little church was deprived of its place of worship by the burning of the school-house in which it met. But the people took courage even then, and when all was over in the stillness of midnight by the smoking timbers of what was their beautiful house, they knelt and gave their cause into the hands of God, and that same year saw upon the same site the best country church edifice in that part of North Carolina. In 1878 a deep religious interest is reported and 17 united with the church. Present membership, 64.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Organized May 3, 1870, with 11 members. This church, in its infancy, did not make rapid progress, for in 1878 there were but 17 members. But in 1881 Mr. J. J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, did some special seed planting in giving $3,300 to build the house, and Christ's Church was dedicated March 12, 1881. This house will seat 450 persons, is 72 × 36 feet, and measures 22 feet in the clear. It has a tower rising 100 feet from the street below, and is the highest object in the city, and the first seen on approaching the city from the Sound. At the dedication were forty or fifty of the best white citizens of the city. Present membership, 38.

BEAUFORT, N. C.—Organized November, 1870, with 8 members. The pastor at that time writes: "There is now in progress here the most powerful revival that has been felt since the war. The feeling is exceedingly deep and earnest. The interest commenced among the boys in our prayer meeting. Yesterday morning when we opened the school after a week's vacation the religious feeling was too deep to permit the scholars to pursue their studies. The regular exercises were set aside and the teachers passed round speaking words of comfort and counsel." But, notwithstanding the promise, this church did not grow fast, the highest membership at any time until this year being 20. Present membership, 32.

LEBANON, MO.—Mr. Mobley organized a church here in 1870, and succeeded with aid from the A. M. A., in securing a site and erecting a chapel. He left in 1873 to take charge of the Topeka church, and no services were held. Some of the members moved away and the church is extinct.

WESTPORT, MO.—Organized in 1870 or 1871 with 8 members. The report for 1871 is that it received no assistance and would have been without any pastoral care but for the voluntary services of Rev. J. C. Beekman. The church seemed too small and unpromising to warrant the expense on our part of a missionary. In 1872 an increase of interest is reported, the meeting-house was enlarged and 16 were added to the membership. In 1873 this church became virtually merged in the African Methodist church.

In 1870 the churches at BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS, and HAMILTON, MISS., were taken under the care of the Association.

ATHENS, ALA. (TRINITY CONG. CHURCH.)—Organized February, 1871, with 9 members, 6 joining on profession. In 1876 a house of worship was finished and dedicated. The capacity of the building is about 225. It is of brick and beautifully finished inside. All classes agree that it is the neatest church in the place. The church had at this time about 50 members. In 1878 Trinity Church sustained 13 mission schools, in which over 700 had been taught. In 1873 there was a powerful revival and it was reported that every member when present took active part in the meetings for prayer and conference. Present membership, 47.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Organized in March, 1871. This church embraced a very select material, Methodists, Congregationalists, Episcopalians and Presbyterians, white and colored. The following year this church was voluntarily merged in the Central Church at its organization.

TOUGALOO, MISS.—Organized in 1871 with 16 members. In 1872 is this report: "We are enjoying another precious revival; 17 came forward to unite with our church. A mother and four children, the latter just come to maturity, all nearly six feet in height, able and intelligent, late from slavery, are now numbered with us. Last evening nearly forty rose to offer prayer or tell their joyous hopes of heaven." The church enjoyed another "harvest-day" at its communion in May, 1875, when 20 souls were brought from darkness into light. And so its revivals have been many, and the work that it has done in connection with the University has been great. Present membership, 119.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.—Formed in 1866, but came under the care of the Association in 1871. In 1872 a house of worship was built, dedicated Dec. 3, 1872. It cost about $3,700, and a debt remained of some $1,700, of which $500 was temporarily loaned without interest by a devout colored woman of the church, and $100 by a colored man. This church was for a time ministered to by a white minister of Southern birth, Rev. Wm. B. Lacy. A revival is reported in 1879. Present membership, 26.

TERREBONNE, LA.—This church, organized in 1871, is situated in the midst of the richest farming section. In 1877 a really convenient and beautiful chapel was built at a cost of $1,000, and paid for without one dollar's aid from outside. A $60 bell has since been added. Mr. Clay, the pastor, was a slave till the emancipation, and though he cannot read a word and only writes his own name, is respected by all classes, black and white. His assistant reads the Scriptures and hymns, and he preaches and prays. Present membership, 179.

POMONA, TENN.—This church was organized in 1871, and was included in our report one year, but was after that supplied by the Home Miss. Society, and did not appear in our list.

A church was formed during this year at (Janesville, or) WOODBRIDGE, N. C., but it has been for a long time without a pastor, and is scattered. It is hoped that it will be reorganized the coming year.

A church was organized at WALNUT CHAPEL, KY., which is also known by the name of Clover Bottom and Big Hill. Present membership, 77.

ALLEMANCE or MCLEANSVILLE, N. C.—Organized in 1872 with 30 members. About 15 were added that same year. The congregation met in a ruinous building and its first meeting-room is worthy of passing notice, as given by the leader: "My assembly room was novel. It was a 'large upper room' in an old factory where were made guns and army wagons for the Confederacy. I stood by a window, or where was once one, though dashed out by General Sherman's men. The creek that once turned the machinery sent up its soft rippling song to blend with our exercises. At intervals among the oaks came stealing up the sweet voice of song, while some walked back to the deeper forests to pray." Some came six miles every Sabbath. In selecting a site for the building to be erected it seemed best to locate nearer the railroad, and so ten acres were selected a few miles from McLeansville, which accounts for the change of name. The new house was built at a cost of $1,500. When they reached the seating of the house they found the best place to house the lumber was in the old factory, where were once made muskets to shoot Yankees, and the very man who was proprietor of the shop and had charge of the work in those terrible times made the church seats. Several thousand good black walnut gun stocks were on hand at the "surrender," and several of them were cut up for dowels to hold the seats together. In 1878 there was a revival in which 27 were added to the church at one communion, of whom 14 were heads of families. In 1880, 25 conversions are reported, and a revival was also experienced in 1882. Present membership, 165.

SELMA, ALA.—Organized May 12, 1872, in the midst of a revival. Twenty-six joined on that Sabbath and five the following Sabbath. The church increased numerically 100 per cent. in one year. The chapel was built in 1873 on faith. The pastor writes at that time: "We commenced the work without knowing where the funds were coming from except what was pledged by the A. M. A.—the ground and $1,000. Several times I have been without anything to pay my hands, but have gone forward with the work, trusting to God to send the money as needed, and it has come at just the time that I must have it." They dedicated the building in October and held a praise service at night. The house cost a little over $3,000, and is pronounced a gem of beauty. That year they raised $197.50, sent $10 to the Mendi Mission, $10 to Talladega College, furnished their church with chairs, carpet for pulpit, hymn-books and gas reflectors. In two years the church gained 200 per cent. in numbers. Revivals are reported in 1876, 1879 and 1881. Present membership, 101.

CENTRAL CHURCH, NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Organized July, 1872. This church was made up in large part from the St. James, a few from the Morris Brown, with the University Church. The church edifice of the 4th Pres. Soc. (white) was purchased at a cost of about $20,000. After the resignation of Dr. Thompson the church was for some time without a settled pastor. But in 1876 brighter days came with the advent of Rev. W. S. Alexander, who that same year writes of a revival which continued several weeks, resulting in the addition of 23 adults at one time, with 17 cases of decided conversion shortly after. The year 1878 was one of unusual blessing and prosperity in this church. In 1879 the pastor writes: "For four weeks we gathered every night with an attendance ranging from 80 to 150. I have never witnessed a revival of greater spiritual power." In 1880, "It is my happiness to record one of the most precious revivals in the history of the Central Church. For 27 consecutive evenings we met in the lecture room. Of the 30 converted in the meetings, 24 were received to the fellowship of the church. Of the 250 present in the audience, 150 received the sacrament. In 1881 a revival of great power occurred, resulting in 50 conversions. In 1882 the truth preached was owned of God in the awakening of nearly 100 souls. On many occasions 30 were on the anxious seats. During the five weeks of continuous services, 66 professed hope in the Saviour, 25 of them students of the University, and 35 were received to the church. This church is now paying $50 a month for the support of the pastor." Present membership, 267.

MILLER'S STATION, GA. (formerly Ogeechee).—Organized in 1872. In 1878 it received 19 members. Present membership, 10.

GOLIAD, TEXAS.—A church was organized here in 1872. Mr. B. C. Church became so impressed that he had a work to do in Texas for the freedmen that he set out under commission of the A. M. A., but paying his own expenses. He secured a school and July 21 organized a church of 16 members, all heads of families. With $200 aid from the A. M. A. it built the first meeting-house in the city, and a little later it procured the best bell of five that rang the call to worship God. Present membership, 36.

MCMINNVILLE, TENN.—In 1872 a church was formed near McMinnville, which built a little house of worship the first year. This church was disbanded in 1874, owing to the fact that the colony of Northern white families which led to its organization had not been prospered, and most of the families had returned to their old homes in the North.

TERREBONNE STATION, LA.—This church, organized in 1872, was under the care of an old licensed preacher who was a slave till the war, and who many times had been flogged for preaching the Gospel. The church building is owned by the proprietor of the plantation on which it stands. Terrebonne, Terrebonne Station and La Fouche churches were all built up under the ministrations of Rev. Daniel Clay. Mr. Clay contributes liberally in money toward the support of these churches, besides preaching constantly. Present membership, 37.

BYRON STATION, GA.—Organized March, 1873, with seven members. This place is 17 miles from Macon, in the midst of large cotton plantations. It was a place of great destitution as far as religious privileges were concerned. Our missionaries felt that religious services should be held, and so they gathered the people together in a rude brush arbor in the woods, having pine logs for seats and the solid ground for a pulpit. The proposition to raise money for a building to be used for both church and school was hailed with delight. One colored man rived and shaved the largest part of the shingles used upon the roof, and another planed nearly all the lumber used upon the outside of the building. Others fulfilled their pledges to give labor, and on the 1st of November, 1872, the house was dedicated; but the church of seven adult members was not organized until the following March. Present membership, 30.

CARROLLTON, LA.—This church was organized in the latter part of 1872, and in 1874 a church building was consecrated to God. This building was burned and the church became extinct.

Churches were also organized this year at BELMONT, GA., and LA FOUCHE, LA.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.—Union Church was organized in 1874 to meet the growing need of a congenial Christian home for the young people receiving their education here, many of whom had been led to Christ since entering school. The church is organized upon a very simple basis, bound together by a plain evangelical covenant, and has gathered into its fold representatives of nearly every Christian denomination. In 1876 it enjoyed an unusual work of grace, in which at least 20 found the Lord. In 1878 the pastor writes: "A deep solemnity has pervaded the school since the opening of the term, and every week some have been coming to Christ. In 1879 the alumni of the University numbered 52, of whom at graduation 50 were professing Christians. With the exception of three who were then pursuing a higher course of study and one who had died, they were all doing active work for the Master among their own people. This church received large accessions in 1881, 23 having joined. A revival prevailed for the last five months of the school year, during which more than 50 persons were converted, some of whom united with churches at their homes. In 1881 about 75 members of the church were engaged in teaching summer schools. Present membership, 100.

GOLDING'S GROVE, OR MIDWAY, GA.—Organized July 27, 1874, with 103 members. This new organization was composed largely of the former colored members of the old Midway Church, formed in 1752, who emigrated with their pastor first from Dorchester, England, to Dorchester, Mass., thence to Dorchester, S. C., and finally to Midway. The white members abandoned their plantations, which were largely sold to their former slaves. Many of these slaves had been members of this old church, and it was from these 103 members that the call came to be organized into a church by themselves. Rev. Floyd Snelson, of Andersonville, became their pastor, taking with him the little group of Christians already under his pastoral care. The next year 40 persons were received, most of them young men and women. This church has increased each year in membership. In 1876 it received 62 members, and that year a church building costing $2,000 was commenced, which was finished in 1882. Present membership, 293.

WOODVILLE, GA.—Organized in 1874. In 1877 the pastor writes: "The church was crowded both morning and night. Some people came over 7 miles to worship with us. At the night meeting over 40 came forward for prayer. This year the church purchased a bell and an organ. In 1878, 28 united, mostly from the Sunday-school. The American Missionary Association built a neat little parsonage. In 1879 the church was ceiled and painted inside. In 1880 the people, with aid from the Association, raised the meeting-house on a brick basement; the church was repainted and new seats were added. In 1881 a new fence was put round the lot, the meeting-house was improved on the outside, trees were set out, and a lot was purchased at the Five Mile for mission work. Present membership, 65.

KYMULGA, ALA. (or Kingston), ALABAMA FURNACE and THE COVE.—These churches were formed in the summer of 1874 by the efforts of Mr. H. E. Brown, with the aid of five theological students from Talladega College. They also built three meeting-houses and held a series of union revival meetings, in which 80 persons were hopefully converted. These houses were worth each from $400 to $600. The pastors of these churches have been students in the Theological Department of Talladega College. Present membership, 42.

RALEIGH, N. C.—Organized in 1874 with 11 members. The next year there was a revival of wonderful power, the whole number professing interest in Christ being 80; 38 joined the church. In 1878, during a revival, 20 were received, and in 1880, 21. Present membership, 64.

LOUISVILLE, GA.—The church at Louisville, in the suburbs of Savannah, was organized in 1874. Its house of worship was blown down in a gale that swept over the city, and has not been rebuilt. Present membership, 17.

LAKE PEIGNEUR, LA.—Here Rev. Wm. Butler, with great self-denial and faithfulness, built up a church of 60 members at the organization. By the labor of his hands he supports his family, and with the zeal of an evangelist preaches to his people, all of whom are very poor and able to contribute but a pittance toward his support. Present membership, 40.

HELENA, TEXAS.—Organized in 1874. It has its own house of worship, which accommodates a school. Its present pastor has been with the church since its organization. Present membership, 49.

ANNISTON, ALA.—Organized May, 23, 1875. The Iron Company gave a lot on the main street of the town, and furnished the lumber and nails for the meeting-house. There was at the time no other meeting-house and no other church organization in the place. In 1878 there were 21 conversions during the summer, and in 1879, 22. Present membership, 63.

CHILDERSBURG, ALA.—Organized Oct. 25, 1874. A frame church building was erected the same year, which was afterward burned on account of the temperance preaching of the pastor. A brick house of worship has since been built. Present membership, 56.

ORANGEBURG, S. C.—A church was also organized this year at Orangeburg, S. C. Present membership, 18.

FLORENCE, ALA.—Organized in 1876. The next year they obtained possession of a lot. Nov. 23, 1880, a new church edifice was dedicated. Fifty of the best white citizens of the place were present. This house is 25 × 40 ft., with brick foundation, a steep roof and a little belfry. It is well painted on the outside and ceiled on the inside with varnished yellow pine. Total cost, $950. At its dedication fifty white persons were present, among them an ex-Governor of the State, four ministers and as many lawyers. Although the church was nearly emptied by the exodus, it recovered and continued to thrive. Mrs. J. Fowler, of Mendon, Ill., contributed one-third of the total cost; Mr. Gregory gave $300, and the Central Congregational Church, Providence, R. I., $100. In 1881 a neat parsonage was erected. Present membership, 17.

MOBILE, ALA.—Organized April 8, 1876. The formation of the church in Mobile was foreshadowed by a powerful revival in Emerson Institute. This church was originally Presbyterian, formed by the colored members who had belonged to the white Presbyterian churches of the city. The change to the Congregational polity was made by the cheerful concurrence of all parties concerned. Its house of worship, burned along with the Emerson Institute by an incendiary, has recently been replaced by one of the most tasteful church edifices in the city. Present membership, 42.

HOWARD CHURCH, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Organized Oct. 29, 1876, with 11 members. The removal of Fisk University to its new home in Jubilee Hall left vacant the old buildings. Of these Howard Chapel, so commodious for worship, was not long unoccupied. A student of the University, who had been licensed to preach during the previous winter, began a preaching service in the chapel with such good success that it was thought wise to organize a church, which under a stated pastor is gradually taking on life and strength. Present membership, 54.

MARIETTA, GA.—Organized Nov. 12, 1877, with 21 members. This place, of three or four thousand inhabitants, has a large colored population. On June 6, 1880, the new church building was dedicated. It is 24 × 40 ft., well finished and painted and furnished with desks that answer the double purpose of church and school work. The people raised $200 toward the building. Present membership, 27.

A church was also organized during this year at LAWSONVILLE, ALA. (present membership, 26), and one at ABBERVILLE, LA.

SHELBY IRON WORKS, ALA.—Organized Oct. 10, 1878, with 21 members. This was the fifteenth Congregational Church planted by the A. M. A. in the State. It began its existence under most favorable circumstances, most of its members being present or former pupils of the college. All were colored people; two were preparing for the ministry; one had been a student at Oberlin, Ohio; one was for some time a resident of Hartford, Ct., and more recently of Columbus, Ohio, a graduate of the high school there and a former pupil here; one was principal of an academy of ten years' standing at Shelby and a graduate from Talladega. With two or three exceptions, all of them had for some years been trained in our Sunday-schools. The Shelby Iron Company was in hearty sympathy with the movement, built a chapel for church purposes and contributes for its support. Present membership 65.

EAST SAVANNAH, GA.—Organized in 1878. Its house of worship, blown down in a cyclone, was rebuilt, but is now unused.

SCHULENBURG, TEX.—This church was organized in 1878 and merged the following year into the Flatonia church.

WILLIAMSBURG (Whitley Court-house), KY.—Organized in 1878. This church has built a very tasteful house of worship, and under a vigorous pastorate is exerting an extended influence in all that region. Though it is composed almost exclusively of white people it has the open door and hand for colored Christians. It has three out-stations, one of which will soon become a church. Present membership, 30.

MCKEE, KY.—A church was never really organized here, though there was some ministerial service. The movement is now in suspense.

CYPRESS SLASH, GA.—Organized April 15, 1879, with 48 members, 20 by confession of faith and 28 from other churches. The first public meeting was held in the public road. The first two years they held service in a pole house about 28 × 40. But the 10th of April, 1881, a new church building was dedicated, which was completed except the ceiling, comfortably seating 150 persons. Present membership, 73.

LULING, TEX.—Organized in 1879. On the 26th of Feb., 1882, the new church edifice was dedicated. This is 24 × 46 ft., and tastefully built. The lot was given by Mr. T. W. Pierce of Boston, Pres. of the Galveston and San Antonio R. R., and this Association assisted in the building. Present membership, 13.

LASSITER'S MILLS, N. C.—(Named Promised Land Church.) Organized in 1879, and church building erected in 1881. Present membership, 45.

FLATONIA, TEX.—Organized in 1879, with 25 members, church building erected in 1880 and parsonage built in 1881. Present membership, 27.

1880.

In 1880 churches were organized at PETTEANCE, LA., a colony from New Iberia, with 15 members (present membership, 34); at HARANGVILLE (present membership, 27); LITTLE PECAN (present membership, 23); GRAND BAYOU (present membership, 38); BAYOU DU LARGE (present membership, 34); and NAPOLEONVILLE, LA. (present membership, 34); CALEDONIA, MISS. (present membership, 21); the churches at PLEASANT RIDGE (present membership, 6), and NEW RUHAMAH, MISS. (present membership, 14), were taken under the care of the Association.

1881.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Lincoln Memorial Church was organized Jan. 10, 1881. In April the Lord poured out a blessing upon it, the result of which was eight converts. The church doubled its membership the first year. Present membership, 42.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—First CongregationalChurch organized Feb. 28, 1881 with 40 members. The same year the membership reached 69, a lot was purchased and church building erected. Present membership, 79.

EUREKA, KAN.—Second Congregational Church, organized in 1881. The first year of its existence it built a plain house of worship at a cost of $850. Present membership, 9.

Churches were also organized this year at PEKIN (present membership, 17), and TROY, N. C. (present membership, 16), and at LOUISVILLE, KY. The first two have built plain houses of worship, which also serve for school purposes. For the last the A. M. A. bought the house of worship of a white Baptist church, at a cost of $5,000. Present membership, 56.

OAKS (CEDAR CLIFF), N. C.—At this place a church of a dozen members was organized in 1882. A white citizen gave half an acre of land for the church building, which has recently been erected. Present membership, 34.

ATHENS, GA.—Organized April 14, 1882, with 17 members. The public services were held in the African M. E. Church, which was packed with an assembly of 500 people. After the services a royal octavo Bible, printed in Boston in 1822, was presented, also a communion set from Chagrin Falls, O., in good condition, but having been used forty years, and one of Mr. S. D. Smith's American organs. This church has secured a lot and is going on to build. Present membership, 25.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—Organized in 1882. This church has a stated pastor and will soon procure its own house of worship by aid of the A. M. A. Present membership, 15.

1883.

Churches were organized in 1883 at MCLEANSVILLE, N. C., 2d Ch., (membership, 20); KNOXVILLE, TENN. (membership, 24); BIRMINGHAM, ALA. (membership, 17); JACKSON, MISS. (membership, 15); FAYETTEVILLE, ARK. (membership, 11); BELLE PLACE, LA. (membership, 40).

A MISSION HOME.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

Immediately following the organization of the Bureau, Miss Rose Kinney, of Oberlin, O., for many years engaged in the Southern work, and recently located in one of the dark corners of the field, McIntosh, Ga., was detailed for service in the North. She spent about six weeks in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Iowa, addressing ladies' meetings at the General Associations, and with good results. In June the Secretary of the Bureau was present at the State Conferences of Vermont and Maine, and gave information of the work in the field, resulting in the appointment of a State Committee of ladies in Vermont, to secure funds for the support of a missionary. Early in September Miss Anna M. Cahill, for nine years connected with Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., was detailed for special service, and has recently attended a series of meetings in Michigan and Illinois.

It is our purpose thus to bring the work before the ladies whenever and wherever opportunity is given, through different teachers and missionaries whom we may be able to spare temporarily from the field.

Within the year just closed, Sept. 30, the Association has had special aid from ladies North in the support of seven missionaries, as follows:

Ladies of Maine, support of Miss Lunt at Selma, Ala., and Miss Farrington at Wilmington, N. C.	$675 00
Ladies of First and Second Cong. Churches, Oberlin, O., support of Miss Stevenson at Atlanta, Ga.	387 00
Ladies of Illinois, support of Miss Clark at Mobile, Ala.	214 40
Ladies of Wisconsin, support of Miss Jillson at Montgomery, Ala.	254 23
Ladies of Congregational Churches, Chelsea, Mass., support of Mrs. Steele at Chattanooga, Tenn.	488 81
Ladies of Iowa, support of Miss Gerrish at New Orleans, La.	406 45
Total	$2,426 35

In this connection we would mention also that a lady missionary, Miss Clary, at Beaufort, S. C., was sustained to the amount of $300 by the Sunday-school of the Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn.

Supplies in the furnishing of Mission Homes and dormitories have been recently furnished, and there is very marked increase of aid in the furnishing of clothing, both new and second-hand, for the benefit of students who are struggling in the greatest poverty to obtain an education.

While, therefore, but a few months have elapsed since the organization of the Bureau of Woman's Work, its advantage is already manifest.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY.

Rev. Myron Eells writes: The past year has in some respects been one of the darkest of the nine I have been here, yet during no year have I received so many Indians to the church on profession of faith—thirteen. The church here now numbers 34, the average attendance at public worship is 70, at Sabbath-school 51, the amount contributed by the church as a body for benevolent purposes, $77.15, amount contributed for benevolent purposes from church members as individuals, as far as I can report it, $554.81, families under pastoral care, 50. At Dunginess the church numbers 15, the average attendance at public worship is 45, at Sunday-school 35, families under pastoral care 30. Dan Brown, a half-breed, but virtually an Indian, having been brought up with the Indians and always having lived with them, is Superintendent of the Sunday-school.

I made two trips to Dunginess, continuing one of them to Clallam Bay, to preach to the Indians; one trip to Steelacoom to assist in the ordination of Mr. A. T. Burnell, who for a year and a half was school teacher on this reservation; one trip to Forest Grove, Oregon, where is the Indian Industrial Training School for this coast, and one trip to Walla Walla, to attend the annual meeting of our Association, traveling in all, including a few shorter trips mainly for preaching, more than 2,000 miles.

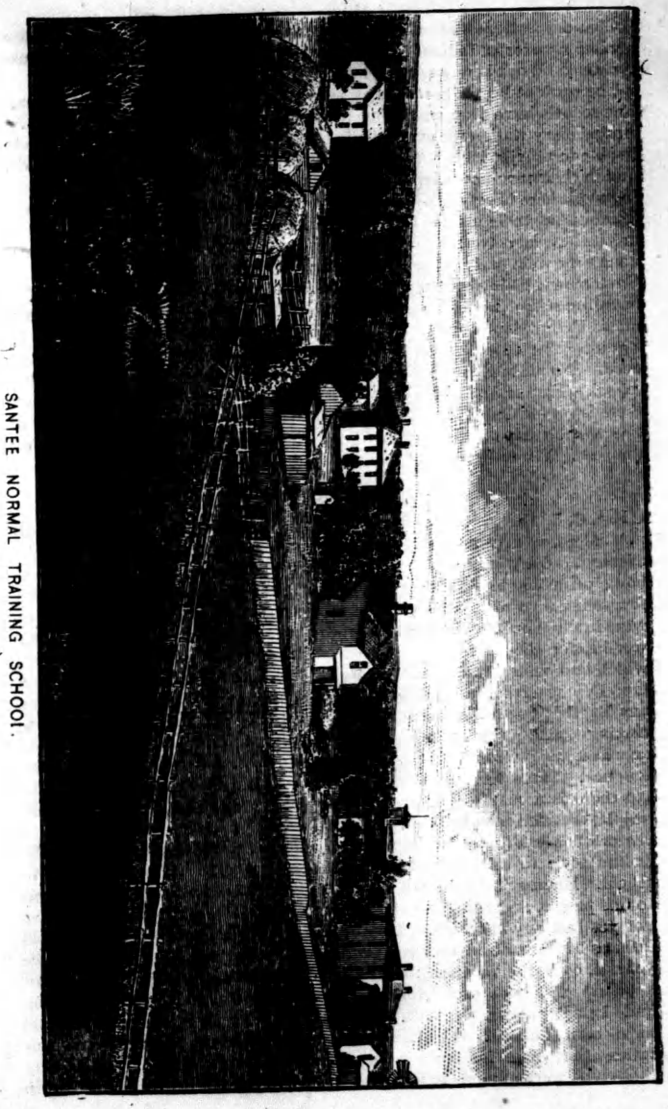
The schools at S'kokomish and Dunginess are supported entirely by the Government. The agent writes that the schools have suffered severely on account of the reduction of salaries, he having been obliged to replace the teachers who left by those less capable, yet the schools have been kept up during the year with a larger attendance than ever before, and the Indians have taken more interest in the education of their children than in former years, as they appreciate the benefits arising therefrom.

DAKOTA MISSION.



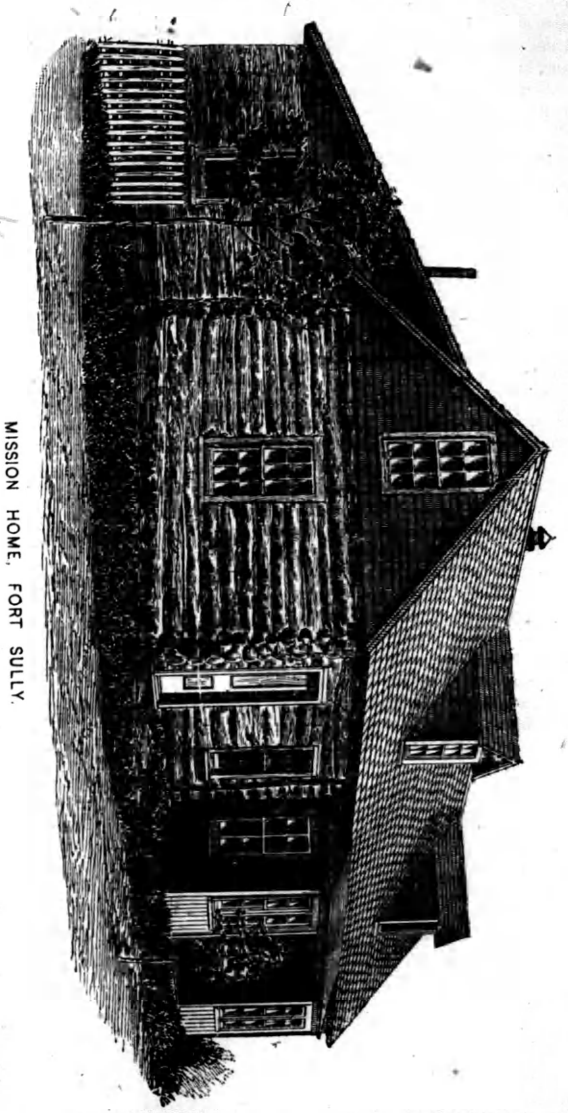
Santee Agency, Nebraska.—Here are two preaching places at which regular Sabbath services are maintained by the natives, and two houses of worship, one of them the normal school, one native pastor with eight catechists or lay preachers. The Pilgrim church numbers 173, 62 men and 111 women. During the year 13 have been added by profession and 6 by letter. The contributions of the church for pastoral support have been $106.60; for missions among the wild Indians, $55.58; for care of sick and incidental expenses, $66.15; by the women's and children's societies for missionary purposes, $66.67; making in all $295.

Fort Sally Station.—From Rev. T. L. Riggs: Our work at Standing Rock promises well. A school has been kept up during the winter and has been well attended. Mr. Edwin Phelps, a native from Sisseton Agency, with his family, is doing good and efficient work. There should be a second station established at once on Grand River, a few miles distant, and we should be ready to occupy other points as opportunity may offer. The valley of the Grand River is likely to be taken up by Indians of Standing Rock Agency as they are ready to settle on individual farms. Sitting Bull is to be located on this stream a few miles east of our present station. He will have more or less of a following.

Of the work in connection with the Cheyenne River Agency the newest is that on Cherry Creek, where some 800 Indians, wholly wild as yet, are gathered and live after their Indian custom in tents that can be struck and moved away at a moment's notice. Since the 1st of May I have had regular work done at this point. A large tent was made and found place in the camp as school tent. Two native workers have spent the summer there. This is School Cheyenne River No. 3. Everything is in a state of wildness, and only by keeping no roll of names could the children be induced to return from day to day even for a short time. This is a field of great promise and should be attended to at once. I had hoped before this to hear of some action of the Executive Committee enabling me to build at this point and others on the Cheyenne River.

The work at Cheyenne River No. 1 is supported by the native missionary society. Rev. Isaac Renville, their missionary, has been on the field over three years. The Indians there are farming and stock raising on a moderate scale. His school work has given good satisfaction.

Cheyenne River No. 2 is comparatively a new effort, and has not met with very great success. Last winter I bought an old log house and put a native helper to work in the Two Kettle village.



SANTEE NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL.

Chautier Bottom Station has been occupied for several years past, but the greater number of Indians formerly here have moved away and the house remains. Work here was done by David Lee for three months.

The work at Peoria Bottom has been carried on quietly during the year. The schools have been small, but attendance improving in regularity. As a missionary station for evangelistic effort the work here is so advanced as to be able to provide largely for itself. Our Indians have the missionary spirit, and in their turn now carry the Gospel to others. Still, careful oversight of the work here is very needful. Many of the original homestead takers have relinquished their claims to white men—perhaps not more than half the original twenty-five still hold to their land. Those who do remain have done very well, and will be able to make final proof and receive from the Government their patents this Fall. I would urge the establishment of a boarding-school here as speedily as possible. A school such as this would afford the guidance and help needed by the native Christians here, and be a grand point of collection from the out-stations, meeting a very pressing need. No place I know of can offer so many advantages as this for such a school. I am not speaking in antagonism to the Santee school. The work there is very different, and more advanced in many lines. Both are needed. The membership of the Shiloh Church is 29, 8 having being added during the year. The contributions have amounted to $199.24.

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.

Rev. C. L. Hall, the missionary, writes: During all the year the Sabbath meetings were kept up morning and afternoon and most of the time in the evening. On Wednesday afternoon I visited the sick and did house to house preaching in the Indian village, and from November to April taught a few young men who came each evening to school. The Sabbath exercises were in three or four different languages each Sabbath, first preaching and worship for the Gros Ventres and Mandans in the Gros Ventre language, which both understand, at eleven an English Bible class, in the afternoon a few Rees received instruction in the Ree tongue, and then in the evening any English, Gros Ventres or Rees who could be got out again listened to singing and the word of God. Sometimes traveling Sioux or Dakotas would be present and hear something in their tongues. There have been no additions to the church during the year, but there is a manifest increase of respect and friendship for us, and the people, especially the men, are more industrious than ever before. One of the chiefs has of his own accord sometimes "cried the village" in the Indian style to call the people to Christian worship and the children to school. Having just returned from a visit to the Crows, who are cousins to this people, and the band of 200 Gros Ventres at Fort Buford, who have not yet had any instruction, I appreciate the great advance the Berthold Indians have made in civilized pursuits and manners. During the whole year, except the vacation months of June and July, Miss E. L. Ward kept up a school each forenoon, and taught sewing and knitting and bread making, or visited the people. At other agencies scholars have been induced to attend school by giving them Government rations, but here no such inducement has been offered, so that only those who were anxious to learn for the sake of the good they could see in it have attended. During the year I made two trips to Devil's Lake to aid and encourage the native missionary there and his people. The native society have become so much interested in that field that they support the effort there entirely themselves, and the people there are helping to support their own work.

SISSETON AGENCY.

The Good Will Mission school reports 35 boarding pupils and a few day scholars. As a general thing the scholars made fair progress. The girls excelled the boys because they heard English while engaged in sewing and house work, whereas the boys had not this advantage, having only an Indian woman to care for them in their boarding-hall. We found excellent homes for three of our pupils, two girls and one boy, all of whom are doing well. One of these came home on a visit recently, and had evidently made marked improvement in every respect. The other girl through her letters shows great advancement in ideas. The boy is said to be learning English rapidly. A number of others were sent to the Training School at Santee Agency. We consider the plan of placing the pupils after some knowledge of English has been obtained and other training received, in good white families a most excellent thing, and we think the Government should make provision for a large number to be cared for in this way. In the school-room two teachers were engaged with the scholars, having a morning and a short afternoon session.

The matron writes that of the twelve girls under her care nine learned to make very good light bread, considering that the flour was sometimes quite poor. Four of them made pies and other good things. All received instruction in other branches of housework, as also in sewing, and most of them made creditable improvement. On the last day of school a table was shown bearing their various handiwork—bread, pies, cookies, as also garments of various kinds and mittens the girls had knitted. All were marked with the name of the makers. The exercises on that day were very interesting and showed the patient drill that had been given the pupils.

The girls had special instruction given them in the Bible on the Sabbath besides what they received in the Sunday-school, and all were trained to daily praise the Lord with song and prayer and reading of the Word.

COMPARISON WITH PREVIOUS YEAR.—The work of the previous year (1881 to 1882) was by far the largest we had ever done. The same superlative applies to the year just closed. Our statistical table for that year contained the names of fifteen schools, with a total enrollment for the year of 2,567 pupils. This table shows 19 schools, with an aggregate enrollment of 2,823. The total number of months during which schools were sustained was in that year 153; in this year, 187. Our teachers during that year numbered 31, 11 being Chinese; this year, 41, 14 being Chinese. The aggregate number of months of service by our teachers was then 356; the past year, 423. The aggregate average attendance was in that year 401; in this, 438. We reported last year 156 as professing to have ceased from idol worship, and 106 as giving evidence of conversion; this year we report 175 and 121. But these numbers represent only those who were in attendance during August, or during the last month of each school—not by any means the total number of whom we cherish the hope that they are believers. I am obliged to send this statement before all the returns upon which it should be based have come to hand, but I shall be disappointed if we do not find that more than forty have professed conversion during the past year, making the total number who have seemed to us to turn to Christ from the commencement of our work exceed 400. These are scattered now very widely over the United States and in China. We hear of many of them as doing good work for the Master and for the salvation of their countrymen; and those of whom we can hear nothing we commit in faith to the Great Shepherd's tender care.

THE FINANCES.—The expense of this work for the past year has been as follows: For salaries, $8,697.20; for rent of mission houses, $2,409; for incidental expenses, including fuel, lights, traveling expenses of Superintendent and helpers, fitting up and furnishing new mission houses, printing annual reports, etc., etc., $791.85. Total, $11,898.05. The resources have been: Appropriation by parent society, $7,000; receipts to treasury and auxiliary, viz.: from its own auxiliary local missions, $735.05; from churches, $1,003.60; from donations by individuals and firms, $2,613, and from Eastern friends, $512. Total, $4,863. Total resources, $11,863. It should be added that this statement is necessarily made before the account of the auxiliary (the California Chinese Mission) is closed, and that we have hope of some further contributions, sufficient to set the balance on the right side. The amount raised by the auxiliary last year was $3,582.30. The increase has been nearly 37 per cent. The most gratifying elements in this increase are in the offerings of the churches and of our Chinese brethren. The latter cannot now be stated exactly, but it is very considerable. The former is from $532.85 in '81-'82 to $1,003.60 in '82-'83; and the number of churches contributing has doubled, rising from 15 to 30.

SERMON.

LOSING AND SAVING OURSELVES.

BY REV. J. L. WITHROW, D. D.

Luke ix., 24; "But whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it."

If I mistake not these words of Christ, concerning losing and saving ourselves, contain a surprising prediction, an established truth, and a standing promise. At first view we see,

I. A surprising prediction. So it sounds when memory summons from history the appearance of Him who uttered these august words, "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." Is it the monarch of a mighty realm, or the captain of serried hosts, who thus proclaims recompense and immortality to his subjects or soldiers, assuring them that no one who shall fall in his service will fail of finding all he loses, even to his life? Instead of such an imposing personage being the speaker there rises out of history the form of a Galilean peasant. The son of a carpenter speaks, who was until lately an unheard-of citizen of the despised town of Nazareth. He is still without standing in any high circle. For his school life, if he had any, was in such an obscure grade that, when spiteful critics were confounded by His grace and force of speech, they could taunt him with the inquiry: "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" It is this unschooled Galilean who stands before us. And he stands more empty-handed than the haughty scoffers of the temple would make believe he was empty-headed. He has neither a sword nor a soldier at His command. He owns neither a plate nor a pillow nor a place whereon to lay his head. The few followers that call Him Master are men as poor as they are obscure. We have heard in modern times, through the tricky source of Oriental tradition, that He was in person of graceful form, commanding presence and dignified speech. But consulting what to us is more trustworthy authority, we hear He was "as a root out of a dry ground, without form and comeliness;" and when one saw Him there was nothing in Him that one should desire Him. He was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief;" so much so, that it has always been a question whether He ever smiled.

And yet it is this young peasant of thirty and three, or less, thus destitute of every element of authority that any can see; lacking the lowest degree of distinction that we depend on for confidence and courage in the moment of self-assertion; it is such an one who boldly stands forth in the face of the sun, and says: "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." In appearance He was certainly the last person from whom such a prediction would signify anything. And the surprise increases as we recall the age and ears which He addressed. It was a military age. The world had great men in it. Birth counted for all that it ever was worth. A Cæsar might have said, "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall save it," and believing ears would have hearkened and heard him hopefully. But Christ's words fell on most unfriendly ears; of those who not only had no confidence in His pretensions, but despised His claims. He addressed a prejudice which had been impacting for centuries; a prejudice which believed there could be no national life but from Abraham, no wisdom but from Moses, and no skill of government as great as they sung of in their great king. "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man." "We know that God spoke by Moses, as for this fellow we know not whence he is," so they said when the Lord was trying to win them to discipleship. Have we ever comprehended the force of these sad words of the Gospel: "He came unto His own, and His own received him not"? His own, who had been from the foundation of the world pledged to him, as the earnest of His ultimate dominion over all, to these, His own, He came and they received Him not! The loneliness of Christ has been the theme of many a sweet sermon ever since the Christian preacher began to particularize the pains of His sacrifice and the cost of His mission among men. But we may doubt if ever the most graphic writer has described it, or the most eloquent orator uttered it, just as it was, when all the world was against Him, when it was not a mere supercilious despite that was shown, but a heated hatred, which from the hour when Herod sought the young child's life to destroy it, until the morning when, in chorus, all Jerusalem cried: "Away with Him! Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" there was no hour when conspiracies were not aiming to catch him and rulers to kill Him. And yet, while thus beset by day and night, as unbefriended as man could be, a picture of weakness surrounded and assailed by seemingly invincible strength, behold Him stand up and say: "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." For a moment we are of the mind of His brothers and sisters, who said He was mad. Certainly it was an astounding prediction, in the circumstances.

And still more is this a surprising prediction when we note the unqualified terms of its expression. Not only the self-poise and majestic serenity excite our surprise, but also the sweep of the assertion. Jesus knew as well as we do, both by authority of ancient Scripture and by observation, that "all a man hath will he give for his life." The words He spake in the same breath with the text were to those whose peril lay in over-serving and saving "the life that now is;" "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it." That is what He saw men bent on, scheming for ascendancy in society, toiling for temporal riches, battling for transient fame, and planning for a future of ease. And yet into this din and struggle for life, as if Lord of it all, this lonesome leader of a few forlorn followers, fenced about with everything that was forbidding, calls out in omnipotent accents: "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall find it." He did not speak to the timid, the trimmer nor the time-server, who might venture something without investing very much in His service. Jesus asked for everything, and predicted everything as a recompense. To those who would leave all and follow Him, to those who would take up their cross daily and follow Him, to those who would, if need be, hate father and mother for Christ's sake, or love them less than Him, to such as thus would deprive and peel themselves of whatever they counted dear unto them, He as royally promised a full reward as He could have done if all crowns had been then on his head, and all nations bending at his knees: "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it."

The Master was not discussing slight services, but entire sacrifice. He was speaking in sight of the rising cloud of public displeasure, which would soon break, thus: "The Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected by the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be slain and be raised the third day." And now in the shadow of this coming catastrophe, when more than any human captain ever expected every man to do his duty, He said to all, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily and follow me." "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." As the bugle sounded and the noble six hundred at Balaklava struck a canter "into the valley of death" their intrepid leader, seeing in his fears the slaughter which followed, said, bitterly: "Somebody has blundered." He knew it was not the thing to do. But when the Captain of our salvation sounded the advance for His followers His eye swept beyond conflicts, suffering and sacrifice to the sweet scenes of smiling peace, and to the hour of the proclamation: "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ, and He shall reign forever and ever."

And so I would we might deeply feel that Christ's words in our text were not uttered in the cool and colorless way in which a lazy elocution sometimes repeats them. They tremble with intensity of meaning. They breathe a soul which felt itself strong enough to carry the world with it. They pierce as a shaft of light through every vicissitude of danger and valley of the shadow of death through which His followers have passed and are to pass, and glowingly predict the day when, in the New Jerusalem, Jesus shall say to all the saved: "Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations." "And I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed me. That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones." Wonderful, wonderful prediction! But beyond the prediction we may pass to consider the text as

II. An established truth. What the Lord said should occur has come to pass in all cases. The call to consecration and sacrifice for His sake has standing behind it in the verse, as a sounding board, this solemn judgment against selfishness: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it." Because this warning has not been heeded, as it was intended, history is a great cemetery of come-to-nothings. The multitude of the dead have died to all that is enduring and desirable. Died ingloriously while dreaming of grasping the greatest good. The mass comes to nothing where each is for himself. The sorcery of the serpent still inducing us, as Eve in Eden was induced to brook no prohibition, but to have all or nothing, we strive for all and finally fail of everything. Things are so, and they were meant to be so, that isolation swarms with invisible enemies of man. Hermit nations degenerate. Individuals who under any inducements imitate them suffer the same. Self-glorification and self-gratification encounter in every act and indulgence the displeasure of Him who still thunders it, as on Sinai: "Thou shalt have no other gods before Me." Where are they whose principal remembrance in history is that they lived for their name? The Greek, who conquered the world, and then cried because there were no more worlds to conquer—what remains of him but in the school-boy's speech? Of the supremely selfish monarchs and monarchies which beforetime cut the largest figure and overlaid the maps, modern times treat them with little more regard than a departed dream. Of the swarming populations of the dead past how painfully few there were who did not perish with their bones!

Because they knew not, or did not act as if they knew, that selfishness is as certain to destroy what it seeks to save as a cancer is to kill. Is it the Epicurean philosophy or practice? Then what have the lascivious and luxuriant learned, but that their indulgence was eating and drinking the ingredients of death?

Nature chooses to limit even the number of banquets and bumpers of which one may partake! And to pass her permission is to find, that for pleasing the appetite an hour, the bill of cost in pains will take months to pay. However free we may be to direct our steps and shape our destiny there is a determining supremacy which makes it invariably sure that such as shape their destiny inward soon reach the vanishing point. It is a significant, and ought to be an instructive fact, that nowhere in all the ages on all this old earth was there erected a monument to memorialize a money-maker. Selfish as human nature may be at heart, and hot as may be its zeal to cover in all it can in the competitions of life, yet in the lull of the contest, let alone of the tempter long enough to look at itself in the glass of others' greed, it despises that image. Each of us has an inner eye which sees the ugliness of selfishness.

The admonition of the Master may not be heeded now, no matter how earnestly repeated. The wild rage there is for wealth, the way that wits are made to do the work of hands, our vulgar vanity of display—these and what not work together to nourish the larger I, and the little you. In our deluge of riches, which, as the waters of Noah's deluge, that came not only from above, but broke from the fountains beneath, now pours on us in multiplying seasons of plenty from sky, and field, and wells, and mines—in this deluge of riches which thus rolls in shining floods from sea to sea it may seem misspent breath to say a word to those of the favorites of fortune who are accumulating and consigning all to self. Nevertheless it ought to be told those who would thus "gain the whole world" that however grateful it may now be to sit in glittering galleries of the play-house, and be sung to as "gods of gold," the time hastens when in the gloom of their dying hour a dark presence may point his bony fingers to their bags of gold and grimly propose this terrific trade: "How much will you give in exchange for your soul?" And since a bargain of such exchange has never been announced, because "the redemption of the soul is precious," and the power of money to purchase the elixir of immortality is as vain as for the veriest pauper to talk of buying palaces, therefore the sad answer of the utterly selfish, which at dying they must make to death, is, "We have nothing to give in exchange for our soul": "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it."

But whosoever will lose his life for Christ's sake shall find it, and this is the certainly established truth. It has been coming to pass through more than eighteen centuries. It has occurred wherever the test has been made. The proof of it is manifold, and has been multiplying from the hour when the first apostles left all and followed Him to the last follower, who on call counted not His life dear unto Him in eager imitation of the great apostle, who affirmed: "What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ." In comparing successes in life we should take note of several things which contribute to give one an advantage of the other—as on the race-course the weight of the riders is carefully counted. Adopting this rule now, it may be stoutly asserted that, considering the materials which have been matched in the contests for success in life, and counting the aids and advantages enjoyed by each toward achieving his ends, they who have devoted all they were and could do, to be Christ's on demand, have secured a success which fully justifies His words: "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall find it."

Extended illustrations are unnecessary. A swift survey of only a few facts of history will suffice. As when we array Roman emperors on the one side, and Christ's apostles on the other, the case appears. Over the imperial line wave the conquering eagles whose wings sweep the world around. The throne of the Cæsars rests on ruins of a republic whose incomputable and corrupting riches sunk it like a millstone in the mire. But still the wealth remained, so that the treasury of the Empire under Nero was as a central reservoir into which flowed the wealth of the earth. There stands his Golden House, "which is like a city in size." Through its colonnades of costly marbles a mile in length our memory looks upon it. Within its vestibule towers the statue of the Emperor himself standing more than a hundred feet skyward, but not heavenward. The halls are paved with gold. The walls glitter with precious stones. Sleeping rooms are finished on every side in mother-of-pearl, and play rainbow colors over the royal occupants. Banqueting halls be wilder with their extravagance all but those whose god is their gastronomic selves. Bathers lounge in golden baths, while slaves from the rising to the setting sun swarm around these "gods of gold," dividing their devotion between work and worship. Meanwhile senates enact the will of the Emperor to the iota; and soldiers, as slaves, hasten at the call of the sovereign, and seek the hottest centre of the fight, happy if the sacrifice of their lives may please his lightest caprice.

And what one emperor is, all are, as history reports them. Had ever men such opportunity? Had ever men more ability? They were not barbaric, but learned in laws, languages and arts. They were not, as some monarchs of later times have been, the washed-out weakness of an ancestry of social sinners, who left nothing but flabbiness for their offspring after them. These whom we look at in association with Christ's Apostles were stalwart specimens of a sturdy ancestry. They held the world in their grip, and for anything that eye of man at that time could see they ought to have transmitted it to endless generations of Cæsar's sons.

But there comes on the scene a few fishermen, a physician, a wayside money-broker and a few other brethren of like low estate, to whom is joined by and by a tent-maker of Tarsus. No one knows them nor cares for them. They have a new shibboleth on their tongue, talking of one Jesus and the resurrection. But what matters this to those who reside and reign in the Seven-hilled City? They have, as fanatics do, made a local excitement, but that is where agitations are chronic. So the rulers and the synagogue and the Senate say, it matters not. Nevertheless, the air thickens with news of them! They are here and there and everywhere. Instead of accumulating elements and equipments of a kind that the world has depended on, the report goes that when their leader sent them out to find followers, He said: "Take nothing for your journey, neither staves nor scrip, neither bread, neither money, neither have two coats apiece; and as ye go preach, saying, the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand. Tell Nero and his empire that now the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand. The little stone cut out of the mountain in Daniel's day has been rolling on and swelling as it rolled, until now whosoever falleth on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall it will grind him to powder." And see how it all came out. As silently as sappers and miners, digging under the enemies' works and walls, these indigent talkers, telling the story of their Lord's love and sacrifice to little companies of the poor and heart-sore, slowly undermined the throne of Cæsar. What they said was as the dropping of water, but it sunk into the human heart so deep that it came forth again, "springing up into eternal life." After them, in the places wherein they preached their Gospel, men saw flowers of the fairest graces grow. The demons which were raging and ravaging the world when Christ was born began to be less heard of, as His Apostles cast them out in His name. One by one the works of darkness were carried, and the sword of the Spirit won the day, until a defeated emperor with his latest breath confessed that the Galilean had conquered—which he had indeed!

For where is Rome now but in relics and echoes? Where are her emperors but in ashes and ignominy? Her languages dead, her glory departed, and all the grace of the fashion of her perished forever.

But every Apostle of Christ lives on the pages of an imperishable Book. They did serve and suffer unto death. But that was a death unto life, as it had been promised, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." And so with their departure as martyrs they began their return as masters and leaders among men! They were not naturally great men. They had, with one exception, no seminary learning. They were not in the line of illustrious lineage. And yet what they said, did and wrote, has shaken, shaped and saved the world beyond the power of words to depict.

Other great sufferers, especially such as are enrolled on the list of Christian martyrs and missionaries, have saved their lives by losing them for Christ. Christianity is not the only cause for which martyrdom has been given. Persecutions have fallen on others than disciples of Jesus Christ. Why did it not result in all cases as it has with the martyrs of Christendom, wherein "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church?" Christianity has not spread and prevailed because it has been persecuted, but it has been persecuted because it has prevailed. And its martyrs, how they do live! Live in all the light which makes Europe and America, Asia and Africa, with the isles of the sea, savingly luminous. Live in how many languages which they reduced from lawless tattle to rules of syntax and prosody. Live in the enlightened intelligence, the social elevation, the humanities and the holiness of those who from gross darkness were led by them into the marvelous light. Not here or now may the roll of martyrs and missionaries be called. But can't you hear it, by anticipation, in that day when He shall make up his jewels?

Moreover we may fairly add this, as a third part of the established truth, that those who have done their best for Him, though it was not the sacrifice that others made, never failed of their reward. A little goes a long way when lovingly done for Jesus. What is the difference to Him whether it be a mite or much? Amounts count in His estimates only as they correspond with ability and indicate love. The rich in their opulence casting much into the treasury, and the widow, as her all, casting in two mites, received His blessing in inverse ratio of their contributions only because she bestowed the scanty coin from the same motive as the woman in Simon's house bathed His feet with her tears.

Five loaves and a few little fishes—if these are all that any "lad" here hath to give, will, under the breath of His blessing, swell to a supply sufficient to feed as many thousands. It is in Him that the closing song of the Son of Jesse sees "an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains, the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon." A harvest field waving like the forests of Lebanon, and all this the result of a handful of sowing in tears, in trials, in labors and love-gifts—such a thing since the beginning of the world, hath never been known, nor will be, except where "the Sower soweth the Word." Because He knew by His omniscience what the harvest in the end of the world would be, He majestically affirmed: "He that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad!" But from a handful for Him how great have been the returns! Two hands, moved by a heart, enter some seething community where sin and death and idolatry are in full dominion. Months and years of preparatory work, then years on years of beating the air with the sounds of an unwritten tongue; prayers and tears and patience while seeing souls still perishing and refusing the cup of salvation. Ten years, twenty years, thirty years, and yet not a heathen humbled in belief and obedience to Christ! Faith staggers and unbelief scoffs at such impotence attempting to turn the heart of a nation from its fond, hereditary faiths, to faith in a crucified peasant of Galilee, now nearly twenty centuries dead! At last a change comes, a convert is counted, and he finds his brother and brings him to Jesus. Then there are two, and, claiming the promise of the New Testament prayer-meeting, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in their midst," this brace of believers, embracing the promises, begin to move the hand that moves the world; and presently, as it has been once in the Pacific Islands, and later in India, and now is going on in scores of mission fields, souls "come as clouds and as doves to their windows."

It has ever been made a reproach that Christ's Church is composed mostly of the poor—that few millionaires are church members. You have heard it said, with high disdain, that men of science are not believers—that men who are famous in statecraft are not found in the churches; but that it is the lower circles of social life, the less possessed of worldly goods and the unlearned, who accept the doctrines and enroll themselves as disciples of Christ.

"There are three answers which ought to be ready for those who vaunt this objection to the body of Christ. First, that however true the statement might have been in former times, it is much less true now, and growing still less with every roll of the earth around the sun. Second, that as a criticism it is false to-day to an extent which they do not dream who flippantly make it. But, third, let the charge hold as strong as any one desires, and what does it prove but this; that without the wise and great and noble, Christ and His humble ones have turned the world upside down. Long ago His disciples were called Christians in contempt, "the offscouring" of all things, "unlearned and ignorant men," "fellows," and what not. The lofty scorn of the phylacteried Pharisee and the withering contempt of the Roman patrician spent their force to the full on the "little flock" of first followers, because they came from the serving and slave classes of society. No matter, these ignominious underlings overturned, and with Him will "overturn and overturn until He comes whose right it is!"

And now we have no time, though we have great interest, for the third and other matter of the text. That it is

III. A standing promise that "whosoever will lose his life for my sake, the same shall save it." These words are good just now for all that ever they were, as sure as His "arm is not shortened that it cannot save." As the day of miracle, so the day of martyrdom, is over. The call does not come for Christians here to stand at the stake. Nobody thirsts for our blood because of our belief. But somebody may need our life all the same. Not the mere odds and ends of it; not the dregs of the cup of plenty after our indulgence is satiated; not the cold pieces, which, to be a little better than Dives, we may give at the back gate to poor Lazarus lying dying without—not these! It is no such easy overspillings of our abundance as this that may claim the promise of the text; but cheerful and unsparing sacrifice. And such sacrifice is being given as ever it has been. There is not just one, but, thank God, there is many an one, opposite to whose gifts in the book of life He now writes, as He did before, "she of her penury"! The "good and faithful servants" are not fewer, they are more than ever they were. It falsifies facts as it defames the work of the Divine Spirit to select some single plant that is pining and then publish that the garden of the Lord is dying of drought. If the water flows slower and in a thinner stream from the house faucet, who cries out that the springs of the earth and the rains of heaven have failed? Rather the word goes round, how our town is growing! It may not be the failing sources, but the multiplying faucets, that account for the slackening flow in certain cases. This wisdom of the children of this world the children of light ought to have, when they happen to find that the percentage of increase to certain venerable institutions of Christian benevolence has not grown as population and prosperity have. They forget to count how many new faucets are set flowing every year with the water of life! Nay, the truth is that as never before people are letting go for the Son of God that which represents their life. And well they may, and we may encourage ourselves in it. For amid uncertainties this alone is certain, that there is no man that hath left houses or land, or wife or children, for the Son of Man's sake, but he will receive a hundredfold more in this life, and in the world to come life everlasting.

Who says investments are difficult to make safe, and that just now everything on the list is declining? Let us tell him, and tell each other, to try larger investments in His securities, which never passed their dividend and never defaulted their interest.

You must have met with the account of a person in high life in Russia who, for political offenses, had all his property confiscated and sentence of banishment passed on him. One thing of all his wealth he was able to save—a pearl of peerless quality and fabulous cost. He seized it, he hid it, he set all his wits to its concealment, and was able to get away with it unobserved. And in the distant land, in the depth of his privations and debasement, he thought of it waking and dreamed of it sleeping. One day it would bring him a great price when he might safely market it. That time came. With what unspeakable interest he took it from its hiding place! With what choking eagerness he opened one after another of the coverings, until his eyes fell on it—when lo! it was but a pinch of quick lime. The unfriendly atmosphere had eaten it up, and it was back to its original element—quick lime!

You have certainly heard of another man, of whom a story was told in parable. He found a pearl—one of such great price that he went and sold all that he had and bought it. Thinking of the poor exile and his pearl, we hear the echo of Cardinal Wolsey's cry at his fall from favor: "Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness." Then hear the while a voice saying: "So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God." But consider the man in the parable who parted with all he had to buy his pearl, and out of the unseen comes a multitude of those who have done the same; who not only approve of his wisdom, but sanction the wisdom of the advice of our leader and Lord where He said: "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal; for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MISSIONARIES, ordained and lay, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers and teachers here and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

4. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS—to purchase farm implements, plows, harrows and cultivators; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanic arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tin-ners, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms with sewing and knitting materials.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY.

This magazine will be sent, gratuitously, if desired, to the Missionaries of the Association; to Life Members; to all clergymen who take up collections for the Association; to Superintendents of Sabbath-schools; to College Libraries; to Theological Seminaries; to Societies of Inquiry on Missions; and to every donor who does not prefer to take it as a subscriber, and contributes in a year not less than five dollars.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

relating to the Association should be addressed to Rev. M. E. STRIEBY, D.D., Corresponding Secretary, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Editor of the "American Missionary," to Rev. G. D. Pike, D.D., at the New York office; letters for the Bureau of Woman's Work to Miss D. E. Emerson, at the New York office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. HUBBARD, Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. WOODWORTH, D.D., 21 Congregational House, Boston, Mass; Rev. JAMES POWELL, 112 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution).

AUXILIARIES.

Any number of persons desirous of promoting the interests of the Association may often do so effectually by forming auxiliaries, and appointing committees to increase the number of members and present the wants of the Association to every Christian in their neighborhood. Christian women may aid us in this way by co-operation with their brethren, or by forming auxiliaries themselves.

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give the full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I BEQUEATH to my executor (or executors) the sum of —— dollars, in trust to pay the same in —— days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some States three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A. B.), as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY

is published monthly at 56 Reade Street. Terms, Fifty Cents per year, payable in advance.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November; at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committe e, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows :

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with, or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers, and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable, and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised, or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same ; provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts ; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth ; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows :

SEC. 1. Section four of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows :

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise, or bequest subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first ; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month at four o'clock P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee ; the call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II —OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each :

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee at its regular meeting every month such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various standing committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures, viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ARTICLE IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1.) Finance. (2.) Southern Work. (3.) Indian and Chinese Work. (4.) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

THIRTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Rev. A. H. Plumb, D. D., gave an address on "The Problem of Missions to Christianize Christendom, in order that the Pagan Nations, as such, may be Converted to Christ before they are Converted to Infidelity."

Rev. Dr. Powell presented the following minute, which, by a unanimous vote, was adopted.

We desire to express, and to have placed on record, our heartfelt thanks to the good people of Salem and vicinity, who have so kindly given the generous hospitality of their homes to us who have been in attendance at this, the thirty-eighth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association. We have come from the North and the South, the East and the West, sat down at their tables, and been made to feel that we were heartily welcome; also to the Congregational churches of Salem for the use of their houses of worship. To the Rev. Dr. Atwood and Rev. De Witt S. Clark, and the able Committee of gentlemen associated with them, we are under special obligations for their gifts of time, money and personal service that entered into their preparation for our coming and their providing for us while here. Nor would we forget the boys, whose willing feet and hands have been subject to our call.

We make grateful mention of the kindness of Mr. S. F. Smith, Supt. of the Salem District of the N. E. Telephone Company, for putting a telephone in the Tabernacle for our special use; to Mr. J. F. Dalton, the Postmaster, for furnishing us with special mail facilities; and to the County Commissioners for the privileges of public buildings.

We also desire to express our indebtedness to Mr. Theodore Emerson, who has led us in song at our business sessions, and to the choirs whose voices have lifted us in praise in the services at eventime; and last, though not least, to the press for furnishing the public with a daily report of our proceedings.

Rev. Dr. Atwood, on behalf of the people of Salem, responded to the vote of thanks.

Voted to refer the minutes of this meeting to the Executive Committee for publication.

Adjourned at 9:45 P. M.

Attest: JAMES P. LANE, Secretary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT ON CHINESE MISSIONS.

BY REV. A. H. HALL, CHAIRMAN.

Your Committee to whom was referred that part of the statement of the Executive Committee on Chinese Missions would report as follows :

We are furnished this year with a review of the Chinese Missions on the Pacific Coast from the beginning in 1870. The fourteen years' work is put before us rather than the special work of the last twelve months. We are, therefore, the better able to judge of actual results. The genuine growth is to be measured by long intervals.

The comparison between 1884 and 1883 might not show any very considerable gain. But the contrast between the beginning and the end of a decade testifies to the unmistakable "work which God hath wrought."

The year 1870 opens with 4 teachers and 329 scholars. This year closes with 27 teachers and 1,864 scholars, a gain of nearly seven-fold. In 1876 there were 36 Chinese members in the Bethany Church, San Francisco. In 1884 the number had advanced to 91.

To the three Chinamen received in 1870 into the first church at Oakland—these being the first admitted to membership in any English-speaking church—thirty-three have been added from the mission-school of this church. A like number from this same school has been distributed among the membership of the other churches. For the year just passed, 191 are enrolled as having forsaken idol worship, and 113 as giving evidence of conversion. But more significant than the quantity of these Chinese converts, is the quality of their Christian life. Ten years of testing, in the midst of peculiar temptations, have shown as much steadfastness as could be found among the same number taken from any church membership.

No statement is made as to the amount of money contributed this year by the Chinese for the support of the Mission. But if the last year may serve as a guide, in which they are credited with $5,000 out of the $12,000 expended, we are sure they have not been found wanting in generous offerings.

The success of these years is the more remarkable, because it has been realized in the face of a strong prejudice. The effect of the Exclusion Act has been seen not only in the lukewarm support of the work by those in sympathy with the bill, but also in the ill-will awakened in the Chinamen who suffered by it.

In the face of this two-fold prejudice, the results are unexpectedly hopeful.

But when we remember that the statement before us is simply the story of one organization—when to the results of the work of this Association we add the like achievements of other societies, when as far back as 1870, we could count 300 Chinese members of Protestant churches, 700 members of Y. M. C. Associations, 750 connected with mission schools, 1,000 taught in the Sunday-schools of the land; when of the 4,000 in New York and Brooklyn alone, 1,000 are to-day under Christian training—surely this aggregate result of Chinese missions does more than stir our hopes. It awakens profoundest gratitude and admiration.

Your Committee desires to voice the sentiment of that Christian principle on which our nation was founded, that the doors shall not be closed to any particular race.

Special mention should be made in this report of the accession this year of 14 Christian Chinamen to the missions of the American Board in South China. The problem of the conversion of China will be simplified, if not settled, when the emigrant who left his native land a heathen goes back to that land a Christian, trained for service.

One part of the field of Chinese Missions has not yet been occupied by this Association. Your Committee would commend this section of the work as promising largest results, even though to many the field seems very unpromising. Little or nothing is being done for the salvation of Chinese women. Two denominations, the Methodist and Presbyterian, have accomplished something in this direction. The difficulties are very great. The character of the majority of these women renders them well-nigh inaccessible. Their presence to the number of hundreds in San Francisco alone is debasing beyond expression. The mission for the men has to contend with this as the most serious obstacle to its work. Two things are needed. First, means to carry on the work. The resources of this Association must be largely increased, if it is to enter this field at all. These resources should be forthcoming, that the field may be entered at once; and the second thing needed is a force of Christian women who will reach out after these fallen ones. The barriers which their debased moral sense has put about their desolate lives will fall before a consecrated womanhood. The salvation of woman is the salvation of China. The obstacles, 'tis true, are very great, but in spite of the "many adversaries, a great and an effectual door is opened."

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE INDIAN WORK.

BY REV. C. M. SOUTHGATE, CHAIRMAN.

The distinctive points in the report on the Indian work are these :

The occupation and development of the fields recently received from the American Board.

The enlargement of accommodations, especially for industrial work.

Co-operation with the United States Government by supplying or nominating teachers where the Government has erected buildings.

Development of Christian manhood among the Indians, as appears in their appeals for more schools, their generosity in supporting their own churches, and especially the aggressive work of the Dakota Indian Home Missionary Society.

Growth in numbers and spiritual power among the churches.

The detailed account of the Indian work goes much beyond the report in showing discouragement and hindrance nowhere, everywhere human skill and divine blessing.

The Committee cordially re-affirm the fitness of the exchange which concentrated the work of the Association in this country, and the vigorous grasp with which the new responsibilities have been taken in hand in the directions recommended by the Special Committee one year ago.

They indorse emphatically the prominence given to industrial education, a characteristic which distinguishes this Association from our other missionary societies, without which it could not do its peculiar work. Thrifty labor is part of the Biblical conception of manhood. Its indorsement comes from the ivory palace in Jerusalem, the tent-loft at Corinth, and the carpenter shop in Nazareth. To quote one most qualified to speak : "In all men education is conditioned not alone on an enlightened head and a changed heart, but very largely on a routine of industrious habits, which is to character what the foundation is to the pyramid. The summit should glow with a divine light, interfusing and qualifying the whole mass ; but it should never be forgotten that it is only upon a foundation of regular activities that there can be any fine and permanent upbuilding. Morality, though founded in spiritual life, depends very much on outward social conditions; and if man is to work out his own salvation, he must learn to work. Granted that character in its highest sense is the objective point, then mission work should be organized with reference to supplying conditions under which morality and the creation of character are feasible." (Gen. S. C. Armstrong, in Journal of Christian Philosophy, Jan., 1884, pp. 213, 214.)

Parallel with this work is the purpose to elevate the conditions of social and home life, as appearing in the new dining-hall with its adjuncts. Not a few New England boarding-schools, not a few New England colleges would be adorned by such careful instruction in "Good morals and gentle manners," as is given in the schools of the American Missionary Association.

We greatly rejoice that the National Government continues to turn to this and other Christian and peace-loving organizations for men to teach in its school houses, believing such mutual helpfulness wise for both parties and most profitable for the Indian.

Above all, we praise God that his Holy Spirit has dwelt and labored with the earnest missionaries, as with John Eliot and David Brainerd before them, and that sure signs of his presence appear in the quickened zeal and self-sacrifice of the Indian Christians. When these heartily undertake the evangelization of their own race, the glorious end is not distant.

In brief, the Committee recommend persistence and wise enlargement in the varied and balanced efforts of the Association to prove this suffering people honorable to our nation and precious to God.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

BY REV. GEO. W. PHILLIPS, CHAIRMAN.

It needs but slight examination of the statistics of illiteracy in Kentucky and Tennessee, as presented by the late census, to justify the conviction upon which the Association acted in attempting its so-called "mountain work." Necessity was laid upon us. Our advance explorers of this region from the school at Berea, Ky., had long been aware of the need, but not until the last year has an effort upon any extensive plan been made to pierce and scatter the dense ignorance or stir with a breezy gospel the moral stagnation of large areas of these States. The work had been delayed quite too long. The inspection of the field by the Executive Committee last spring but intensifies the conviction felt at Brooklyn one year ago that the time has come when these remote dwellers in the mountain valleys of the Cumberland must be reached; that after more than a generation of stagnation they should be made to feel a genuine sensation such as the school and the church always carry with them.

It has been found that not a few of the white population in those parts are as destitute of the elements of education as are their colored neighbors, while they lack the desire for improvement which their lately acquired freedom has kindled in those once enslaved. The first task confronting our teachers has been in many cases to create the desire for the instruction which they have to offer. What is the appeal which the census makes to us for pushing our work in this field? Kentucky, with its 483,000 white children of school age, leaves 245,000 of them out of school—more than one-half the entire number. The Commissioner of Education for 1883 informs us that the white attendance upon the public schools of Kentucky has diminished in the last three years by almost seven thousand (6,918). What is this falling off in the attendance upon the schools but an index of an alarming drift toward barbarism? In the same State there are more than 70,000 colored children of school age, of whom 50,000 are out of school. Coming swiftly to the grave duties of citizenship without any public provision for the most elementary instruction, what kind of material is this of which to build a free, self-governing commonwealth, with almost 30 per cent. of the entire population of Kentucky unable to read? Not one in three of the colored population has attained that accomplishment.

The facts just noted exist in Tennessee, with some increase of illiteracy demanding our best endeavors to hedge in. The Academy at Williamsburg, with its 159 students, is doing, for Whitley County and the outlying region of Southeastern Kentucky, what Berea did at the beginning in the interior. May the baptism of persecution that befell the olden school be matched by the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon the younger sister institution.

The trend of educational effort under your direction in the Central South has crossed Kentucky and penetrated Tennessee. At Grand View is a projected Academy, where the lively interest of the people seems to merit the assumption of the fostering care of the school by this Association, since they have invited our control by turning over their charter and property to us. These training schools for teachers on the ground are in the line of all missionary success at the present time. They are as needful in Tennessee as in Turkey. Wherever our teachers from such schools have gone to the remoter neighborhoods lodged among the mountains, there is sure to be a movement—which is much; a movement upward and forward, still better. The school is the pledge and prophecy of the church. Our Apostolic Missionary, the Rev. A. A. Myers, follows the path of the teacher and is finding everywhere at school centres promising materials for churches. We ought to have ten such workers in place of one, in the broad field he until recently has been trying to cover alone. We are glad to know that he has been reinforced by three. Have not ignorance and prejudice entrenched themselves in these mountain regions long enough? All the signs indicate that the time is ripe for the incoming of the school and the church which have kindled and kept luminous a Christian civilization in rugged New England and are capable of doing the same in the needful South.

Before such forces the crust of indifference, prejudice-conservatism, will gradually yield. Where pious feeling and formalism are almost the only surviving signs of religion, we are summoned to go with the gospel of morality and intelligence and thrift. Thus far the work has been one of exploration and experiment; but that stage has been passed. Permanent schools and churches must be, as they are already being developed throughout the great interior South, if it is to be saved from chronic stagnation, and set forward upon a healthy, Christian career. Immigration is soon to flow thither. Whoever is quick to see his opportunity and prompt to occupy this ground, will contribute most to shape the new and better life of the future to which the present must ere long give way. Work already begun should be followed up and enlarged. The cry of the wronged and crippled races, for whom we hold ourselves specially bound to provide the light of knowledge and the means of grace, pierces our hearts and makes us impatient of any diversion from the task we have attempted. But, as these brethren of our own race and language make their pathetic appeal, we think the Master is saying to us, "These things ought ye to do and not to leave the other undone."

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK.

BY REV. JOHN A. THURSTON, CHAIRMAN.

The Committee to whom was assigned that part of the Report of the Executive Committee on Educational Work in the South, would respectfully report as follows:

In the report rendered we see abundant evidence of the blessing of the Master upon the earnest and faithful labors of our teachers and the wise supervision of our officers, for which we would render Him devout thanks.

It is manifest that the enlarged accommodations of the new buildings recently erected by the munificence of Mrs. Stone and others were all needed, as the increase of students the past year has used all of them, and the cry is still for more room for those eager to learn. Is it not evident that the future growth of our work should be in the wise development and enlargement of our present institutions, rather than in the increase of their number? We should not forget that we labor not alone in this field. Our Methodist and Baptist brethren have each nearly as many of these institutions as we. The Presbyterians have four, and our Episcopalian and Quaker friends are doing something These may be most of them younger and less advanced than ours, but they occupy the ground, and have promise of a growth to meet the want. In all these are more than twenty chartered institutions, and more than forty normal and high schools. Every State, save Arkansas, will be well supplied if the present institutions are properly developed. In Arkansas, our Methodist brethren have one school, and we have the land for a college, already purchased, and the beginning of a building fund. Besides this the States are being provoked to undertake the work of educating teachers. Mississippi has a normal school for colored teachers, though none for white. Virginia has appropriated $100,000 for the buildings of a normal and collegiate institution. And she began the normal work last October.

Now does not all this make it clear that our energies should especially be directed to the development of the schools and colleges we now have, that we may make them as efficient as possible? For this development the great need is new buildings and additional endowments, for it should be remembered that we can teach double the number of students, certainly in all the higher departments, with only a small increase of the teaching force and of the expense. Here lies the path of true economy, which is always the path of highest duty.

What safer and more productive investment can our men of wealth find, than in joining the company of Stone, Gregory, Straight, Cassidy, Smith and Whitin, and erecting the needed buildings? How can they better leave a name to be gratefully remembered? And if any would honor those who have wrought well in the service, how can they do it better than by giving other names to buildings to be erected, besides that of Strieby? Should there not be a monument to our late Secretary, Rev. George Whipple, either in a building or an endowment bearing his name?

If there can be this provision for enlargement, we may confidently expect that the churches will gladly meet the increased expense of the greater work.

We would commend the increased attention given to the normal work, as manifest in the appointment of Prof. Salisbury, who will devote himself to it. The great need of the colored people is competent teachers of their own race. The 15,000 they now have are not sufficient for their schools. The best trained of these have come from the normal schools and other institutions of our various societies. But the greater part of them are poorly prepared for their work for these especially; and for all who are now teaching, the Teachers' Institutes are of great value, and it is hoped that still more will be done in this direction in the future.

We would also commend the wider use of industrial training. Variety of industries is as essential to the welfare of the colored as of the white race. Doom them to a single pursuit, as agriculture, and we handicap them in the race, and we help to fix that stratification of labor which it is to be feared many of the white race wish to establish, and which will be a modified serfdom. This is now a great peril. Not only should every calling be open to them, but they should be trained for every calling.

From the first, agricultural training has formed an essential part of the course at Hampton, Talladega and Tougaloo. Now at all these, and at Nashville, Macon and Austin, mechanical training is given, and it is to be hoped that soon the means for this training will be provided for all our higher institutions. From the Slater Fund $10,000 has been received for the current expenses of industrial training, for which grateful acknowledgment is made. But the need of permanent means in buildings and tools is very great, and it is to be desired that the constituents of the society should soon supply it.

The recent exhibition of our school work at Madison, it is hoped, will do much to secure for the educational work of our Association an acknowledged place in the educational forces of our land, and it may be expected that the like exhibition to be made at New Orleans will be an efficient witness to the South of the capacity of the negro for a high and varied education.

The committee would express regret that the Rev. W. S. Alexander feels constrained to leave his work, so long and ably done as president of Straight University, and they hope that his large experience and practical wisdom may yet be used to further the work of the Association.

We would most gratefully acknowledge the presence of the Holy Spirit in his quickening and converting power in our institutions, so that a very large proportion of the pupils in the higher departments are hoping Christians. This is the witness of the approval of the Master, and gives us the highest courage for the future in our work of giving well educated preachers and teachers to our colored brethren.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CHURCH WORK.

BY REV. H. C. WESTWOOD, D. D., CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on Church Work would respectfully report:

During the year past the Lord of Hosts has been with us, the God of Jacob has been our refuge. From the report of the Executive Committee we learn that the number of churches at the South is now 95, with a membership of 6,420. Since our last meeting 1,092 persons have been received, 914 of them on confession of their faith. The number of Sabbath-school scholars is 13,150. There have been raised for church purposes $10,660.58 and for benevolence $1,020.51. The number of missionaries in the field is 104. Gracious revivals of religion have crowned our work at various important points and a fair proportion of the converts have found their church home with us. During the year six new churches have been organized, viz.: Dodds, Tex.; Chacahoula, La.; Tecumseh, Ala.; Nashville, Tenn. (our third in that city); Orange Park, Fla.; and Pomona, Tenn. Seven new places of worship have been secured and three parsonages have been built.

As compared with the report of last year, we notice an increase in the number of churches of 6, in membership of 446, in additions of 485, and in Sunday-school scholars of 3,744. This showing should excite profound gratitude in the heart of every lover of his race, and of every servant of Him who came to save us unto himself. And it should incite all the churches to a more enthusiastic support of the Association, which, under God, through its agents and its wisely ordered and faithfully executed plans, has accomplished such a work.

It has sometimes been said that the missionary operations of the Church cost too much in view of the small returns gathered, and that therefore men may be excused from contributing to their support. If there be any force in this remark, we may as well close all our churches. We have made a calculation which may be of interest to the Association, and to which we would invite the prayerful consideration of all our people. Using as the basis of our calculation the membership of the Congregational Churches, as reported in the Year Book of 1883, and the membership of the churches under the care of this Association, as reported at our last anniversary, we find that as to additions, net increase of members, and the number in the Sunday-schools, the churches in the South are proportionately far in advance of the churches throughout our denomination. If these churches had done as well in proportion to their numbers as those in the South have done, instead of only 14,682 additions on profession of faith, there would have been 60,624 during the past year; instead of a net increase of only 8,627 there would be 29,515, and instead of a Sunday-school constituency of only 467,137, there would be an army of 872,218 scholars. Surely our work in the South has not been a failure.

To what end is all this effort made by the American Missionary Association? Now and then we hear it said that the negro has but small mental capacity, and that his moral character is not changed by conversion—that the solemn services of Sunday do not prevent him from lying and stealing on Monday. As a rule, this is unfair to the colored people. We should bear in mind that only yesterday they were forbidden to learn to read, and were thus deprived of the blessed privilege of studying the Divine code of morals; and we should remember that they were subjected to conditions of social and domestic life that were destructive of every moral sentiment. No teachers were allowed to instruct them, and even ministers were held in suspicion. Not a quarter of a century ago, a missionary of this Association, in North Carolina, was imprisoned for preaching the gospel of freedom. And yet, with all the disabilities surrounding them, not the least of which was the fact that they held no place whatever on the social scale when they were lifted to the plane of humanity, and were at last made citizens of a free Republic, their ambition was aroused and great possibilities rose before their clarified vision. Addressing themselves to the work set before them, they have made such progress in all the elements of Christian civilization, during the last twenty years, as no other race has ever made in the same length of time. Our Association has felt the necessity of winning this important constituent of American society, not to this or that party or sect, but to Christ; and that, not only because of its relation to our country, which is a consideration of vast and ever increasing importance, but because of its relation to the African race, and its larger relation to the humanity which has been bought with the precious blood of Christ. Hence the growing conviction in the minds and hearts of thoughtful men that we should push our work with reference to preparing at the earliest moment, and on the largest scale, the men who are to be the civilizers, educators and evangelizers of the race, which, through the abolition of slavery in America, and the explorations of Livingstone and Stanley in Africa, commands so large a share of the world's attention.

It is too late in the age to discuss the question of the colored man's mental, moral and political status. Not only has he made most wonderful progress in civilization, but the history of the past ten or fifteen years has shown his capability in the schools, the pulpits and the legislative halls of the nation. And this is but the prophecy and the promise of the future. From this race we are to draw the men who are to be the teachers in all secular and spiritual things of their brethren, and who are to redeem and evangelize the Dark Continent, whose destiny no political prophet has yet been able to forecast, but whose place among the nations Infinite Providence is now preparing. To educate and fit the teachers, the missionaries and the Christian statesmen of the coming Africa were indeed a glorious work. To do this, in the Spirit of Christ, is the privilege and duty of his Church. We must, however, begin at home; and with an energy born of our consecration to the Master, and with a liberality commensurate with our sense of the obligation under which we rest for the pleasant places where our lines have been cast, and of the debt we owe to the race whom the white man enslaved, we should push forward the work of our Association.

Your Committee is fully satisfied that our duty is not only to educate these people, but to lead them to Christ. And they must be rooted and grounded in the faith of the Gospel. Hence the necessity of organizing the churches upon a sound spiritual and Scriptural basis. We cannot too strongly insist upon purity of life and distinctness of view in connection with the Christian profession. Such life much more readily comports with a clear conception of man's sin and his consequent need than with loose views of the person and work of Christ. It is with no little satisfaction that we read in the report of the Executive Committee, of the "rational methods and sound preaching" of an evangelist employed by the Association, by which he was able to do much "for confirming the churches and for leading souls into fellowship with Christ." Such instruction, accompanied by diligent inquiry into the personal experience of all candidates for admission, and strict requirement as to genuine Christian character, will go far toward making our churches in the South strong and vigorous centres of religious influence. The emotional nature and social habits of the colored people are at once the occasion of weakness and elements of power—of weakness in the hands of ignorance, but of power if this nature be stirred by intelligent union with Christ, and if these social qualities be massed in his glorious name.

From this we argue and urge the need of an intelligent ministry for the colored churches. The aim of the Association has been to furnish to the people of the South men who rightly divide the word of truth. As these people become better educated and more thoroughly qualified for higher social position, they will naturally demand boarder culture in the ministry. If we be wise we will anticipate that demand. He who supposes that because the colored people have been the slaves of ignorance they do not need intelligent preachers is greatly mistaken. For this very reason they need men of education to wisely instruct them in righteousness. Their ignorance has led many of them into superstition, and this fact has been the ground on which the Church of Rome has based its hope of capturing the race. To meet this condition, and to fairly represent our branch of the Church Catholic, but especially to secure the soul of our brother in black for Jesus, there must be intelligence in the pulpit, and this intelligence must be consecrated.

And so we need a Godly ministry. "The foremost demand on modern Christianity is that of a revival of the spirit of self-consecration." So says Bishop Huntington in an address to certain theological students of his own denomination. We would adopt his language, and would emphasize the thought that "this renewal of Apostolic life must be begun and led by a self-sacrificing clergy." Such was the spirit of our Pilgrim fathers; such the spirit of every true missionary; such the spirit of the Son of God. In our Southern work we need the same spirit. Many sacrifices will be demanded of our pastors, and possibly persecutions and trials may await them. The heroic age of the Church has not passed away. We need for the age the man who can say with Paul: "None of these things move me; neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus to testify the Gospel of the grace of God." We need also the man of diligence in pastoral work—a faithful shepherd of the flock, and a true Bishop of the Church. The influence of such a man will be a constant benediction upon the hearts and homes of his parish, for the colored people have great, warm hearts, and the old "quarters" of the former time have given way, thank God! to the homes of the higher civilization. Give us an intelligent and a Godly ministry for our Southern work, and soon the wilderness will blossom as the rose—and then, ere long, Africa shall be taken for Christ.

What a glorious field opens before the churches of our own denomination! The Master of the Vineyard says to us: "Occupy till I come." What shall the answer be? The response of the American Missionary Association is most emphatic—"We will." Let the whole Church say with ringing voice, "Amen and Amen!"

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

BY COL. FRANKLIN FAIRBANKS, ACTING CHAIRMAN.

Your Committee on Finance beg leave to report that they have examined the books and accounts of the Treasurer, comparing the various annual statements with the books, and find the same to be correct in every particular, as vouched for by the Auditors. The books are kept after the most approved method and in a workman-like manner, showing exactness and at the same time a simplicity, easily understood by any one unaccustomed to book-keeping. Your Committee find that there is a Sub-Committee of the Executive Board on Finance that examines the accounts of the Treasurer each month before the regular meeting of the Executive Committee, taking the books of account kept by the Treasurer, comparing them with his statements of the month's receipts and disbursements with the vouchers, and certifying to the correctness of the same.

All moneys received are deposited in bank and all payments are made by checks. The checks are drawn by the Treasurer and must be countersigned by an officer of the Association.

It is gratifying to find the system so complete that every cent contributed to the Association can be traced until a voucher is given for its outgo.

Your committee find there has been an increase over last year in receipts from collections and donations of $36,834, and a decrease in legacies of $61,807, showing a total decrease of $24,973. We are gratified to note the careful economy in expenditures which have been reduced by $10,880 from those of last year. In spite of this reduction in expenditures, a debt has been incurred of over $13,000, which would not exist except for the heavy falling off in legacies. This shows that we must not wait for the gifts of the dead to make up for the deficiencies of the living.

Your committee are convinced that not less than a thousand dollars a day are imperatively demanded to perfect the admirably organized plans of the Association even for the present, to say nothing of the pressing needs of the early future.

Your committee find the cost of publishing the 22,000 copies of the "American Missionary" to be $7,293.16.

For this only $729.50 have been received from subscribers, and $1,437.93 from advertisements, leaving the net cost to the Association $5,125.83. This magazine is edited by Dr. Pike, one of the District Secretaries, without additional compensation. Thousands of copies are sent free to Life Members and to ministers. We would urge the recipients of the magazine to become paying subscribers (50c.), and we urge the Executive Committee to adopt some measures which will help to bring about this result, thereby making the magazine self supporting.

Respectfully submitted in behalf of Committee.

RELATIONS OF THE A. H. M. S. TO THE A. M. A.

PAPER PRESENTED BY SEC. STRIEBY.

The Executive Committees of the American Home Missionary Society and of the American Missionary Association, accepting the recommendation contained in the resolution adopted at the Annual Meeting of the former Society, held in Saratoga, in June, 1884, to meet for the purpose "of adjusting the mutual relations and work of the two societies, in harmony with the principles embodied in the report of the Conference Committee," are happy to find in the report adopted at Springfield, and amplified at Saratoga, as also in the prior action of the two Executive Committees, so full and satisfactory a solution of all pending questions as to leave only the simple task of formulating these several acts and reports into condensed and practical statements.

In behalf of our respective societies, we state and accept these regulations as follows:

1. Both societies are National in their scope, and therefore no geographical line can be drawn between them.

2. The principal work of the American Home Missionary Society is church planting in the new regions of the West and Southwest, and along the lines of immigration, where churches are so greatly needed, and educational facilities are substantially furnished by the State. It has also an important work in some of the Southern States. Its present small and exceptional school work has been thrown upon it by circumstances, and the Executive Committee do not propose to enlarge it, but whenever it can properly be done, will transfer such work to the American Missionary Association.

The principal work of the American Missionary Association is educational, in the Southern States, where emancipation has left so large an illiterate population unprovided with schools by the State. It is also doing an educational and evangelical work among the Indians of the West and the Chinese of the Pacific coast.

3. There may arise cases where both societies can work advantageously in the same local field. These cases must, however, be exceptional, and always require previous consultation and mutual agreement. Whatever new work may be called for in any locality should be under the charge of the Society already occupying the ground, unless it be by agreement between the two societies. Whenever a new church is needed in a place in which one Society has a church, the new work shall be left to the Society already there, unless, after full conference between the officers of the two societies and with the people proposing to unite in the new church, it shall seem best that the other Society shall form it; in which case it shall be cordially welcomed by the Society in the locality.

4. Whenever it shall appear that comity, economy or efficiency will be advanced by the transfer, in any locality, of the work of one Society to the other, or where it is practicable to use a common Superintendent, the two societies will endeavor to effect such arrangements.

5. Neither Society will establish in any locality a church that will not admit to membership colored persons suitably qualified, nor will it sustain any church that will not fellowship the neighboring Congregational churches or that will not unite with the local Congregational Conference or Association.

6. The appeals of the two societies to their common constituency shall be on this basis: That the contributions for the South should flow mainly through the channel of the American Missionary Association and that no large proportion of the funds of the American Home Missionary Society should be spent on the Southern fields as there is pressing demand in the West and Southwest for all and more than can be raised among our churches.

Under these general principles and arrangements the harmonious working of the two societies can be easily effected:

1. The American Home Missionary Society will go forward in its great work of church planting in all parts of our common country, restricted only by the fraternal limitations above recited.

2. The American Missionary Association in like manner will pursue its educational and church work in the South among both races and also among the Indians and the Chinese on the Pacific coast under the same limitations.

The two Executive Committees uniting in this action take this opportunity to express, unitedly, their earnest desire to perpetuate the fraternal relations which have hitherto existed between them and between the societies which they represent; and they hope and expect that all who are in the employ of either Society, in the missionary field or elsewhere, will cordially co-operate with them in their efforts to secure this end.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON THE ABOVE PAPER.

BY REV. S. L. BLAKE, D. D., CHAIRMAN.

The committee to whom was referred the paper presented by Dr. Strieby on "The Relations of the A. H. M. S. and the A. M. A.," have attended to their duties and beg leave to report:

Your committee have carefully reviewed the paper, have put themselves in possession of such facts and other information as was within their reach, and unanimously recommend this body to adopt the report presented by Dr. Strieby. We may be allowed to state the following among the reasons why we have reached this result:

1. It is a final formulation of the careful deliberations of several committees composed of some of the ablest and wisest men of both bodies: men of whom we cannot believe that they would be influenced by any other desire than to reach conclusions most likely to advance the interests of the Redeemer's kingdom.

2. This report seems to us to look toward that final division of labor, both geographically and otherwise, which will harmonize the workings of the two societies with each other and promote that comity which is sure to be observed by two great bodies having the same constituency, and laboring for the same great end—the salvation of men. For though there are diversities of operations, it is the same spirit. Just here we desire to note the fact that the Home Missionary Society, in its meeting at Saratoga in 1883, pledged itself not to work in localities where churches of our order already exist, without consulting with them, and that at the same meeting it substantially put itself on record against the color line.

3. The outlook of this report therefore seems to your committee to be towards such an adjustment of the labors of the two societies as all desire, and as must be reached for their best efficiency; and such, let us hope, as may result in a more complete system of effort to take this continent and hold it for Christ.

4. This report is sent to us with the unanimous approval of the Executive Committees of both bodies. It is the result reached by them in this matter as referred to them finally by the A. H. M. Society. Our own Executive Committee concur in it. The judgment of our Secretary is that it looks in the right direction.

5. It is the first basis of agreement which the two societies have had to act upon. If it is carried out according to the clear intent of those who framed it, and whose duty it is to attend to the effective workings of the two societies, we cannot think that it will fail to accomplish the end designed—effect the solution of a problem which at one time promised to present very grave difficulties. It is in this line, and if this report cannot at once rectify all existing evils, we believe that an honest and sincere working of the plan will surely result in correcting them all.

For these reasons, and because we expect the plan of the report to be carried out sincerely by both parties, we recommend its adoption, and beg leave to congratulate the Society on what may prove a happy solution of a grave problem. To borrow another's words, we "confidently expect that both societies will ratify this action, and thus insure cordial co-operation between them henceforth and forever. Amen."

REPORT ON SEC POWELL'S PAPER ON MISSIONARY ZEAL.

BY REV. J. E. WITHROW, D. D., CHAIRMAN.

The hearing and, much more, the careful reading of the paper of Secretary Powell, on Missionary Zeal, refreshes the courage of the friends of the A. M. A., because in it we find the glow of that godly consecration to the work of the Good Samaritan which is sure to warm all the world, one of these days.

It is worthy of a mention that those who have the work of this Association in hand, so have it also in heart that success is as sure as the promises of God are certain.

But a few weeks ago one aspect of our outlook was a little clouded by the possibility that this annual meeting might be made a wailing place, against the dead wall of a great debt. But the Lord of the harvest, whose sheaves we are gathering, has so gladdened the good souls down at 56 Reade street, New York, with a little freshet of funds which rose suddenly under a summer shower of His grace, that these secretaries are full of psalms and hymns and spiritual songs.

Never was the outlook of this Association so wide and clear and full of beckoning promise as at present. We think the officers must see it so; otherwise the Secretary would hesitate to show us the worst facts of the case. Were there not an assurance within him, born of the Spirit of Christ and the surroundings of this hour, that this Association is at the dawn of more magnificent endeavors and achievements than it has ever known, we do not think he would have laid any dark and condemning facts before us.

The fact would not have been stated, in stony figures, that twelve millions of dependent, ignorant and aspiring people, who have been abased and abused by our countrymen, are now turning their eyes of entreaty toward this Association for what there is none else to give them. The Association begins to feel a deepening assurance that the larger the labor that is laid to its hands the more readily will responses come for its undertakings from friends of the down-trodden Indian, Asiatic and African. We are told that the gifts of the members of the Congregational churches, the last four years, were only 42 cents per member in each year, while they were 62 cents per member in the semi-decade from 1865–70. In one view this condemns, but in another it encourages. From 1865–70 is a semi-decade. But 1880–84 lacks a year of being an equal length of time. And remembering the splendid success which has crowned the efforts of the Association in the last few months, who shall say that when this semi-decade shall have ended we shall not be back to the 62 cents per member? Who knows what this coming year will show? It is enough that in the years between 1875–80 the treasury touched its bottom figures—30 cents yearly per member. Less than this will not be given, as we believe, until Gabriel sounds his trumpet to tell us our work is ended.

Further, the future of the Association brightens as never before, because now calling and election are sure. As never, those, who inquire, easily learn now what the work of this Association is. Gradually, from the former days and its first beginnings, its fields of effort have been getting their boundary lines. Until now all thought by any other missionary society that this Association is not needed, gives place to a large and warm welcome of its broad and beneficent labors

If there has been a possibility that sympathy with our excellent Home Missionary Society must withhold a cordial charity from the Association, such a period is now passed. As wide as the land and as deep as the attention of the dullest ear we now announce, that these two societies are one, and yet two: one in the noble aim of gospelizing the land; but two in the widely separate scenes of their special endeavors. The immense and toilsome work of constructing and setting machinery for serving the Lord's lowliest and least cared for in this land may be considered so far finished, that in future there will be no other changes than such as are analogous to the changes in a mill where a manufacturer improves his machinery and enlarges his plant.

And because this is our nearest and highest need to enlarge our plant, there is nothing, next to a deep conviction of the inestimable value of our work, which is so much needed as the excitement of a consuming zeal which may eat us up in its discharge. How shall work already begun for the black and yellow and red man be made fruitful—not only of annual harvests, but annually enlarging possibilities?

Must there not come on us all the spirit of earnest and intercessory prayer to God as the first thing to secure the great end? Not the passing petition, which may have a place in our general interests in missions, but a special spirit of prayer for this one cause. The report of Secretary Powell recommends prayer meetings to assemble for this specific purpose. And his hint we would harden into an earnest call. We do not forget that almost a quarter of a century has passed since slavery was ended by the stroke of a pen and the struggle of war, and that a score of years have rolled away since the black cloud of war was spanned with the bow of peace. Hence, the growing youth who are just emerging into manhood and womanhood and wealth will need to have most wise and diligent guidance, or they will lose sight of some of the most mighty reasons why the work of this Association should go on.

REPORT
OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

GENERAL SURVEY.

This 38th anniversary of the American Missionary Association reminds us of the history it has been making in its early organic testimony for the slave and in its extended missionary operations. From a beginning in weakness and reproach God has brought it out into a large place of service and of favor. For this history and for the abiding blessing of God upon the toils and the sacrifices of the closing year, the Executive Committee would call upon all the friends of the Association to join them in devout thanksgivings.

An incitement of this gratitude to the God of missions we find in the very place where we are assembled. We gather inspiration from the fact that here our American Christianity, through the infant American Board, ordained its first foreign missionaries. Therefore will we offer in his Tabernacle sacrifices of joy. It is a sign of the volume and power of the missionary cause in our day, that, in the same body of Christians, with its own peculiar field, this, another organ of evangelism has been brought along to its present position; and that, as it comes to drink from this same original fountain, it is found to be but an ally of the institution which has girdled the earth with its missions. It is also in evidence of the mutual relation of these two organizations that the Rev. B. F. Ousley, a young man who had been carried through the classical course in our Fisk University, having been graduated from the Theological Department of Oberlin College, was recently ordained to go out, under the American Board, to Umzila's Kingdom in Africa, having lately been honored in this city by a public assembly.

FINANCES.

The last Annual Meeting voted to recommend an increase of fifty per cent. over the contributions of individuals and churches for the previous year. This would have made an addition of about $70,000, and would have given us at this time a total of $360,000, or near the one thousand dollars a day which the Executive Committee had ventured to call for.

The total of receipts has been $287,594.19. Of this sum $223,034.77 was from collections and donations, and $64,559.42 from legacies. There has been an increase of $36,834.21 from collections and donations and a decrease of $61,807.31 in legacies, making a total decrease this year in receipts of $24,973.10. The total expenditure for the year has been $301,928.37. Debt, Sept. 30, 1884 ($14,334.18 less balance on hand Sept. 30, 1883, $548.32), $13,785.86.

Our Society has suffered along with all the others from the stringency and the excitements of the times. We can enter no complaint against those servants of God who have passed on before that their returns have not come in as bountifully as they did the last year. The Association has also received for the Theological Endowment Fund of Howard University $13,900, and for Hastings' Scholarship Fund of Atlanta University $1,000.

The Executive Committee, conscious of the gravity of the situation feel con-

calling and election are sure. As never, those, who inquire, easily learn now what the work of this Association is. Gradually, from the former days and its first beginnings, its fields of effort have been getting their boundary lines. For this history and for the abiding blessing of God upon the toils and the sacrifices of the closing year, the Executive Committee would call upon all the friends of the Association to join them in devout thanksgivings.

An incitement of this gratitude to the God of missions we find in the very place where we are assembled. We gather inspiration from the fact that here our American Christianity, through the infant American Board, ordained its first foreign missionaries. Therefore will we offer in his Tabernacle sacrifices of joy. It is a sign of the volume and power of the missionary cause in our day, that, in the same body of Christians, with its own peculiar field, this, another organ of evangelism has been brought along to its present position; and that, as it comes to drink from this same original fountain, it is found to be but an ally of the institution which has girdled the earth with its missions. It is also in evidence of the mutual relation of these two organizations that the Rev. B. F. Ousley, a young man who had been carried through the classical course in our Fisk University, having been graduated from the Theological Department of Oberlin College, was recently ordained to go out, under the American Board, to Umzila's Kingdom in Africa, having lately been honored in this city by a public assembly.

FINANCES.

The last Annual Meeting voted to recommend an increase of fifty per cent. over the contributions of individuals and churches for the previous year. This would have made an addition of about $70,000, and would have given us at this time a total of $360,000, or near the one thousand dollars a day which the Executive Committee had ventured to call for.

The total of receipts has been $287,594.19. Of this sum $223,034.77 was from collections and donations, and $64,559.42 from legacies. There has been an increase of $36,834.21 from collections and donations and a decrease of $61,807.31 in legacies, making a total decrease this year in receipts of $24,973.10. The total expenditure for the year has been $301,928.37. Debt, Sept. 30, 1884 ($14,334.18 less balance on hand Sept. 30, 1883, $548.32), $13,785.86.

Our Society has suffered along with all the others from the stringency and the excitements of the times. We can enter no complaint against those servants of God who have passed on before that their returns have not come in as bountifully as they did the last year. The Association has also received for the Theological Endowment Fund of Howard University $13,900, and for Hastings' Scholarship Fund of Atlanta University $1,000.

The Executive Committee, conscious of the gravity of the situation feel constrained to ask their constituency if it is too much to renew the call of last year for one thousand dollars a day? A few of the churches and some individuals have each taken to themselves the satisfaction of thus running this institution for one day. If the friends could have spent that day within the establishment, inspecting the processes at the head office and following the noble band of workers through the schools and churches, among the millions of needy Indians, Chinamen and negroes, and taking account of the results, they would have felt well repaid for their investment. Is it not the Providence of God that says, "Strike for the thousand dollars a day"?

THE MENDI MISSION.

In our last Annual Report, it was stated that this Mission had been transferred for five years to the United Brethren in Christ, who have a mission adjoining ours on the coast of Africa, at Shengay, and whose secretary, Dr. Flickinger, was once our missionary in the Mendi country. It was also stated that the income of the Avery fund for Africa, amounting to $4,698, was to be furnished toward the expense of the mission, and that the steamer, John Brown, provided for by the Congregational Sunday-schools, was also to be used by them for the specified time. The steamer, built in England at an expense of $10,000, was run to Freetown in a little over twenty days; and, when it reached Shengay, it was greeted by a host of people with every demonstration of joy. Surely, John Brown's soul is marching on. One of the missionaries writes: "We cannot express our thanks to God and those dear youth of the Sabbath schools for this gift to the Mendi Mission, a blessing to the missionaries, who had been exposed to so many perils by travel in their small boats."

Of the Mission, Secretary Flickinger reports that the work has gone on quite successfully during the year. The schools have been larger than formerly. The religious interest has been well sustained. Fifty towns adjacent were visited by the missionaries. Of their ten American missionaries in Africa, six are at Mendi.

We make these statements to show our friends that though the immediate control has passed out of our hands, the work is still going on successfully, and our interest in it is not abated.

WORK AMONG THE CHINESE.

The honor of beginning school work for the Chinese in the English language on the Pacific coast belongs to Mrs. Elizabeth L. Lynde, now deceased, a member of the First Congregational Church of Oakland—that was in 1867. Then came Jee Gam, a servant in the family of Dr. Mooar, the pastor, to gain the English and to learn the mystery of godliness. In 1870, Dr. Mooar had the pleasure of receiving the first three Chinamen known as admitted to membership in an English-speaking church in this land. That school has been continued in the same church premises, both Sundays and week-days, until the present time. Thirty-seven others have since been received into the same church, and about the same number, converted in this school, have joined other churches. Dr. McLean, the pastor for the last fourteen years, says that of these forty, thirty-three yet remain, and that they are in all respects as intelligent in their Christian hope, as consistent in their walk, as faithful in their Christian life, as any other thirty-three who could be taken at random out of his 800 members. These eighty heathen souls, brought from Confucius to Christ by that church, are a precious harvest. Dr. Mooar says that the men and the women who have given their time and heart to this self-denying work have long been among his "Evidences of Christianity."

It was in 1870 that this Association took up its work among the Chinese of that coast, with Rev. John Kimball as Superintendent, and with four teachers and 329 pupils. In 1874 Rev. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church in San Francisco, took on the extra work of this supervision. In 1875 "The California Chinese Mission" was organized in connection with the General Association of the State, as an auxiliary of the A. M. A., with Dr. McLean as President and Mr. Pond still as Secretary. The first annual report of that auxiliary announced 13 schools, 17 teachers, 1,536 pupils, with a cost of $6,504, of which $4,874 came from the treasury of this Association. At that time Mr. Pond's church had 26 Chinese members, and it now has 91, five of whom were received at his last communion. Thus it appears that our Congregational brethren in California have been at the front in devising means to give these from the land of Sinim the gospel of the Bible in the English, for which all praise is due. The number of teachers this year has been 27, the number of pupils 1,864, while 190 profess to have ceased from idol worship and 113 give evidence of conversion.

It is in place to mention here that Rev. Messrs. Hager and Jones, of the Mission of the American Board to South China, which was taken up at the suggestion of this Association, and toward which our Chinese brethren in California contributed $500, have been re-enforced during the year by fourteen of our Christian Chinamen, who have returned to their old homes, fully purposed to work for the Master, so long as they may remain in their native land. Of this number five had been helpers in our California Mission and had received sufficient training to make them efficient there, and also, we trust, in China. This is an omen of profound significance.

WORK AMONG THE INDIANS.

In our last Report, it was stated that, by a mutual arrangement, the American Board had transferred to this Association all its Indian work except that of the six churches of the Sisseton Agency, which, as being Presbyterian, went to the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions. This has greatly increased the work and the responsibility of this department. It was found that, in order to the still greater effectiveness of those missions, there should be an enlargement of the accommodations. And so, at the Santee Agency the accommodations for the industrial department have been increased by the building of a blacksmith shop with five forges, adding to the size of the carpenter shop and opening a brickyard. Last fall plans were perfected for a dining hall to seat 200 and to accommodate 40 or 50 pupils besides teachers. The building is up and inclosed, but is now at a standstill for want of funds. At the Ponca Reserve a school-house and teacher's home have been erected by Government, and the Association hopes soon to send a good teacher to this point. At Fort Sully, Cheyenne River Agency, five schools have been in operation besides the Grand River School under our care at Standing Rock, and good progress is reported in all the schools. Five new station buildings have been erected, and the building on Grand River has been completed, during the year. The Indians have aided materially in this work. The church growth has been steady and encouraging. The native Christians are giving of their substance to support their pastors and missionaries. There are urgent calls for more workers. Mr. Riggs states that he gets letters every week from Indians who have been to school and learned to write, asking for schools to be established at Rosebud, Red Cloud and Standing Rock agencies.

Mr. Hall, of the Fort Berthold Mission, reports that the Devil's Lake Indians, under native leaders, with only a few missionary visits, have established a church and school and built a chapel for themselves, and the present evangelist, supported by the Dakota Indian Home Missionary Society of native brethren, has a congregation of 49.

At Fort Stevenson, an old military post, 17 miles from Fort Berthold, a Government boarding-school has been organized with 50 pupils in attendance. The principal and matron were nominated by this Association.

The religious work at the S'kokomish Agency was for a time hindered by a set of fanatics, but after their conquest the Christian work went on better than before. More prayer meetings were held and 23 united with the two churches. There has been less employment of Indian doctors than ever before.

Negotiations are in progress for the establishment of schools among the Pueblo and other Indians in New Mexico.

EDUCATIONAL WORK SOUTH.

The two years before this last were characterized by a great enlargement of our building accommodations, for which we were in suffering need. The magnificent gift of $150,000 from Mrs. Valeria G. Stone, supplemented by donations from other friends, and by appropriations from our treasury, made a sum of more than $200,000, which went into the permanent plant of buildings. This last year has been one of adjusting the work of these enlargements. The result has proven that this building process was not at all on too large a scale. The increased accommodations have all been utilized. No sooner has a new structure been opened than it has been occupied to the full. The Straight University, in addition to its main College building, having taken to itself the Stone Hall for girls and the Whitin Hall for boys, is already crying out: "The place is too strait for me," and calling imperiously for a primary school building. The Tougaloo University, beyond its new Strieby Hall, is making a loud call for more room. The new Cassedy school at Talladega is overflowing.

The total number of students this year is 9,758, as against that of 8,052 three years ago. The number of teachers this year has been 319; the chartered institutions, 8; the high and normal schools, 14; the common schools, 43.

In the line of professional education, the theological department of the Howard University, supported and directed mainly by this Association, reports 39 students; Talladega College reports 10 theological students; Fisk University, 10; Straight, 14, with 55 law students.

It is a prime purpose of all our institutions to raise up school teachers. To this end, in the normal schools and in the normal and classical courses of the colleges, provision is made for regular instruction and training in didactics, that is, school economy; in practical teaching under criticism; and in pedagogics, the science of teaching. To the end of such training, Prof. Salisbury, the Superintendent of Education, as an expert in normal processes, devotes the benefit of his experience, and also, as he is able to command the time, engages in conducting Teachers' Institutes. Such this year he has held at Atlanta, Tougaloo, New Orleans and Talladega.

A week is given to each one—the last day, to written examinations of all the students in each institution. These scholastic communities have come to find out that their institutes are not gotten up simply that they may have a good time, or to make a parade, but that by study and drill they may seek to excel in this profession. During the institute weeks at Atlanta and Talladega, lectures were delivered by Prof. B. G. Northrop, LL.D., of Connecticut, upon practical educational themes, much to the edification of the students and faculties of the respective institutions. During the year also, upon the plan of the Superintendent of Education, the Executive Committee has settled upon a nearly uniform course of study for all the departments of the same grade in the several schools. This, it is believed, will work to advantage in many ways. The Executive Committee has also this year reduced its "common law" to a Manual of instructions for all of the workers, a hand-book that promises an increase of efficiency, of harmonious movement and of economical administration.

At the National Educational Association, held in July last at Madison, Wisconsin, this Association was fully represented by our Superintendent of Education, by not a few of our teachers, and by an exhibit of our operations. This exhibit consisted (1) of examination papers of all grades from the kindergarten to the advanced college classes; (2) specimens of work in penmanship and in drawing; (3) work of industrial classes, needlework from the girls, and work in wood, leather and metals from the boys; (4) photographs of school buildings and of graduating classes from several of the institutions; (5) charts on cloth, giving graphically the statistics of the work of the Association; and (6) printed reports, catalogues and other publications. Sixteen of our Southern schools were thus represented. One of the sessions was that given to Indian education. Gen. Armstrong told his story of Indian training at Hampton. Rev. A. L. Riggs, Principal of our Santee Normal and Industrial School, had with him there fifteen of his Indian pupils and pupil teachers, who had their own exhibit of handiwork in wood, iron, leather and clay, and who sang hymns and read the Scriptures in their native language and in the English, and who, standing to present the exhibit of the Association, were themselves an object lesson, teaching what the Gospel education can do for all grades of humanity. Our alcove, we were gratified to learn, was thronged the most of the time by sympathetic visitors. On one evening given to education South, addresses were made by Rev. Dr. J. L. M. Curry, Dr. A. D. Mayo, of Boston, our Superintendent of Education, and two of our graduates. The gentlemen of the white race did honor to the occasion. The graduates were Prof. Crogman, from the Atlanta University, and Principal Washington, from the Hampton Institute. Grandly did they represent the Association in its principles and in its results. It was a proud hour, when these men from among the lowly poor of the negro race, showed themselves on the rostrum, the peers of their Caucasian brethren. The same material exhibit is to be brought forward at the World's Exposition in New Orleans through the winter. This will be a grand opportunity for impressing upon the people of the South and of the nation the capabilities of these new-made citizens of the Republic.

As the Annual Report last year contained a history of the individual churches of the Association at the South, this year it will present a succinct history of its several educational institutions. So soon is this work passing itself on into history; and great is the privilege of having a hand in to make the same.

CHURCH WORK SOUTH.

During the year six new churches have been organized. These are at Dodd's, in Texas; Chacahoula, La.; Tecumseh, Ala.; Nashville, Tenn., the Jackson street church, our third in that city; Orange Park, Fla.; and Pomona, Tenn. The last two consist at present of only white members, but are open to all Christians.

Within the year seven new places of worship have been secured. At Dodd's in Texas, the Association aided in buying a lot and a plain house upon it to serve for school and church purposes. At Grand Bayou, La., the Association aided in building a plain church. In Alabama, at Tecumseh, the Tecumseh Iron Co. built a house for us to use for school and church purposes, and at Birmingham, the Association bought a lot and aided in building a church. At Meridian, Miss., the Association bought a lot and a plain house for a church. At Pomona, Tenn., where we have organized a church, the citizens by aid from friends North have built a tasteful sanctuary. And at Pleasant View, Ky., one of Rev. A. A. Myers' out-stations, he has led them in building another house of worship without foreign aid. At Dudley, N. C., the church and parsonage have been repaired and repainted. At Anniston, Ala., the church has been again enlarged and so has the church at Topeka, Kansas. At Jackson, Miss., at Athens, Ga., and at Nashville, Tenn., lots have been purchased for needed church edifices. Parsonages have been built during the year at Byron, Ga., Topeka, Kan., and New Iberia, La.

The number of our churches at the South is now 95. Total membership 6,420, an average of 67. The total additions for the year are 1,092; on confession of faith, 914. Sabbath-school scholars, 13,150. Raised for church purposes, $10,660.58; for benevolence, $1,020.51.

Of the 76 pastors who have served these churches, 23 were from the North, including those who also serve as professors in the colleges; and 53 of them have been raised up at the South in our institutions, while as many more have been furnished to other denominations.

During the year an Evangelist, Rev. J. C. Fields, has been employed. By reason of his ready access to the people and of his rational methods and sound preaching, he has been able to do much for confirming the churches and for leading souls into fellowship with Christ. With his wife attending him to sing and play, he has labored at Mobile, Macon, Savannah, Midway, Cypress Slash, Athens, Charleston, Atlanta, Marietta, Chattanooga, and Knoxville. Several hundred persons were hopefully led to Christ, and a fair proportion of these have united with our churches. On one Sabbath 109 of these converts were received into the First Church of Atlanta. Mr. Fields has been engaged for another year. Interesting revivals have also been enjoyed at Raleigh and Dudley, in North Carolina; in the Atlanta and Fisk Universities; at Williamsburg, Ky.; at Montgomery, Ala.; at Talladega College; at Memphis; in the Central Church, at New Orleans; at New Iberia, La.; and at other places. We are coveting the best gifts in this line, and are looking to see yet greater things.

It is an interesting indication of the way our work is taking hold of the new life of the South, that we have a school and a church at each of five of the great iron furnace centres in Alabama, at Tecumseh, Anniston, Jenifer, Shelby Iron Works and Birmingham. In all of these the iron companies have shown an enlightened interest in this school and church process. Two of them build each a house and pay liberally for the teacher and preacher; one gives the lot and co-operates; one—that at the American Birmingham—remits several hundred dollars on the price of the lot; and another gives the lots, helps on the church, builds a parsonage and contributes toward the support of the mission.

The Outcome.

It is now more than a score of years since the Association began its operations among these ex-slaves, and it is a natural question that arises: What is the outcome of scholarship and character? Have they been able to go beyond the rudiments? These years have given cumulative testimony that they may and often do excel in the higher English studies, in the mathematics, the sciences, and the languages. Were it not, indeed, an impugning of the wisdom of the Creator, who hath made us all in His own image, and all of one blood, to question this capability? A testing of this kind has been had at the Atlanta University, where, by a law of the State of Georgia and by the appointment of the Governor, the same Board of Visitors, who every year attend upon the examinations and commencement of the State University, also wait upon the same exercises at Atlanta, making report of both institutions to the Governor. And for these dozen years those reports have borne unvarying testimony to the high quality of the scholarship and of the morale of the Atlanta students. The same testimony could be given as to the quality of the work done at the Fisk University and in other institutions of alike grade.

So by this school and church training we are gratified to be able to report a growing comfort as to the moral and spiritual outcome, in the resultant of Christian character.

When you come to the question of the influence of such cultivated, consecrated mind upon single communities and upon masses of the people, the answer is yet assuring. Allowance must be made for occasional lapses of character and for the depression effected by the superambient evil; but, upon the whole, it is a mighty uplift that this process is giving the people, and more and more—if it is sustained—will its power be manifest for good. To keep it up, necessity is laid upon us.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

At our last annual meeting, held in Brooklyn, this department received especial attention. Our report was followed by addresses of personal representatives from the field. And so much interest was elicited that this part of our work was prominently in mind, when a specific increase in contribution was recommended. In the early spring the Executive Committee took the occasion of the dedication of the new church and academy at Williamsburg, Ky., for making a special inspection of the field and the work. Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Ward and Assistant Secretary Powell were met on the ground by President E. H. Fairchild and Prof. L. V. Dodge, of Berea College, and Field Superintendent Roy. On the Lord's day, the tasteful and commodious sanctuary was dedicated, free from debt, in connection with sermons by Rev. Drs. Powell, Fairchild and Ward. On Monday the three-story academy was dedicated, addresses being made by the visiting brethren. And on Monday night a rousing mass meeting was held in behalf of education At all of the services of these two days, colored people were present. A conference of these visitors and the workers on the field was held with reference to the general work; and their resultant recommendations have since been indorsed by the Executive Committee. Prof. Dodge, only the fall previous, had made a tour on horseback over 26 of those mountain counties, lecturing upon education, attending teachers' institutes, and turning attention of the young people toward Berea. President Fairchild, from similar tours made during the last dozen years, was familiar with the people and their needs. These gentlemen thought that a first-class school ought to be established at the county seat of every one of those counties. They named such as were the very most destitute, and yet hopeful by reason of their Union-loving spirit—several of them having sent more volunteers into the Union army than were subject to military duty. It was the unanimous opinion of the conference that the work should be pushed with all vigor so far as the funds at command would warrant. The brethren from New York went out with the field workers to hold educational meetings at Woodbine, Barbourville, Pleasant View and Jellico, closing the series with a rousing service in our colored church at Knoxville.

During the year, the Williamsburg Academy, enrolling 169 students, has been gaining the confidence of the people of the region, and bringing in the public school teachers for further preparation. At Woodbine, a Sunday-school has been kept up by Mrs. Myers, and a lot has been purchased on which a building is to be erected this fall, to be used for school and church purposes. At Pleasant View a church has been erected and a Sunday-school sustained. At Rockhold another church edifice is under way. At Jellico a lot has been purchased, a temporary building erected, and in it a day-school and Sunday-school taught, while a permanent structure is now under process of erection. A day and Sunday-school have also been sustained at Dowliss, the seat of the great coal operations of the E. Tenn. Coal Co., whose enlightened officials, Welsh Congregationalists, pay one half of the expense. All of these points have been under the supervision of the Rev. A. A.

Myers, the pastor at Williamsburg, who has kept up for them occasional preaching service—the shanty sanctuary, at Jellico, having been consecrated by a precious revival. These points are also all strung along upon the new railway from Louisville to Knoxville over the mountains. At Clover Bottom, 18 miles out from Berea, the growing school has required an enlargement of the building. Prof. B. S. Hunting, of Berea College, has the pastoral care of this church, using some of the members as lay preachers. Both the school and the church are of mixed, anti-caste membership.

On the Cumberland plateau of Tennessee, at Pleasant Hill, Miss M. L. Santley, one of our veteran workers, has been teaching a school that has stirred up a whole county. At Pomona, six miles east, a church building and a church organization have been secured. The Rev. B. Dodge, of Maine, has just entered upon the pastoral care of this field, with a couple of out-stations. Day-schools and Sunday-schools are to be kept up at all these points. At Grand View, on the eastern precipitous verge of this plateau, an academy charter, secured by the citizens, has been turned over to the Association; a tasteful school-house has been built, the citizens meeting one-half the expense, and now a first-class school is to be opened. Some twenty five Northern families, attracted to this spot by its climatic advantage, fall in with the native population to push on this enterprise. A peculiar excellence of this location is that while it is 2,000 feet above the level of the sea, it is easily reached by a narrow-gauge railroad that climbs up the face of these Southern Palisades from the great Cincinnati Southern line at their base in the Valley of the Tennessee.

Upon this review, the Executive Committee would express its profound conviction of the importance and the hopefulness of this mountain work in our Central South.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

The Woman's Bureau of the American Missionary Association, though not yet two years old in its organic life, has still more than a score of years behind it as to its specific work. During this time, at the South, more than three thousand women have been engaged as missionary workers. Of the 319 teachers and special missionaries employed in that department the last year, 216 were women. Of our 27 missionary teachers the last year, among the Chinese 17 were women, while nearly all the others were converted Chinamen. And of the 39 missionary teachers among the Indians, nearly half were women, while 18 were native helpers. The influence of these godly women in building much of their own spirit and character into the women and youth of these depressed peoples can never be found out until the Great Day shall reveal the same. And the influence of the women who have stayed by the stuff at home, ministering of their service and substance for the support of those who are afield, will also have its full acknowledgement at that day, though it cannot be estimated and reported in the exhibits of our treasurer. Sufficient for all such is it that He, who is to audit the account, is ready to say, now and then, of every such devoted friend; "She hath done what she could."

NEEDS.

1—The one thousand dollars a day for the removal of the debt, and for pushing the work all along the line;

2—The Tillotson Institute at Austin, the capital of that empire, six times as large as New England, imperiously demands a Boys' Hall, to cost $25,000;

3—The great State of Arkansas grows impatient in waiting for the building upon its campus in Little Rock of the Edward Smith College;

4—The Tougaloo and the Straight Universities are each in great need of a primary school building;

5—New openings among the Indians are clamorous for occupancy by the school and church process;

6—Our opportunities among the Chinese are kept from a much grander development only by our lack of funds;

7—Endowments for our older institutions have become a distressing necessity. Some more of our children are coming of age. It is getting to be time that they should set up for themselves, as have Hampton and Berea. In the providence of God they were born, and have been developed thus far. And now they have come to the cross of their success. Their wondrous growth brings the burden of support. They are grand sources of light, fountains of blessing. They are not for the red or the yellow or the black races alone. As Dartmouth was founded for the Indians, and has for scores of years had its doors open for Caucasian and Negro students, so these, our Puritan State colleges and normal schools at the South and in the West, are, we trust, ere long to be used by the white young men and women of that region, who are struggling up into their destiny. Who are the men and women to rise up, and, by the laying down of substance, to make perpetual these seats of Christian learning? May God call them and endue them with his Spirit for such a time as this. And upon them his dear Son will pronounce his benediction: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

We are glad to acknowledge our indebtedness to the American Bible Society for a grant of Bibles and Testaments to the amount of $307.50; and to the Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society for supplies of Sunday-school literature at a cost of $631.91, furnished to 136 schools, as against a cost of $321.27, furnished the year before to 59 schools. To a people hungry for the Word of God and for the Sunday-school helps leading to it, such contributions are indeed as the bread of life; and no appliances for making them effective can surpass, we think, those afforded by our corps of Christian teachers and preachers.

HISTORY OF THE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION IN THE SOUTH.

CHARTERED INSTITUTIONS.

BEREA COLLEGE, BEREA, KY.

Berea College, the oldest educational institution founded under the auspices of the Association in the South, was begun in 1857, by Rev. John G. Fee, the intrepid missionary, assisted by Rev. J. A. R. Rogers, a man of kindred spirit. They found a little clearing in the underbrush of Madison County, and opened a school (on anti-slavery principles) in a very humble log-cabin.

In 1859, a constitution was adopted and a Board of Trustees appointed. The question of the admission of colored children was now brought forward. Mr. Rogers would not enter the school unless it was open to all. Two sets of candidates for trustees were in nomination, one for a caste school, the other against it. The anti-caste trustees were elected by a majority of three to one, and the great victory was attained. But the next year came the wave of violence that followed the execution of John Brown. The teachers were driven from the State, and the school was broken up—but only for a time. Jan. 1st, 1866, Mr. Rogers was again on the ground, and the school was reopened. Colored students now applied for admission and were received. When they entered, half the whites walked out, and the school was suddenly reduced to thirteen. But in less than two years after, 200 pupils were reported, about half the number colored and half white. An appropriation of $7,000 was received from the Freedmen's Bureau, and temporary buildings were erected in 1868. In 1869, the first college class in the institutions sustained by the Association was organized in Berea, consisting of five students, all from Kentucky. In this year, also, Howard Hall, a dormitory for boys, was erected at an expense of $17,000. This is a commodious building, with rooms for 82 young men. In 1873, the number of pupils was 247, from 12 different States. In the four higher departments, the number of white and colored students was nearly equal; of the whole number nearly two-thirds were colored. In this year Ladies' Hall, a brick building three stories high, containing rooms for 96 young women, besides parlors, assembly-rooms, library, reading-room, dining-room, kitchen, laundry, etc., was built. This building cost over $50,000, and its early completion was largely due to the liberality of R. R. Graves, Esq., of Morristown, N. J.

Besides these buildings, three commodious schoolhouses have been erected for the grammar, secondary and primary schools, and also a Recitation Hall, which contains six recitation rooms. The College Chapel is a beautiful Gothic structure, capable of seating 500 persons, the cost of which was about $9,000. There is also a Tabernacle, a plain substantial building, conveniently arranged for the large gatherings at commencement time. This will seat about 2,000 persons and cost $1,400.

Commencement Day at Berea exhibits, in the centre of a Southern state, the complete solution of the vexed negro question. In the large tabernacle is an audience of 2,000 people, rich and poor, white and colored, ex-masters and ex-slaves, sitting where they can find seats, without distinction and with the kindest feelings. On a platform are the more advanced students, half white and half colored. The choir is selected with no thought of complexion, and the brass band consists of performers of various shades. In front are professional men with their wives, among whom are several colored preachers, and outside is a mixed crowd of 500 or more. Until this year (1883) the larger part of the crowd has come on horseback, in true Kentucky style, frequently two and in some cases three persons riding on the same animal. Fine buggies and carriages have come filled with people, as also vehicles of almost every variety of construction and in almost every stage of decay; while some persons have walked even so far as 20 miles to be present. But this year three iron horses brought a thousand visitors, and stood all day without hitching. Of the speakers this year, six were ladies, ten gentlemen; six were white, ten colored; twelve from Kentucky, one from Tennessee, one from Arkansas, one from Ohio and one from Illinois. One graduated, three were Juniors, seven Sophomores and five Freshmen.

HAMPTON N. AND A. INSTITUTE, HAMPTON, VA.

Hampton is classic ground. Its famous Roads were the passage-way through which the first white settlers and the first company of slaves entered the United States, and on its shores was opened the first Freedmen's school. In 1867, the Association purchased 125 acres, near the mouth of Hampton Creek, with the buildings. It subsequently secured the hospital barracks, and these buildings, both temporary and substantial, were fitted up for school and farm purposes. In 1868, a Normal School was opened, with Gen. S. C. Armstrong as its principal. In June, 1870, the school was incorporated under a Board of Trustees as the Hampton Normal and Agricultural Institute, and the property, which had this year been increased by the erection of a fine school building, was given into the hands of these trustees.

In 1872, the Virginia Agricultural College Land Scrip to the amount of $95,000 was assigned to it, and Dr. Ruffner, Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State, says: "I can testify that no act of the Virginia Legislature is more universally approved than that which gave this school a third of the Agricultural College Fund." In 1873 the buildings were so crowded that some of the boys occupied recitation-rooms, and 24 were encamped in tents during the winter. A new building was a necessity, and the corner-stone of Virginia Hall was laid. A handsome brick building, accommodating 120 girls, and containing chapel and dining rooms, the whole costing $75,000, was undertaken. At the time the corner-stone was laid, but $9,000 had been subscribed. The following Commencement, this Hall was dedicated, though it was still incomplete, $30,000 being needed to finish it. The Trustees decided not to go on with the work until the amount was forthcoming. The Hampton singers contributed $10,000, the net proceeds of their concerts, and with this and other funds collected the building was finished, free from debt, the next year. It is 190 ft. in front by 40 in width, with a wing 100 ft. in the rear. The chapel seats 400 people, and the dining-room accommodates 275. In 1878 there were 332 pupils, 202 young men and 130 young women, while the graduating class numbered 57. It was in this year that Gen. Armstrong introduced a class of 15 Indians to his school. New buildings again became a necessity. Whitin Hall was erected in 1879, and in 1881 two more buildings, one for Indian and the other for negro girls, were constructed, besides the new Academic Hall in place of the one burned the year before. The hall for colored girls was the generous donation of Mrs. Stone for an industrial hall, and is named the Stone Memorial Building.

The industrial department has always been a special feature of the Hampton School. At the outset farm work was taught the boys; and the girls learned sewing and various branches of household industry. In 1872, a printing press was added to the equipment of the school; and the Southern Workman was published, which has continued with an increased circulation to the present time. Other industries have been introduced, till now, on visiting the school at anniversary, one sees handsome wood work, turned mouldings, flooring, doors, sashes, etc., from the "Huntington Industrial Works;" shoes ready for filling the contract for agency supplies; shining tinware from the "Indian Training Shop," sets of harness from the same; desks, settees, tables and cupboards made for the school, and a neatly painted sign—all the work of Indian and colored apprentices, whose names, with the period of their training, from five months to three years, are indicated on cards affixed to their respective productions. The wheelwright and blacksmith shops show, similarly, axe-helves, wheels and iron work, and outside the door gayly painted farm carts proclaim the skill of Indian and negro mechanics. The tailoring department shows suits of clothes made by colored and Indian hands. The girls of both races are represented by very neat sewing and inviting-looking cake. The farm products have a table to themselves—early vegetables, grains and grasses. An interesting exhibit is that of the little carpenters from the Butler School, a couple of miniature frame houses, clapboarded and painted, with sets of tables, desks and chairs for furnishing. The Normal School Press office has its own exhibit of printing and bookbinding. The press is running, the student compositors, boys and girls, at their cases, and the veteran United States soldier at his bookbinder's table.

The experiment of educating the negroes and Indians together, which was initiated at Hampton in 1878, is a confirmed success. The number of Indian students this last year reached 93.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA, GA.

In October, 1867, a charter was secured for the University at Atlanta, Ga. A site known as Diamond Hill, containing 60 acres of land, was soon after purchased for $15,000. During the summer of 1869, a plain four-storied brick building was erected, containing sleeping-rooms for about 40 pupils, and also a parlor, dining-room, kitchen, etc. It was designed for a girls' dormitory, but during the first year furnished all accommodations, both school and boarding, for boys and girls. The academic and normal departments were opened in October following, and before the close of the second term every room in the building was occupied. In August of 1870 another building of the same style, but larger, containing sleeping-rooms for about 60 boys, besides temporary school-rooms, was completed. In the summer of 1871 this building was enlarged by a wing, providing rooms for about 40 additional pupils, and other schoolrooms. In 1871, the University received a grant of $8,000 from the State, and the Governor, as required by law, appointed a committee of examiners to visit the school at the annual examination. These men were mostly Democrats—one the Governor of Georgia during the rebellion. One acknowledged that he was shocked when he received the appointment, but consented to come for two hours. But he remained through the three days, much interested. The report was a warm commendation of the school, with a hearty indorsement of the capabilities of the African race. In 1872, the first college class was formed. So great was the demand for teachers from this school, that at the close of the year 1873 nearly a hundred of the students were already engaged as teachers. In 1874, the Legislature of the State, without solicitation, voted an annual grant of $8,000 to the University, a most emphatic indorsement of its usefulness. In 1876 the first college class of six was graduated; four completed the normal course and three the Biblical. All of these graduates were Christians; and nearly all went to new fields of labor without pausing for rest or returning to their homes. A large portion of the other pupils did the same, passing, within a week from their studies to the charge of schools of their own in a hundred different places in nearly every part of the State, teaching in school-house, church, log cabin, brush arbor, barn, wherever children could be gathered and a partial shelter from driving rain or burning sun be secured. In 1878, we have this record: 37 alumni have gone forth from the University, 30 of whom are engaged in teaching; four are ministers or pastors of churches; two are mothers of young families and one has deceased. It is a noteworthy fact, also, that every graduate is a professor of religion. In 1880 a portion of the gift of Mrs. Stone, of Malden, Mass., was used in erecting a wing to the girls' dormitory, thus providing a large study hall and rooms for 50 additional pupils. In 1882, Stone Hall, as the Central building of the group, was erected at an expense of $40,000, the gift of Mrs. Stone. It contains chapel and library, the assembly, recitation, and lecture-rooms for the more advanced students, philosophical and chemical laboratory, offices, etc. An industrial department for boys has been organized, which provides for training in carpentry and other mechanical work. For this a new building is now in process of construction, to be known as Knowles Industrial School, $6,000 being contributed for this purpose by Mrs. Helen C. Knowles, of Worcester, Mass. Special training is also given to the girls in nursing the sick, sewing, cutting and making garments, care of household affairs, management of mission work, etc. By the generosity of Prof. Chase, the school has had the use of a cottage, in which, under the charge of a matron, the girls of the graduating class have lived and learned housekeeping by practice under a competent house-mother. A barn, 40 × 60 feet, with cellar of the same size, furnishes facilities for the development of the farm work of the institution.

FISK UNIVERSITY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Fisk School was opened Jan. 9, 1866, and named in honor of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, then an officer of the Freedmen's Bureau at Nashville. The land on which the Government Hospital stood was purchased, and the buildings were used as school-rooms. Nearly a thousand pupils were in attendance the first year. Fisk University was incorporated under the laws of Tennessee, August 22, 1867, with a board of nine trustees, and opened for advanced pupils, the city of Nashville having started primary schools for colored children. The attendance during the first term was 319. The first normal class of twelve was organized in November of the same year. Early in the year 1868, $7,000 were received from Government, and repairs were made in the buildings, so as to accommodate boarding students. In 1869 the Government buildings then in use for the school were transferred to the Association, and permanent foundations placed under them. A dormitory building was also erected and a Gothic chapel.

The year 1872 is marked by the beginning of the enterprise of the Jubilee Singers, under the lead of Prof. George L. White. This little company started forth Oct. 6, 1871, with provisions to last a few days and money to take them across the Ohio River. The University still occupied the Hospital buildings, which were fast going to decay, and the leader of this little band had conceived the idea of raising money for the erection of the new building so pressingly needed. Their struggles we have not space to relate, interesting and remarkable as the story is. But they won success at last, though often at the outset the last shilling of their earnings was spent for provisions. For seven years they sang in this country and in Europe, and mainly from the proceeds of their earnings the present site of the University was purchased and Jubilee Hall erected. January 1, 1876, the University was transferred to this building. It is situated on the former site of Fort Gillam, one of the most commanding and beautiful locations about Nashville. It has an east front of 145 feet and a south front of 128 feet, is five stories in height, including basement, and is supplied with all the conveniences of steam, gas, water, etc. The grounds of the University comprise 25 acres of land, which are laid out with walks and carriage ways, and ornamented with trees and shrubs.

Livingstone Missionary Hall is the other large building connected with Fisk University. The plan for the erection of this Hall took shape in 1876 with the Jubilee Singers, who were then in England, and the first contribution to the fund, outside of the Jubilee Company, was given by Mrs. Agnes Livingstone Bruce, of Edinburgh, daughter of the great African explorer. The honor of completing the work and securing the erection of the building is due to Mrs. Stone, of Malden, Mass., who gave $60,000 through her agent, Rev. W. H. Willcox, D. D. This beautiful building was dedicated Oct. 30, 1882. The large chapel was filled to overflowing with a representative audience, and speeches were delivered by eminent philanthropists and educators. The building is 203 feet in length and 52 feet in width. The central part is ten feet wider, and the whole building is four stories with a basement. It contains a chapel, a library room, museum, scientific lecture room 40 × 30, Treasurer's office, President's room, thirteen class and lecture rooms, and sixty-six dormitory and living rooms. It is heated by steam. The first college class of four entered Fisk University in 1872 and graduated in 1875. The graduates now number 32. Of these, one is President of Alcorn University, Miss.; one is Principal of the Prairie View Normal School, Texas; one is a member of the Tennessee Legislature; seven are principals of colored schools; one is a lawyer in Nashville; one, a minister in Washington, D. C.; one, Professor in Alcorn University, Miss.; one, a minister in Columbia, S. C.; one, a missionary on his way to Umzila's kingdom, Africa; one, a law student at Yale College; two are theological students at the North; while 14 others are teachers, many of them in prominent positions. The school this year numbers 442 students.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, TALLADEGA, ALA.

Talladega College was founded in 1867. A college building that had been built before the war by the whites, but mainly by slave labor, was purchased and named Swayne Hall, in honor of Gen. Wager Swayne of the Freedmen's Bureau. This building, which has since been repaired at a cost of $5,000, is large, well built and stately. During the war it was used as a prison for Federal troops, and a broken window pane in which was cut "prisoners of war" is preserved as a memorial. The hall stands in the centre of a fine campus, and contains a chapel (in which the Church holds its meetings), school and recitation rooms, library and museum. In August, 1869, the corner-stone of a girl's hall was laid, and the building, which was finished in 1870 at a cost of $22,000, was named after Rev. L. Foster of Blue Island, Ill., a principal donor. In 1873, the Theological Department of the college was organized. By the gift of Mr. R. R. Graves, of Morristown, N. J., for whom the building was named, a two-story wooden house and six acres of valuable land were secured. Through the munificence of Mrs. Stone, a third hall was erected in 1881, giving a reading room and dormitories for 80 young men. The same year a new house was built for the President, and the following year two other houses—one the gift of Mr. Seth Wadhams, of Chicago—were secured and are now occupied by a professor and the pastor. In 1883, by the contribution of Mr. J. H. Cassedy, of New York, a two-story school house was erected for primary and intermediate pupils. This year, through aid from the John F. Slater Fund, a shop has been built. These buildings are grouped together on a portion of a tract of about 40 acres of land, and are shaded with elm, maple, water oak and other trees, and are half a mile from Talladega. In 1877 Winsted Farm of 160 acres, less than a mile from the college, was bought, mainly by Connecticut donors.

The Institution is thus furnished with lands and buildings for its varied religious, educational and industrial work.

About half the people of Alabama are colored. With a constituency of more than 600,000 to draw from, this is the only school of high grade, and is the first boarding school, for the freedmen of the State. The College was chartered in 1869. Two years later, the Normal Department was organized, and from the beginning much has been done in training teachers. Its students and graduates have gone far, everywhere carrying the spelling book and the Bible, organizing Sunday-schools and temperance societies while teaching their day-schools. In 1873 the Preparatory and Theological Departments were added. In 1883, the President writes: "Of the 43 who have entered the theological department, 15 have graduated and are pastors of A. M. A. churches; 15 who have not graduated are preaching, and the remainder are now in the seminary. Eight other churches have grown out of the church in the college, and the amount of missionary work performed by the students is not easily computed."

In four years the number of students has risen from 191 to 356. A recent count gave 318 teachers then in the field who had received their education at Talladega. One hundred and sixteen undergraduates were teaching during the summer vacation of 1882. Manual labor has had place here from the beginning, and with the growth of the college new facilities for industrial training have been added. Besides the Winsted Farm, a part of the 40 acres adjacent to the buildings is used for gardening purposes. The shop gives opportunity for instruction in carpentry, painting and glazing, tinning and blacksmithing. A shoe shop is provided in the basement of Stone Hall, where repairing is done. In the same building is a printing press, which has done work for the college and given to some of the pupils a useful trade. A superintendent has been secured who devotes his entire time to the mechanical department. In the girls' industrial school, instruction is given in housekeeping, kitchen, dining-room and laundry work, and also in plain sewing and other needlework.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Straight University is located in New Orleans, La., and is named after its generous patron, Hon. Seymour Straight, of Hudson, Ohio. It was incorporated June 25, 1869. The original site on Esplanade street was purchased by the American Missionary Association in the autumn of 1869, and a fine building was erected with aid from the Freedmen's Bureau and dedicated in 1870. This building was destroyed by fire, Feb. 16, 1877. The school lost but one day and then went on with the work, holding its sessions in Central Church. Many of the students are of Roman Catholic parents.

The new site on Canal street was purchased in the summer of 1877, and the main University building was ready for occupation Oct. 1, 1878. This building consists of two stories and basement. Its dimensions are 72×52, and it cost $8,300. The price received for the lot on Esplanade street and the insurance money on the old building nearly or quite covered the cost of the new lot and building.

The girls' dormitory, Stone Hall, was built in 1881. Mrs. Valeria G. Stone, of Malden, Mass., gave the University $25,000. With this money an additional half square of ground was purchased and the building erected. This building seemed but to create a necessity for a boys' hall, and in the summer of 1883 Whitin Hall was built. To meet the cost of construction and furnishing, the estate of Dea. John C. Whitin, of Whitinsville, Mass., contributed $10,000; and Hon. Seymour Straight, $5,000. The dimensions of this building are 92×48.

The number of students in attendance this year in all departments is 568. Since 1876, 25 have graduated from the Classical Department, 4 from the Higher English Department, and one from the Theological Department. In the Law Department, there have been 61 graduates. Although we have not graduated students from the Theological Department, because of their lack of a previous college training, we have fitted many for the ministry who are now settled over large churches—Methodist, Baptist and Congregational—in Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. The estimated number of students since 1869 who have taught school is 500.

The Law Department was early organized and placed in the hands of leading members of the city bar. It presented such excellent advantages that many young men, white as well as colored, availed themselves of the opportunity of attending its lectures. Side by side the two races have been gathered in the lecture rooms of the professors, and have met in the crucial test of the final examination. In 1882, of the 50 graduates from this department, 35 were white and 15 colored. This department is entirely self-supporting—the professors accepting the fees of the students as their compensation.

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, TOUGALOO, MISS.

In 1869 "The American Missionary Association" purchased five hundred acres of land with a fine mansion upon it and opened a school. Soon after a one-and-a-half story building, 32x70, called Washington Hall, was put up to the left of the mansion for school purposes. The upper part was used for dormitories for boys.

A two story building, 34x70, was erected to the right of the mansion, for boarding hall and dormitories for girls; so that in 1871, when the school was chartered by the State as "Tougaloo University," there were comfortable accommodations for about sixty boarding students.

In 1879 a Board of Visitors was appointed on the part of the State to visit the school annually and report directly to the Legislature the work being done by the Institution. From that time the State has appropriated from $2,000 to $3,000 annually toward the support of the school. Soon after the "Boarding Hall" was built it was enlarged by extending it 42 feet in the rear. In 1878 it was again enlarged to make more room for the laundry.

Sunday night, January 23, 1881, Washington Hall took fire during religious services, and was wholly destroyed. The school was continued during the remainder of that school year in a barn ("Ayrshire Hall") that had just been built

A cottage for the President had been put up during the fall. During this same year the "Boarding Hall" was again enlarged by raising it one story and putting an addition 35×50, three stories high on south side, making accommodations for the lady teachers and about 75 girls. As soon as spring opened a brickyard was started and the first brick in the foundation of the new Hall, a fine brick building 41×112, three stories high and a fine basement, was laid May 31, 1881. The work on this building was done almost entirely by men from A. M. A. schools and churches elsewhere and our own students. It was ready for school use October 1.

The large tract of land on which this institution is located and the character of its surrounding population have marked it out from the first as an industrial school. Its industries now embrace general farming and stock raising, fruit growing, carpentering, blacksmithing and wheel-wrighting, tinning, sewing and other branches of domestic economy. Under the system now inaugurated, each male student receives a year's training in wood-working and another in metal-working in addition to practical and theoretical training in agriculture. After this a limited number are received as regular apprentices in the several trades with a view to fitting them for master workmen.

The industrial work for the girls, though less closely systematized, gives wise and efficient training in sewing, cooking, and general housework, including the laundry.

TILLOTSON COLLEGIATE AND NORMAL INSTITUTE, AUSTIN, TEXAS.

In 1875, the Rev. Geo. J. Tillotson, wishing to benefit the colored people and to become his own executor, visited various points in the South with a view to the establishment of a school. After a careful survey, he selected Austin, Texas, as the most promising point. Grounds just east of the city were purchased at a cost of $5,000. In 1876, a charter was obtained and the work of raising money for the building was commenced. But despite all efforts, it was not till the 17th of January, 1881, that the school opened. Even then the building named Allen Hall was only partially completed. Two of the five floors were open spaces. Only eleven pupils were enrolled at the beginning, but the term closed in June with 107. During this year the building was completed, and at the opening of the fall term its accommodations were taxed to the utmost. Since the close of the second year, many desiring to enter have been refused each year, for lack of accommodations. The pupils come from nearly every prominent point in Texas, and some from Mexico. A second building is now greatly needed and funds are being collected for the purpose. The present number of students is 191.

EDWARD SMITH COLLEGE, LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

In 1882, a tract of 14 acres was bought in Little Rock, Ark., as a site for the Edward Smith College, which had been chartered by the State and named from a gentleman in Massachusetts. This institution is greatly needed in that grandly opening State, where there is as yet little provision for the higher education of the colored people. But for lack of funds, the building has been delayed.

NORMAL INSTITUTES.

AVERY INSTITUTE, CHARLESTON, S. C.

Avery Institute was opened the 1st of October, 1865, in the State Normal School building, in Charleston, which was kindly offered for the purpose by Gen. Rufus Saxton, Assistant Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau. The school commenced with 20 teachers and 1,000 pupils. Every available space in the building was occupied, one hundred scholars being crowded into its beautiful ornamented dome. The enemies of the school would not, however, allow the children to prosecute their studies unmolested. The building was taken from them the 1st of September, 1866, and the children turned out of doors. The Military Hall in Wentworth street, which was erected for the purpose of a Confederate military training school, was appropriated for the purposes of the school, and "John Brown" was echoed through the large and spacious hall that had only heard the tactics of the military, whose arms were to enslave forever the dusky singers.

The school continued in the Military Hall until the 1st of May, 1868, when it was transferred to the new large building on Bull street, and its name changed from the "Saxton School" to the Avery Institute, in honor of the generous philanthropist who had given so large a part of his fortune for the benefit of the colored race. This school has remained under the care of the American Missionary Association and is now a flourishing normal school of high grade, having 401 pupils and 12 teachers.

LE MOYNE NORMAL INSTITUTE, MEMPHIS, TENN.

Schools were opened in Memphis in 1866. The Phœnix and Lincoln school buildings were erected after the riots, furnishing good school facilities, and 1,826 children were enrolled during the year 1867. In 1868, these schools were adopted by the city authorities, and the whole corps of teachers accepted and a portion of the State funds voted to their support. The average monthly enrollment at this time was 1,100; the whole number who commenced the alphabet, 455; the number who advanced from alphabet to reading in easy lessons, 378; the largest number in one month who could read the testament was 851. In 1869, the number of pupils was 2,275 in four schools, Lincoln, Phœnix, Collins Chapel, and Orphan Asylum, supported by the public funds. In 1870, $20,000 was contributed by Dr. F. Julius Le Moyne, of Washington, Pa., for founding an English school for colored youth at Memphis. From this amount the necessary buildings were erected and $11,000 remained as an endowment fund. The school has been held continuously since, except for a period in 1873 when during the scourge of yellow fever three teachers gave their lives at the post of duty. In 1875, over 100 of the pupils were hopefully converted.

The school consists of Normal, Grammar, Intermediate and Primary Departments. The Training Department consists of Intermediate and Primary grades. The Primary is a Model School where the students of the Normal Department may witness really model work with younger and less advanced pupils.

A sewing-room and an experimental kitchen have been fitted up in the building, and classes of girls have received instruction in different kinds of needlework and in cutting garments, in the choice and proper cooking of food and in general housekeeping and household economy. The more advanced pupils also receive regular instruction in the care of the sick, sick cooking, etc. We hope to add a shop for giving to the young men of the school regular instruction in wood-working and the use of wood-working tools.

GREGORY INSTITUTE, WILMINGTON, N. C.

The American Missionary Association began its work among the freedmen in Wilmington, April 9, 1865. A corps of eight teachers opened four day schools in as many different churches. In a short time the number of teachers reached fourteen, and other schools were opened—two in private houses. In one church there were 300 scholars ranging from five to twenty years of age, who did not know a letter of the alphabet. Afternoon schools were opened for women, and night schools for both sexes. Many army officers and soldiers entered heartily into the night-school work. In 1868 the schools were removed to a new building, erected by the liberality of Mr. Williston, of Northampton, Mass. This building was afterward sold to the city, and the school was continued in the house occupied as a teachers' home. Here were accommodated 80 pupils, and later 120. In 1881 Mr. J. J. H. Gregory became interested in this field, and built a handsome brick church. He and his wife went to the dedication, and became so much interested in the school work and saw so clearly the disadvantages under which the teachers labored that, after their return home, the proposal came to build a new Teachers' Home and to enlarge the school building. This was done, Mr. Gregory contributing largely to put the buildings in the present state of completeness. Including the cost of the church, between nineteen and twenty thousand dollars have been spent at this place since 1874 on buildings and improvements. Additions were made to the old building, putting it in altogether new form. The "Home" is of brick, three stories high, with room for pastor's family and the teachers, with servants, under the same roof—light, cheerful and well adapted to its use.

The number of different scholars last year was 312. It is supposed that about 100 have become teachers since 1874. Six of the teachers in the city schools last year were former pupils of this institution. Last year there were in school a father and son—the former a minister of a church in the city.

LEWIS NORMAL INSTITUTE, MACON, GA.

Schools were opened in Macon in 1866. We clip the following from the Macon Daily Telegraph of that year. "More than four thousand colored people of both sexes and all ages are enjoying the privilege of instruction in the schools in this city established since the advent of peace by the charitable people of the North. * * * There are four morning schools, one in each of the four African churches, there is one afternoon school, embracing the more advanced pupils of the morning schools; and there is one night school where freedmen of every color, size, age, of both sexes, meet to learn. In the morning schools about 600 attend, and as many as 350 sometimes attend the night school, which indeed may be denominated a mixed school, for from old men of seventy down to the mere child, and from the old married dame to the sprightly yellow lass, all sizes and ages may be seen here."

In 1868, the Lewis School House was erected, dedicated and named in honor of Gen. Lewis, who, as bureau officer, rendered active service in promoting the interests of the school. On the 25th of March the builders struck their last stroke; on the following day the building was dedicated. In 1873 and 1874, the Lewis High School became the high school of the city. Half of the teachers were from the North and half from the South, they were paid from the public funds. In 1875, the city established separate free schools. This drew away some of the pupils, so that the teaching force was reduced to two or three, and the work of the school was mostly in the upper grades. In the winter of 1876, the school building was burned, together with the church and parsonage upon the same lot. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. With the insurance of $5,000, a handsome brick building was erected under the supervision of Prof. T. N. Chase, of Atlanta University, the school meanwhile being kept in the basement of the Teachers' Home. The new building was dedicated in March, 1878. The church room is in the upper story, and two school rooms in the lower. Here the school was accommodated for six years, until constant growth made some enlargement necessary. In 1882, a wooden building was put up at a cost of $1,000. This has two rooms, each 28 × 31 ft., for use of the primary and intermediate departments. In 1883, another small wooden building was erected to accommodate the rapidly growing library, which was founded by Rev. S. E. Lathrop in 1880. This building cost $500, and was paid for by voluntary donations from individuals North and South, one half the amount being subscribed in Macon. The library was dedicated and opened for use May 31, 1883. It is 24 × 26 ft., well lighted, cozy and pleasant. The library now contains 4,600 volumes given by friends in twenty-six different States of the Union. Among them are many valuable books. A good beginning is made toward a cabinet of minerals, fossils and curiosities. In the spring of 1884, a sum of money having been collected by the workers for establishing an industrial department, the basement under the library building was fitted up and a wood-working shop was arranged. Tools and money were donated by different individuals and Sunday-schools.

About 150 pupils have finished the course of study prescribed in the school. One half of these have gone to higher institutions for further study. A careful estimate would place the number of those who have taught school, while connected with the institution or after leaving it, at 200, who have had in their care an aggregate of not less than ten thousand pupils.

The last year the school enrolled 278 pupils, and at least 100 were turned away for lack of room. There are five regular teachers, besides the teacher of sewing and the teacher of carpentry. Revivals in the school have been of frequent occurrence and hundreds have been converted while studying, a large number becoming preachers, teachers, or other useful laborers. More than six thousand different pupils have been in the institution since its opening.

EMERSON INSTITUTE, MOBILE, ALA.

Work was commenced by the Association in Mobile in 1867. The property on Government street known as "Blue College" was purchased, and the privileges of a common school were afforded to many hundreds in their first eagerness for knowledge. It was named in honor of Mr. Ralph Emerson, of Rockford, Ill. In 1870 and 1871 the building was rented to the city, which supported the school. In 1872 the school again came under the charge of the Association, and in 1873 it was converted into a Normal and Academic School with boarding accommodations. In April, 1876, this building was destroyed by fire, but the exercises were resumed after only one day's intermission in the church building. In the Fall of 1877 a purchase was made of 3½ acres of Holley's Garden, and a brick building, facing on Scott Street, was erected at a cost of about $8,000. The school was transferred to this building in the Spring of 1878. In January, 1882, the flames again laid Emerson Institute in ruins. The school was reopened in the neighboring Baptist and Methodist churches. During the Summer of 1882 the present admirable brick building was completed, which was dedicated Oct. 2d. This building cost about $8,550, and is more commodious and convenient than either of the previous ones. The school this year numbered 306 pupils.

BEACH INSTITUTE, SAVANNAH, GA.

Rev. J. W. Alvord, who accompanied the army of Gen. Sherman, when it entered Savannah, immediately opened schools for the colored people of that city. Not long after this, the American Missionary Association sent from the North a corps of competent teachers and opened a school in the Methodist Church on South Broad street. At the close of the first week 300 children and 118 women were enrolled. The school soon outgrew its quarters and was removed to the Massie School on Gordon street, which building was assigned to this service by Gen. Grover, commander of the district. After this, and prior to 1867, the work of the Association was sheltered in the Colored Methodist Church, New street,

Lamar Hall, Liberty street, the lecture rooms of First and Bryan Baptist churches, and Sturtevant Hall, an old wooden structure on the site of the present buildings at the corner of Price and Harris streets. In 1867, commodious buildings were erected by the Association and dedicated as Beach Institute, in honor of Alfred E. Beach, Esq., editor of the Scientific American, who donated the funds to purchase the site. There were 600 scholars with ten teachers at this time. The Teachers' Home was first occupied on Thanksgiving Day, 1867. From 1875 to 1879 the building was rented to the city for the use of public schools. In the latter year the Association again assumed charge in order to secure a higher grade of instruction than the Board of Education thought wise to furnish. In February, 1878, the Beach Institute was burned. It was rebuilt during the summer, so that the school was opened on time October 1st. The new building is 60 by 80, two stories high and adjoins the Home, which was saved.

LEXINGTON NORMAL INSTITUTE, KENTUCKY.

The Association started a school here in 1866, and the enrolment of pupils the first year was 700. It was called the Howard School. In 1869 the enrolment was 993, and $540 were received from the Public School Fund toward the support of teachers. In 1870, a fine school building was erected by the help of the Freedmen's Bureau, the value of which was $8,000. In 1874, the teachers in the Normal School for a part of the year were supported by public funds. In 1875, work was suspended by the A. M. A., and the building was used by the city for public school purposes. In June, 1882, the Association decided to reopen the school, and the building was repaired. The school reopened in the following autumn, and is now in successful operation.

WILLIAMSBURG ACADEMY, KENTUCKY.

Berea College and its circle of churches had become the symbol of anti-caste Christian fellowship. At the annual meeting of 1882, it was reported that the Ex. Com. had decided to test the scheme still further, by offering those mountain people the aid of a school if they would allow the few colored people to share its privileges. They decided to concentrate the movement upon an academy at Williamsburg, for the education of the teachers of the common schools of that region. The color question was tested, and after discussions a paper was signed by more than thirty of the leading citizens favoring the open door and open hand for the colored people of the mountains. A fine site of two acres was bought at Williamsburg and a two-story frame building erected at a cost of over $3,000. The first year the school numbered 108. Accommodations for rooms and club boarding are provided for a limited number in the third story of the academy and in an adjoining building.

STORRS SCHOOL, ATLANTA, GA.

Schools for the freedmen were established in Atlanta in December, 1865. They were held in various dilapidated buildings in that well-nigh ruined city until the story of the great need of school accommodations reached the ears of Rev. H. M. Storrs' church, of Cincinnati, who gave $1,000 toward the erection of a building, and in 1867 the Storrs school-house was completed and dedicated. The enrolment for the year was 1,900 day scholars and 225 night scholars. In September, 1872, the public schools of Atlanta were organized for the whites, and in January following the school board of Atlanta proposed to the A. M. A. that the use of the Storrs building be given to the city for a public school for the colored people, the A. M. A. nominating the teachers. This plan was acceded to, and remained in operation for five years, when the school fell again under the care of the Association. The seating capacity of the building is 380, and it is crowded to overflowing.

In September, 1883, the Kindergarten Department was organized. An effort is now being made with prospects of success to provide for it a separate building.

The great success of the Storrs school has been largely due to its continuance for seventeen years under the control of one efficient principal.

TRINITY SCHOOL, ATHENS, ALA.

Trinity School was opened under the auspices of the Western Freedmen's Aid Commission, in May, 1865. The first corps of teachers consisted of the wife of the chaplain of the regiment stationed there, a soldier from the same regiment, and the present principal, who has had charge of the school from the first. The number of pupils in the first term was 300, none of them knowing their A B C. In September, the army was withdrawn, and the town passed from military to civil rule. The number of pupils during the first three terms was 500, the teachers often being on service from eight in the morning till six or seven in the evening, and then, taking a hasty lunch, teaching another set of pupils at night. In 1869, the Association bought a building with ample grounds adjacent, thus insuring permanency. The value of the property was then $2,000, and the number of pupils enrolled 225. In 1871, the Home was repaired to the amount of $500. In 1872 a Model School was organized.

In 1879 it became necessary to give up the school or to rebuild it at an expense of not less than $5,000, which latter it was deemed impossible to do. Word to that effect was sent to Athens. The grief of the people was intense. They offered to erect the needful building themselves, pledged over $2,000 at once and proposed to make brick sufficient for its completion. A blind man who could do nothing else offered to turn the crank to draw the water. That summer they burned a kiln of 120,000 brick, and the next summer they burned another. In 1881 the building was finished.

WARNER INSTITUTE, JONESBORO, TENN.

The building at Jonesboro was occupied before the war as a school for white young ladies. It was bought afterwards by the Quakers and turned into a colored school, under the management of Mr. Yardley Warner, of England. Two years ago, it was bought by this Association. It is a two-story brick building with two small frame buildings adjoining. The pupils this year number 109.

BREWER NORMAL SCHOOL, GREENWOOD, S. C.

Early in the year 1872, the Association became the possessor in fee simple of a fine property of eight acres of land and a brick school building in Greenwood, S. C. By an arrangement with Mrs. Perry, of Boston, who founded the Brewer Orphan Asylum near Wilmington, N. C., the asylum was closed and the property was sold, and the name Brewer and the interest of Mrs. Perry were transferred to this institution in western South Carolina. This school has never been large, but both teachers and students have been diligent. In 1878, 26 of the students were engaged in teaching. As the news of this school went abroad into the counties roundabout, many young men were desirous of sharing the advantages given to the Greenwood people, and they took up their "carriages" and started for the seat of learning, but there was no place for them to lodge. At first there were 16 of them in one room, doing their own cooking. In 1879 a very plain double house, built "depot fashion," at a cost, including furniture, of only about $200, was put up, thus furnishing accommodations for self-boarding. This year the school has numbered 156.

DORCHESTER ACADEMY, M'INTOSH, GA.

A primary school was opened at Golding's Grove (as McIntosh was then called in 1871, and was continued until 1879. In that year a new building was built with means furnished by the A. M. A. and the people in McIntosh, at a cost of $1,100, and named Dorchester Academy. This name is historic, having been handed down from the colony that founded the old Midway Church in 1752, which emigrated with their pastor from Dorchester, Eng., to Dorchester, Mass., thence to Dorchester, S. C., and finally to McIntosh, Ga.

In 1883, 28 students had been licensed and sent out to work from this school, and seven schools had made application for teachers, but could not be supplied. This school was graded in 1884.

BURRELL SCHOOL, SELMA, ALA.

The first school for colored children in Selma was opened in the month of November, 1866, by Rev. J. Silsby. It was first opened in a building used as a carpenter shop. It was, however, provided with windows, a corner partitioned off for a recitation-room and otherwise repaired. One of the colored churches was also used. This had benches without backs, and the spaces between the floor boards so large that in the winter the teachers were compelled to stand upon the benches to protect their feet from the cold. Before the summer following, two rooms in the second story of a building, the first story of which was used as a dwelling, were fitted up. The next year the school was opened in an unfinished hotel building, and three teachers occupied a large room on the first floor, having their own departments about them in portions of the room as far as possible from each other. In the fall of 1868 a new two-story school building was dedicated. This building was erected at an expense of between $7,000 and $8,000. The land was purchased by the American Missionary Association. The Freedmen's Bureau donated some of the funds, and Mr. Jabez Burrell, of Oberlin, Ohio, gave to the Association $10,000 for completing the work, and the school was named for him. Since 1869 the city has paid the salaries of the teachers, the Association granting the use of the building.

NORMAL SCHOOLS DISCONTINUED OR TRANSFERRED.

In addition to the institutions above named, which are still in active operation, we give below brief sketches of some of the schools of higher grade, which, for various reasons, have been discontinued or transferred. A survey of the work of the Association would be incomplete without the mention of these schools.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL, RALEIGH, N. C.

In the autumn of 1865, Mr. O. R. Burchard went to Raleigh, under the auspices of the American Union Commission, and opened a school for white children named the Washington School. The Commission discontinued its work the next year, and the A. M. A. consented to open a school in the same building under the same name. The old scholars were invited back, but it was expressly stated that colored children would be equally welcome. For a few days the races attended together, sitting in separate rooms for study, but reciting on the same benches. The number of colored children increased, and the white children were laughed away (one eager girl keeping on alone for some weeks, but finally yielding to the pressure). The school became known as a colored school, and the Freedmen's Bureau erected for it the large building, which was first occupied in January, 1868. In 1869 this house was rented to the State of North Carolina for the use of her colored deaf and dumb and blind children. On an adjacent lot, the gift of Prof. Fisk P. Brewer, the Bureau erected the smaller building, which was occupied by the Washington School until the autumn of 1874, when the school returned to the larger building, and the First Congregational Church of Raleigh took possession of the smaller edifice. The school was continued successfully through the year 1880. In August of that year the property was sold to the City Board of Education.

NORMAL SCHOOL, ANDERSONVILLE, GA.

This school began in 1866 with 27 pupils, only four of whom could read even the simplest words. At the end of six weeks, 85 names were enrolled, with but 15 unable to read. The night school numbered 40, one member of whom walked six miles to attend, returning after the close of school. These schools were held in the building owned by the United States, but built by the Confederate government and used in connection with the prison for Federal soldiers, and they were opened in spite of threatenings from the whites and consequent fears of the blacks. The day school became a normal school in 1873, having then 117 pupils. In 1875, from lack of funds, we were compelled to discontinue the work at this station.

FLORIDA NORMAL INSTITUTE, JACKSONVILLE.

The building was dedicated April 10, 1869. It stood on an eminence in the rear of the city, commanding a fine view of the St. Johns River and the surrounding country. It was two stories high, containing six large school-rooms, a library and apparatus-room, and a large assembly-room capable of seating 300 persons. The entire cost was nearly $16,000, and it was the first Normal school building ever erected in the State. The schools were brought together and graded. Six teachers were associated with the principal in her work, four of these receiving their appointment and support from the County Board of Education. In 1872, the Association withdrew from this work.

LINCOLN SCHOOL, MARION, ALA.

This school was established in 1868. In 1869, the school building was completed. It was owned by a local board of trustees and leased to the Association for ten years free of rent. It was dedicated April 11th, a frame building about 50 feet square, two stories high, with four good-sized school-rooms, besides recitation room for the normal class. There was ample-room for 250 pupils. The cost of the building was about $4,200, $2,800 of which was appropriated by the Bureau, and the remainder contributed by the colored people and the American Missionary Association. In 1871, the number of the pupils was 370. In 1873, owing to the lack of public funds to help in the support of teachers a smaller force was sent than had formerly been employed. In 1874, a State Normal School and University was established by the School Board of Alabama at Marion. Our teachers were elected to positions in this school, which was under State patronage, and the Lincoln School was virtually merged in it.

SWAYNE SCHOOL, MONTGOMERY, ALA.

The first colored schools in Montgomery were organized July 31st, 1865, by Rev. John Silsby under commission of the Northwestern Freedmen's Aid Commission.

In April, 1866, the A. M. A. arranged with the Cleveland Aid Commission to carry on missionary work at this place. In 1867, the A. M. A. recommenced work, and opened its first schools in Montgomery for colored children in one of the colored churches in the city. Subsequently the school was held in a large building once used as a slave market, and bearing the sign, partially obscured by whitewash, "Fritz & Frazer, negro brokers." In the spring of 1868, the school was transferred from the old slave market to a substantial brick building, named "Swayne School," in honor of Gen. Swayne, who secured from the Freedmen's Bureau about $15,000 for its erection. Swayne School was turned over by the Bureau to a Board of Trust who leased the property to the A. M. A. In 1870, the A. M. A. granted to the Montgomery Board of Education the use of Swayne School for a free public school, the A. M. A selecting and recommending the teachers, and the City Board examining and electing them. In this way a large and successful school has been continued ever since, in 1872 the number of pupils reaching 612. In 1882, the A. M. A. resigned its lease to the city, and has since had no control over the school.

UNION ACADEMY, COLUMBUS, MISS.

Columbus Union Academy was organized in 1868, under the supervision of J. N. Bishop, Esq., who was afterwards City Superintendent. Previous to this, a school had been sustained under the auspices of the Society of Friends. In 1874, the number of pupils was 545, with 8 teachers. In 1876, we have the report that the average annual attendance for the nine years had never been less than 300, that 30 teachers had received their education at the Academy and had since taught successfully; and about 600 different pupils had received instruction there, which, with 800 different pupils taught by the teachers educated there, would make a total of 1,400 who had been directly and indirectly benefited by it. From 1877 to 1879, the property, though held by the Association, was in use for the accommodation of public schools; and, in 1880, the building was sold to the city of Columbus for a colored school. The building was of wood and constructed from an old army hospital.

BARNES INSTITUTE, GALVESTON, TEXAS.

Work was commenced in Galveston in 1866 in school-rooms of the scantiest measure and poorest quality. After three years one of the teachers secured $350 while North on vacation, toward procuring a site for a new building. The freedmen themselves added $100, and the Association doubled the sum and procured the site, but deeded it to a local Board of Trustees, mostly colored. In 1870, the Bureau completed a house at a cost of about $4,000, and a successful graded school was in operation. In 1872, the State School Superintendent of Texas proposed to rent the building and pay the salaries of our teachers. The contract was entered into for the building, but the missionary teachers were rejected; unsatisfactory colored teachers were put in charge, the pupils withdrew, and but a remnant of the school remained. The house was finally recovered and the school immediately filled up, when the Association again assumed charge. The A. M. A. finally withdrew from this work in 1875. The school at Austin, Texas, had been commenced, which was to take the place of the Barnes Institute in educational work for the State.

NORMAL SCHOOL, PINE BLUFF, ARK.

Teachers were sent to Pine Bluff in 1867. In 1868, two eligible lots were purchased upon which Government erected a school-house worth $3,000. There were that year 100 pupils in regular attendance. In 1869, it was made a normal school. But in this year the free school system was established, and in the following year the teachers commissioned by the Association were supported by public funds. There was talk of transferring the Normal School to Little Rock, and the Association sold its property at Pine Bluff to the local school board. But aid was not obtained from the Bureau for this school at Little Rock, and the Association continued to send teachers to Pine Bluff until 1876.

ELY NORMAL SCHOOL, LOUISVILLE, KY.

School opened in 1866. The school building was put up in 1868 at a cost of $20,000, of which sum the government appropriated $12,300. The lot had a front of 100 ft. on Broadway and 220 ft. on Fourteenth street. The building was 50 by 70, two stories high, of brick, with seven rooms and accommodations for 500 pupils. The house was formally dedicated on the 6th of April, and named in honor of Brevet Major-General John Ely, who first organized the Bureau in this State. That year there were 399 pupils, and a normal department was organized with 20 pupils. In 1870, number of pupils 485. In 1872 the Ely building was leased to the Board of Education, constituted of a number of colored citizens, and it was used as the high school for colored children, and so continued till 1876 when the building was unoccupied. In 1880, the building was sold and a part of the proceeds donated to the Colored Orphans' Association, of Louisville.

HOWARD SCHOOL, CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

The first colored school here was opened in 1864 among the colored soldiers by the W. F. A. C. and the A. M. A. Early in 1865, a private school was opened for the citizens by the same parties. It was taught in a house prepared at the North, sent to Chattanooga, and erected for the use of the Christian Commission. Most of those who attended at first were grown persons, few of whom could either read or write. Gradually the children found their way into the school and it was necessary to secure more room. An old government building was obtained, and in this and such other places as could be found the schools were continued till 1869, when they were suspended for one year and a building was erected costing about $8,000, named after Gen. Howard, and seating about 240, though more were always present. At the close of the war, the W. F. A. C. surrendered its part of the work to the A. M. A. In 1869 the pupils numbered 855 in all departments. In 1872 the city assumed the financial responsibility of the school, the Association granting the rent of the building free and appointing the teachers. In 1877, and since, the building has been rented to the City Board of Education for the use of public schools; but has recently been sold to the city.

PRIMARY SCHOOLS DISCONTINUED.

During the war, and for a time afterwards, the school work of the Association was necessarily primary and transitional. Besides the 43 primary schools still existing, we find of these abandoned schools a record of at least 423, distributed as follows: Maryland 9, Virginia 56, West Virginia 3, District of Columbia 8, Delaware 7, North Carolina 17, South Carolina 17, Georgia 46, Alabama 15, Florida 7, Mississippi 45, Missouri 25, Louisiana 27, Texas 30, Arkansas 14, Tennessee 16, Kentucky 63, Kansas 6, Illinois 14, Indiana 2, Michigan 1, Indian Territory, 1.

* Report of last year.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

The American Missionary Association, having in charge missions for the Indians and Chinese, yet finds its principal work in the South. Always the friend of the slave, it stood ready at the door of emancipation to enter upon its work for those who had suffered from the evils of centuries of bondage, and in this work it met at the outset the wreck of womanhood.

Since the character and condition of the woman governs the advancement of any people, does not the hope of the South, and possibly of our whole land, lie in the elevation of the women who yet suffer from this heritage of degradation and vice? So thought the American Missionary Association twenty years ago, when, with its Bureau of Woman's Work practically organized, though as a silent partner, it sent out its five hundred lady missionaries in one year on their errand of mercy to those in darkness. The experience of those twenty years has not only deepened the conviction of the need and shed light upon methods of work, but it has also developed the necessity for the co-operation of the women at home, in helping to sustain missions already established and to plan for rapid extension to other fields. Hence, the Bureau of Woman's Work is no longer a silent partner, but a recognized agency, seeking your aid in meeting the great responsibility before it.

It is the purpose of the Bureau to assume such portions of the work at any mission station as may have direct influence in the training of girls—as, e. g., the support of teachers, and of special missionaries in connection with the churches.

As in the foreign field, so in this peculiar work, it is found that the most permanent results are secured by gathering the young into Christian schools. The work of the teacher is not supplementary to careful parental training, as in schools to which your own cherished girls have been committed; her responsibility takes wider scope, as she gathers within her influence these worse than homeless ones, and seeks to train them to paths of virtue and intelligent usefulness. All who are brought into these schools do not make brilliant scholars. A few excel: many reach fair attainment, and in their turn go out into the country about to share with others the help they have received; many more establish homes, and in their own pure married lives find the domestic happiness of which their parents were deprived. One such, in writing to her teacher, who had taken work in another field, says: "I am sorry to say that the most of the girls that have grown up since you went away have gone wrong, but those that you had under your care, the most of them, grew up to be nice women, and have married very well. I often hear people say, if you had staid here all the girls would not have done so bad." The teacher in sending us this letter says of her: "She was not in school long enough to become a good scholar, but attended long enough to obtain ideas of morality which make her a good wife and mother, and give her a great influence for good in the community. Alas for the many colored girls whose home influences are anything but pure, whose temptations are far greater than those of any other class, who are not hedged about and protected by the position of father or brothers, who are regarded as lawful prey by the vicious of two races, and who 'go wrong!' The most important part of our American Missionary Association work is but half realized by many." No, dear friends, the importance of this work is not realized. The old slavery and anti-slavery struggles, with the terrible war which ended the strife, have passed into history. Our young people who now are filling the ranks in church life and missionary effort do not carry with them the painful memories that bring ever to our remembrance the pitiable condition of the thousands upon thousands of freedmen who by emancipation were thrust helplessly into life and left as foundlings at our doors. Even with many who do remember, there lingers an impression that the response in feeding and clothing, and teaching the alphabet, long ago met the demand. But what are the facts to-day? Will the young people note them carefully. The 4,000,000 of freedmen multiplied to 7,000,000 of free people; the mothers born and reared in bondage, with no personal experience of the sanctity of the home—with no home to sanctify; and multitudes with no latent self-respect that would tend to create a home; the children growing up in the midst of ignorance and vice, with generations of superstition and its evils as their heritage. Such is the condition of this people.

All that has been done, or that can be done, by public schools and private instruction, to relieve the illiteracy merely, falls far short of the need; for careful training in morals and Christian life, as indicated by the incident I have given, is the great purifying influence that is to save this people.

And this is missionary work, and must be done largely by women, moved by Christian sympathy and love—who are willing for Christ's sake and our country's sake to apply their best talent in this service, in either going or sending until the work is accomplished. It is a slow work with even the most advanced of those who come to us, yet every Christian youth sent out from our training schools becomes a working power, and so the forces multiply.

You can readily infer the demand upon the missionaries in prayerful, painstaking effort that finds in Christian principle the power of continuance in well-doing.

The year just closed of the Bureau of Woman's Work records some advancement in interest and contributions. The States of Iowa and Wisconsin have by the ladies sustained each one missionary; Illinois, Ohio and Maine, each two missionaries, and the ladies of Vermont assumed the support of a school with two teachers, and a part of the year three. Encouraged by their success and the interest awakened, they have undertaken for the next year the entire cost of the school at McIntosh, Ga., including an addition to the school building. Likewise the Maine ladies, finding it good to be zealously affected in a good cause, have this year assumed the support of their third missionary.

In accordance with a circular which we have recently issued, entitled "A Plan with its Reasons," a system of shares of $20 each is adopted, and societies contributing this amount receive a monthly letter from the field. Already sufficient shares have been taken to sustain a teacher, and so we report, as contributed directly to this department, the support of 12 missionary teachers at a total cost of $4,568.

A liberal response has also been made to our appeal for supplies as furnishing for dormitories, basted work for sewing-rooms, etc.

We acknowledge these facts with gratitude and encouragement. But this is peculiarly a mission for women, and there is a constantly increasing demand for more helpers and new fields. Yet how can we enlarge or even sustain the work already undertaken, except as those who abide at home shall distribute to us the nesessary means?

FORT BERTHOLD AGENCY.

Rev. C. L. Hall writes: We have had an encouraging year, and are beginning to see some results of our eight years' labor and waiting. There has been more willingness on the part of the Indians to hear the Gospel, to adopt civilized ways, to work and to submit to the education of their children. The day school has been kept up through the year with a total average for the year of 32 pupils and of 54 for the latter six months. About 100 different boys and girls have been under instruction during the year. Of the 17 scholars sent away to Hampton and Santee, 9 have returned this Summer, bringing back good influences to their homes. Six other pupils were taken down from Devil's Lake to Santee last fall.

The advance made by the Indians here is seen in their increased industry in agricultural pursuits, in the breaking down of superstition so that scientific medical treatment is increasingly called for, and the indication of the beginning of a break-up of the old filthy camp life. The first decent dwelling outside the old village is now being put up by a regular attendant of our meetings whose children have just returned from our Santee school. The Christian influences are thus seen to be here, as elsewhere, the civilizing power, but legislation giving a secure title to individual land, property, and a recognition of the Indian before the common law of the land, are imperative needs.

We rejoice in having been able to help in the organization of a government boarding school at Fort Stevenson, an abandoned military post 17 miles from this agency, where there are now 50 scholars, with Prof. F. B. Wells, the nominee of our Association, in charge, and Mrs. Wells as matron. It is hoped that there will be a large increase of pupils another year.

The church and Sunday-school attendance averaged 53 for the year at Fort Berthold, while for the latter part of the year 43 more attended Sabbath exercises at Fort Stevenson, making 97 as a total average for the latter six months on the Sabbath. Two week-day meetings were kept up at Berthold and one at Stevenson. There were 11 white church members at the agency and four Indian members connected with the mission, but as only one or two were permanently here no church organization was effected. Visitation and pastoral work were kept up. During the year evangelistic trips were made to the Crow Agency and Poplar River, in Montana, and to Fort Buford and Devil's Lake in North Dakota. The Devil's Lake Indians, under native elders, with only a few missionary visits, have established a church and school and built a chapel for themselves, and the present evangelist, supported by the Dakota Indian Home Missionary Society of native brethren, has a congregation of 49. This result is all the more remarkable as it has been attained at an agency under Roman Catholic management. At the Crow Agency there is a large field of work among a tribe nearly related to the Gros Ventres of Berthold, and we have been desirous of placing workers there this summer. The field is open.

SANTEE AGENCY, NEBRASKA.

There has been an increase in the attendance of pupils in the school, and also continued gain in the average attendance, the last month showing the largest average attendance of boarding scholars for the whole year. The growing interest in the Indian community at large in education and in our schoool as their school for higher training is marked. We do not have to solicit scholars, and for the coming year the prospect is that we shall be crowded far beyond our measure of room or endurance. The pupils come from nine different tribes.

The industrial department has had considerable development the past year. The accommodations have been increased by the building of a blacksmith's shop with five forges, and the doubling of the size of the carpenter shop, the three shops, carpenter, shoe shop and blacksmith, giving instruction to 30 pupils each day. In the brick-yard since spring the boys have made 130,000 brick. All the boys have had something of farm work besides the shop instruction.

Last fall plans were perfected for a dining hall capable of seating 200 pupils. The building is now enclosed, but without more means for building it cannot be occupied this winter. On the lower floor are the dining-room, bakery, kitchen, store-room, ironing and laundry rooms, besides vestibules and closets. On the second floor are parlors and sitting-room for guests and pupils, a printing office, and business office, a store-room and eleven sleeping rooms. On the 3d floor are 18 sleeping rooms. Besides those who have the charge of the house and teachers who will room there, forty and perhaps fifty pupils can be accommodated. It is of wood, with granite foundation.

An outlying district of the mission field here is at the Ponca Reserve. Here a school-house has been built by the government, a very neat building that can seat 50 persons. By its side is a teacher's house, with three large rooms, closets and cellar. Mr. Riggs went up with Major Lightner and dedicated the school-house, and as the foundation stones of all the lessons that were to be given them they placed two Bibles on the desk, Major Lightner giving a copy of the English Bible and Mr. Riggs a copy of the Dakota Bible. Mr. Riggs preached, Major Lightner made an address, and Standing Bear responded feelingly and very appropriately. The Association is looking for the teacher to put into this field.

This is but one point. All over the Indian country are places open, the people ready, the opportunity slipping by us. Mr. Riggs writes: "What can you do to make the churches awake? We look around upon this people and sentimentally bemoan their wants, but the Lord says, as He did to his disciples of old, 'Give ye them to eat.'"

OAHE, DAKOTA.

Rev. T. L. Riggs writes: The Dakota Mission schools are, in connection with the Cheyenne River Agency, as follows:

1st. Industrial Day School, at Oahe, on Peoria Bottom, and taught by Miss Collins, of the mission.

2nd. Chantier Bottom Day School, taught by Wm. Lee, a Teton Sioux, educated in our schools. This school had been in session but a few months of the year, and will probably be discontinued.

3rd. Cheyenne River Day School No. 1, taught by Rev. Isaac Renville, a Sisseton Sioux and Missionary of the Native Missionary Society.

4th. Cheyenne River Day School No. 2, taught by Elizabeth Winyan, a Sisseton Sioux. This school has been in session but a few months the past year. We have recently built a neat school-house at this point.

5th. Cheyenne River Day School No. 4, on the Cheyenne River, over 60 miles from the agency, and taught by Clarence Ward, a Teton Sioux, educated in our schools.

There has also been occasional instruction given at the village near the site of old Fort Pierre, by David Lee, a Teton Sioux, educated at our schools. We have provided at this village a substantial school-house, paid for in part by the Indians themselves, and a permanent school will be established.

There is also a movement at another and smaller village toward securing a school. I shall soon have a building erected for them and a school will follow. Moreover, I have also arranged for additional schools on the Cheyenne River, Nos. 2½ and 3, for one of which the school-house is now ready. One of these additional schools will be taught by a native already secured and the other is to be in charge of a white missionary. One other school, that at Grand River, among Indians of the Standing Rock Agency, taught by Edwin Phelps, a Sisseton Sioux, has been under my care.

Progress in all our schools has been good, the teachers faithful and the average attendance much better than for the past years. Instruction given by the native teachers is chiefly in the vernacular, though at three schools English also has been taught. It is a marked fact that where a child can read in his own language he is usually far better able to master the difficulties of English speech.

As a mission station this station is weak, and sadly in need of additional mission force. During the year past Miss Collins has been my only distinctively missionary white helper. The natives have done well and will grow in ability, doubtless. Still we need more help. The new stations on the Cheyenne River should have some one to look after their needs closely all the time. There should be a white missionary—a missionary family—located in their midst.

Our church growth has been steady and encouraging. Eight have been admitted to membership. Five adults and four infants have been baptized. The native Christians, too, are growing in giving: they have given $120 to support their pastors, $9.84 for missionary purposes, and $32.87 during the past year for other work. During the year a considerable portion of the membership being on the west side of the Missouri, a branch division was provided for, meetings being held in two places, and two native preachers being elected. To provide for a second place of worship a donation of $25 was made from the church treasury. Penny collections are taken up each Sabbath at both places of preaching. From the central church at Oahe different ones have gone at times of their own motion, and again have been sent to villages where no Sabbath services are held.

During the year, seven of our Peoria Bottom homestead-takers have made final proof, and now hold title to 160 acres of land, and are enjoying the privileges of fully developed citizenship.

I have to report the erection of five new station buildings in connection with the Cheyenne River Agency Indians and the completion of the station building on Grand River during the year. One of these, No. 4, Cheyenne River, is built from funds provided by the 'Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians and others of North America," of Boston. From this Society I have received $1,200, out of which this station building has been erected and an active, native missionary supported among Indians formerly of Sitting Bull's following.

Two of the station buildings put up deserve special mention. One, that opposite Fort Sully, has been the subject of special pleas made by the Indians of that village for over two years. I hesitated about attempting anything—the village was so small and the prospects for the future were anything but promising. The Indians persisted, however, first enlisting the interest of Chaplain Crocker, of Fort Sully, and then getting of their own motion considerable material ready for the house. They showed themselves so thoroughly in earnest that it seemed best not to suffer them to become discouraged for want of assistance.

The second station building I would specially mention is the one erected near the sight of old Fort Pierre. This is a considerable village. Many of our Christian Indians live here. They have had no school nor any school building. For two years they have held Sabbath services off and on, as the saying goes. Within the year regular services have been kept up. A native preacher, one of themselves, elected by the vote of the church has had charge. Last winter they cut and hauled logs for a house that would serve as place for worship and for a school. The Christian element gained strength. Our church voted $25 toward the building, and the result is a very neat station building costing $175. I was a little fearful lest at the office it might appear that I had exceeded bounds in making expenditure thus. Still I believe I am ready to stand all such risk under like demand. I'll confess, however, that I was relieved somewhat when, the next Saturday, after the last bill was paid on the house I received a wholly unexpected check for $40 to use as I should "see fit." This came from the Sunday-school at Glencoe, Ill. On the next day, Sabbath, I took my boat and rowed down stream against a wind ten miles, and walked three or four more to preach to them and tell the news. The house was full, every part of it. They were nearly as well pleased as I. However, when it came to turning back on my steps and pulling up stream, home, I felt that I had with my preaching done a large Sabbath-day's work.

The work, as it stands to-day is full of promise and encouragement. I get letters every week from Indians who have been to school and learned to write, who are at Rosebud, Red Cloud and Standing Rock Agencies, asking that schools be established with them. One whose letter I received to-day asks for some one who shall bring the "good news." And from villages on the Upper Cheyenne and on Bad River, the request often comes for some one to teach them. My own time has been fully taken up. Aside from the care of the work in this near neighborhood (within 75 miles) I have traveled in visiting the Grand River Station about 800 miles since last November—this for one station and all overland work. The work presses and we strain to keep it along, but much that might be done has to wait.

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY.

Rev. Myron Eells writes: At the date of my last annual report religious affairs here were in rather a curious position. A sect which have gone by the name of "Shakers," arose about that time. It was composed of some Indians off of the reservation and some on it, while others on it were strongly opposed to the sect. They believed in the cardinal principles of the gospel. They gave up gambling, betting, horse-racing, whiskey, incantations and medicine men. But they rejected the Bible, professing now to have direct revelations from heaven in dreams and visions; they prophesied, especially setting the time for the end of the world; they were opposed to schools, some of them worshiped their ancestors; they said that some of their women were turned into angels, and that they raised the dead to life; they brushed off each other's sins, which were so many that they came to the surface of the skin; and they were taken with a kind of very rapid shaking of the hands, arms and head, which sometimes continued for hours, and which seemed to be based on somewhat the same principle as were those of the "jerks" which prevailed among the somewhat uneducated whites in the Southern and Western States fifty years ago. It was a combination of Catholicism, Protestantism, old Indian practices, dreams and visions. It was only after two severe contests, in the last of which the agent took part, that this sect was conquered last October.

Since that time church attendance and Christian work have gone on better than for years. More prayer meetings have been held than ever before during the same length of time. I find that I have held sixty-two, and during the winter the Indians kept up two or three without my aid. Twenty-three have united with the two churches, twenty of whom were Indians, on profession of faith—far more than during any previous year.

There has been much less employment of the Indian doctors than ever before, a number of families refusing to have them, even when they saw certain death staring their children in the face. In October a woman offered me her household gods—her rattles made of deer hoofs, for incantation purposes—because she had become a Christian and had no more use for them. Ten years ago it was difficult for me to get a sight at them. In the winter a man gave me, for nothing, his gambling disks, which I could not have obtained ten years ago for less than eight or ten dollars, and there has hardly been any gambling on the reservation for more than a year. Last Fourth of July passed without a cent being bet either at gambling or horse-racing, the first time since they have observed the day. A number have stopped the use of tobacco. On Christmas the Indians took more part than ever before, five of them making speeches and six of the girls playing each a piece on the organ. I have sold to the Indians about two hundred and fifty large Bible pictures, 28 by 35 inches, during the year, making, with some previously sold, about four hundred and fifty in twenty-one months. Nearly all the families on the reservation have more or less prayer at their homes, though probably not all are Christians. Even the medicine men pray, being somewhat like the Samaritans of old, who at the same time worshiped the God of Heaven and the gods of the land.

The school has, under the Agent, increased to about fifty scholars, nearly double what it was a few years since, diminished ten days ago by eleven, who left us to go to the Indian Industrial Training School at Forest Grove, Oregon; but others will come in to take their places.

I have spent considerable time with the scholars, keeping a singing school in the winter, giving the scholars short lectures on scientific subjects, illustrating them with specimens from my cabinet, thus opening a new source of knowledge to them; and this summer spending a half hour nearly every week in teaching them new songs from the Gospel Hymns and Sacred Songs, and also giving some of them lessons on the cabinet organ.

At Jamestown, near Dungeness, the work has gone on steadily. In November, three of the Christian Indians spent a week in accompanying me on a missionary tour to others of the same tribe at Clallam Bay, fifty miles farther down the Straits of Fuca. It was the first work of the kind they had done, and they did it well. In November, a number of them brought their children to be baptized—the first instance of the kind among those Indians.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE CIVILIZED INDIAN?

The question is no longer, can the Indian be civilized, but, what becomes of the civilized Indian? The best answer we can give is that, of over seventy Indians, chiefly Sioux, who, since 1881, have returned from Hampton to their homes, not over seven have relapsed to Indian ways; not one has become a bad character: even the few who have "gone back to the blanket" having not misbehaved. Most of them are doing well, and some of them very well. They were, at last reports, employed as follows:

BOYS.—Teaching in Government schools, 4; assisting in Government schools, 1; clerks at Agency, 2; interpreter at Agency, 1; working at trades at Agency, 9; employés at Agency, 4; attending school at Agency, 3; working on their own or parents' farms, 9; cutting cord-wood, 2; young boys at home, behaving well, 4; unemployed and adrift, 5; returned to Hampton for more education, 5.

GIRLS.—Assisting in girls' school, 1; attending girls' school, 3; at home, doing well, 4; married well, 2; unemployed and adrift, 2; returned to Hampton for more education, 2; died since return—both sexes, 8.

Total, boys and girls, 71.

These do not include the seventeen who, in 1878, came, under Capt. Pratt's care, from St. Augustine, Florida, most of whom have turned out well; nor about a dozen who were sent back early for poor health or bad conduct, who improved very little at this school; nor thirty-two who, June 1, 1884, after a three years' course, were taken back to their homes, of whom nearly all have already found situations; but not enough time has elapsed to justify any claims for their success.

NOTES ON THE STATISTICS.

1. These numbers are not dry. They stand for months of earnest Christian work, or for souls that were very dark—most of them very dark still—but brought where the light of the world has dawned on some of them and may lighten, cheer and save them all. I venture to suggest that the figures be studied. Let it be observed that the largest numbers (that is, those in the second column) do not represent our schools as you would find them on a casual visit (look for that in the fourth column); but they stand for all who for a longer or a shorter time, during the past year, have been connected with the schools. On the other hand, the numbers of greatest interest—those in the last two columns—do not represent all among the 1,864 pupils who profess to have ceased from idol-worship, or who give evidence of conversion, but only those in actual attendance on the schools in the last month of their session for this year. The number of whom we may hope that they have been converted during the past year is, I trust, not less than 40. I have not, at this writing, the data necessary in order to speak accurately. The total number for whom we have cherished this hope during the existence of the mission is nearly 500. About 160 have been baptized.

2. The numbers in almost all the columns are considerably less than they were last year. This was anticipated; and, in view of it, the current expenses have been greatly curtailed, and the opportunity seized for an earnest effort to reduce the debt resting on mission-house properties in San Francisco. But at the beginning of the year the teachers and helpers were invited to join the Superintendent in special and united prayer for more of the converting power of God: they were urged to avail themselves of the better opportunity, which a reduced attendance would afford, for close personal effort with each pupil, in order to his salvation; and God has so answered our prayer that perhaps the harvest of this year may prove to be greater than that of any preceding one.

3. The Restriction law, which for the time being has greatly reduced the immigration of the Chinese, and is thus the main cause of our diminished numbers, seems to have had the effect to make those who are here less migratory. At any rate, the attendance on all our schools has been more steady than in any preceding year. This is helpful.

4. The question may be raised whether the operation of this law will not, by and by, so reduce the attendance on our schools as to involve the suspension of the Mission. I reply that the danger of this is certainly not imminent. I think that we have touched bottom, and that the new year will witness an increase all along the line. At any rate there are, and are sure to be for generations, not less than 70,000 Chinese in California. All the Missions combined do not reach 4,000 of them. There are supposed to be 20,000 Chinese in San Francisco, but the average attendance on all the Mission Schools here does not, at this date, reach 300. It is in this case "the ninety and nine," and more, that are lost in the wilderness, while, in comparison, only the "one" is safe in the fold. Somehow we must go after these lost ones till we find them. And this is the problem which we have set before us for the year to come—how to break through that Chinese wall of prejudice, superstition and conceit, and reach and win and save the throng that are darkened and enthralled within it. Only faith in a Saviour all-sufficient, in the Comforter sent forth to reprove the world of sin, gives us any courage for the undertaking.

THE FINANCES.

I have already alluded to that which has been the special effort of the year, so far as our finances are concerned: the reduction of our debt. At the close of the last year, this debt amounted to $4,050. The properties encumbered by it were estimated to be worth $8,500.

The resources have been as follows:

Appropriation from Parent Society	$9,000.00
Contributions made directly to the Treasury of the Mission	3,794.55
Rents from Mission house property	438.00
Sale of Furniture	4.00
Balance to Permanent Property Account as per report for last year	130.10
Total	$13,366.65

The disbursements have been these:

1. General Fund: Salaries of Superintendent, Teachers and Chinese Helpers		$6,936.25
Rents of Mission Houses		2,062.00
Incidentals, including fuel and lights, $328.40; water, $87.95; printing annual reports, circulars etc., $58.10; furniture, $70.85; traveling expenses of Superintendent and helpers, $57.50; minor repairs, $19.65; postage, $11.00; preaching, $20.00; sundries, $7.80		661.25
		$9,659.50
2. Permanent Property Account: Interest	$250.50
Taxes	22.00
Insurance	32.25
Repairs	107.50
Payments on debt	3,300.00
		3,712.25
Total disbursements		$13,371.75

There remain to be paid on the debt, $750. Some subscriptions are still unpaid. When the account of the year's work is fully made up, we trust that the balance against us will be less than $700.

SERMON.

BY REV. GEO. LEON WALKER, D. D.

Ephesians, ii., 14.—For he is our peace who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us.

Middle walls of partition among men are what the whole world seems to have taken great pleasure in building. Some of these walls have indeed been overthrown. But some of them are still formidably strong.

In lands of hereditary feudalism or caste, birth constitutes such a dividing wall. It puts a barrier between individuals and between classes, and separates, generation after generation, the dwellers on the self-same acres into distinct and sometimes antagonistic companies. The fact has long been recognized that the caste system of India is the first factor in significance—the chief, most perplexing and difficult to encounter, in dealing with that vast and ancient empire whether in the way of civil or religious welfare.

The analogous principle of feudalism confronted Christianity and civilization with like obstacles on European soil. And to some extent it does still. For, even where the old separation principle is so much weakened of its ancient vigor as it now is in Great Britain, still even there the accident of birth remains the first fact, the ground principle of all social relations. Of what class he was born determines for the average Englishman almost all the horoscope of life for him. The general style of his pursuits, the quality estimated on the social scale of his companionships are for the most part predetermined matters. Splendid examples there are all along, and constantly increasing too, both of noble and plebeian type, of the breaking through of these conventional barriers.

The late gifted prime minister of great Britain, though of plebeian and Hebrew birth, was a conspicuous illustration of the power of a really shining genius to overleap the barriers of established class distinctions and to force itself across the lines of ancient demarcation in that historic land. And on the opposite side the late Prince Consort and the present dukes of Sutherland and Argyll are examples almost equally marked of a passage over conventional boundaries (in what some of their associates probably regard as a foolishly opposite direction) in the interest of philanthropy, scientific study or social welfare.

But for the most part these birth-barriers are regarded as inevitable; the one class hardly needing to labor for their defense, the other hardly dreaming of pulling them down.

Closer at hand is another example of a dividing wall between men with which we in this country have sorrowful occasion to be familiar. This is color. True it is only skin deep, but nevertheless how it availed for decade after decade in our history to divide thousands and even millions of our fellow inhabitants in this land from the fraternal recognitions and even the common compassions of their fellows. They dwelt among us, but they were not of us. A wall more impassable than the breadth of oceans sundered them from those who breathed with them the same air, looked with them over the same landscape, walked with them the same streets. A tinge of the complexion was accounted the sufficient warrant for wresting away liberties, for dismembering families, for trampling on lives. A shade of the cheek was held to justify legislation at which the Inquisition might have blushed. A discoloration of the cuticle was a separating wall behind which all manner of cruelties and oppressions were held free to ravage and devour.

Churches which could send their charities to New Zealand could not look over this dividing wall. Pitiful women, who could hear a baby cry all the way from the Ganges, could not hear a mother wail from her auction-block, just across this wall. It is not yet twenty years since a rival government on this continent threatened even our national existence, and flourished its clamorous appeal for recognition in the eyes of all the kingdoms of the earth, whose fundamental state principle, according to the definition of its only two years since deceased Vice-President, was the perpetual walling out of a race from the claim of human equality, for no better reason than the bronze of a complexion and the crisp of a hair.

Now perhaps just as formidable as either of these barriers was that which once separated Gentile and Jew. No English Somerset ever looked more contemptuously down from the height of his aristocratic birth upon the common herd of his fellow countrymen than the Jew did upon the posterity of all men but Abraham. No Southern Stephens or Toombs ever recoiled with more indignation from all acknowledgment that the black man was his brother than the great body of the disciples of Moses shrank from any admission of equality between themselves and the nations around them. A wall which they had been educated to regard as impassable separated them from all other men: on this side of the wall God smiled; on the other side of it he frowned. Every one on this side of it was in the way of at least probable salvation; every one on that other side was little short of already lost. God loved the posterity of Jacob; other men were but the fuel of his wrath. Convictions like these were almost universal. They had grown with the nation's growth. Their civil and ecclesiastical institutions alike had in many respects tended to foster them, till it was almost a part of a Jew's very conscience and constitution that all men but himself were an accursed race, fit only to be despised in this world and without hope for the next.

True, God had spoken many things in their hearing which might have taught them otherwise. True, the very promise made to Abraham, which was the charter of their national pretensions, spoke of all families of the earth as to be blessed in him. True, more than one of their great prophets had distinctly predicted a time when all mankind were equally to be enfolded in Divine favor and temporal felicity. But so much easier is it to separate men than to unite them, to build up barriers than to take them away, that these hints of God's care for the stranger, and his purposes of mercy for other than the children of Abraham, passed almost unnoticed.

And at the time of the advent of Christianity and in the early efforts of the Apostles to propagate it, about the hardest lessons for the Apostles themselves to learn, about the hardest truth for them to gain a hearing for, was that in the Gospel's eye Gentile and Jew were one. No barrier separated them; no different terms of salvation were appointed them. Christ's work in behalf of both had brought life and hope equally near to each.

The Apostle Peter was for three years the companion of the Lord Jesus, and yet it required nothing short of a thrice repeated miracle and the added sign of speech in supernatural tongues by a little company of admittedly devout and benevolent Romans, to convince him that God could "grant unto the Gentiles repentance unto life."

But of this truth the Apostle Paul became pre-eminently the representative. If there is one principle of Christianity more than another of which in the Apostolic college he stood the exponent, it was just that which finds utterance in his words: "For He is our peace who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us."

When Paul wrote those words, the doctrine was a novel one. That Christ who died under Pilate was the true link and bond of men to one another, and that the very aim of the Gospel is to bind all men together in Him, was a strange and marvelous proclamation.

The truth does not wear to us precisely the same aspect. As a matter of statement we have grown familiar with it. Some of its practical applications in casting down dividing walls we have ourselves seen. Its spirit, we hope and believe, is becoming more and more incorporated into the life of the Church and recognized in the world.

But there are some incidental aspects of this truth—Christ the uniting bond of men—which seem to me, on this occasion, especially worthy of remembrance, and (taken in this connection) not without their fresh and practical instructions.

We are met here this evening at the anniversary of a society which has for its object the conveyance of the characteristic blessings of the Gospel—the Christian church and the Christian family—to all men, but primarily and representatively to a class of men who have, by one reason or another, been largely denied the benefits and instructions of both. And we enter upon the exercises of these sessions, having this object, by the celebration of the most distinctive rite of Christianity—the sitting together at Christ's table and the eating and drinking together in his name.

In view of this fact I wish to present two phases of the great truth which underlies this whole enterprise and occasion—Christ the uniting bond—which shall, if possible, receive and impart some special illumination and enforcement by this sacrament of fellowship visible here to-night.

I. Notice, then, as one aspect in which it seems eminently proper on this occasion to consider Christ's character as the great uniter of men that he unites those between whom there is almost no other apparent bond of union than a relationship to himself and to his work.

It is a question still debated in the schools of science whether the various races of men inhabiting our earth have any common origin or are the offspring of different and independent stocks. Able investigators give different answers to this question. Some think that the Bible account in Genesis only covers the story of a particular branch of the human family. Others think that there is no sufficient evidence to show that all mankind, however various, may not have descended from a single pair. Some affirm that the old and common interpretation of Paul's words, "God hath made of one blood all families of men," shuts us up to the belief in a single stock. Some, and not less reverent in the treatment of revelation, in view of the perplexities of the single stock hypothesis are inclined to think that the "one blood" of Paul's declaration must be taken in a wider sense than that customarily put upon it.

But however the question may ultimately be decided as a question of science, it certainly is not wonderful that the idea of a plurality of origins should suggest itself. For the differences are indeed amazing which sunder men. Color separates them. Type and cast of countenance, persistent, unchanged from the monumental periods of earliest historic times to this day, discriminates them. Bony configuration of skull and limb marks them into sundered companies. Adaptation to unlike climates and occupations severs them from one another.

But this is not all. Enter within the fleshly walls. Interrogate the spiritual inhabitant of this breathing dwelling place. Here the unlikeness seems if possible even more marked between the members of earth's various families.

They speak languages unintelligible to one another. They have ideas and religions hardly translatable into one another's thoughts. Here is an individual of one race who delights in the abstractions of the pure mathematics. Here is an average specimen of another race who cannot count the fingers on his hands. This one adores an invisible divinity of boundless moral perfections; the other grovels before a block hewed out of a log of ebony. One writes national histories or chants the songs of love and chivalry; the other champs unwashed roots like swine and wins the partner of his hut by smiting her to the earth with a club, as he would a sheep he carries to his lair.

It is not strange that Ethnology sometimes hesitates to call these men brothers. What bond of kindred is there between the educated New Englander and the native Australian burrowing like a badger in his hole? Is there anything which reveals a root of brotherhood between separations like these?

Yes, there is one touchstone of fellowship, which if there were no other (which I do not imply) there is one which has never failed to reveal a common nature in some of every race to whom it is fairly applied. A living Christ unites them. And notice that this is a fact which no ultimate conclusion upon the scientific question of the single or plural origin of the race will have power to affect. However men came to be, whether from one or from several stocks, a like moral nature makes them one. Responsive to the same spiritual truths, susceptible of the same inward experiences, they are inwardly kindred, however historically diverse.

For once succeed in setting before them the person and story of Jesus, and it matters not how sundered in all else some souls respond to that. Christ lifted before the gaze, and whether the eyes which look upon him peer out of a tawny or an ashen face each sees in him his Lord and head. Each feels a need of him. Each recognizes his only hope and deliverer. Sundered in whatever else, they stand united in moral experience.

This has been tried in cases fully as unpromising as any in which it remains to be tested. Polynesian Islanders, American Indians, polar Esquimaux, torrid Africans have all recognized in the Babe of Bethlehem and the Sufferer of Calvary, a Saviour, brother to them all.

If there were no other evidence of the spiritual unity of our humanity than this, this would be enough to prove us truly one. One Christ awakens in us a moral identity. Jesus the Redeemer is a touchstone which shows us all akin. Vainly shall a half-instructed science seek to put us apart, so long as this truth stands out from every opportunity to test it, a manifested Christ reveals a spiritual brotherhood in man.

II. But I wish to speak of another point in which the office of Christ in uniting men may be contemplated. And this may be said to be at the very opposite pole from that already considered. In that has been suggested how Christ joins men who are apparently joined in almost no other way. This shall show us how Christ is, in truth, the only bond which can permanently join us in relationships which we are apt to consider as so intimate in themselves as not to need any other tie.

Here then is that most intimate of all earthly circles of fellowship, a Family. Here is a Father, a Mother, a little group of Children—it matters not whether of Caucasian or Mongolian birth—constituting a tiny commonwealth, and bound together by that prime ordinance of God, the institution of Marriage and the relation of parenthood.

Bone of one another's bone, flesh of one another's flesh, alike in spirit, taste, adaptation of soul, what relationship can itself be more close, what can hold in it a promise of perpetuity more abiding? Have we not here a specimen of fellowship which needs nothing else to secure and perfect it? May not African and Saxon, Indian and Malay, entered each into more or less satisfactory experience of the household bond, conclude A Family once, a Family forever.

Stay a moment! Put Christ and the immortality Christ has revealed out of remembrance, and what becomes of the ties of kindred which seemed so strong?

What is there left of the Divine ordinances of the family, save the more or less definite attraction of impulse and restriction of expediency? Blot out of recollection what the life of Christ signifies and proves, and what message worth much uttering is there for any one to speak concerning the constitution and the ordering of the household?

Death comes into the circle. It removes from the little confederacy of the family perhaps the strong, paternal head, perhaps the latest born. Anyway, the circle is broken. And apart from Christ what assurance that it ever can be mended? What evidence is there to rest on that the vanished one will ever anywhere again be met in all the durations of time, or that to those who linger behind he who seemed so necessary and so inseparable is anything more than a perishing memory?

Laying aside the revelation of Christ, there is no evidence. Hopes there may be, as hopes there have always been, in this matter. No one can go into the philosophy of probabilities on this theme more than has been done ten thousand times by those who had no hope.

Only the revelation of Christ sheds any real proof on the perpetuity of these links of kindred and fellowship. That only affords, to the defender of the sanctities of the family at home or to the missionary promulgator of the Christian law of the family in heathen lands, any sure standing place for his argument, any adequate justification of his appeal. Forget Him and what through Him is revealed as the destiny of man, and the family is at the utmost the transient institution of an earthly economy, whose ordering may be a question of expediency indeed, but which involves nothing rising to the height of a question of morality or more enduring than the ephemeral present, to which only it belongs.

It is the revelation of Christ which sets the institution of the family on the plane of morals and endues it with the values of the eternal life. For in that revelation lies the assurance of the resumption again, beyond the separation time of mortality, of the fellowships which had in the family their earthly beginnings.

Not indeed that we at all forget that the Master said that in that life "they neither marry nor are given in marriage." No provision is made there for the extension of the race. The race is complete.

But the results of earth's past relationships are not vacated of their meaning. Nay they are then only seen in their true significance when it is discerned how this saint in glory is the husband, the wife, the child, according to the flesh and the spirit of that. When the career awhile suspended is resumed; resumed not partially; not as disembodied ghost; but resumed as Christ resumed his existence after death, and as he went out of sight to heaven, bodily, recognizably, adapted to the companionships and employments of a perfected human society.

Yes, the bond of household wholeness is in Christ. To him only is the assurance due that of the companion of our life or of the children born of these two lives' creative energy, there will remain to us (surviving them awhile) anything but a memory, itself fading and soon ready to die.

Now I said these two phases, in which the office of Christ as the uniter of men has been all imperfectly set forth, would at once shed light on and be illuminated by this rite of Christian fellowship in which—in singular harmony with the aims of this American missionary enterprise—we here participate to-night.

What then is this sacrament viewed in the light of the double truth contemplated by us this evening? Under some other lights it is the celebration of personal redemption, or the sacrament of individual fellowship with Christ. But in the aspect of the considerations now before us, what is it?

It is in one of the two phases the subject suggests: The sacrament of human brotherhood.

It reminds us of the unity of all mankind. It brings to our eyes a visible remembrancer that there is one being and one work wherein all the scattered multitudes of our race have a common share. It suggests to us that there is not anywhere in all this world any child of the human family, however separated from us by space or differenced from us by appearance, who is not, in the deepest wants and hopes of the soul, our equal and our brother. There are as it were hands reaching out through these communion symbols, drawing us to our fellows of every complexion and clime. There are voices reminding us of mutual duties and sacred responsibilities. We are summoned to take to our sympathies and to our fellowship all, of whatever lineage or hue. We cannot exclude from our affections unless we can exclude from participation in this Redeemer. If the red man of our Western prairies has any portion in the work of Christ, then he must have a portion in our labor and care. If the colored man, ignorant by long oppression, and wearing still the mental and spiritual fetters of inherited wrong, was reckoned in the price paid on Calvary, then every communion scene is a reminder summoning us to his help.

If the slant-eyed Mongolian, crowding hither from his Asiatic hive, has any portion in the redeeming work—any susceptibility to renewing grace (as in hundreds of cases has been already proved) then he is our spiritual brother, and Christ will say to us of him, "Inasmuch as ye did or did it not, unto these my brethren, ye did or did it not, unto me." No poor political cry, "We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor!" will stand much hearing in that day when the Master shall inquire "What have ye done for my brethren?"

Yes, this is the sacrament of human brotherhood. Let no man dare participate in it who is not willing to admit a brother's equal claim in every eye that meets his own. Looks it out of a white face or a black, from under a brow yellow or copper-hued, let him recognize that claim or renounce his own right here.

Fitting is it that this sacrament of human equality be celebrated at every opening session of a Christian society, whose signal honor and privilege it has been to stand a witness for this truth of the brotherhood of this land's lowliest and most despised children, with the highest and the best, in the provisions of salvation and the equal benefits of the Church of God!

Finally, the other aspect in which this communion occasion presents itself, in the light of the subject before us, is as the sacrament of family hope and unity.

He who is set forth in this rite is the bond of household welfare and perpetuity. In him alone is the truth made manifest that the temporal relations of the earthly home may be made the preparatory school of eternal associations and unparting companionships.

If anywhere on earth the family bond may well be emphasized and the household be united in any act of common joy, it should be at that table of the Lord, who bringing life and immortality to light, laid so the foundation for a hope of perpetuity of the household blessedness.

Blot Christ out of remembrance and that hope perishes. Death breaks a companionship there is no assurance of reuniting. A family is but a transient association. Kindred becomes but a question of animal life only and, incapable of moral significance or of religious sanction, perishes, dishonored, at the grave.

But in Christ the links of our broken households are joined again. In the Christian family are born not sons and daughters only, but sons and daughters of immortality. Marriage becomes a sacrament, with sanctions of the highest authority of morality and religion. It couples itself with the glories and societies of the heavenly home and the everlasting life.

Fitting, again, is it that this sacrament of household unity be celebrated on every anniversary of a society, no small part of whose special call it has been to witness to the law and the responsibilities of the family.

Laboring largely in a field where the family had been so wofully dishonored; where might associated with lust on the one side had so trampled upon it, and on the other side degradation and ignorance had so helplessly imbruted it, it has been one of the signal privileges and one of the first of duties of this American Missionary Association to inculcate the Christian law of the family, and emphasize the meaning of the household life.

No work more vital for the uplifting of the benighted and for the reclaiming of the lost than this! For the security of society, for the Christian ordering of life, for the right preparation for immortality, few things which can be done are more essential than the establishment, in the minds and manners of men, of the Christian idea of the family, with its moral sanctions, its transcendent privileges and its immortal hopes.

In the presence of these sacred emblems, brethren of this Missionary Association, let us dedicate ourselves anew to the objects which are here symbolized. The equal brotherhood of all men in Christ, the sacredness and glory of the household built up on him as its law and its hope, to them, as an inseparable part of the trust laid upon us, let us witness, and for them let us labor.

Encouraged by the providence which has led us in our history thus far, and looking out on a field waiting for the hand of Christian toil, let us take our willing part in whatever struggle or sacrifice may be demanded of us. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. Glorious are the results which have been already wrought. Greater achievements are before us still. Let us go forward in the name of Him who "is our peace, who hath made both one, who hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us," and who condescends to use our poor instrumentality in bringing on his kingdom of everlasting righteousness and joy.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

STATISTICS FOR 1884.

CHURCHES.—In the South: In District of Columbia, 1; Virginia, 1; North Carolina, 10; South Carolina, 2; Georgia, 14; Kentucky, 7; Tennessee, 7; Alabama, 17; Kansas, 3; Arkansas, 2; Louisiana, 18; Mississippi, 6; Texas, 7. Among the Indians: 4. Total, 99.

INSTITUTIONS FOUNDED, FOSTERED OR SUSTAINED IN THE SOUTH.—Chartered: Hampton, Va.; Berea, Ky.; Talladega, Ala.; Atlanta, Ga.; Nashville, Tenn.; Tougaloo, Miss.; New Orleans, La., and Austin, Tex.—8. Graded or Normal Schools: Wilmington, N. C.; Charleston, Greenwood, S. C.; Savannah, Macon, Atlanta, McIntosh, Ga.; Mobile, Athens, Selma, Ala.; Memphis, Jonesboro, Tenn.; Williamsburg, Lexington, Ky.—14. Other Schools: 43. Total, 65.

TEACHERS, MISSIONARIES AND ASSISTANTS.—At the South, 423; among the Chinese, 27; among the Indians, 45. Total, 495. STUDENTS.—In theology, 73; law, 55; in college course, 90; in other studies, 9,540; among the Chinese, 1,864; among the Indians, 458. Total, 12,080. Scholars taught by former pupils of our schools, estimated at 200,000.

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers and teachers here and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

4. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS—to purchase farm implements, plows, harrows and cultivators; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanic arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tin-men, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms with sewing and knitting material.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY.

This magazine will be sent, gratuitously, if desired, to the Missionaries of the Association; to Life Members; to all clergymen who take up collections for the Association; to Superintendents of Sabbath-schools; to College Libraries; to Theological Seminaries; to Societies of Inquiry on Missions; and to every donor who does not prefer to take it as a subscriber, and contributes in a year not less than five dollars. Subscription price, 50 cents.

No. 56 READE STREET, NEW YORK.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

relating to the work of the Association and to the AMERICAN MISSIONARY should be addressed to the Secretaries, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Bureau of Woman's Work to Miss D. E. Emerson, at the New York Office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. Woodworth, D. D., 21 Cong'l House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. Chas. W. Shelton, 112 West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work it recognizes no distinctions of race or color. Since Emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as Missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES in the Mountain districts. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy toward the Indians.

In view of the necessity of elevating the WOMEN of these races, the Association has organized a BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK, to which it especially invites the co-operation of the Christian women of the churches.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution.)

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give the full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I BEQUEATH to my executor (or executors) the sum of —— dollars, in trust to pay the same in —— days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some States three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A. B.), as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

relating to the work of the Association may be addressed to the Corresponding Secretaries; letters for the "American Missionary" to the Editor, at the New York Office.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November; at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions, until the next Annual Meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised, or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in Section first; but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of the Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attends its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully and to presen

to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various standing committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures, viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ARTICLE IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Southern Work. (3) Indian and Chinese Work. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

Committee on Educational Work in the South.—Rev. Henry Hopkins, Mo.; Rev. G. H. Ide, Wis.; Rev. E. F. Williams, Ill.; Rev. E. H. Merrill, Wis.; Rev. J. E. Snowden, Iowa; Rev. E. E. P. Abbott, Iowa.

The Woman's Work for the A. M. A. was reported by Miss D. E. Emerson, Secretary of the Woman's Bureau.

Mrs. R. C. Hitchcock, of Straight University, New Orleans, spoke concerning the work among the colored people in that city and vicinity.

Miss M. C. Collins, of Dakota, spoke of the work among the Indians.

Secretary Powell, with touching allusion to the Indian song, introduced five Indian pupils from the Santee Normal Training School, who sweetly sang "Follow Me."

Mrs. N. J. St. Clair, of Robbins, Tenn., gave an address on the work among the whites in the mountain districts.

Voted to send the greetings of the Association to Mr. R. M. Hunt, of Tenn., for his useful efforts in behalf of the American Missionary Association.

After singing, Mrs. St. Clair offered prayer, by request of the Association.

The report of the Committee on the Mountain Work among the whites was presented by Rev. W. F. Day, of Ill., who followed the report with an address.

Further addresses were given on this branch of the work by Rev. George R. Merrill, of Ohio; Rev. James Powell, and Rev. Judson Titsworth, of Wis.

Voted to accept this report.

The report of the Committee on Work among the Indians was given by Rev. C. C. Painter, of Mass., who followed it with an address.

Further discussion of the Indian question was postponed till Thursday morning.

The Indian students from the Santee Agency gave a hymn in the sweet native language of the Dakotas.

The Business Committee reported the printed programme for the morning session, which was adopted.

Adjourned till 7 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

President Washburn called the meeting to order.

After a solo by Mrs. S. L. Tyler, Rev. W. W. Curtis, Missionary to Japan, offered prayer.

The congregation joined in singing a hymn.

Rev. S. L. Blake, D.D., of Mass., delivered an address on "Missions the Central Thought of Christianity."

Rev. M. McG. Dana, D.D., of Minn., gave an address on the subject, "Obligations of the Churches to the A. M. A."

The congregation joined in a hymn.

Prof. W. R. Morris, of Tenn., gave an address on the subject of "The Negro at Present."

After singing the hymn, "My Country, 'tis of Thee," the meeting adjourned till 8:30 in the morning. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. C. W. Camp, of Wis.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Rev. K. A. Burnell conducted devotional worship.

President Washburn called the Association to order, and the session was opened with a hymn in the Dakota dialect, by the Indian students from the Mission.

The subject of Indian Missions was resumed by Rev. A. L. Riggs, of the Santee Agency. He was followed by Mr. James Garvie, a native teacher at Santee Normal School, and by Rev. C. W. Shelton.

Mr. E. W. Blatchford, of Illinois, by invitation, made some remarks relating to industrial work among the Indians, and presented to the Association the first gavel made by Indian students at Santee, for the use of its President through the coming years.

President Washburn felicitously responded.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following committee on Secretary Strieby's paper:

Rev. F. Bascom, Ill.; Rev. S. J. Humphrey, Ill; Rev. A. P. Johnson, Wis.; Rev. L. Taylor, Ill.; Rev. M. E. Eversz, Wis.; Rev. D. R. Anderson, Wis.

Rev. J. G. Merrill, of Mo., presented the report of the Committee on Chinese Missions, and followed it with an address. Rev. Frank P. Woodbury spoke on the same report.

Rev. A. L. Chapin, temporarily in the chair, called upon the Indian singers, who responded in good English.

Prof. Huntington presented the following resolution on behalf of Father Wiley, an old friend of the Association, who, by reason of the infirmities of age, could not be present:

Resolved, That we repeat our earnest testimony against the anti-Chinese law of the United States as a flagrant violation of the God-given rights of man, which our nation is sworn to protect; an example of tyranny to other governments, and worthless and shameful to our own, inhuman to the people of that overstocked country, and a severe obstacle to its Christianization; reviving again an execrable caste prejudice in our own country which is culminating in massacre and blood in defiance of law, and assuring us coming judgments of God. We demand a statesmanship and a government which shall "do to others as we would others should do to us."

Secretary Strieby read the following telegram from the Central North Conference of Ohio, in session at North Fairfield. "We send greetings. May increasing blessing and strength attend your work. W. F. McMillen, Moderator."

This fraternal greeting was referred to Rev. C. J. Ryder, of Ohio, who reported the following response, which was adopted: "The A. M. A. returns greetings and gratefully acknowledges your cordial expression of interest as another proof of the continued loyalty of the churches of Ohio to the great work among God's poor being done by the A. M. A."

The report on Indian Missions was adopted.

The report on Chinese Missions was adopted.

Singing, "Stand Up for Jesus."

Rev. Henry Hopkins, of Missouri, gave the report on behalf of the Committee on Educational Work in the South, and followed it with an address.

Rev. G. H. Ide, of Wisconsin, delivered an address on the subject of the eport.

President Albert Salisbury, of Wisconsin, read a paper, entitled "Some Conclusions Respecting Negro Education."

The report on Educational Work was adopted.

The Business Committee reported the programme for the afternoon and evening which was adopted. After singing and benediction adjourned till 2 P. M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

At 2 P. M. President Washburn called the meeting to order.

After singing, prayer was offered by Rev. Edward D. Eaton, of Ill.

The minutes were read by the Secretary and approved.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following list of officers for the ensuing year, and the report was adopted:

PRESIDENT.

HON. WM. B. WASHBURN, LL.D., Mass.

Rev. D. O. MEARS, D.D., Mass.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

REV. M. E. STRIEBY, D.D., 56 Reade street, N. Y.

ASSOCIATE CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

REV. JAMES POWELL, D.D., N. Y. — REV. A. F. BEARD, D.D., N. Y.

TREASURER.

H. W. HUBBARD, Esq., N. Y.

AUDITORS.

W. H. ROGERS. — PETER McCARTEE.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

To Serve for Three Years.

Rev. J. E. RANKIN, D.D., Rev. W. H. WARD, D.D., Rev. J. L. WITHROW, D.D., JOHN H. WASHBURN, Esq., EDMUND L. CHAMPLIN, Esq.

Secretary Powell presented the invitation extended by the pastor of the First Church, New Haven, and in behalf of the other churches, to hold the next Annual Meeting of the Association in that city, which was accepted.

Rev. W. H. Davis, of Michigan, presented the report of the Committee on Church Work in the South, and followed it with an address. Rev. A. W. Archibald, of Iowa, gave an address on the report. He was followed by Rev. C. Harris, of Jackson, Miss.

On invitation of the President, the Indian students from Dakota sang, in the Dakota language, "The Morning Light is Breaking."

On behalf of the Committee on the Treasurer's Report, Mr. E. W. Blatchford, of Ill., made an interesting address on the financial management and needs of the Association, and presented an offering of 20 pieces of Austrian money, called kreutzers, from a little girl in Prague, Austria, for the salvation of the blacks in America.

Secretary Powell offered to exchange these pieces for American money. Responses followed quickly, and $340 were realized from them; on motion of Rev. H. W. Cobb, Illinois, the little donor of the kreutzers was made a Life Member of the Association, and on motion of Rev. E. D. Eaton, Secretary Powell was instructed to return the thanks of the Association to the little self-sacrificing donor.

Mr. L. D. Robertson, of Illinois, spoke on the financial report.

Rev. Dr. Little spoke on the matter of a contribution from every church in the denomination as a privilage and necessity for the existence of the Church and Society. President Chapin and Rev. W. L. Bray followed with additional addresses. Voted to adopt the report of the Committee on Church Work and the report of the Committee on Treasurer's Statement.

The report on Dr. Strieby's paper was made by Rev. S. J. Humphrey, D.D., on behalf of the committee, recommending the printing of the paper and its distribution in a widespread manner among the churches.

The report was adopted.

Moved and voted, That the Association instruct its Secretary, Rev. W. A. Waterman, to cast the ballot for the list of officers recommended by the Nominating Committee.

The President appointed Hon. S. D. Hastings for teller.

The Secretary cast the ballot as directed, and it was counted, and the result declared the officers so nominated duly elected.

Rev. J. Blanchard, D.D., of Ills., pronounced the benediction, and the Association took recess till 7 o'clock.

THURSDAY EVENING.

At 7 P. M. President Washburn called to order.

After singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' name" by the congregation, Rev. Calvin Cutler, of Mass., offered prayer.

The President introduced Mr. Geo. W. Cable, who delivered an address, entitled "A Disinterested Report."

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Cable, and his address asked for publication.

A hymn was sung by the Indian visitors in their native dialect.

Closing words were spoken by the President. Rev. Arthur Little, D.D., of Illinois, was invited to offer the thanks of the Association, which he did in the following resolutions, with appropriate remarks.

Report was adopted:

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Association be tendered to Rev. Reuen

Thomas, Ph.D., for his sermon, and that a copy thereof be requested for publication.

Resolved, That the grateful acknowledgments of this Association be given to the Committee of Arrangements and the Business Committee for the ample provisions made for this meeting; to the Congregational church for the use of its house of worship, and to its pastor for his labors of love in behalf of this gathering; to Prof. Tyler, the organist, for his kindness in leading the service of song; to all railroads that have made reductions in fare; to the press of the city for the full and accurate reports of the meeting—especially to the editors of the Wisconsin State Journal, who have increased our obligation to them by the offer of an extra edition, containing satisfactory reports of all the proceedings; and, above all, to the people of this congregation, and indeed to the people of Madison generally, without distinction of sect, including the Roman Catholics, for the abundant and graceful hospitality so cordially extended to us in their homes.

The memory of these Christian courtesies and fellowships will long abide with those who have been their guests.

May the blessing of Almighty God forever abide with those who have been our generous hosts.

Rev. C. H. Richards, D.D., pastor of the church, spoke pleasant words of farewell in closing the sessions of the Association.

Voted to adopt the minutes.

The audience sang the Doxology.

Voted to adjourn sine die, after the benediction by Rev. C. J. Ryder, of Ohio.

W. W. WATERMAN, Sec'y.
E. H. SMITH, Ass't Sec'y.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK SOUTH.

BY REV. HENRY HOPKINS, CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on the Report of the Executive Committee on Educational Work in the South respectfully submit the following:

We note in the report of the Executive Committee the loss from our list of chartered institutions of two cherished names, Berea and Hampton. They both belong, in their origin, to the heroic age of our missionary history, and reflect lustre from their entire record upon our Association. To have brought up such children is high honor to the young matron of twenty-five who entertains us to-day. These institutions represent, in the work already accomplished, not only our organized effort, but also the personal achievement of leaders with rare ability and fidelity, of lofty faith and courage. They stand now equipped and strong, ready for lasting usefulness.

The Committee join in the expression of regret in the Report at the resignation of Professor Salisbury, as Superintendent of school work. The changing phases of the educational problem, as involved in the work of the Association at the South, demand the constant and watchful supervision of a broad-minded, experienced and progressive man. It is, moreover, due on general principles to the constituency of the Association that frequent and impartial reports from the schools should be made by some one not of the schools, through whose information the general policy of the society in its educational work may be largely determined.

The withdrawal of Superintendent Roy's ubiquitous and inspiring presence from the field of operations will be severely felt in the department of education. His counsel to the workers, and his reports through published letters to the churches, have been an essential force in making the history of the past. The Executive Committee are asking great things of our brother, Rev. C. J. Ryder, newly appointed to fill the place of both these men.

In the sudden death of President Ware, Atlanta University has suffered a severe blow. His pre-eminent ability, his exalted Christian character, unswerving devotion, and long service make his loss an affliction in common to all who love the cause to which he gave his life. He is buried in the graveyard at Atlanta, on the "color line." Such lives bridge the gulf between the races, and more than all machinery of organization bring about the mutual recognition of Christian brotherhood and common citizenship.

The idea at the basis of the chartered institutions and normal schools, namely, the training of leaders and teachers, is being abundantly justified. The colored race on this continent still wait for large and strong leadership from those raised up among themselves, but already influential educated Christian men are appearing who are to mold the future of their people. We cannot yet, like Robert College, yonder on the Bosphorus, point to those who have helped form free constitutions for new States, but our graduates are sure to take more and more the places of trust and influence.

The greatest need of the colored people continues to be good teachers. These are the arbiters of the future. There is reported—and it is a fact of immense significance—a marked tendency among the colored people in country districts, where land is cheap, to buy lots and congregate in small villages near the large estates where labor is in demand. This supplies the opportunity for a school, and already Christian teachers are proving themselves to be a molding and saving power in such places. No other influence is available. This may be. The colored teacher who can and will accept the hard conditions of life necessary, has, not only by the day school, but through the Sunday-school and through temperance and humane work already in many cases, changed the character of the whole hamlet.

The reports from Superintendents of public instruction indorsing the character and work of our graduates are very significant and cheering. The testimony to the work done in Tillotson Institute, Texas, the latest of our chartered schools, is especially gratifying. What the future policy should be as to providing Christian schools preparatory to the higher institutions, is a serious question. The great railroad enterprises of the land develop inevitably into systems of roads, with feeders to the main lines. The feeders sometimes become "suckers," and have to be rudely cut off, but the branches are, after all, the life of the trunk. In our own higher institutions a similar policy may become necessary. But it is certainly now true that as the demand for elementary education is met from any source, the demand for higher education increases. Too much emphasis cannot be put upon this fact, as expressed in the report that "as the cause and means of popular education is extended in the South, the necessity for the work of the Association becomes stronger and stronger."

A review of the year shows unmistakably that the eagerness for education still continues. The schools are crowded. It shows also that there are still found a sufficient number of our choicest and best men and women ready to devote themselves in the spirit of Christ and of the loftiest patriotism to the work of teaching the Negro; and again, that the work done is increasingly conciliating the respect of the Southern whites, for the Association on the one hand, and for the capabilities of the black man on the other. The testimonies from leading men are very striking and the change of public sentiment is marked and most encouraging.

We do not think it is possible to exaggerate the importance of perpetuating and strengthening these institutions. We earnestly recommend them to the thoughtful sympathy and to the liberal benefactions of our constituency, and we especially commend the efforts being made to permanently endow them. They occupy excellent strategic points, and are fitted to become for all time sources of light and life to the nation. Used at first by the colored race they will, doubtless, after a time, like Dartmouth, founded for the Indians, be the common resort for the aspiring youth of the whole people. It is an interesting question in connection with the movement for endowment, whether without endangering their broad undenominational Christian basis, there might not be in the organic law of all these chartered institutions a provision which would secure their perpetual control by our churches. Your committee are decidedly of the opinion that wherever this is possible it should be done.

We suggest that in the public presentation of the educational work of the Association it would be a wise and Christian thing to show the institutions of various grades sustained by other denominations, and to make some exhibit of the total work from all sources. This would be honorable to the work of our own Board, honorable toward that of others, and honest to the givers of money, who have a right to the entire statement. Upon our missionary map of the Southern States let us put in all the stars, whether they shine by our own command or not.

The committee learn with great pleasure of the increasingly practical character of the training given in the schools. They heartily and emphatically recommend that the whole practical side of training be made more and more prominent, and especially that self-help and self-support to the last point possible be everywhere and by all means insisted upon. Recognizing the difficulties developed by the experiments of the past, we yet believe that the industrial departments should be everywhere carefully fostered, and take great pleasure in indorsing the report of the special committee on this topic.

Great wisdom has been shown in this movement in our schools thus far. Since the industrial exhibit in this city in 1884, substantial progress has been made. We urge that in the selection of teachers, in the procuring of funds, in the organization of instruction, and in all ways possible, development along this line should be encouraged. The negro needs this kind of training for the saving moral force that is in it for himself and his descendants. He needs it also for the opportunity in life it opens to him, while the South requires it for the sake of the physical development that comes through diversified industries.

We desire also to express our belief that systematic scientific instruction on the nature and effects of alcohol, already extensively adopted, should be given in all our schools of every grade, and that it should be the policy of the Society to see that this is accomplished. In conclusion, we record our conviction that the educational work of the American Missionary Association was never more urgently needed than now ; that it is carried on under wise and able leaders, with progressive methods, true allegiance to the everlasting Gospel, and that it is attended by the evident tokens of the Divine approval.

REPORT ON CHURCH WORK SOUTH.

BY REV. W. H. DAVIS, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The figures and facts of the Executive Committee touching Church Work in the South during the past twelve months are full of joy and hope. The 95 churches of last year have increased to 112, and the total annual addition to membership has been 1,127, of whom 883 have been received upon confession of faith. This gain of 17 churches is three times the average yearly growth, and they are distributed as follows: Two in Kentucky, three in North Carolina, six in Tennessee, one in Georgia, one in Alabama, one in Mississippi, one in Louisiana and two in Texas. Eight of these new churches already have houses of worship, and the average membership of all the churches is over sixty-one, a fact which is significant when we remember that the average membership of all our Congregational churches is 100, and that in many of our Western States the average church membership grades between thirty and fifty; and this high average in the South is not gained by overcrowding the church rolls with doubtful and unworthy men and women—the nominal dead-head who swells the numerical list but cripples the numerical strength of our churches—but this membership of our Southern churches is the result of careful spiritual selection and earnest piety.

We note a corresponding gain in the pastorate. Instead of the seventy-six pastors in service last year, we now have eighty-nine, of whom thirty are from the North and fifty-nine from the South—direct product of our own schools and seminaries. There has also been an increase in church expenditures and Christian benevolences. During the past year these churches have raised for their own expenses $12,394.78, an advance over the preceding year of more than 12 per cent., and have increased their benevolent contributions one-third.

The evangelistic work of last year is still continued, and with the same gratifying spiritual results, only with this difference, that the largest success has been reached among the schools and churches which have been longest under the training and care of the Association. This revival of religion has been wide-spread and of deep spiritual power, numbering hundreds among its converts.

As in the upper room at Pentecost, "there appeared unto them tongues, parting asunder, like as of fire, and it sat upon each one of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost," so came the spirit upon the entire college at Talladega, "including every inmate of the ladies' hall, and, with a single exception, every boy in Stone Hall," until the meetings, for lack of material, lost their inquiring character, and became gatherings for thanksgiving and praise. The same large spiritual quickening touched Straight University, Tougaloo, Selma, Marion, and many other centres of educational and church life, making the year a marked one in its spiritual growth and church extension.

This remarkable record of advances deepens our gratitude and quickens our courage, and should enlarge the praying, the giving and the enthusiasm of the churches for the A. M. A., which, under the Divine Spirit, has wrought so blessedly during the past year in this great work of spiritual regeneration in the South.

In submitting this report, the Committee wish to emphasize the significant fact that the largest spiritual successes of the year have been among those longest under the influence of the Christian school and a teaching church—a fact freighted not only with hope for the future, but also with evidence of the reforming power of Christian education, whereby a religious nature, that marked characteristic of the colored race and common to all men in greater or less degree, may become a religious character, which is the product of intelligent Christian principle married to a renewed and obedient heart.

Here we read the secret of spiritual growth and permanent social reform in the South, that our only real gain in education and religion will come from plodding, faithful teaching, and patient, continued tillage in the vineyard of our God, a secret which will open itself in ever-increasing revelations as the years pass on, revealing the toil, the self-giving and the seed-sowing of yesterday and to-day in the enlarging harvests of to-morrow, with their returns of regenerated life and purified society. Thus the twenty millions of money, the uncounted lives of sacrifice and labor, the unwritten prayers and hopes and faiths of a generation which, since the war, have been poured into this great holy cause of civic and spiritual reconstruction, are not lost, but like the seed of the house of David, they shall blossom years hence for the saving of a race and the life of a nation.

Again, in the face of this year's advance and with the intense appeals which the dangerous ignorance and poverty and immoral life of a rapidly multiplying people are sounding in our ears, your Committee desire to put on record their deepening conviction that the work of this Association and all kindred societies which yoke the spelling-book with the word of God, and a Christian teacher to both, is the power which under God is solving, aye, the only power which can solve, the great complex problem of the South, a problem complicated by race antagonisms, whose harmony along any of the great historic lines of amalgamation is well nigh an impossibility ; by bitter prejudice, engendered by centuries of servitude and caste; by the deep, swollen sense of injustice, which in black and white is kept alive by the memories of the past; and by the dense ignorance of a race of whom it is said 80 per cent. can neither read nor write ; a problem which takes to itself political significance as well as moral when we remember that three-fourths of a majority in the electoral college, the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States is determined by these voters of the South, who not only cannot read their ballots, but whose moral sense is so dulled as to fail in discrimination between right and wrong, while in the rear of this procession there follow the logical factors of poverty and vice.

Here are the ingredients of the problem, before whose solution the government which liberated the slave and then gave him the ballot is powerless, for "you cannot legislate righteousness," nor compel morality by statute enactment. And righteousness and morality are to-day the great needs of the South, as well as the sole solvents of this great problem: and these needs are satisfied and this solution is gained not by grants of public money for secular education; not by political platforms, nor civil service administrations, but by the Christian school in alliance with the Christian church, whereby the gospel with its revelations of brotherhood and justice, of sin and redemption, of present responsibility and future judgment, may be wrought into the thought and life of these alien peoples. And back of these schools and churches must stand "God's people," with the willing gifts and labors, their prayers of faith and their love for Christ. For it is as true to-day as when John Eliot wrote it in his first Indian grammar, 200 years ago, that "Prayers and pains through faith in Jesus Christ will do anything." And never has this prophecy received such signal fulfillment as in the work of this Association, and never has the finger of Providence pointed so clearly to its continuance as at this hour; for the work of the A. M. A. will not be done for a generation. As we value, then, our liberty and our Lord's blessing, aye, as we would meet God's purposes and our own privilege, the Church of Christ cannot take down its steadying hands or prayers or contributions from this great cause and problem of moral regeneration in the South, whose issue, as in the battle of Rephidim, will be for the Philistines or for Israel, according as is our faith and service and gift.

REPORT ON INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

BY REV. A. L. FRISBIE, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The Committee to which was submitted the report on the Industrial Work of the A. M. A. beg leave to report.

We have carefully considered the literature of the subject which has come into our hands; we have also, as opportunity offered, consulted those who administer the industrial agencies now in use; we have not neglected those who, while traveling in the South and the West, have been able to see these agencies in operation and to form opinions from observation.

Your Committee is impressed with the fact that among our practical men there is a growing demand for something more practical as the outcome of our expensive systems of education. As a result of this, schools of technology and for manual training are coming forward as new factors in the educational force. There is an experimental character about industrial training, so far as at present developed, which in the opinion of the Committee, should lead the Association to proceed with great care in its selection of men and methods for this departure, but we do not therefore say it should proceed either reluctantly or slowly.

We agree to report to this body our settled conviction that this line of education is demanded by the negro and Indian of to-day. We know of no way in which they can take their proper places as citizens, unless they are prepared to make their way.

National legislation has been favorable to the negro, but local legislation, especially that which is codified in unwritten laws, is unfavorable to him. It will be so for a long time. Caste prejudice is a devil not easily cast out. The transmitted notion that labor is for one class and that rights are for another, is a notion that dies hard. By this, the negro particularly is put at an unspeakable disadvantage. He can never overcome it until he is qualified to do the work of the intelligent laborer. Rights cannot always be withheld when educated hands reach out to take them. So if the negro is prepared to do work of all kinds, the day will come when he shall have work of all kinds to do. Therefore, the Committee recommend that industrial education be enlarged under the charge of the American Missionary Association as rapidly as the funds for the same may be provided. We believe that it is a part of the higher education of the lowly; home-making, nursing, sewing, darning, house-building, blacksmithing, furniture and tool-making, the knowledge of practical farming, and many other branches should be classed as the fine arts for the colored people of both races.

Of the Indian work in this line we have such information as leads us to indorse, most heartily, the beginnings of industrial training at Santee and Oahe. The savage has no industries. The rehabilitation of the red race will begin in a Christian purpose, an educated head and the spirit of industry. It is, of course, too soon as yet to say what this kind of education may accomplish. It is also too soon to attempt to say what it may not accomplish; but it is not too soon to be well assured that work in this line must be of helpful tendency.

With the suggestion that future reports be enriched, as far as possible, with the concrete statements of what the schools have done in this line and of what the graduates are doing, we close this report with our unanimous indorsement of the work of the A. M. A. in this direction.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

BY REV. WARREN F. DAY, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee, to whom was referred that part of the general report which relates to the Mountain Work, find that what so recently was, at best, little more than a conviction has, with vigorous strides, passed on to the stage of construction; the idea has become a reality with a record. In this "mountain work" among the Southern Saxon Highlanders this Association is in the beginning of an undertaking whose importance is second to none of those enterprises by which it has hitherto established its right to be, or demonstrated its power to do.

With no diminution of zeal in its work among the "despised races," the additional task now assumed by this body is no less than the Christian conquest of two millions of whites in an upland and mountain empire extending over a territory of more than 100,000 square miles—a region thus far neglected by capitalist and educator. The reports at hand show that while in this department the work of the past year has been chiefly one of exploration and organization, it has also been a year of decided success, as measured by present results, and full of foregleams of future triumphs.

The color question is evidently being settled at the outset, and in both the school and church; though sometimes at a temporary loss of pupils, as at Williamsburg where the announced decision to admit all applicants irrespective of color led to the withdrawal of eighty white children, but who soon afterwards returned. While this is particularly a work for the mountain whites, and in a region where they outnumber the blacks seven to one, the principle is fixed that the service rendered to the seven is not to be at the detriment of the one.

"Imbued with the missionary spirit," as the teachers have shown themselves to be, we are prepared to learn that they "have been a power in the church and in the community, as well as in the school." And it seems withal that evil spirits are inclined to be subject unto them; as in Scott County, Tenn. Three years ago there were in this section 27 saloons and only two Sunday-schools; one of them being held in a tent, while the other was getting such comfort as it could out of the accommodations found in a blacksmith's shop. To-day there are 25 Sunday-schools, and only three saloons; and one of these is controlled by a man who has become so interested in this new work that he has subscribed $50 toward a building for the church in his community, and in a speech at a public meeting has thoroughly identified himself with its success.

The wisdom and executive energy with which the work is being pushed is indicated by the recent organization of nine churches, three of them reporting congregations of from 250 to 300; the erection of two houses of worship, with four more under way. Of a much larger number of Sunday-schools we find definite reports from nearly forty, many of them with an enrollment of from one to two hundred, not to speak of a goodly list of day schools, including Williamsburg Academy, with its 203 pupils.

With such a system of sound learning as is being introduced through this increasing number of schools and academies, with the sentiment persistently enforced, as it is, that Christianity means righteousness of character; with such men and women as are now upon the ground, reinforced by such laborers as the Master has in waiting for the work as soon as the means are furnished by the churches represented here; with the marshaling of such a force, what magnificent results may soon, with all the inevitable discouragements and delays, gladden both the toiler on the Southern field and the contributor in his Northern home.

REPORT ON CHINESE WORK.

BY REV. J. G. MERRILL, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee to whom is referred the Report of the Executive Committee upon the Chinese Work, cannot escape the conviction that in the minds of the management of the A. M. A. the work among the Mongolian brethren is, in respect to both magnitude and promise, the least of the undertakings committed to their care.

But we are none the less aware that this comparative smallness and hopelessness of the work should not, and does not, prevent the earnest and faithful prosecution of it. For have we not all learned that to the eye of our Master the least is not unfrequently the greatest, and our faith receives highest honor when we attempt the apparently impossible?

Is there a more important question before the churches of America than the right adjustment of American Christianity to the Mongolian people within our bounds?

Christian America has an opportunity to disclose its independence, as it champions a race which both of our political parties grind beneath the heel. Christian America has an opportunity to magnify its patriotism and statesmanship, as it declares the absurd inconsistency of a government, which at the demand of aliens excluded a race more industrious, peaceable and thrifty than are the thousands upon thousands from the lowest life of Europe, who can not only claim our hospitality, but at once demand control of our politics.

Christian America has an opportunity to declare itself possessed of a political economy that will rise above the brutal demands of men who would compel capital to pay prices that it cannot afford to give, or fill the world with the hellish glare of a Rock Springs massacre.

Christian America has an opportunity to make manifest its faith in the principles of that kingdom whose deepest utterance is to be heard upon the day when the universe shall listen to the Judge of all as he shall say: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

The number of Mongolians in America is small, and will be less and less; but, as often before in the history of the world, the character of the majority is brought to a test by its attitude toward the smallest minority.

The Jews around Mt. Calvary sent to infamy not the man who hung between two thieves, but the people who cried "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!"

But at that hour there were few who dared face a nation—John and the three Marys. And so there can without exception, always and everywhere be found those who will champion the few in the face of the multitude.

This is the mission of the A. M. A. and of the organizations which have been founded to befriend the friendless and defend the weak.

And during the year that has just closed, God has blessed the score of schools and the two score missionaries, as more than five score have professed to have found Christ, and nine score have abandoned idol worship.

For the work which the Society has felt at liberty to undertake, its equipment has been good and was never better than to-day. But never before did these to whom the execution of the work is committed feel more profoundly their need of Divine help to overcome the ever-increasing obstacles they must face.

It certainly is little that they ask of us, and that little should be granted, when, with earnestness begotten of despair, they say to one and all, "Brethren, pray for us."

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

BY REV. C. C. PAINTER, CHAIRMAN.

In a survey of the whole field, your Committee on Indians thankfully note the fact that there has been a marked increase of interest on the part of the people both East and West, and a consequent improvement in national legislation and executive administration as regards the welfare of Indians.

Never before, within our recollection, has Congress been so sensitive to the criticisms of the public press touching its treatment of these people, and never before have the criticisms of the press been so justly, so intelligently, and so freely made. We believe that at last the people have called a halt to our reckless march over the rights and interests of these our unfortunate wards, and that henceforth there must be an intelligent adjustment of our claims to their welfare; and that soon a solution must be found for a problem which hitherto we have simply postponed.

This question can never be settled except on principles of justice and equal rights for a basis, and through the instrumentality of a Christian education which shall intelligently comprehend and provide for the training, not of an Indian, but of a man.

We believe the system by and through which we have hitherto dealt with the Indian is an almost insurmountable obstacle to the accomplishment of the end we seek—intelligent Christian citizenship. The system which shuts out from him, by a high and strong wall, all the influences of modern civilized society, is not and cannot be helpful in our effort to civilize him; a system which makes him the abject and helpless victim of an absolute despotism, cannot help him along the road to free citizenship; a system which deprives him of the means and facilities and opportunities of self-support, and throws to him, unearned by his own effort, a sufficiency of food and blanket to sustain life at its very lowest condition, cannot be made helpful to the effort we would have him make in the direction of self-support

Your Committee believe the time has come when the temporizing make-shifts by which we have created and perpetuated the Indian problem, should be displaced by efforts which have some relation to the end we seek; efforts in which there shall be a recognition of the manhood of those with whom we deal, and which shall allow scope for the motives by which moral and intelligent creatures are moved along the path of progress. Immediate steps, we believe, should be taken to do away with the tribal relations for which we are responsible, to abolish the segregating and isolating regulations, metes and boundaries by which we have shut out from him the appliances and agencies of civilized life, and to put him into such conditions as are essential to a Christian social organization.

We rejoice to note that religious and philanthropic efforts in behalf of the Indian are multiplying and broadening, which are educating the people to a juster sense of their duties, and directing our labors more intelligently to the end of elevating and saving him.

The increase in the appropriations of the national government for educational purposes from about $600,000 to $1,100,000, for the current year, indicates that our legislators have become convinced both of the desirability and possibility of educating the Indian, and at last realize that a solution of the problem lies in this direction.

It appears from the report of the Executive Committee that this Society has incurred a debt for this year's work about equal to the increase of the expenditures of this year over that of last, for Indian education. This increase was more than 67 per cent. Your Committee are unanimous in the opinion that this increased expenditure should have been made, and that a failure to give the money must not be interpreted to be a condemnation of the increased activity in this direction.

We believe the time has come when the Church of Christ should make its efforts to give these people the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ correspondent with its duty. We, therefore, heartily approve and commend the action of the Executive Committee in the appointment of a Special Secretary to bring this work to the attention of our churches, and respectfully suggest whether the duplication of this agency would not meet with a corresponding response. We believe that nothing adequate can be done—whatever may be done in giving citizenship, land in severalty, the ballot, industrial and mental training—until the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ has been given to all these people; that nothing less than this can satisfy the demand of our Divine Master; and your Committee believe that we utter the voice of the awakened conscience of our Congregational churches when we urge this Society to go forward with enlarged plans for Indian mission work.

REPORT ON FINANCE.

BY E. W. BLATCHFORD, ESQ., CHAIRMAN.

The Committee to whom was referred the Treasurer's annual statement beg leave to report. The documents placed in their hands by the Treasurer embrace:

1. A carefully prepared and lucid summary of the receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1885:

2. A detailed statement of the items embraced in the summary, arranged under their appropriate heads, with figures referring to the pages in the ledger.

3. A statement of the trust funds held by the Association, showing the name and object of the respective trusts, with the securities, rate of interest and amount of same. We would state that uninvested moneys arising from these trust funds on interest or paid principal, are specially deposited with the United States Trust Company, while the securities themselves are kept in the safe deposit vaults of the Park National Bank. The investments are all made under the direction of the Executive and Finance Committees.

4. A general statement, with full exhibit attached, of the resources and liabilities of the Association at the close of the fiscal year, including the statement of the debt, $29,237.73.

All the preceding documents are duly certified to by the auditors, Messrs. Wm. H. Rogers, who occupies the responsible position of cashier of the Nashua Bank, one of the highest standing New York banks, and Peter McCartee, the secretary of a large manufacturing company. Both these officers are outside the Executive Board, and are annually elected by the Association. These gentlemen certify to a personal examination of the Treasurer's accounts, with the vouchers; of the trust funds, with the investment securities; and a comparison of the statement of the resources and liabilities with the ledger balances, and to their correctness.

5. The Treasurer's ledger for the year, showing detailed items of all accounts with teachers and workers, and embracing all receipts and expenditures.

6. A memoranda account-book, which contains the statements rendered monthly and laid before the Executive Committee at their meeting on the second Monday of each month, these monthly statements having been previously examined by a member of the Committee and their correctness duly certified to.

7. A tabular statement of the comparative receipts and expenditures for the past two years.

8. A bank check and receipt given in the regular course of business, which shows the mode of making payments and receipting therefor, all payments being made by checks payable to order to which the by-laws must attach two names to render the same valid, that of the Treasurer with that of the Chairman of the Executive Committee or the Corresponding Secretary. The receipt specifies the class of expenditure under which it comes, with the items of same, and bears the signature of the party to whom the amount is payable, and also the approval of the person in charge of the special department.

Your committee, after a careful examination of the Treasurer's books and accounts and statements, as above named, would express their satisfaction with the thorough, business-like manner in which the accounts of the Association are kept; with the clear manner in which the statements are presented, enabling any one to understand the transactions in detail, and the guards which are thrown around the disbursement of moneys and the investment of funds.

Your committee feel that there is ground for encouragement in the increase of donations from the churches, the Sunday-schools, individuals and missionary societies, the amount of contributions for 1883-4 being $164,056.77, while for 1884-5 they amounted to $191,698.35, showing an increase from these sources of $27,641.58. This fact is the more impressive when we consider, 1st, the depressed condition of business interests throughout our country; and, 2d, the deplorable and indefensible apathy in this grand work of 2,415 non-contributing churches of a total of 4,092.

Your committee would call attention to the fact that, notwithstanding the pressure for the enlargement of work already in progress, and of additional work to which God's providence points, the expenditures for the past year in all the several departments of the Association—the South, the Chinese and the Indian, including the foreign mission and the publication, with the cost of administration—have been only $4,417.56 in excess of the amount expended in 1883-4; which is really less than 1½ per cent. upon the total expenditures of $306,345.93.

For the better understanding of this excess, it should be said that, while, as has already been reported, the expenditures in the Indian field have been $8,078.80, the decrease in the expenditures of Southern and Chinese work has been $4,560.18, leaving the actual excess only $3,518.62.

This subject is so clearly stated in the annual report of the Executive Committee, that we beg leave to quote the following paragraph: "As compared with the receipts of last year, these figures show $191,698.35 collections and donations this year, as against $164,056.77 last; legacies, 41,501.66 this year, as against $64,559.42 last; a gain in contributions from the living of $27,641.58, a loss from legacies of $23,057.76. The receipts from all sources for the past year, notwithstanding the heavy loss in legacies, are in excess over the receipts of the preceding year $3,299 87. The expenditures for the year have been $306,345.93, leaving a debt on the year just closed of $15,451.87. This, added to the deficit of the previous year, leaves us with a total indebtedness of $29,237.73. But over against this and in close connection with it should be stated the fact that in both years the indebtedness has been owing to an increase of appropriations to meet the absolutely necessary demands of the new Indian missions transferred to us by the American Board. In 1883–84, we expended on these missions, including $11,495.19 received from the United States Government, $33,204.95. In 1884–85, including $9,458.13 from the Government, we spent $41,283.75. The churches had laid this work upon us, and we could not avoid these expenditures."

We urge the officers of the Society to use strenuous efforts to make the magazine as excellent as possible in quality, and to take measures still further to enlarge its circulation, supplementing it with such leaflet and pamphlet publications as they may deem serviceable for the same purpose; and we urge pastors and other friends of the Association to co-operate in securing for these various publications the widest circulation and perusal.

The committee are gratified to find that the Association is making so effective use of periodical and occasional publications as a means of diffusing information concerning its work. We believe that the interest of our church members in that work will, other things being equal, be in proportion to their knowledge of the Association, its aims, its plans, its fields, its methods, its activities and its successes. We are glad to learn, therefore, that there has been an increase during the year in the circulation of THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY, and a very large increase in the number of paying subscribers.

By this examination of the finances, in connection with the reports of the several departments of the work, the committee are convinced that, for the coming year, a considerable increase of the income of the Association is imperatively needed. First—The work which has come upon its hands must be sustained on a scale of expenditure no less than that of the last year. We see no place where any curtailment can safely be made. The call is rather for enlargement on every hand; simply to hold our own, will require the round sum of $300,000. Second—The debt which has accumulated during the last two years must be wiped out at once. It has been incurred through unavoidable necessity. So long as it remains, it hangs as a drag upon all the operations of the society, an occasion of depression and discouragement to all concerned. To clear it off, $30,000 must be raised over and above what is needed for our steady work. Third—Special outlays are urgently called for in these directions: 1. The providence of God has opened a wider sphere of labor for the illiterate population in the mountain region of the South, which it is the duty of this Association to occupy; a comparatively small expenditure here promises rich returns. 2. It is quite evident that to realize the best results of our efforts to uplift the freedman, some increased appropriations must be made to provide for industrial education in connection with the schools under our charge. 3. At the same time, the blessings of God on our work among the Indians gives scope and demand for enlargement of our operations in that quarter, full of hope and promise. A moderate estimate must set down at least $45,000 for these additional outlays during the coming year. The sum total, then, for which the Association may properly make its appeal to its constituents and the churches is $375,000—something more than $1,000 a day. It does not seem to the committee unreasonable to expect that with a proper presentation of the claims of the Association to its friends, this amount can be realized.

REPORT
OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The thirty-ninth volume of the American Missionary Association's history is finished. The record is on high; also on earth. It is but a small portion of this history we can trace. We cannot follow the prayers, counsels and sacrifices of our missionaries as they have gone forth to benefit and bless. That would call for an inspired pen.

But it is a pleasing thought that God has kept faithful record of it all. Nothing has been lost. No doubt it would be an interesting and thrilling story, could we tell it; still it is of more value for us to know that good has been done, than it is for us to be able to trace in all its details what and how far-extending the good may be.

Since the beginning of this Association's history, four of its annual reports make no mention of any death as having occurred either among officers or missionaries. We are not permitted this year to add to these exceptional reports; for since the last annual meeting several times the death messenger has come and taken from the ranks of our workers.

IN MEMORIAM.

Jan. 14.—Mrs. L. B. Lane died in St. Charles, Ill., at the age of sixty-two. Mrs. Lane went with her husband to Siam in 1848, as a missionary of the American Missionary Association. She returned in 1855. Both at home and abroad she was a good and true servant of Christ. Death came suddenly, but found her prepared.

Jan. 29.—Rev. G. D. Pike, D. D., fifteen years a District Secretary of this Association, was called home. He died in Hartford, Conn., at the age of fifty-four. Secretary Strieby, District Secretary Woodworth, Treasurer Hubbard, and C. L. Mead, of our Executive Committee, attended the funeral as representatives of the Society, and the Congregational clergymen of Hartford served as pall-bearers. Mr. Pike was a man of vigorous intellect, of strong faith and of undivided devotion to his work. It was a touching fact that even in the delirium of his last sickness his mind dwelt on the wants of the Association, and kept on planning to the end as to how the wants might be supplied. He made for himself and Fisk University a wide reputation as manager of the Jubilee Singers in three of their famous campaigns. It was singularly appropriate that a company of the Hampton Singers, who happened to be in Hartford at the time of the funeral, should gather as they did around his coffin and sing the slave song that was often on his lips when alive

> "Swing low, sweet chariot;
> Coming for to carry me home."

April 24.—At Middletown, N. Y., Miss H. E. Wells, who from 1878 to 1883 was our missionary at Charleston, S. C., and in the succeeding year at Savannah, Ga., entered into her rest. The power of her consecrated life will long be felt by those with whom she was associated.

May 7.—Mrs. H. M. Stevens, after a severe and painful sickness of several months, died at St. Albans, Vt. Mrs. Stevens entered the service of this Association as Miss E. M. Barnes in 1865 and left it in 1882. She gave seventeen of the best years of her life to earnest labor as a teacher of colored youth in the South. The last six years of her missionary service were spent in Fisk University, an institution that became greatly endeared to her. She established a permanent scholarship at Fisk, so that her influence will continue to live for all time in the school.

May 25.—The death summons came to Miss O. E. Goodridge at Talladega, Ala. Her illness was but of a few days' duration, nor was it considered fatal until within a few hours of the end. But she was ready. Growing up in a Christian home she had been early trained to the Master's service, and so her work at Talladega College for Christ's needy ones was a great joy. Her refinement of manner and gentleness of spirit won the affection of her associates, although she had only taken up the work the year before. She was a devoted and successful teacher.

Aug. 28.—Prof. W. L. Gordon departed this life at Columbus, Mich., aged thirty-four. Mr. Gordon entered our work in 1880 as Principal of the Avery Institute, Charleston, S. C. In 1882 he was appointed Principal and Treasurer of Tillotson Institute, Texas, which position he held till the time of his death. He was a very successful teacher. His ideal of scholarship was high. So also was his ideal of character. He was himself a good example in both these respects. He ruled in love yet in firmness. He was greatly beloved by his associate teachers and by the scholars. His sickness was trying and at times painful, but he never complained. His faith in Christ as his Saviour never waned. Only a few minutes before he died he whispered, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, for all His kindness and goodness to me."

Sept. 25.—Rev. E. A. Ware, President of Atlanta University, died suddenly of heart disease at Atlanta, Ga., in his forty-eighth year. He was graduated from Yale College in 1863, and began work in Atlanta in 1866, having charge of the schools of the A. M. A., which had been opened in that city the previous year. From that time to the day of his death, a full period of nineteen years, with the exception of a single year of rest enforced by physical needs which he spent traveling in Europe and Palestine, he toiled with a singular devotion in this, his chosen field, and saw most gratifying and astonishing results. He was active in securing the foundation of Atlanta University, and as its President he labored and sacrificed for its welfare, and witnessed its steady growth and prosperity from the beginning. The annual grant of $8,000, which the University has received for many years from the State, he was active in securing. His relations to the officers of the State were pleasant and in some cases cordial. In consecrating his mind with all its culture, and his heart with all its affectional strength, to the work of the elevation of the colored people, Mr. Ware set a noble example of sacrifice for the cause of Christ. His was a nature possessing powers that made him a man to be sought for in many directions, but he preferred in Christ's name to work for the lowly and the despised. We mourn not for him, but for his family and for the work from which he has been taken.

And so He giveth His beloved sleep. The workers fall—the work goes on. With thanksgiving in our hearts, and praise upon our lips, for these precious lives that the Heavenly Father has gathered home, we turn from the thought of death to that of life; from a contemplation of the rest that remaineth to the stirring activities of the great field in which we labor.

GENERAL SURVEY.

This Association by its chartered rights is authorized to go anywhere that it finds people destitute of Gospel privileges. Limitation of means and coöperation with other societies may compel it to a narrower sphere than the demands call for; but this is the principle that underlies the Association's organization, and that has characterized all its historic development. The work is at present confined to this country. We have missions in sixteen States and three Territories. The combined population of these States and Territories is 17,459,610, and at least one-third of that number are the legitimate objects of this Association's care. By reason of the necessities of the people, our work is both evangelistic and educational, the church and the school in their united aim securing the salvation of body, mind and soul; reaching home life, social life and business life; laying the only foundation on which can rest a progressive and enduring civilization. These mighty forces of Christianity—mother and daughter—in mutual helpfulness and in close proximity, are the agencies through which, with God's blessing, we hope to reach and save the people.

CHURCH WORK SOUTH.

STATISTICS.

Churches	112
Missionaries, of which 89 are pastors	119
Members	6,881
Added during the year	1,127
Sunday School scholars	10,569

In this department of our work we are permitted to report very decided growth Heretofore, the average number of churches organized each year has been six. This year the number runs up to seventeen. This increase comes from the maturing of enterprises that have been nursed for a longer or shorter time, and also the fruiting of our school process and the enlarging of our mountain work. These new churches are at Pleasant View and Rockhold, Ky.; at Cedar Cliff, Melville and Johnson's, N. C.; at Jellico, Pleasant Hill, Robbins, Jonesboro, Grand View and Helenwood, Tenn.; at Rutland, Ga; Ironton, Ala.; Greenville, Miss.; Abbeville, La.; and at Dallas and Austin, Tex. They have all been supplied with he ministry of the word, though several have been yoked two and two under one pastor. Eight of them have houses of worship, the others use school-houses or chapels of school buildings.

Of the 89 pastors who have ministered to our 112 churches, 30 were from the North, and 59 were raised up in our own institutions at the South. The average membership of these churches is 61. Total additions for the year, 1,127, of which, on confession of faith, 883. Raised for church purposes, $12,394.78; for benevolence, $1,625.86.

The evangelist, Rev. J. C. Fields, accompanied by his wife, who aids him in song, has continued his service through the year. He has labored at Louisville; in our three churches at Nashville, at Meridian, Jackson and Greenville, Miss.; and at Athens, Tecumseh, Montgomery, Marion, Selma, Talladega, Birmingham, Ironaton and Shelby Iron Works, Ala. As a result, between seven and eight hundred souls were hopefully led to Christ, and many of them gathered into our churches; while other denominations shared in the precious harvest. At several of the places visited, the religious interest assumed marvelous power.

At Marion there were 55 who professed Christ, the work spreading from our church into the State Normal school located there. Two-thirds of the converts were young men, ranging from fifteen to twenty years of age, who gave themselves earnestly to prayer and labor for the conversion of their comrades.

At Talladega College there were 116 conversions, including every inmate of the ladies' hall, and, with a single exception, every boy in the Stone Hall. The meetings, as distinctively revival, had to come to a close for lack of material upon which to work, and take the form of praise and thanksgiving unto God for the marvelous display of His grace. It was a literal fulfillment of the Divine promise to "pour out a blessing that there should not be room enough to receive it."

At Selma there were 300 who confessed their Saviour. Gray-haired men, grandmothers, men and women in the prime of life, youth and children, were among the converts. "The most glorious work of grace," writes Pastor Curtis, "it has ever been my privilege to see."

Revivals have also been enjoyed in the Central Church and Straight University, New Orleans; in the Tougaloo University, where nearly all the students were led to Christ; at New Iberia, La., where, under the labors of the pastor, fifty-nine were brought into church fellowship; in the First and University churches, Atlanta, and at several other places. It has been a year of marked religious interest and progress nearly all over the field.

Only one parsonage has been built, that at Strieby, N. C. Six new places of worship have been secured, those at Dallas, Tex.; Abbeville, La.; Ironaton, Ala.; Melville, N. C.; Jellico, Tenn.; and Pleasant View, Ky.

The resignation during the year of Professor Salisbury, Superintendent of our school work, and the transfer to Chicago of Dr. Roy, Superintendent of our church work at the South, raised the question whether, in view of the system to which these brethren had reduced the work of their respective fields, the two departments might not be consolidated and their care assigned to one man. With much hesitation, it was decided to try the experiment. Rev. C. J. Ryder, of Medina, O., has been selected to take the new position, and has entered upon its duties. His headquarters will be at Cincinnati, from which point, by reason of its central location and excellent railroad facilities, the whole field will be easily accessible. We regretfully part with Professor Salisbury. The three years of his service have been very valuable to our work, and it is largely because of this service that we are permitted to report that our schools were never before so well organized nor so efficient as now.

The exhibit of our schools in the World's Exposition at New Orleans attracted much attention from visitors. The New Orleans papers spoke of it in very complimentary terms. Descriptions of it were written and widely published in the newspapers all over the country. President Hitchcock, of Straight University, Rev. S. E. Lathrop and several of our colored students, took charge successively of the exhibit, and were on hand to answer questions regarding the American Missionary Association, its schools and its work. A large number of pamphlets and tracts was distributed. Representatives from every State in the Union, and from nearly every nation on the face of the earth, dropped in to learn the object-lesson the exhibit taught of what Christian education had done for the Indian and the Negro.

At Midway, Ga., an additional building has been erected for the Dorchester Academy. The Storrs School, Atlanta, by the sale of bullets dug from the battle-fields around the city, realized enough to secure a much-needed kindergarten building. Mrs. F. L. Allen, of Waterbury, Conn., has donated us a property in Quitman, Ga., containing three acres of land, on which stands a hotel building, nearly new and thoroughly furnished, to be used as a school for girls. The ladies of the First and Second Congregational churches of Waterbury promptly seconded Mrs. Allen's gift by raising $1,000 to make the necessary alterations to put the building in order for the school, and the ladies of the Congregational churches of the State have so far responded to an appeal for them to assume the support of the school, that it starts out with an assurance of success from the beginning. Rev. J. H. Parr, formerly of the Tillotson Institute, is to have the school in charge.

We have not been able to spend much money this year in brick and mortar. We have been obliged to put our funds almost exclusively into the more practical work of mind and character building.

Fisk University celebrated its twentieth anniversary this year by graduating from its college course fifteen, two of the number being young ladies. This makes 52 who have been graduated from Fisk. The Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of Tennessee, several State officials, many Senators and Representatives, attended the Commencement exercises and alumni dinner. A series of speeches in commendation of the good work done at the institution were made by these gentlemen, who bore testimony to the high standing of the Fisk students as teachers and citizens throughout the State. Of the 37 graduates previous to the class of this year, the record shows that 24 of them are principals and teachers in different schools; 5 are pastors of churches; 1 is a missionary in Africa under the American Board; 2 are practicing lawyers; 2 are studying for the professions—1 in a theological, the other in a medical school; 1 is a member of the Tennessee Legislature; and 2, who were teachers, have died. Its roll numbers 427, representing 21 States and 1 Territory. A year ago the Alumni Association adopted a plan by which, beginning 3 years after graduation, at least one per cent. of the earnings of each member is to be appropriated to an endowment fund for the University. When the sum reaches $1,000 it is to be devoted to some chair. The treasurer has already in hand $140.

Talladega College has had 365 students. This was more than it could comfortably care for. The girls' hall was crowded. Some applicants had to be refused for lack of room. The new Cassidy School building, having been used by over 200 pupils, continues to justify its right to be. Prosperity has marked the life of this college in all its departments.

Atlanta University maintains its well-earned reputation for school work of the highest order; 297 students have shared its privileges. Colonel L. W. Avery, Chairman of the State Board of Visitors, in his report last year, was so emphatic and strong in his praise of what he had seen and heard at the University, that the other members of the Board would not believe him, and he was compelled to modify his praise before they would accept his report. This year the whole Board was present at the examination, and the result is that they have every one been converted, and are now ready to go even further than the Colonel in testifying that "the proficiency attained in the scholastic results has been simply astonishing." The University continues to receive the annual appropriation of $8,000 from the State—a fact that is all-significant respecting the undeniable worth of the school.

Tougaloo University, located on the Illinois Central R. R., about eight miles north of Jackson, the capital of Mississippi, receives State aid to the amount of $3,000 annually. Two hundred and sixteen students last year have taxed its utmost capacity for accommodation. Governor Lowry and the State Board of Visitors attended the Commencement exercises, and were surprised at the evidence of the Negro's capacity for education. Four students took degrees in the elementary Normal course that requires ten years to complete it, and one took the degree from the higher Normal course, to complete which requires twelve years. The course is so long and thorough, very few go through; but nearly all the scholars, with such attainments as they have without graduating, become teachers, and even then the demand for teachers is far greater than can be supplied. "This institution is doing an immense good for the colored people and for the State," was the earnest ejaculation of one of the visitors.

Straight University, New Orleans, notwithstanding the devastation of floods and the failure of cotton crops that last year so severely affected the very limited finances of the colored people of Louisiana, was filled with students at the beginning of the school year, and continued not only crowded, but *over*crowded to the end; 584 scholars were enrolled, including representatives from Cuba, Honduras, New Mexico, Texas, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Illinois, and even Old England. Some of them were Catholic children, whose parents sent them because they could "get so much better education at Straight than in the Catholic schools." In several instances grandmothers or aunts or grown-up sisters have moved into the city from the country, hired one or two rooms to take in washing or sewing, so that with a little help from the country home they might be able to take care of the younger members of the family and send them to school. President Hitchcock writes: "Many a time I have questioned the tardy children to find that they had arisen—little girls of ten or twelve—at three or four in the morning to do the family work, washing, perhaps, and then walked three or four miles to get here. A few come from even greater distances." Every available space in the three large buildings has been used. Rooms intended and urgently needed for other purposes have been converted into class-rooms. Many applicants have been turned away even while earnestly pleading for admission. No wonder that Straight is incessantly appealing to us for a new building.

The Law Department graduated ten this year—seven white and three colored. A graduate of '83 is located in Vicksburg, Miss., and already has a large and successful practice. Being a colored man, he was subjected to a very severe examination before admission to the Mississippi bar; but he passed it triumphantly. The Theological Department has had eleven students, under the instruction of Rev. George W. Bothwell, pastor of our Central Church. Rev. A. E. P. Albert, a graduate of this department, on the Louisiana Day at the Exposition, delivered an address on the condition and needs of the colored people, that called forth enthusiastic applause from the immense audience that heard it, and generous commendation from the press.

Tillotson Institute, Texas, has also had a very crowded and successful year. This is the youngest of our chartered schools. It has the modesty that in every way is becoming the youngest member of the family, but in all that is excellent in work it stands not a whit behind the oldest and the best. It has already outgrown the comfortable limits of its habitation. The crowding process has struck it, and its cry for relief is growing sharper and sharper. We shall have to heed its cry one of these days. The great and rapidly-growing State of Texas chal our forethought and our care. The State Superintendent of Public Instruct the Hon. B. M. Baker, was present at the Commencement exercises, and after commending the teachers for their faithful work and testifying that the best teachers of the public schools in Texas were graduates of the Tillotson Institute, he publicly thanked the people of the North for the establishment and maintenance of the school. Judge Fullmore, a county school superintendent, who was also present, not only indorsed all that Mr. Baker had said, but added that in his appointments of teachers he always gave Tillotson graduates the preference, and that a certificate of graduation from Tillotson in the hands of an applicant was all the evidence of character and ability he needed.

Were we to continue sketching the salient points in the work of our other schools scattered all over the South, it would be simply to give fresh illustrations of the five facts already made prominent—crowded schools, growing necessities, faithful work, good results and outside commendation.

As compared with last year, the statistics in our school work show a falling off of two chartered institutions and seven common schools. On its face, this looks like loss; in reality, it is gain. The two chartered institutions dropped out of our statistics are Berea and Hampton, that, as a matter of fact, have been for several years self-sustaining and independent, and which, as formerly fostered by us, we have hitherto reported; they are still in the field, doing a greater work than ever, while the seven common schools, dropped because they ceased to be needed where they were located, are more than represented in the better work of the other schools, to strengthen which the money thus set free has been transferred.

We are steadily but slowly coming to the realization of the idea that was the inspiration of the American Missionary Association's school system—Christian colleges and Normal schools for the training of leaders, and Christian preparatory schools to furnish them with the right kind of material. The South is year by year, as its financial ability increases and its public sentiment improves, doing more for the rudimental instruction of its children. It is the duty of the State to provide elementary education for every child within its borders, and to that point the Southern States must one day come; but just in proportion as they come to that point, the necessities for our work increase. The demand for Christian teachers and preachers and professional men in all ranks at the South will grow as facilities for the elementary education of the children multiply. Our aim is not only to save the land from ignorance, but to save it from godless intelligence. Infidelity is as much the enemy of free institutions as ignorance; and when the children are intelligent, an ignorant leadership is almost as effective as an infidel leadership to raise up an infidel people; so that, as intelligence spreads among the youth of the South, we are placed under accumulating obligations, by virtue of our loyalty to the kingdom of our Lord, and by virtue of our interest in the perpetuity of republican institutions, to strengthen, enlarge and multiply this work. Of course, just now, and for a great many years to come, by far the greater part of our school work must be in the lower grades of instruction. So long as it can be said, that in the Southern States eighty per cent. of the colored and thirty per cent. of the white population are illiterate; that there are not educational facilities enough to furnish fifty per cent. of the children with even a chance to learn their letters; that there are whole communities and sections in which there are no schools whatever; that there are thousands and tens of thousands of children and youth who would be glad to go to school did they have opportunity; so long we must continue to furnish elementary instruction in all our schools, and as far as possible open such small schools as may meet the present but transient exigency, to be ing." 3d, as we have the seven common schools above referred to, when, from whatever cause, the necessity for them has passed away. The Executive Committee desires to emphasize and to have the constituents of the American Missionary Association keep it constantly before them, that as the cause and means of popular education extend in the South, the necessity for the work of the Association becomes stronger and stronger.

As seen from this stand-point, the desirability of bringing our larger institutions as speedily as possible, where they shall be able to take care of themselves, becomes clear and urgent. They should be at once so far endowed that the question of their permanence as conservators of the supremacy of Christian leadership in the thought, character and life of the people should be settled beyond peradventure for all time. With that accomplished, what a future opens before us for this land and for Africa! With our treasury released from the support of these colleges, we could reach out in all directions, and, girdling them with preparatory Normal and industrial schools, and buttressing them with churches located at convenient places, keep them constantly supplied with students of the right kind. This would be to place the crowning touch upon the aim whose inspiration gave these chartered institutions birth—the Christian culture of the people that the Republic might endure.

We commend these schools to the special regard of those who are looking about to invest money where, in the name of the Lord, it will yield rich and enduring returns. In their claim to be made self-supporting they offer as grand an opportunity for doing good with money as has ever been presented for the consideration of those who love the cause of Christ and who are interested in the preservation of freedom and the spread of Christian intelligence.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

Schools in which industries are taught	16
Special industrial teachers	10
Teachers combining industrial with other work	21

Industrial teaching is made prominent at Santee, Oahe, at all of our chartered institutions, at Le Moyne Institute, Memphis, Tenn., Lewis High School, Macon, Ga., and incidentally at six other schools. Aid has been received from the Slater Fund for this work at Macon, Atlanta, Nashville, Tougaloo, Talladega, Memphis, and Austin. Nearly all the scholars in attendance pursue some of the branches of industry taught. Housekeeping, cooking, dressmaking, care of the sick, agriculture, blacksmithing, harness-making, type-setting and printing are made prominent, according to the conveniences at hand. Atlanta, Talladega and Tougaloo have farms which are worked by the students under the instruction of practical farmers. At several other points farming could be successfully taught if only we had the farms, and we could have the farms if only we had the money.

For the teaching of the trades we need special buildings. Progress has been made in this direction. Atlanta University has erected "The Knowles Industrial Building," a memorial of the late Mr. L. J. Knowles, of Worcester, Mass., whose widow not long before her death appropriated $6,000 for this object. It is a brick building 100 by 44 feet, with two stories and a basement, and, for its use, is one of the finest in the South. At Macon, a two-story building has been constructed—the upper story for the Lewis Library and the lower for a carpenter shop. At Talladega has been also built a two-story structure, the upper story to be used for carpentry and the lower for blacksmithing. The citizens of Memphis two years ago gave Professor Steele $1,000 to put a girl's industrial department into the Le Moyne school, and now they have pledged him $600 more to secure a workshop for the boys / Fort Berthold in Dakota and Fisk and Straight Universities at the South greatly need industrial buildings, and there are other schools of which the same might be said with equal emphasis.

It is difficult to overestimate the importance of industrial training. Latest in development in connection with our schools, it may yet prove first in value. Labor is heaven-ordained. It is the chief instrumentality through which a people are elevated. Grace saves the soul and transforms character instantly. It makes the savage and sinner kind and good instantly; but it will not instantly make him a good farmer, a skilled mechanic, a trained scholar. Up from the lowest to the highest, man must toil patiently and laboriously. Nature will tolerate neither jumps nor deceptions. It is no kindness to put a man where he is out of place, and still less is it a kindness to make him believe that he has a right to be there. He who climbs up into position or who is foisted into it by any other instrumentality than by the toil necessary to fit him for the position, the same is a thief and a robber. The police forces of Nature will speedily put him under arrest. The judicial forces of Nature will soon cast him into a prison, out of which he shall not come until beginning at the bottom, by diligent labor, he is willing to pay the last farthing at every step in the process of his advancement. The implements and the products of industry are the gauges of civilization. Between the roughly-hewn stone hatchet and the finely-polished steel axe lies all the history of the world's progress. The college, the library, the fine residence and the factory of modern civilization are at one end of a line, the other end of which starts from the dug-out and the hut. Man, in the highest estate, forget or ignore it as he may, has that in him which connects him with the lowest, and labor, the hard labor of his ancestors, extending through the ages as well as his own, has been the means of bringing him where he is. If the Indian and the negro are to be elevated, they must rise by the same steps as have others. They must work their way up. But they who are above them, remembering the pit out of which they themselves have been dug, must give them a chance to rise, and help them as they try to rise. That they have the capacity for elevation along every line of human development has been abundantly proved over and over again. The industrial exhibit of the colored people at the recent Centennial Exposition in New Orleans, was in every way gratifying to their friends. Though these people are only 20 years out of the house of their 250 years' bondage, antedated by millenniums of barbarism, they sent articles showing their progress in the industries that more than filled the entire gallery assigned them in one end of the immense Government building.

Examination papers from schools, showing proficiency in penmanship, spelling, arithmetic, algebra, geometry, free drawing, grammar and translations from the classics; fine needle-work of all kinds; millinery; dress-making; tailoring; portrait and landscape painting in oil, water colors and crayon; photography; sculpture; models of steamboats, locomotives, stationary engines and railway cars; cotton presses, plows, cultivators and reaping machines; wagons, buggies; tools of almost all kinds, from the hammer of the carpenter to the finely-wrought forceps of the dentist; piano and organ (both pipe and reed) making; carpentry; cabinet making; upholstery; tin-smithing; blacksmithing; boot and shoe making; basket and broom making; pottery, plain and glazed; brick making; agricultural products, including all the cereals and fruits raised in the country; silk-worm culture; fruit preserving; flour from a mill, and machinery from a foundry owned by a colored man; patented inventions and improvements, nearly all of them useful and practical; drugs and medicines; stationery, printing and publishing.

Some of the articles on exhibition are worthy of special mention: a black walnut pulpit, in design and finish as beautiful and tasteful as any church might wish; a sofa finely upholstered, and the covering embroidered with artistically-executed needle-work, showing four prominent events in the life of Toussaint l'Ouverture ; a chandelier, very beautifully designed and finely finished ; a complete set of dentist's instruments, in polish and finish remarkable ; a little engine, made by a silversmith of Knoxville, who was a slave, who never worked in a shop till he had one of his own, who learned the use of tools without any instruction, and who has become a skilled workman of local reputation. These articles would certainly merit attention, even if put in competition with similar specimens of the very best workmanship.

Neither the Negroes nor their friends have any reason to regret that an exhibit was made. It marks a progress simply wonderful, when all the circumstances are taken into the account. It is prophetic of a very hopeful future. It shows that the Negro can enter every profession and calling in which the white man is found. It proclaims in tones no one should misunderstand, that he who writes or speaks of the colored people should be careful how he pronounces judgment in regard to their capacity. They should be given a white man's chance. No trade nor occupation should be closed against them. Open doors should welcome to honorable competition white and black alike. Let this be so, and in less than half a century there will not be a trade, nor profession, nor calling, in which black men will not be found in the front. There will be preachers, and professors, and editors, and physicians, and lawyers, and statesmen, and teachers, and bankers, and business men, and artisans, and mechanics, and farmers, of African descent, of whom, as brethren, the very greatest of white men will not need to be ashamed. It is wrong, it is wicked, for men who by voice and pen influence public sentiment, to conclude that because the Negro is now a waiter, a boot-black, a barber, a laborer, that therefore he cannot be anything else, or even that he cannot probably be anything else. By the very force of circumstances he has been compelled to occupy these positions. By an unjust public sentiment he has been shut out from even an opportunity to prove his capacity.

Public sentiment should be reformed at this point, and we believe industrial training will do much to secure the reformation. There is truth in the old Latin maxim "Labor conquers all things."

MOUNTAIN WORK.

This work has gone forward the past year with marked success. Rev. J. T. Ford having taken the pastoral charge of the church at Williamsburg, Rev. A. A. Myer, was at liberty to give himself to more extended missionary work ; and, as might be expected, he has gone into it with a will. He has organized three new churches; one at Jellico, with 11 members ; one at Pleasant View, with 13 members, and one at Rockhold, with 15 members. Under his superintendency the Jellico church has erected a good commodious house, but it needs a bell. The congregations number from 250 to 300, and the pastor, Rev. E. W. Bullock, reports the interest as increasing.

Pleasant View Church has also put up a house of worship, now complete except seats. At Rockland, stone is on the ground, Mr. Myers using his own team to haul it, himself being teamster, and the lumber is all ready to begin work. A chapel is soon to be erected at South Williamsburg, where there are hundreds around the mills who cannot be induced to attend church up town. Eleven Sunday-schools, with an enrollment of 1,200 and an average of 750, have been maintained. These schools extend from Jellico on the State line to the northern part of Whitley County along the railroad. Besides these, several students from the Academy have conducted Sunday-schools at their homes, reporting an enrollment of 160.

Day schools have been kept at Woodbine, Rockhold, Dowlais and Jellico with marked success.

The Williamsburg Academy has had an enrollment of 203. The reputation and influence of this school are extending far and wide. The teachers, imbued with the missionary spirit, have been a power in the church and in the community, as well as in the school. The question whether our schools could be kept up if colored students were admitted, has been squarely met and answered, and right at our central station, Williamsburg, we have had colored pupils during the past two terms. When they were first admitted, there was a stampede of the white scholars, reducing the number from 120 to 40, but as they had a chance to think the matter over, and they saw the school going right along as if nothing had happened, and that it was going to keep right along, they began to come back again, with still others to join them, so that the school closed with a larger enrollment than the previous year. The excitement caused a discussion that found its way into the newspapers of the State, and gave the school such an advertisement as could not have been secured by years of ordinary work. We shall have no more trouble with the color question in Whitley County. It has been settled, because it has been settled right.

In Tennessee, the Independent Church at Sherwood, and its pastor, Rev. A. B. Smith, have entered our fellowship by joining the Central South Association. On the Cumberland plateau, Pastor B. Dodge has secured the organization of a church with 16 members, which is associated with his church at Pomona. An organ and hymn-books were furnished by the Pilgrim Church, Cambridgeport, Mass. The people have subscribed $300, chiefly in lumber, toward a much-needed chapel for church and day school. At both these points day schools have been maintained. At Grand View, the first year of the Academy has proved a success, and now the church has been organized in association with it, both to be under the care of Rev C. B. Riggs.

The school work of Mrs. St. Clair in Scott County has been remarkable. Three years ago there were 27 saloons and two Sunday-schools in the county, one school held in Mrs. St. Clair's tent and the other in a blacksmith shop ; now there are three saloons and 25 Sunday-schools, and the good people are praying with much confidence that their prayers will be answered for three less saloons and three more Sunday-schools. Mr. R. F. Taft, of Worcester, Mass., was sent down to help in this field. His labors were wonderfully blessed. Two churches, one at Robbins, the other at Helenwood, were organized. He is not able to continue in our service, but, in speaking of what has been accomplished, he has this to say : "Wherever I went the people were so eager to hear the Gospel that it was a joyous work to me. All came together, natives and Northerners, and our colored brethren. If the A. M. A. has accomplished nothing more, it has broken down the line of color, and to-day all mingle together in seeking after the pearl of great price." The work of Mr. Taft has been taken up by Rev. W. E. Barton, a recent graduate of Berea College, who finds already so much on his hands that he is crying for help. In Helenwood, Judge Parker, who keeps one of the three saloons already referred to, subscribed $50 toward a building for the church, and in a public meeting where the matter was being considered he grew eloquent and said : "On this rock we will build a church (referring to our church organization), against which the gates of hell shall not prevail." That looks as if the judge was thinking about coming into the church himself. If so, away will go his saloon, and that will only leave two to be prayed out of existence. At Oneida is a Sunday-school with 203 enrolled, conducted by young men who are not Christians, but who feel they ought to be. We cannot help thinking that they soon will be. And so all through this region the harvest is plenty but the laborers are few. And yet it will not do for us to close our eyes to the difficulties that exist. The tides of civilization have swept by the base lines of this mountain country, and left the people high and dry in the notions and privations of the last century. These mountain people are an anachronism in the nineteenth century. They are nominally Christian, but the ignorance, bigotry and sectarianism prevalent mark them as belonging to the far-away past. Schools are few. Such as they have are of low grade and poorly taught. A very large proportion of the people can neither read nor write. Said a young man, supposed to be dying, to the Rev. Mr. Bullock, in answer to the question, "Do you believe in Christ?" "I do not know whether I do or not." "You believe Jesus died to save you?" "I don't know anything at all of him; I never read the Bible; I never went to church in my life."

Their ministers despise "book larnin'," and do not believe in missions, progress, schools and temperance. To one of our missionaries one of these preachers recently said: "I don't go for missions, because when the Gospel is preached to all nations the end will come, and I think it is wrong to hurry the judgment day along." They are intensely sectarian as well as ignorant—two things that go together. When the excitement was up on the color question at Williamsburg, and it was clearly seen that the victory was about to be carried over caste, some of them changed their tune and their song became. "We don't object to the niggers, but if you send your children to that school they will become Congregationalists." That, in their estimation, would be a most deplorable evil, in comparison with which ignorance is preferable. Many of them are Baptists of the "hard-shell" order, or, as they like to phrase it, Iron-Clad. Their sectarian bickerings among themselves have been so sharp that their creed has been described: "Join my church, fight every other church, and verily thou shalt be saved." Now that a broader church has come among them, with an intelligent ministry, with a Gospel that means righteousness of character, with schools, and Bibles, and temperance, and literary and missionary societies, like Herod and Pilate of old, they unite and become friends to oppose what they fear is going to prove their common enemy. But despite it all, the children are coming and will come. We cannot expect to do much with the Iron-Clads. They will go down in the incasements of their ignorance and prejudices, discharging their ineffective shots against the progress of the times, but we are reaching the children and youth. The daughter of a Baptist preacher, greatly to the chagrin of her parents, recently joined one of our churches. We are securing the coöperation of the best—the independent in thought and the considerate in judgment—in every community where we have gone; and, as the record of the progress the past year abundantly proves, the people welcome and hear us gladly. But when the recognized leaders of a people oppose, we must not be over-confident of an easy victory. As Mr. Myers writes: "We need experienced, prudent, far-seeing men to help us along with our work, and a good deal of Christian patience to await results."

Our Indian work is chiefly in Nebraska and Dakota, among the great Sioux nation, that numbers about sixty thousand, and the tribes that mingle with, or are located around, them. We have three main stations, Santee, Oahe and Fort Berthold, all situated on the Missouri River, and at points strategic for pushing missions out among the people.

Santee.—Here is planted the Santee Normal School, under the care of Rev. A. L. Riggs. This institution, pioneer of its kind, began work for the higher training of Indian pupils fifteen years ago. Its history and experience show the great advancement that has been made by the Indian mind. At first the pupils came as to a sort of picnic, and expected to slip out when the fun stopped. But now the discipline, attendance and class work are of a high order and will compare favorably with schools of similar grade elsewhere. One thing quite noteworthy about Santee is that while it is often impossible to fill the desired quota of girls for other schools, applications at Santee from girls and young women far exceed the ability to receive them. This school, with its 177 pupils busily engaged in their studies under the instruction of an able corps of teachers, in possession of buildings that are up to the times in all their equipments, reaching by its influence every Indian village of the great empire of the Missouri River basin, is an institution from which, with God's blessing upon its work, we have a right to expect great things in the future.

Pilgrim Church, under the joint pastorate of the Rev. Artemas Ehnamani and Rev. A. L. Riggs, honors the faith and polity of the Pilgrim Fathers in its coöperation with the school, nurturing and extending the cause of Christian education. Its roll numbers 164 names, and its Sabbath-school reports an attendance of 183.

Great and urgent fields inviting missionary occupancy lie all around Santee. The Rosebud Camp of between six and seven thousand Indians, under the pressure of necessity, is beginning to break up. Swift Bear's colony, numbering sixteen families, an offshoot from Rosebud agency, has located along the Niobrara. Others are coming down this fall as soon as their little crops are harvested. All the land on the north side of the Niobrara, twenty miles east of the mouth of the Keyapaha, and much of the land on the Ponca Creek close by, is now taken. Here has just been built a school-house given by Deacon Burrill, of Oberlin, Ohio, a little building of two rooms, one for the teacher's residence, and the other for the schoolroom and chapel. A son of Pastor Ehnamani, of the Santee Church, is to take charge of this station.

Among the Poncas, since last December, we have had a missionary, Rev. J. E. Smith, who, while maintaining Sabbath services with good attendance, has during the week taught a government school. At the Upper Ponca settlement, during the months of February and March, a mission day school was kept by Albert Frazier, a native teacher.

Oahe.—This mission, with its out-stations, is in charge of Rev. T. L. Riggs. By reason of the illness of Miss Collins and the absence of Mr. Riggs, who, with Stephen Yellow Hawk and Rev. Charles W. Shelton, made a campaign at the East in behalf of Indian Missions, this mission in the early part of the winter suffered somewhat. The native helpers are Titus Jugg, a young man with family, of earnest missionary spirit, and Elizabeth Winjan, a woman advanced in years, a most faithful teacher in school, as well as by her daily life, both stationed on the Cheyenne; William Lee, David Lee, Samuel Smiley, and Stephen Yellow Hawk, thirteen years ago low savages and superstitious heathen, but to-day, by the grace of God, clean, industrious, kind-hearted Christian men. Rev. Isaac Renville, grandson of Joseph Renville, who so effectively assisted the early missionaries in the translation of John and other Scriptures, supported by the Native Missionary Society, occupies a building of the A. M. A. on the Cheyenne, where he has kept a small school and maintained Sabbath services. Farther up the river, "The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel" supports two native missionaries. These brethren have heartily coöperated with Mr. Riggs and the other A. M. A. workers. On the Grand River, Standing Rock Agency, we have Edwin Phelps, a young man of remarkable force, a good teacher, a good musician, and a good missionary. The government agent speaks very highly of him and of his work. All these native helpers, with one exception, are full-blood Dakota Indians.

The Indians of the Rosebud Agency on the White River have long been calling for missionaries to be sent among them. The Park Street Church, Boston, has given $400 to open a mission in that needy region, and Mr. Riggs expects to have a well-established out-station on the White River before the beginning of the coming winter.

During the year a movement has been made to establish an industrial school at Oahe. The Indian Bureau gave twenty scholarships. Alonzo Trask, Esq., executor in the Marquand estate, gave $1,500 toward a building, on condition that an additional $1,500 be raised. This additional amount Mr. Riggs secured. The beginning of the school was made in January. Twelve scholars were all that could be accommodated. They were promptly secured. The school has been continued by the exercise of strictest economy and the willing self-sacrifices of all concerned. The experiment has proved a success, and a good beginning has been made for another year. The new building is now about, if not quite, ready, and fitted to receive forty scholars.

The church at Oahe bears the significant name of Shiloh. A place of rest it has proved to many a weary soul—yet of rest only as it has prepared for activity. During the year God has been pleased to manifest His grace in saving power. Seventeen new members have been received on profession of their faith and three by letter. The total membership is 54. The greater part of these are young men and women, not more than half being over thirty years of age, and not more than five being past forty-five years. This church enjoys the ministrations of Stephen Yellow Hawk and David Lee.

Fort Berthold.—This point, with the territory adjacent, is held by Rev. C. L. Hall. The day school has had 129 pupils during the year. Six of the Indian girls have been taken into the teachers' home with marked benefit to the mission work. Increased interest has been manifested in the church services, the average attendance being 75. At Fort Stevenson, a Government school (75 pupils) has been kept by Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Wells. Religious meetings have been held fortnightly on Thursday evening and Sabbath school each Sunday. The Crow agency, after waiting two years, is still begging for us to send a missionary.

The Indians around Fort Berthold are making gratifying progress in farming. They have added 200 acres of grain to last year's crops. A large part of the people have broken away from their old villages and settled on quarter sections of land 80 miles up and down the Missouri, building houses and breaking land for next year's crops.

Skokomish Agency.—Striking westward about 1,000 miles, we come to Skokomish Agency, Washington Territory, where Rev. Myron Eells stands almost alone to represent the interest our denomination takes in the salvation of the Indians of that region. At Skokomish he has a church of 46 members; at Dunginess a church of 28 members, where he spends two Sabbaths and the intervening week each month; and at Squakson, a small reservation formerly in charge of the Presbyterians, who have now withdrawn, he conducts public worship once a month. In these three places he has under his pastoral care 102 families; average attendance at public worship, 150; at Sabbath school, 84; at prayer meeting, 62. Infant baptisms, 19; adult baptisms, and reception to church membership, 11. Many of the Christian Indians are efficient helpers in the prayer meeting and the Sunday-school, assisting Mr. Eells when he is present and carrying on the work when he is absent. The progress made by the Indians of Washington Territory during the past fifteen years is owing largely to the Peace Policy inaugurated by General Grant. Since 1880, the Indians of the Skokomish reservation have been self-supporting. They live chiefly by farming, logging and working for the whites.

At Santa Fé, New Mexico, we have maintained during part of the year four teachers who have had under instruction Pueblo Indian children, for whom Government scholarships had been secured.

We have thus presented some of the prominent features of our missions among the Indians. The work is full of encouragement everywhere. The cry for enlargement comes from every station. There are tens of thousands of heathen adults and children who can be reached, waiting and anxious for us to come to them; in fact, sending us invitations to come and teach them the white man's way. The workers at the front importune us to send them reinforcements—young men and women of rugged health, unconquerable faith and earnest consecration, who are willing to rough it and endure hardness for Christ's sake. As one of them puts it: "Not palace-car missionaries, who wait for everything to be done before they come, but missionaries who are able to build their own log cabin, follow the Indian into his haunts and teach him in his own wigwam." The Government is ready to coöperate with us farther than we can respond. The voices of the leaders of thought are growing more numerous and more loud in affirming that the day of injustice and neglect toward the Indian should cease, and the work for his salvation should be begun in earnest. The day of adequate effort to reach the Indians with the Gospel has been too long delayed.

WORK AMONG THE CHINESE.

STATISTICS.

Schools	18
Missionaries	38
Pupils enrolled	1,457
Average attendance	310
Ceased from idol worship	171
Giving evidence of conversion	112

These figures show three more missions and twelve more missionaries than the statistics of last year. In the missionary force there are eleven Chinese helpers.

Four new schools have been opened at the following points: Alturas, Fresno, San Diego and Tulare. The school at Alturas, in the northeastern part of California, though established for the Chinese, like all other A. M. A. schools, is open to everybody, irrespective of race or color, and the Indians in the vicinity have so largely availed themselves of the privilege that they greatly outnumber the Chinese. This school is under the care of Mrs. Griffiths, wife of the pastor of the Congregational Church in the place. She has the constant coöperation of her husband, who welcomes to his church all who can be induced to attend from the school. The mission at Stockton, the first one established by us in California, was closed last year, but has been reopened with an attendance and promise such as it never had before. Our schools are all in the hands of devoted and efficient teachers, are well located and well rooted. We are justified in feeling that they are all fairly on the way to become permanent,

The California Chinese mission, whose superintendency has been under the care of Rev. W. C. Pond ever since its organization in 1875, is auxiliary to the American Missionary Association. It has its own President and Board of Managers. It works in closest harmony with the parent society, and while it must look to us for by far the largest part of the funds necessary to carry its work forward, yet it does not rely wholly upon our appropriations, but makes continuous efforts to raise money itself.

It reports as having received into its own treasury the past year, $3,141.20. Its property consists of the Barnes and the West Mission Houses in San Francisco, together with an interest in the North Mission House of San Francisco and the new Mission House in Tulare. Mr. Pond has made strenuous efforts to secure sufficient contributions to bring to pass, without incurring debt, a transfer of these properties to the A. M. A., and he informs us that this result is now assured and that the transfer will soon be made. We shall thus come into possession of property worth upward of $9,000, free from debt.

The past year has not been in garnered results so fruitful as our Superintendent and his co-workers had expected; yet they have been faithful in the cultivation of the field. Early in the year they determined to be more aggressive than formerly. If the Chinese would not come in greater numbers to the schools, then the missionaries would go to them. Three men in the providence of God were at hand who were impressed with the importance of this aggressive work, and who were able to preach to the Chinese in their own language; Rev. D. D. Jones, who had returned from missionary work in South China, Jee Gam and Wong Ock. These brethren have been engaged in evangelistic work both at the mission houses and on the streets in San Francisco and at several other points. But "hard hearts," threatened persecution, and actively working prejudice have everywhere stood in the way of progress.

Still God did not leave His children altogether without some evidence of His favor. There were eighteen who professed conversion and twelve who received baptism. The reflex influence of these evangelistic services has been productive of great spiritual blessing to our missionaries and to the Chinese Christians. It has driven them to realize that they must more than ever trust in the power of God's spirit to overcome the difficulties; that they must faithfully hold and work every point now occupied; that they must pray on and labor on until the Holy Spirit descend in power to break the stony hearts and dissipate the opposing forces of Mongolian heathenism on the one hand and Caucasian inconsistency and infidelity on the other. "Brethren, pray for us!" is the almost heart-agonizing appeal Superintendent Pond makes to the constituents of this Association. "Never before," he writes, "were we so well prepared to do good service to the Master, and to move on with saving power among these dark souls purchased with His blood, as now, at the opening of this new fiscal year. Yet never before did we look on into the year with such a sense of utter helplessness or such a despair of real success except through the co-working of the Holy Ghost."

We commend this appeal for prayer to all our friends. Let there go up such a cry to God for help that in Pentecostal power His spirit may be outpoured upon our Chinese missions; and not only will the good results be felt in our own country, but they will reach in blessing even the vast empire of China and make strong and glad the hearts of our Christian brethren there.

THE WOMAN'S BUREAU.

The Woman's Bureau has proved a most efficient agency in our work during the past year. The family and the home where mother and sister are the strong guard of purity and moral strength, the newly-freed people knew nothing about from experience. Our missionaries, more than two-thirds of whom were women, found themselves face to face with the duty of caring for their unfortunate sisters. When the Christian women of the country were taking up and discussing the special claims of degraded and lost women for woman's special effort, and organizing societies to meet that claim, the American Missionary Association had the whole business in operation on a large and successful scale. When, therefore, the Woman's Bureau was created, it was neither to inaugurate a new work nor in imitation of other organizations. The purpose was to make the Christian women of the country more intelligently acquainted with a branch of our mission long in operation, and induce them by an increase of their contributions and sympathy and prayers to make it more widely successful. Miss D. E. Emerson, who not only by her experience as a missionary in the field, but also by her experience as a clerk in the New York office, was admirably qualified to take the Bureau in charge, was made its Secretary. She has opened direct channels of communication between the lady missionaries on the field and the Christian women of the churches. Sunday-schools and ladies' missionary societies have been furnished an opportunity to assume, either wholly or partially, the support of an assigned missionary, from whom they have regularly received letters. She has arranged to have addresses given upon the work at missionary meetings and conferences, either by herself or by a lady missionary, so far as she could, wherever and whenever such service has been desired. The work has been steadily growing upon her hands. The interest is widening and deepening. With no increase of machinery, with but little increase of expense, and with no divisive disturbance, either in the Association or in the churches, our Woman's Bureau quietly and effectively carries forward its operations at the North and at the South, at the East and at the West.

FINANCES.

Receipts for 1884–5.

Donations from Churches and Individuals	$191,698.35
Legacies	41,501.66
U. S. Government for Indian Schools	9,458.13
State Fund for Industrial Training	8,600.00
Tuition, Rents, etc	39,635.92
Total	$290,894.06

As compared with the receipts of last year, these figures show $191,698.35 collections and donations this year, as against $164,056.77 last; legacies, $41,501.66 this year, as against $64,559.42 last; a gain in contributions from the living of $27,641.58, a loss from legacies of $23,057.76. The receipts from all sources for the past year, notwithstanding the heavy loss in legacies, are in excess over the receipts of the preceding year $3,299.87. The expenditures for the year have been $306,345.93, leaving a debt on the year just closed of $15,451.87. This, added to the deficit of the previous year, leaves us with a total indebtedness of $29,237.78. But over against this and in close connection with it, should be stated the fact that in both years the indebtedness has been owing to an increase of appropriations to meet the absolutely necessary demands of the new Indian missions transferred to us by the American Board. In 1883–4, we expended on these missions, including $11,495.19 received from the U. S. Government, $33,204.95. In 1884–5, including $9,458.13 from the Government, we spent $41,283.75. The churches had laid this work upon us, and we could not avoid these expenditures.

We began the year with a debt of $13,785.86. The task before us, therefore, if our work was to be kept to its former scale, was to increase our receipts over the previous year $27,571.72, or twice the deficit. We have made that increase in donations from the living, with $69.86 to spare, and that, too, in the face of the stringency of the times. Had the legacies remained the same as the preceding year (which were $61,807.31 less than the legacies of the year preceding that), we should have closed this year without a debt and had $7,605.89 on hand to apply on the debt with which we started out.

But, possibly, it may be thought, since legacies are so uncertain a quantity, the work ought to have been adjusted so as to guard against the contingencies. That would require your Executive Committee to be possessed of omniscience. Besides, they had been specially warranted by the annual meeting to ask from the churches $365,000, with which to carry on the work. The Finance Committee, at the Salem meeting, reported that "to perfect the admirably organized plans of the Association, even for the present, to say nothing of the present needs of the early future," the churches and friends of the Association should be requested to furnish that amount during the year, and the report was unanimously adopted.

We have kept the call of the Salem meeting conspicuously printed on the first page of the MISSIONARY all through the year, and beneath it the receipts of each month, so that our friends could see for themselves as the year advanced just how we were getting along. Up to March, the receipts steadily kept behind those of the previous year. Then they went ahead, and maintained a slight advance until the close. When July came, leaving us only three working months, we were threatened with a debt of at least $54,000, and knowing that such a debt would imperil the work of the Association throughout the entire field, the question was raised whether we ought not to shut down altogether, cut off all payments, and wait until receipts would enable us to resume without embarrassment. But that meant the canceling of engagements; the arrest of payments to those who had already earned them, and who, failing to receive their money, would be obliged not only to feel the pinch of poverty in their homes, but, what is infinitely worse, to suffer in their Christian reputation, because they could not make good their promises and discharge their financial obligations; it meant the letting go of some important and promising fields, to do which would have been to lose them altogether; it meant the turning away from splendid opportunities to accomplish lasting good, that never again could be improved; it meant the loss of some of our missions, and the injury of all. With the call of the Salem meeting before our eyes: with the knowledge that contributions had only been received from about one-third of the churches; with the conviction that the churches desired us to advance and not retreat, that they had money enough and will enough, if only they could be made to know the facts, to give us all and, many times over, more than all we needed, we dared not take the responsibility of such a step. We felt that the churches, with rebuke and sadness in their tones, would ask: "Where was your trust in God? Where was your confidence in us?" And so, with such securities as we could furnish—for we had no reserve fund from which to draw—we borrowed the money, paid the bills, kept the work going, and began, more urgently than ever, to appeal for relief.

And here we come to a part of our report that we wish could be made adequately to record the facts. God only knows the feelings of sacrifice out of which many of the gifts have come to us. Missionaries in foreign lands sent their offerings; home missionaries and home mission churches at the West, some of them struggling hard with poverty, added theirs; our own missionaries and little churches at the South came up to our help. Quite a number of the churches at the North made special donations. One friend sent us $2,000; another, $1,500. Nine sent us $1,000 each; twenty-one, $500 each; eight, $300 each; three, $250 each; twelve $200 each; five, $150 each; sixty-five, $100 each, and seventy-four, $50 each while the number of those who sent donations varying from $1 to $50 reaches away up in the thousands. The widow's mite, the poor man's little, the children's pennies, memorial offerings for beloved dead, articles of jewelry that had been pledges of love—mingled with the larger gifts of the wealthy as they came to our relief.

And as the golden stream poured into our treasury, it came not in silence, but with words of benediction and good cheer and encouragement. From an old man: "This is my eighty-third birthday. Glad to celebrate it doing something for the cause of the Blessed Saviour. May the Lord bless you all and your earnest efforts." Another aged disciple: "I am a very poor man, so far as money is concerned, but I so love the cause you represent I would rather pinch this body I live in than see that cause suffer. Although I am over seventy-six years old, and need warm clothes for winter, I will trust God and send you the small mite I have on hand that I intended for winter protection, and look to my heavenly Father for help." Still another aged saint: "Find inclosed check from an old friend of your society, now in her ninety-ninth year, with many good wishes for your prosperity." Writes a pastor: "The little church here, desiring to add her Godspeed to the great work, sends a little to help. It is but a small amount, but it is the contribution of the poor." Another: "I herewith send a draft from the Congregational Church. Our people are poor. I do not receive over $300 for all of my time, but I do plead hard for the Lord's cause abroad." Still another: "Our church is small. All of us new settlers, and we can do but little. We receive aid, but we will do what we can to aid others." And yet another writes: "Yesterday, I took our collection. I wish it were a hundred times greater. May the Lord enable you to balance your books without a debt, so there may be no contraction in your glorious work. May our little straw break the back of that miserable old camel—the possible debt. God bless the meeting in Madison."

And so we might continue quoting from the hundreds of letters that came to us, laden not only with rich treasure of gold for our deliverance, but with prayer and sympathy, and commendation and Godspeed for the work.

CONCLUSION.

In conclusion, this review of the year inspires first of all songs of thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father for His manifold blessings upon the work and workers, and then our heartfelt gratitude to the pastors, churches and friends that have so nobly and generously, many of them at great self-sacrifice, contributed to sustain the work. With such evidence from heaven that the work is God's, with such evidence from earth that it rests upon the hearts and consciences of His people as a sacred trust, we cannot but feel that in it all Providence is saying unto us, Go forward. But what say our constituents? We present them our report. We await their answer.

We make grateful recognition of valuable help from the Congregational Publication and Sunday-school Society in the Sunday-school literature furnished our missionaries and students during the past year, enabling them the more successfully to prosecute their work. The aid thus furnished, as shown by the books of that Society, amounts to $1,121.60. This literature has had wider circulation than that secured by our own schools. Students have carried it with them during their vacations, and made good use of it in the schools taught by them in the plantation towns.

From the American Bible Society we have also received copies of the Word to the value of $408.50.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

The Department or Bureau of Woman's Work having been fully explained in the report of the Executive Committee as not an independent organization calling for separate or distinct line of operation. you will perhaps be interested to learn by what methods and wherein it has sought to aid the Association, or has seemed to be of advantage to it.

Designed as a medium of communication between the mission field and those at home whose privilege it is to send the Gospel to the untaught, the way was plain and natural. First, to invite more full and unreserved communication from the noble women who, under the direction of the Association as missionary teachers, had as thrilling experience as could be gathered from any mission field, and then to bring this information before Christian women at home who, it seemed to us, had need but of the knowledge to secure a ready and helpful response.

Accordingly, a system of monthly letters to the Woman's Bureau was planned, in which the missionaries might note the varied incidents of trial or encouragement, which more than any formal reports convey a clear impression of the real field of work; and a proposition was made to the home workers to take definite part in sustaining these missionary teachers, in sums ranging from shares of $20 each to the amount of full support, the ladies thus contributing to have their special missionary representative from whom they should hear regularly.

About 700 copies of such letters have been sent out each month during the past year. The result has been most favorable. From every quarter we learn of the interest awakened by the missionary letters; and on the other hand, it is an encouragement and stimulus to our missionaries that this bond of Christian sympathy is established

How the ladies should help forward the work of this Association, has been left to the judgment of those desiring to help. Some have preferred to work by State committees, and in such cases we advocate the appointment of committees. Others have favored the organization of State societies, and here our influence has been turned in favor of a broad constitution that should unite the interests of the leading societies for home work, in order to avoid multiplied organizations. But this has been only incidental, our main purpose being truthfully to present the condition of the women—colored, poor whites, Indians—for whom this Association labors, and to solicit woman's work in their behalf, urging a cash contribution from the Woman's Missionary Society of every Congregational church as well as the usual help with the needle.

No new work has been undertaken through the Woman's Bureau other than the natural or inevitable enlargement of the field, as in the case of Quitman, Georgia, where a valuable property was donated to the Association for school purposes, the donor being a Connecticut lady. An appeal was made to the ladies of that State, and the work has been undertaken with the encouragement that they will meet the current expenses. It is a school for the training of younger girls than have been usually taken into our boarding schools, the design being to receive those of ages ranging from 8 to 12. Opening the first day of this month (October), the day school was first patronized, the enrollment numbering 107 within the first two weeks. Monthly reports from this school are to be sent regularly to the Connecticut ladies through the letters of a teacher. In a similar way, the ladies of Vermont sustain in full the school at McIntosh, Ga., and feel an honest satisfaction in watching the progress of their own school. One of their teachers, in reporting her work at the meeting of the State Conference, referred to her Sunday-school class of 56 young men, who studied the word of God with her each Sabbath; and we had reason to believe that many a lady present rejoiced to feel that by her contributions she had helped to place the teacher there.

We have schools at Jonesboro, Tenn., Athens, Ala., and other points, for which we desire like support. If the ladies of each State would assume the cost of one such American Missionary Association school, how freely could the Association move forward in the accomplishment of its grand work.

The contributions to our treasury the past year, through ladies' missionary societies or special effort of ladies, is as follows:

Maine, by State Committee	$1,379.37	Illinois	$826.22
New Hampshire	140.00	Wisconsin	346.50
Vermont, by State Committee	1,004.23	Iowa	576.94
Massachusetts	1,798.54	Michigan	101.72
Connecticut	1,460.25	Minnesota	362.67
New York, of which $340.55 by State Union	421.55	Nebraska	18.50
New Jersey	95.00	Dakota	29.31
Pennsylvania	45.00	Total	$9,152.74
Ohio, of which $320 from Oberlin ladies	546.94

Turning our attention Southward, it seemed important that the colored women should be interested in this Bureau of Woman's Work, and that in the churches of the A. M. A., missionary societies should be organized as a means of instruction, even though not much help could at present be expected from them. Such societies had already been formed in some of the churches. Realizing the importance of a special object for work, we proposed that the freedwomen aid in the support of a missionary to the Indians, at Fort Berthold, Dak., from whom they should hear regularly. The response was prompt and hearty, the Ladies' Missionary Association of Alabama alone pledging $100. One little mission band of colored women pledged a share of $20, and paid it in installments of $2 per month, the money being earned at the washtub or by other hard work, and needed in their own families for what we would deem the necessaries of life. But it was a revelation to many of them that in our own country there was any people as needy as themselves and in greater spiritual darkness. Several little girls have undertaken to make a quilt to be sold, and as they say: "Send the pennies to teach them little Indians some sense." To be sure, the material for the quilt is donated from the North, but in this way do we seek to cultivate in the freedwomen a missionary spirit that will lead them to help others even while they themselves require aid. They have paid during the year for their missionary to the Indians $228.75.

Thus does the Woman's Bureau seek to fulfill its mission in the North and the South, as a department of work under the American Missionary Association. Within the year there has been evident progress in securing the attention of ladies to this mission field. Very many in the busy occupation of daily home duty have stopped to listen to the claims of a work which, when once understood, moves not only to Christian duty toward the unenlightened, but arouses a sense of self-preservation, lest their own children or children's children suffer the penalty of present neglect in checking the evils within our own country.

We extend our thanks to all ladies who have so cordially co-operated with us, and to pastors who have aided by thoughtfully naming to us active workers in their churches with whom correspondence might be opened.

The needs of the people for whom we labor cannot be presented in this report, but will be made known by the missionaries who this afternoon speak from their personal experience.

To every one who hears, may the recital come as a fresh and irresistible appeal that shall meet warm Christian response from every heart.

SANTEE AGENCY, NEBRASKA.

Rev. A. L. Riggs, writes: We have much ground for encouragement. In spite of overwhelming disadvantages—the fewness of laborers, and a limited treasury—the work has been growing. The word is having entrance and is giving light. The Native workers are doing better work all the while. The Indians are coming to a clearer appreciation of what a Christian mission means, and urgent calls are coming from communities here and there for missionary teachers. It is a joy to us when they come to realize their need and want the Gospel. But it is a stifling pain when we feel that they must continue to want it, without receiving it.

In noting the growth of the work, I would say a word about the work begun this year among the Poncas by the Rev. John E. Smith. He has proved a clear-headed faithful worker, one whose interest grows with the work. He has gained the confidence of his people, and for the short time (since December last) that he has engaged in it, the success of his labors is very gratifying.

Educational Work.—The spirit of inquiry is awakened among the people. To some extent there is a thirst for knowledge among the new generation. There is everywhere a groping for light, and for knowledge concerning a new way. Santee Normal Training School is not merely worthy of mention on its own account, but in a peculiar way it is an index to the whole field. The scholars are not gathered in here by Government, nor are they attracted by the novelty of strange sights and the thought of travel in the States, but come here because they want to come. After making sacrifices to come, and notwithstanding the large numbers of pupils that have been drawn from this field to fill Government institutions, yet the number of applicants is steadily increasing, and exceeds what we can accommodate.

This institution began its definite work for the higher training of Indian pupils fifteen years ago. It was the pioneer among Indian schools of higher grade. The prominence given in this school from the first to industrial work has done much toward creating the healthy tone and common sense view spoken of. And our success in the various departments of shopwork, farm and domestic employments, is very gratifying.

And yet, the question of Indian education is not answered by the building of such large schools, except as they are means to other ends. The more difficult work of education lies in the hamlet, in the camp, and here and there and everywhere in the family. We take no satisfaction in our work at Santee, except as it is related to this work of bringing education and the Gospel into personal contact with the homes of the people. The real work of regenerating this people is done in the out-stations, and the work of our central school is of value only as it makes that broader, deeper work possible. And herein lies one reason for the retention of the vernacular in our schools. The Indian scholar, separate from his people, is not worth the work spent upon him, and that which makes him worth anything is his possible force as a missionary, speaking to his own people, in their own tongue.

OAHE, DAKOTA.

1. The missionary force—Of white missionaries my field has been especially short. Spending four months of the year in the East collecting moneys myself, and the illness of Miss Collins since the beginning of January, have cut down the A. M. A. force very seriously. For the school at Oahe, I secured the services of my brother's wife, Mrs. H. M. Riggs, and valuable aid was rendered by Mrs. Collins, so that it has been possible to carry this branch of the work, with the limited number of girls taken, to the close of the school year, successfully. The general missionary work of the mission at its out-stations was looked after during the early part of the winter by Dr. R. B. Riggs, for a short time. Since Dr. Riggs left, Mr. Elias Jacobson, a teacher employed by me for "the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel," has till my return attended partially to the wants of the out-station work.

2. I speak next of the missionary work done. This has been the chief object in view—to bring a heathen people to Christ. And that they are heathen and worshipers of strange gods, and gods many, is painfully evident as you go into any of the larger villages. The effort to celebrate the sun dance each year—now prohibited by the department—the sun poles, the worship of departed spirits even to their utter impoverishment, the prayer-offerings for the sick, the solitary man on the hill-top fulfilling his vow, gazing at the sun with eyes red and inflamed and suffering from thirst through the long day as he follows the sun from his rising to his going down, these and many other indications there are of abject heathenism.

And one fact deserves to be understood—the Indian's religion is individual, not collective. Each man is priest and worshipper, so that, although where families are scattered there are not always the indications of heathen worship and life that are found in the larger villages, still they are heathen till the change the Gospel brings is made. All our out-stations are to a greater or less extent in centres of heathen life; hence the great work is to preach the Gospel that men may live. And we preach to every man in the tongue of his own people.

Schools are a needed adjunct to this end, that all may be able to read, as well as hear, the truth. We have done but little in the way of industrial teaching at the out-stations other than by way of example. Precept there is, to be sure, but there is far more power in a carefully kept house, good, clean cooking and a well cultivated garden, from which squash and potatoes and corn are gathered and stored for winter use, than in any amount of individual precept or government-blind issue of seeds, and orders to plant and grow food. Hence, at each out-station special pains is taken to have the native helpers keep clean houses and plant and care for gardens.

3. Schools.—At each out-station a day school has been held whenever it has been possible. My absence during the past year has been felt in this direction, difficulties that might have been overcome having been allowed to close the schools in one or two instances. Teaching has been chiefly in the vernacular, with a beginning made in English instruction at two of the Cheyenne River schools and at Grand River. Our schools appear to have suffered much from the breaking up of the villages—more, in fact, than have the Sabbath services.

During the year a movement has been made toward the establishment of an industrial school in connection with this mission, to be located at this point—Oahe, and for the first year, at least, to provide for girls only. Acting under the consent of the Executive Committee, I last fall secured from the Indian Bureau scholarships not to exceed twenty in number, and of $120 value each, or $30 per quarter for each girl in the school. This grant was made to be available during the first six months of 1885.

I also obtained from Alanson Trask, Esq., executor in the Marquand estate, a pledge (since made good) of $1,500 toward a building, on condition that an additional $1,500 be raised. During my stay in the East, a trifle over $1,000 was paid in for this object. But of the school, as attempted the past year: A beginning was made in January. We had no proper accommodations for the scholars, other than by taking them into the mission home. The number twelve was placed as the limit, and this was soon reached. Miss Collins' sickness made it necessary to provide other care for the girls, and Mrs. H. M. Riggs consented to attempt this. Her success was marked and complete. The girls spent daily two hours and a half in receiving regular industrial instruction and learning how to cut and sew clothes, as well as doing all their own work about the house and kitchen in addition. They were also engaged three hours each day in direct study of the school-room. Altogether the experiment has been a success, and a grand beginning is made for another year. We hope by October, at least, to have the new building up and fitted to receive forty scholars. An efficient matron has been secured. The great need of this school has long been painfully felt, and its establishment is a matter of gratification to Indians as well as to missionaries in this field.

4. Church work.—Growth in this direction has been greatly encouraging during the past year. Since my last annual report I have baptized six infants and seventeen adults. Seventeen new members have been admitted to church membership on profession of faith and three by letter, making an addition of twenty. On the other hand we have granted a letter of dismission to one, and two have died during the year. The roll of membership for this church—The Shiloh Church—gives a total of fifty-four. The greater part of these are young men and women, not more than one-half being over 30 years of age, and there being not more than five who are past 45 years. Of the seventeen members received on profession during the year, but four can be regarded as past their youth. The position held by these church members has been good. But few have made any serious mistakes, and these, in nearly every case, have been followed by sincere sorrow and repentance.

The support of their two pastors for pastoral work has been kept up more nearly than it was feared would be the case. The pastors, Stephen Yellow Hawk and David Lee, have had pledged to each the sum of $60 yearly. This, in proper proportion in case of one of them, has been raised promptly and paid over at the close of each quarter; with the other, there has been some little delay—as often is the case with white Christians.

It is proposed now to follow somewhat the law of location and settlement—there being so great a distance between extreme settlements, where church members have located—and from the present church organization form three separate organizations, one to remain here at Oahe, one to embrace those on the reservation and south of the Agency, and one to include the Cheyenne River and the district to the northward.

5. White River.—During the year it has seemed that we could wait no longer in answering the call that has come so persistently from Indians on the White River, belonging to the Rosebud Agency. As part of the results of a fair held by the Park street church of Boston in February last, $400 has been provided for an out-station in that needy region. It is too early yet to say much of this effort. I have looked the ground over, and we shall, I hope, before the beginning of winter have a well established out-station on the White River.

6. Suggestion.—Push the missionary work with every nerve and all power; and for this particular field, make the industrial school here at Oahe what it ought to be to fitly support and receive results from the out-station work. The present greatest need seems to be to provide for the girls who have attended our out-station schools, and have learned to read a little in their own language. If we do not gather them in to something better than their home life, we lose much of that already gained, and fail of rich results. With the boys it is as yet a little different; we can more easily send them off to Santee and to Hampton for industrial training.

In conclusion, I would add that the good Lord has always shown himself ready to care for and lead us, and no more so at any time than during the past year, for which we give most grateful thanks.

REMARKS ON THE STATISTICS.

The statistics show 18 schools and 34 teachers. Three other teachers, besides the superintendent, have been at work, viz., Mrs. C. A. Sheldon, of San Francisco, and Mrs. E. A. Southworth, of Marysville, as teachers of helpers, and Jee Gam, as evangelist, making the total number of laborers 38. The total number of months of missionary service is 364.

As compared with last year, this shows an increase of three in the number of missions and of 12 in the number of workers; an increase also of 37 in the number of months of service rendered. But a marked decrease must be noted in the total number of Chinese reached—a decrease, however, which began early in the previous year, and seems in the course of the year just closed to have reached its lowest point. For this year, in all particulars, closes better than it began, so that the average membership has come to be precisely the same as that of last year—534—and the average attendance is larger by 51.

II.—PERMANENCE OF OUR PRESENT WORK.

One encouraging peculiarity of the past year is that all the missions in operation at its beginning are continued and to be continued. We have reached the point at which all of our schools—such as they are—may be viewed as well-rooted and permanent institutions. We think that this is quite as true of the four established during the past year—viz., those at Alturas, Fresno, San Diego and Tulare—as of any others. It may be confidently affirmed that whether we consider the location and general environment of our missions, or the personnel of our teachers, we were never before so well prepared to do good service.

III.—SPIRITUAL RESULTS.

This sense of helplessness and this plea for fraternal intercession comes, perhaps, through the disappointments which have fallen upon us during the past year in relation to spiritual results. We started with an earnest purpose, not tempered perhaps as it should have been by a conscious dependence upon God, to make some effective inroads on the great untouched mass of heathenism that lies corrupt and festering in our midst. We would go after those who could not be persuaded by the proffer of instruction in the English language to come to us. For this purpose evangelistic services were to be undertaken both in our mission houses and on the streets, and not alone in San Francisco, but at several other points. It seemed a clear providential token of the Divine indorsement of this plan, that a zealous Welsh brother should have come to us unexpectedly from the very districts of China whence our immigrants have come, speaking their dialect intelligibly and eager to take up the work proposed. It seemed an equally clear token of God's favor that one of our most efficient Chinese preachers should seem, at the same time, to be endowed with a real evangelistic spirit. But their labors closed with no appreciable results. Since then no door has opened for any unusual service or any specially aggressive work. And the conversions reported, being only 18, are less in number than during any previous year. The baptisms have numbered twelve.

IV. THE FINANCES.

The financial resources have been as follows:

Appropriation by the parent society	$9,000.00
Receipts at the Treasury of the Auxiliary	3,141.20
Rents from Mission House property	305.95
Total	$12,447.15

The disbursements may be classified as follows:

1. General Fund, for current work:	Salaries	$7,484.60
	Rents	1,966.50
	Incidentals, including the refitting or furnishing of five mission-houses, fuel, lights, printing, books, traveling expenses, etc., etc	1,057.15
		$10,508.25
2. Permanent Property:	Debts paid in full	750.00
	Interest	19.10
	Taxes, insurance and repairs	98.15
	Total	867.25
	Full total	$11,375.50
Balance on hand		1,071.65
		$12,447.15

This statement will be somewhat modified, and this balance increased, as soon as some subscriptions now due are paid.

SERMON.

BY REV. REUEN THOMAS, PH.D.

Jeremiah xviii. 1—"The word which came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying, arise and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words. Then I went down to the potter's house, and behold he wrought his work on the wheels. And when the vessel that he made of the clay was marred in the hand of the potter, he made it again another vessel as seemed good to the potter to make it. Then the word of the Lord came to me, saying, O! house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter, saith the Lord. Behold! as the clay in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O! house of Israel."

The old prophets were patriots. They addressed their words not simply to individuals as individuals, for it is evident that they did not hold our modern ideas of individualism. Every person was one of a nation. Each man was in a relationship to every other man. Men and women were fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, husbands and wives. No one stood apart from the rest in solitary, unrelated independency. The inter-relationships of life were such that no man could shake himself free from them in selfish isolation without coming into immediate antagonism with the Creator and His purposes. From the earliest times such ideas as that contained in the words, "At the hand of every man's brother will I require the life of man," had been working their work in the minds of men. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was the first question which betokens how far the man who used it had fallen from the original idea of righteousness. And the attempt made by men everywhere to individualize themselves, to separate themselves from the relationships, and so, from the duties and responsibilities which belong to men as men, is still the sign that the spirit of Cain walks the earth. The prophets of old had a two-fold mission: to witness to the Divine Sovereignty over nations, and the inter-dependence of man on man everywhere. The more carefully we ponder over their utterances, the more shall we be impressed with this as their mission. Sin means separation—the separation of man from God, and of man from his brother. To bring men into allegiance toward God is to bring them into fellowship with each other. And there is no other ground on which a permanent unity of man with man can be built. The degree to which a nation is separated from God is the degree of its internal separateness. "Hear, O Israel! the Lord our God is one Lord"—that was the only basis on which national unity could be built. Again and again was that truth emphasized by men of the prophetic order.

And another truth also, that for every nation there was a mission special to it—something of which, in the divine ordering of things, it was capable—to which it was called.

That which was true of Israel was measurably true of other peoples. It is enough that we see the idea distinctly illustrated in some one nation. No one now-a-days believes that in the old times in which Jeremiah lived, the Almighty One had no care for any nation except that of Israel. Cyrus and Nebuchadnezzar had something to do for the living and true God. And others, also. The worth of that old Israelitish history to us, is in its vivid and realistic setting forth of the truths of divine providence in relation to nations as nations. We see the processes more clearly than elsewhere. It is as if the body of the nation were a transparency, enabling us to see the circulation of the blood of life. The divine thought gets utterance through the prophets. The divine government is illustrated in the rise and fall of the people. The hidden causes of national misery and of national prosperity are revealed. We are compelled to recognize that there is a union of that which is temporal and material with that which is spiritual and eternal. That there is a divine order for nations which cannot be trampled upon with impunity—that is taught so clearly that we wonder it should be doubted. And further, we are made to perceive that a nation called to a high spiritual mission to the world cannot be recreant to that mission—cannot fall below its calling and election, without incurring miseries which shall make it even more wretched than its neighbors who have received no such distinguishing call from God, from Him who knows of what each nation is capable, and in His call summons it to the height of its capability.

This great truth, necessary for us as for the men of old, was imaged to the mind of the prophet by what he saw in the potter's house. The fact of his being sent there to gain a great spiritual idea is noteworthy. These simple duties of every-day existence are but the embodiment and illustration of ideas we need to possess. There is no legitimate calling which need materialize the mind—none which would not have an exactly opposite tendency if only we were in right mental allegiance toward God. No art is more ancient than that of pottery. We can trace it back to the time when first history took up her pen to write her infant scrawl. It seems to be such a materializing employment. And yet the prophet is sent to a potter's house to learn the lesson of the divine providence in regard to the purpose and use of national life. "Behold, the potter wrought a work on the wheels"—two circular stones placed one upon another—the lower fixed, the upper turning on an axis and moved by the feet of the workman. The man is working in clay. He has in his mind an idea of a vessel of a certain kind, adapted to a certain use. Not the clay as clay occupies his thought, but the clay as capable of being made into a certain kind of vessel usable for a definite purpose. He is striving to make the clay subservient to his idea—to make it express that idea. But he fails once and again. The vessel was "marred in the hands of the potter." He seems to have despaired of that particular lump of clay being usable for the expression of the perfect form which he sought, and so he made it into another vessel—a vessel, probably, less elaborate, less beautiful in its outline. If it did not subserve the highest use which was present to his mind, it would answer to some lower use. If of that special lump of clay he could not make a vessel suited for an incense bowl for a temple, he might yet make of it something inferior, but still usable. If it would not do for the parlor, it might yet be of service in the kitchen. He did not cast it aside entirely and altogether because it was marred. He used it still. But in the material there was probably something rough, coarse, fractious, too much of resistance for response to the touch of that delicate manipulation which was necessary for the finest work, and now the interpreting word comes to the mind of the prophet: "Behold! as the clay in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O! house of Israel!" The idea is that the Almighty One will use Israel for the highest purposes for which a nation can be used if Israel is pure enough, of fine enough quality and texture to be so used. And it can be this by repentance toward God, and faith in Him—faith sufficient to keep its allegiance steady and continuous. But, if Israel should walk "after its own devices, and do after the stubbornness of its own evil heart," then Israel is no longer usable by God as material through which the Almighty One can convey His highest ideas and most beneficent purposes to the world. Such is the truth taught us in this parable (if we may so call it) of the potter and the clay.

That we may not confine this truth to Israel, thinking that God's relation with Israel was special—that there was something so peculiar about it as to put it out of the region where anything parallel to it existed—the very language of the prophecy seems to be studied. It is not simply that nation and kingdom to which the truth applies, but "at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation (any nation) and concerning a kingdom (any kingdom) to pluck up and to break down and to destroy it, if that nation turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them." There are laws for the rise and sustenance, for the decline and fall of nations. And those laws are at the back of that which is material. It is the duty of those who stand where the old prophets stood to make vocal and audible the word of God to man; to be the teachers of the people in things spiritual—things which refer to character, to the relations of man to God and of man to man—to make it understood that there is a law of national integrity and national prosperity, and that conformity to that law means true human progress; non-conformity, disaster and national deterioration and destruction. We need in our times and in our country an intelligent patriotism, and no patriotism can be intelligent, unless it has in it the quality which was in the patriotism of Jeremiah, of Isaiah, of Daniel, of Paul, of Him who wept over the doomed city, "Oh, Jerusalem, Jerusalem! thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee! how often would I have gathered thy children as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold! Your house is left unto you desolate." There can be no patriotism without humanity, and no developed humanity apart from Christianity.

Our religious life may be of one complexion or another. It may be that rudimentary form of religious life in which a man, conscious that his own present condition is not satisfactory—feeling at war with himself—apprehensive of the future, seeks, in the way he best knows, to get peace with his conscience. In a word, it may be only individualism—the man occupied with himself. Probably all religion has to be that before it can be something better. Such questions as these: "What must I do to be saved?" "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" have to make themselves heard in the conscience of every man who is not spiritually awake. Before there is any possibility of our being really interested in any thing outside of us, we must have a certain internal condition. If we are no farther along than this, that we believe "that God is, and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek Him," we are far enough on the right road to admit of our being consistently and benevolently interested in the life outside of our individual life. That type of religion which never gets beyond concern about itself must always in the nature of things, be characterized by much doubt. As long as any soul looks within itself for satisfactory experiences and evidences of the divine life, so long its doubts will be as plentiful as weeds in an ill-ordered garden. Beginning with our concern about ourselves, religion must never stop there. It cannot stop there. How is it conceivable that the spirit of God, whose office it is to enlighten the mind as to what Christ is, can keep the eyes of the individual fastened on himself and his own experiences? "When He, the spirit of truth, is come, He shall take of mine and shall show it unto you." That Holy Spirit of God, moving on the spirit of man, shall interpret the mind of Christ to the individual. He shall bring the man face to face with the Christ of God—shall open his understanding to the meaning of the person and work of this Christ in the world, and bringing him into accord, into fellowship with that Christ, shall make him to partake of the manhood of Christ Jesus, so that the man shall lose his independence, in a sense his individuality, and be as was the great apostle of the Gentiles, when he said, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." There is only one hand which can open the prison-door of selfishness and let the soul out into the freedom of the larger life—the hand of Jesus, the Christ. I contend that it is not possible that the spirit of God can ever be the inspirer of those religious ideas which narrow down a man's sphere to himself and the simply getting himself out of a condition in which he apprehends loss and torment. In many and many a soul religion begins with fear. The sense of a something here on earth, a something in us which is not material and perishable—when that sense comes to be oppressive, it generates fear. The sense of not being right—of being wrong, inwardly wrong—wrong in relation to God and the world—means fear, apprehension, ceaseless unrest. The soul is like the troubled sea, which cannot rest. In this condition the man flies from himself, or tries to fly from himself, only to experience that he carries himself with him. Some kind of a religious life is necessary to inward rest and peace. If his mind be turned toward Christ and he is taught that in Him is salvation, and looking to Him, receiving him, finds that a change has come over his inward condition, and stops there rested, but not satisfied, is he not likely by and by to lose his first faith and be thrown back into doubt? Divine Providence has surely taught us that we can preserve only that which we use. Faith in Christ Jesus as Saviour is no exception to this law. We must use our faith. We must move out into larger life. Faith in any one carries in it the feeling of identification with the one in whom we have faith. When Christ becomes one with us, we become one with him—recipients of the life which is in him—energized into various forms of activity by the force generated in Him and communicated to us. And like as every flower, and every leaf, and every fruit speak to us of the life and energy which are in the sun, so every pure, fragrant, good, beautiful deed speaks to the world of the life which is in the Sun of Righteousness. The Christian is what he is by his dependence, by his receptivity, by his relationship to Christ. He has nothing original and underived, or nothing good which he has not received. Christian discipleship is the exact opposite of self-assertiveness. It is humility; it is man's refusal to bear the responsibility of his own soul. It frightens him. Its possibilities of happiness are enrapturing, but its possibilities of misery are appalling. Materialism often means man's fright at the greatness of his own nature. And so he tries to drag it down from its soarings and confine it in the harness of material law, as though a man should say—Soul, come down here within these conditions; I will show thee what thou art. Thou art but rarefied matter—protoplasm—phosphorus, and such like. Thou art but atoms. It is truly wonderful what thy atoms can do when they arrange themselves in a certain order. Still Milton's Paradise Lost and Shakespeare's Hamlet, are but the result of a fortuitous concourse of atoms. The materialist is afraid of himself and the movements of which he is inwardly conscious, and so he struggles for a theory which can serve him for a refuge from the waves of the spiritual world, which roll in ever and ever upon his spirit. The materialist builds for himself a theory and lives in it. He takes good heed that there are no windows in it looking heavenward. Earthward they all look. To his theory he says: "Hide me, hide me from these ideas which come trooping in upon my heart to trouble it." The Christian disciple feels also the waves of an atmosphere not of this world—they blow in upon his soul. He is conscious of the stirrings of a life within, and hardly understands his own nature. He turns his face to one who does understand it, evidenced by the fact that he can speak to it as no other can speak; he turns to this one who understands him so well and says "I flee unto Thee to hide me."

And so the soul that is dependent on Christ becomes identified with Christ as the son or daughter dependent on father and mother feels to be identified with the life of the household. That identification of the disciple with his Lord involves activity of a certain kind—involves movement in a certain direction. He who is related to the head of the household is related to all its members. My father's son is my brother. Christ's life ending in his death—sombre gateway to his Resurrection —was the heart of the Father seeking and saving his prodigal son. If the spirit of this Christ Jesus has any entrance into our spirits, the sign of it will be a longing created in us toward those who are wandering and weary—towards those who are dejected and oppressed. It will be altogether impossible for us to sit at the table of Dives and enjoy his sumptuous fare so long as there is a Lazarus at the gate desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fall from the table. Leave that table we must, with food for the hungry man. It cannot be that any man who has even the very faintest approach to a pulse of Christian faith can allow the dogs in the street, licking the sores of Lazarus to be more humane than he is. There are many religions in the world which have in them nothing but fear and its products. But Jesus Christ's Christianity is not of the same type or class. It not only calls us to a larger life than that concerned with the rescue of our individual soul from destruction, it inspires the life. It generates aspiration. It gives will and power. Or, if you like it better, it wakes all our dormant manhood into activity and gives it right direction. It makes us realize that we are related not only by creation, but by that deeper creation we name Redemption. The created man is born; the redeemed man is born again. The created man is earth-born; the redeemed man is born from above. We inherit the soul life of Adam, but we have also given us the spirit life of Christ. And so we have to illustrate the brotherhood which was in Christ; a brotherhood not political in its quality, and kind—not sectional, not sectarian, not ecclesiastical—but purely human. We have to rescue the word "humanity" from its prison-house. It has fallen among thieves who have stripped it of its raiment and wounded it, leaving it only half alive. Jesus Christ was man. Christianity is humanity—nothing narrower or shallower is. To be Christian, is to be human. "I am a Christian—nothing human is foreign to me," should be the tone of our speech. Hence our view must be broad, as broad as the nation. Yea, as broad as the world! To-day the merchant does not confine his view to his section, to his State, his country. He stands on his watch tower, and sweeps the hemisphere with his telescopic eye. We should be shamefully behind our century if the ideas of commerce were broader than our own. And so foreign missions need no apology for their audacity. But on that field we could not enter with any consistency if we were not conscious of doing all that we were empowered to do for the deteriorated men and women within our own national boundaries. I know that the word "patriotism" is tainted. Men have used the word as the gambler uses dice, to cheat with. Even Dr. Johnson could say, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." But when we look to the heroes of Israel we find the genuine thing. And it has been found again and again in modern days. The love of country has with some men been a passion. But scarcely ever except as it was inspired by a higher love still. The word is profaned in its use except it mean love of men—as we saw it in Clarkson, in Wilberforce, in Garrison, in Kossuth, in Toussaint l'Ouverture, in the heroic missionaries of our faith. A political love of man is one thing, a human love quite another. The one sees votes to be had; the other souls to be won, families in loving union, helpful brotherhoods, aspiring nationalities. We are like a vessel marred in the hands of the potter, not suited for God's highest uses, if we fall short of illustrating the claim which it makes in the words "All power is given unto Me in heaven and on earth."

We must preach a Kingdom of God, proclaim a Theocracy, claim all souls for Him whose they are of right, and the first claim must be made on behalf of those whose needs are most pressing. How can we send our foreign missions to China if we persecute the Chinaman here? How go to Africa if we help not the ebon citizen of America to rise into a higher manhood, to be enough of a man at any rate to be an intelligent, reputable citizen; for though he be black, he is a citizen of these United States. He is domesticated. He belongs to this great American fraternity. He is of the household. "and if a man provide not for his own, especially for them of his own household, he hath denied the faith," and is, politically and morally, as well as spiritually, "an infidel."

This leads us naturally, and by way of practical application of the idea in our text, to offer a few thoughts on our American civilization. It is peculiar. There is nothing in the world exactly like it, nor has there ever been. The call of God which was heard two hundred and odd years ago, in the hearts of those Englishmen and Englishwomen who went aboard the historic Mayflower, was like Abraham's call, definitely indefinite. They went forth, but to what experiences and to what a future none knew. They needed to worship God according to the light they had, free from that persecution and molestation which troubled them on the other side the seas. And their history is an illustration of our Lord's words, "Every one that has left houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive a hundred fold, and shall inherit eternal life." Among the heroes and heroines of the world we put them. They are at the foundation of this civilization of ours. Their piety is like the spring that, finding its way through all the strata which lie enfoliated one on another, seeks the upper air where it can quench the thirst of the weary and worn among the sons of men. That spring flows on and on inexhaustibly. It has become a mighty river, flowing hither and thither through the land, willing to be led into any man's house and garden. He has only to make trenches for it and it will flow in. True, men have poisoned the water with their inhumanities and infidelities. But by that knowledge which comes with a true faith we can filter these out. We can still do as Elisha did, throw a branch into the waters and they shall be sweet. This complex civilization of ours has the River of God running through it. That is why we are hopeful—ever hopeful; that is why we are ambitious—aspiring ever after something so great that to the man of the world it seems Utopian; that is why our energy is persistent in spite of the cold of winter and the heat of summer. We go to this River of God and drink of it again and yet again; it is a river of life! The water of it is good for the eyes—to make them sparkle with an illumination that seems not of earth or time; it is good for the ears—they hear a certain whisper more distinctly than others hear the majestic voice of the thunder—that still small whisper which Elijah heard when reaction set in after Carmel's heroic protest; it is good for the heart, vitalizing it into largeness and sympathy. Oh, friends! let us drink daily and every day of this River of God which is full of water. Do you ask me WHY? My answer is, because we have to be in the succession of those heroic men and women who came here, who were sent here by God to found a Christian civilization. They were here first—they were the leaders. And leaders we must be to inherit the leadership which God deposited in them. Forgive, I beseech you, the seeming assumption. Aspiration is not pride. The consciousness of an ennobling mission comes only to the teachable—to those who wait on the Lord. When Jesus said to His followers, "Ye are the light of the world," he uttered no extravagance. He aimed to start in their hearts that sense of responsibility which belongs to the possession of truth, which men need for the illumination of the intellect, for the enlargement of the heart, for the right ordering of the life. The Christian disciple is a leader because he is a follower. The astronomer is a leader in the knowledge of the stars, because his eye is ever upward. The degree to which any man can follow that which is higher than himself, is the degree to which he can lead his fellow-men. The Christian Church has a relation to the civilizations of the world. That relation is not one of dependence or subserviency. It has the same relation to the world as the sun has to the day, as the moon has to the night. It receives light only to scatter it, to radiate it abroad, that men everywhere may walk in the light. And we need to recognize this more and more. We need to believe what our Lord Jesus Christ says more than what is suggested to us by our own feelings and inward despondencies and inward weaknesses. He has said "Ye are the light of the world." And so that we have in our hands has its relations to all and everything which makes up this complex American civilization. I have referred to its foundation in the heroism of the men and women of 200 years ago. Need I remind you of its GENEROSITY. It throws open its gates to men of every nation and clime, reminding us of the city "whose gates shall in no wise be shut by day." Alas! only in that particular; for while into that city there shall in no wise enter "anything unclean, or he that maketh an abomination and a lie," into our civilization there enters very much that is unclean, very much that maketh abomination and a lie. At the same time I am not one in feeling with those who attribute all our woes and apprehensions to the too great generousness of our hospitality to foreigners. I am persuaded that, if all the original Americans had been true to their ancestral faith, their ancestral purity, their ancestral love of God and man, our civilization would have been much purer and nobler than it is to-day.

This civilization has not only a large generosity, but boundless hope. We cannot get out of our hearts the feeling that there is something greater in the future than has appeared in the past. The fullness of God's purpose for this nation doth not yet appear. Our apprehensions are not sufficient to becloud our hopes altogether and entirely. Still, we must not encourage a reckless optimism. The men who have a mania for statistics remind us of the numerically feeble past and the numerically magnificent present—so little wealth then, so much now. The question is, how and for what purposes is the wealth used? Is it spent in degrading men or in elevating them?

> "Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
> Where wealth accumulates and men decay."

Manhood is the true wealth, manhood is the imperishable gold—the gold that never becomes dim.

> "The rank is but the guinea's stamp—
> The man's the gold for a' that."

Show us your men, of what type, of what quality are they? On that retreating brow, on that pinched cheek, on that lascivious eye—whose is this image and superscription? The Church of Christ has to illustrate before the world the lost manhood. It has to go into the dark house of the soul with its lighted candle and explore it. What is this, and this, and this? Cobwebs here, filth there; reptiles, creeping things; worse even than these are in the chambers of the souls of men. The unregenerated heart of man is still like to that which the prophet Ezekiel saw: "Behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel portrayed upon the wall round about." It is the mission of the Church of Christ to take the candle of the Lord into these darkened chambers, and show the deformity, the filthiness, the ugliness of everything there. Our mission is not that of the politician, not that of the man of science, not that of the littérateur, not that of the secular teacher, not that of the editors of newspapers. To none of these are we in hostility, but to none of them are we in subjection. We have to create that clear and healthy atmosphere in which the politician, the man of science, the literary man, the secular teacher and the newspaper editor can do their best work. We have to aim to create that atmosphere in which these can be perfectly honest and truthful, and yet successful. No atmosphere is healthful which is not filled with sunlight. To us it is given to pour the sunlight into the atmosphere which men breathe. Only as men are in the light can they see clearly, feel nobly, act justly. The lessons of history are as true on this side the ocean as on the other. We have read the histories of men in the past, and those histories have taught us that every nation flourishes, even in regard to its secular things, only as justice and humanity prevail—not because it has this form of government or that. The voice of one man in history is the voice of all :—

"Be just and fear not !
Let all the ends thou aim'st at
Be thy country's, thy God's and truth's.
Then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr !"

We are constantly hearing—even ad nauseam—that, being in a Democratic Republic, and being in the possession of something named "Liberty," we are not as other men are—language which seems to indicate that we need not trouble ourselves as to the teachings of the past ; we have broken with the past. Nay, the past is in us, in our blood, flowing in our veins. And as it has been in the past, so will it be in the present—whenever and wherever there are multitudes of people, ignorant mentally and godless affectionally, then and there the red danger lights must be hung out. "What is liberty without wisdom and without virtue ?" asks Burke, the greatest of philosophical statesmen. It is (he answers) "the greatest of all possible evils : for it is folly, vice and madness without tuition or restraint." Liberty will not save us from degradation ; nor will a Republican form of government ; nor will our incurable optimism ; nor our faith in ourselves. Faith in God will save us—love to man will save us.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

We are not different from any other nation about which history writes, except in this—that we have a free church in a free state—a church unhindered and untrameled in its work by anything political, a church with no chains hanging around its neck, free to preach the truth as it is in Jesus. We owe allegiance to Him, to none other ; He is our Sovereign, our Lord, our Redeemer, our Deliverer, our Fount of Inspiration, our Creed, our Sustainer now—our Rewarder hereafter, when the din and smoke of battle have all cleared away. We know no politics which are inconsistent with allegiance to Him ; Christians first, Americans after. We cannot step down from this altitude for the sake of accommodating any men or any interests. The more simple and fervent and fearless our loyalty to our Lord, the truer will be our citizenship, the nobler our manhood, the more helpful our brotherhood. For the sake of the Negro, with his many sorrows, we must be true to the idea which the potter has for us ; for the sake of the Chinaman seeking an outlet from his ancestral prison-house ; for the sake of that roving child of nature who flees from our civilization as though it were a curse and a fraud —for the sake of these we must not descend to those lower uses which would seem to fit our incompetency better. Recognizing that God's spirit is within us, and our allegiance to God's Christ is our call to the noblest, though materially the most ill-rewarded service to which men can give themselves, we must follow the lead of those ideas which seem to us the divinest—those ideas which are incarnated in Jesus, the Christ—incarnated that they may never become abstract and debatable, but live and breathe in the vigor of a perennial life. Only thus can true greatness be achieved ; only thus can true humanity be illustrated.

"To honor God, to benefit mankind,
To serve with lofty gifts the lowly needs
Of the poor race for which the God-man died,
And do it all for love—oh, this is great !"

So far as our American Missionary Association is concerned, its work is done so patiently, so thoroughly, so economically, with so much wisdom and just judgment, that the most critical can hardly find fault and the most fastidious ought to be satisfied. Its educational work has been remarkable, and is increasingly valuable and valued. During this week you will have abundant opportunities of hearing and knowing all and everything of the details of the work. No responsibility rests on me to occupy your attention to-night with these. We cannot boast that numerical success which some others can in establishing churches in the South. The reason is obvious. Congregationalism cannot breathe the air of slavery. It cannot accommodate Scripture to the exigencies of the oppressor. If we had, in days gone by, achieved a numerical success on the ground of ignoring the humanity of the Negro, would such a success have been as much of a success as that we have achieved in being practically excluded from the South in the days past, on the ground of our ideas of God and man being too exalted to find a home there so long as the man of color was not recognized as a man or treated as a man?

Now that the victory is won, the door is wide open. Without being recreant to our faith, we can preach an unfettered, an unemasculated Christianity. And we can do it all the more sincerely, and all the more effectively, from the very inability which limited us in the days of darkness. We can now glory in our past infirmity, that the power of Christ may more abundantly rest upon us. And let us, dear brethren, do it, remembering our high calling—remembering that if we sink below that calling, though the potter may make of us some other vessel than that of an incense-breathing bowl for His temple, yet it will be sore disgrace to us in eternity that He had to employ us for lower and commoner uses. For we have not done with this world when we have left it. Moses and Elijah, on the mount of transfiguration, make that idea for ever untenable. The present determines the future. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Will it make no difference in our condition, inward and outward, whether our Lord shall say at the last, "Take therefore the talent from him, and give it to him that hath ten talents "—that, or this—"Enter ye into the joy of your Lord. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat : I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink : I was a stranger, and ye took me in : naked, and ye clothed me : I was sick, and ye visited me : I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, and fed thee ? or thirsty, and gave thee drink ? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in ? or naked, and clothed thee ? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers and teachers here and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

4. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS—to purchase farm implements, plows, harrows and cultivators; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanic arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tin-men, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms with sewing and knitting material.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY.

This magazine will be sent, gratuitously, if desired, to the Missionaries of the Association; to Life Members; to all clergymen who take up collections for the Association; to Superintendents of Sabbath-schools; to College Libraries; to Theological Seminaries; to Societies of Inquiry on Missions; and to every donor who does not prefer to take it as a subscriber, and contributes in a year not less than five dollars. Subscription price, 50 cents.

No. 56 READE STREET, NEW YORK.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

relating to the work of the Association and to the AMERICAN MISSIONARY should be addressed to the Secretaries, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Bureau of Woman's Work to Miss D. E. Emerson, at the New York Office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. Woodworth, D. D., 21 Cong'l House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. Jos. E. Roy, D. D., 151 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work it recognizes no distinctions of race or color. Since Emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as Missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES in the Mountain districts. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy toward the INDIANS.

In view of the necessity of elevating the WOMEN of these races, the Association has organized a BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK, to which it especially invites the co-operation of the Christian women of the churches.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution.)

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give the full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I BEQUEATH to my executor (or executors) the sum of —— dollars, in trust, to pay the same in —— days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some States three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A. B.), as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions, until the next Annual Meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in Section first; but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of the Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

[CHAPTER 52.]

Passed March 12, 1886, three-fifths being present.

An Act further to amend chapter three hundred and fifty-eight of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," as amended by chapter seven hundred and ninety-six of the laws of eighteen hundred and seventy-one.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of chapter three hundred and fifty-eight of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," as amended by chapter seven hundred and ninety-six of the laws of eighteen hundred and seventy-one, is hereby further amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or may hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled "An Act relating to wills;" but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease, or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never in any manner be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. Section five of the said Act is hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. This Act shall take effect immediately.

BY LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the some meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each :

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association ; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same ; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for futhering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committee shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various standing committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor ; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee ; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association ; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee ; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association ; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures—viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and travelling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting, and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Southern Work. (3) Indian and Chinese Work. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

FORTIETH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Fortieth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the Centre Congregational Church at New Haven, Conn., October 19th, at 3 o'clock P.M.

The President not having arrived, the Association was called to order by Vice-President Rev. D. O. Mears, D.D., of Massachusetts, and after the singing of "Coronation" Rev. John L. Ewell, of Massachusetts, read a portion of the tenth chapter of Luke and led the convention in prayer. Rev. George F. Stanton, of Massachusetts, was elected Secretary, and Rev. Edmund M. Vittum, of Connecticut, Assistant Secretary.

The Committee on Nominations was appointed as follows: Rev. Burdett Hart, D.D., of Connecticut; Rev. Jonathan Edwards, of Massachusetts; and Mr. D. L. Fuller, of Massachusetts.

Secretary Powell read the portion of the Constitution relating to life-membership and delegates, and the Roll of the Association and Visitors was prepared, as follows:

The Treasurer, H. W. Hubbard, Esq., presented his annual report, which was of unusual interest, as showing the almost entire extinction of the large debt of previous years, and the report was referred to a committee to be appointed.

The report of the Executive Committee was presented by Secretary Beard, and was of a most encouraging character. The various portions of the report relating to different departments of work were referred to special committees for consideration.

The President of the Association, Hon. William B. Washburn, LL.D., of Massachusetts, having arrived, assumed the chair.

The Nominating Committee reported the following committees to act for the Association, and the report was adopted.

Local Committee: Rev. Newman Smyth, D.D.; Rev. Erastus Blakeslee, Dr. H. A. Carrington, Mr. C. E. Hart, Mr. Theodore Sheldon.

Business Committee: Rev. Newman Smyth, D.D.; Charles N. Brown, Esq., New York; Rev. Amos S. Cheseborough, D.D., Connecticut.

Committee on Chinese Missions: Rev. J. H. Twichell, Connecticut; Rev. W. E. Griffis, D.D., Massachusetts; Yung Wing, Esq., Connecticut; Rev. E. H. Byington, Massachusetts; H. P. Smith, Esq., Massachusetts; Rev. Augustus Alvord, Connecticut.

Committee on Indian Missions: Rev. President Julius H. Seelye, D.D., Massachusetts; Rev. J. L. Jenkins, Massachusetts; Rev. Artemas Ehnamani, Nebraska; Rev. A. L. Riggs, Nebraska; Rev. A. S. Walker, D.D., Massachusetts; Deacon J. H. Bailey, Connecticut.

Committee on Mountain Work: Rev. W. G. Sperry, New Hampshire; Rev. Morton Dexter, Massachusetts; Mr. Julius Davenport, New York;

Mr. Rufus M. Taft, Massachusetts; Rev. J. Howe Vorce, Connecticut; Charles Duncan, Esq., Connecticut.

Committee on Educational Work, South: President W. D. Hyde, Maine; Rev. James Brand, D.D., Ohio; Rev. Albert Miller, Connecticut; Rev. E. W. Bacon, Connecticut; Rev. George W. Grover, New Hampshire; Rev. M. B. Angier, New York.

Committee on Finance: Hon. V. B. Chamberlain, Connecticut; J. H. Washburn, Esq., New York; Rev. Edward Anderson, Connecticut; J. H. Towne, Esq., Massachusetts; Cyrus Newell, Esq., Maine; Stephen Winkley, Esq., Maine.

The Chairman of the Business Committee reported a programme for the evening service and for Wednesday forenoon, and the report was adopted.

Secretary Strieby recalled the fact that twenty-two years ago the Association met in this place, and tenderly referred to New Haven pastors and others then present, but now deceased. He read also the same Scripture with which that meeting was opened. Referring also to the fact that workers of the Association all over the field were at this hour engaged in prayer for this meeting, he read extracts from letters of interest relating to the work, and a short season was spent in prayer. Adjourned at 5.15 P.M. to 7.30 P.M.

EVENING SESSION.

President Washburn called the Association to order at 7.30 P.M. The Committee on Nominations announced the following-named persons to officiate at the Communion Service after the sermon: Ministers: President, J. H. Seelye, D.D.; Professor George E. Day, D.D. Assistants: L. S. Rowland, D.D.; Rev. George L. Clark, Rhode Island. Deacons: A. C. Williams, Francis J. Ward, Edwin Talcott, and George P. Davis, Massachusetts; George W. Shelton, David N. Camp, D. L. Williams, Ruel P. Cowles, T. A. Merriam, John C. North, A. H. Holt, S. H. Street, L. J. Sanford, A. W. Miner, C. S. Seymour, and John Godette, of Connecticut. The devotional services were conducted by Rev. Joseph Anderson, D.D., of Connecticut. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D.D., of Massachusetts, from Matt. 25: 34–36, followed by the administration of the Lord's Supper. After the benediction the Association adjourned to 9 o'clock Wednesday A.M.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

President Washburn called the Association to order at 9 A.M. Prayer was offered by Rev. D. O. Mears, D.D., of Massachusetts. The minutes of the previous day's sessions were read and approved. A paper on "The Relations of our Churches and Schools in the South" was presented by the Field Superintendent, Rev. Charles J. Ryder. A paper on "Industrial Education Among the Colored People of the South and the Need of its Extension" was read by Hon. B. G. Northrop, of Connecticut, followed with prayer by President Julius H. Seelye, D.D. Secretary M. E. Strieby, D.D., read a paper on "Forty Years of Missionary Work, Past and Present." On motion of the Nominating Committee, J. H. Towne, Esq., of Massachusetts, was added to the Committee on Finance in place of Samuel Holmes, Esq.

The report of the Committee on the Chinese Mission, with an address, was given by Rev. J. H. Twichell, of Hartford, Conn. Further addresses were made by Hon. Yung Wing, of Connecticut, and Rev. William E. Griffis, D.D., of Massachusetts. On motion of Secretary Powell, the report was adopted and referred to the Executive Committee with power to print.

Secretary Woodworth read a letter from Rev. L. H. Hallock, inviting, on behalf of the Congregational churches of Portland, Me., the Association to hold its next Annual Meeting in that city. The invitation was cordially accepted, the meeting to be at the call of the Executive Committee.

Secretary Powell announced the order for the afternoon session.

The morning session was closed with prayer and benediction by Rev. A. J. F. Behrends, D.D., of New York.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Association was called to order at 2.15. After singing by the assembly, Secretary Strieby read a letter from President Dwight, of Yale College, inviting all members and attendants upon the Association to visit various buildings and objects of interest of the college. A paper on "Woman's Work" was presented by Miss D. E. Emerson, Secretary of the Woman's Bureau. Owing to the overcrowded attendance, an overflow meeting was announced to be held in the United Church.

A song was sung by a quintet of Indian pupils in the Dakota dialect. A paper was presented by Miss H. B. Illsley, missionary to the Sioux Indians.

A letter was read from Mrs. J. H. Steer inclosing $16.60 contributed by ladies of the Santee Mission and the Dakota women of the Santee Pilgrim Church, in response to Miss Lydia P. Auld's "Women to the Rescue."

A paper on "Work Among the Colored People" was read by Miss Bertha Robertson.

An address on "Work Among the Poor Whites" was given by Mrs. N. J. St. Clair.

A report and address on "Mountain Work" were presented by Rev. W. G. Sperry, New Hampshire. Other addresses were given by Rev. Morton Dexter, of Massachusetts, and Rufus M. Taft, Esq., of Massachusetts.

Voted to accept the report of the committee, and to refer the report and addresses to the Executive Committee, with power to publish.

On motion, Austin Abbott, Esq., of New York, was added to the Finance Committee.

After a song in English by the Indian quintet, the session closed with prayer and benediction by Rev. Burdett Hart, D.D., of Connecticut.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The Association resumed its session at 7.30. After singing by the choir, Professor Samuel Harris, D.D., led in prayer. An address on "The Radical Forces of Christianity as Exhibited in the Work of the A.M.A." was delivered by Rev. James W. Cooper, D.D., Connecticut.

Address by Hon. Herbert Welch, of Pennsylvania, on "The Indian Problem." Address by Rev. Artemas Ehnamani in the Dakota language, interpreted by Rev. A. L. Riggs, preceded by explanatory remarks from Secretary Shelton. Singing by the Indian quintet.

The resolutions adopted by the National Council on the Indian Question were referred to the Committee on Indian Missions. The session closed with prayer and benediction by Rev. W. S. Hawkes, of Massachusetts.

An overflow meeting was held in the afternoon in the United Church, at which the addresses given at the Centre Church were repeated.

An overflow meeting was also held in the United Church in the evening, and was addressed by Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D.D., of Massachusetts; Rev. W. E. Griffis, D.D., of Massachusetts; Hon. Herbert Welch, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. R. M. Taft, of Massachusetts.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Vice-President Mears called the Association to order. The session opened with singing, and Rev. Professor E. P. Thwing, M.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., led in prayer. Secretary Beard gave brief obituary notices of the workers of the Association deceased during the past year.

Addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Van Horne, of Rhode Island; Mr. John Whittaker, of Georgia; Mr. George McClellan, of Tennessee; and Mr. L. B. Maxwell, of Georgia.

Rev. E. P. Hammond led in prayer. Report and address on the "Indian Missions" by President J. H. Seelye, D.D., Massachusetts.

Address by Rev. J. L. Jenkins, Massachusetts. Singing by the Santee Indian quintet. Address by Rev. Artemas Ehnamani, Nebraska. The report and addresses were referred to the Executive Committee, with authority to publish.

Report and address on "Educational Work in the South," by President W. D. Hyde, of Maine. Address by Rev. James Brand, D.D., Ohio. The report was adopted and with the address referred to the Committee for publication. Benediction by Rev. D. O. Mears, D.D. Adjourned till 2 P.M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The minutes of the previous sessions were read, corrected, and approved. Prayer was offered by Rev. G. J. Tillotson, of Connecticut. The following resolution adopted by the National Council of Congregational Churches was read and commented upon by Secretary Powell:

"It having come to the knowledge of the Council that one of its members, a pastor of a Congregational church in Knoxville, Tenn., on Thursday last, was refused service at Mossop's restaurant, No. 464 West Madison Street, Chicago, solely on account of color, therefore

"Resolved, That we, as a Council, put on record our sense of indignation at this act of discourtesy and barbarity, and express the hope that the proprietor of this restaurant will not be permitted to escape the punishment imposed by the laws of Illinois."

A report on "Church Work," with an address, was presented by Rev. Nelson Millard, D.D., of Connecticut.

An address upon the same topic was given by Rev. E. G. Selden, Massachusetts.

The next address was by Rev. A. P. Miller, of New Haven, Conn.

Remarks by Secretary Powell regarding the death of little Marie Adlof.

The report on "Church Work in the South" was adopted and, with the addresses, was referred to the Executive Committee with power to publish.

The Nominating Committee reported a list of officers for the ensuing year, and their report was laid on the table to be considered at a later hour.

The report of the Finance Committee, with an address, was given by Hon. V. B. Chamberlain, Esq., of Connecticut.

Other addresses followed from J. H. Washburn, Esq., of New York; Austin Abbott, Esq., New York; Secretary M. E. Strieby, D.D., New York; and Secretary C. L. Woodworth, D.D., Massachusetts. The report was accepted and, with the addresses, referred to the Executive Committee, with power to publish.

The report of the Nominating Committee was taken from the table, and the Association proceeded to the election of officers.

The following list of officers was unanimously elected :

THURSDAY EVENING SESSION.

The minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved.

After singing by a male quartette, prayer was offered by Rev. A. M. Boolgurjoo, pastor of the First Native Church, Marash, Turkey.

Rev. A. H. Bradford, D.D., New Jersey, presented a paper on the "Time Factor in the Southern Problem."

Address by President Timothy Dwight, D.D., of Yale College.

Slave song by the male quartette, "My Lord's Waiting all the Time."

Address by Hon. Joseph R. Hawley, of Connecticut.

Secretary C. L. Woodworth, D.D., of Massachusetts, presented the following Resolution, which, after an address by President Washburn, was unanimously adopted :

"The American Missionary Association, standing above the dust of the sainted men and women who here wrought for God generations and centuries ago, would, on this fortieth anniversary of its existence and the twenty-fifth of its work among the enfranchised millions of the South, renewedly dedicate itself to the service of Christ in the persons of His poor.

"It would put on record its profound sense of gratitude to God for the mercies of the past, and specially for directing its way to this historic city of venerable churches, of renowned schools, of beautiful homes, and of charming and boundless hospitality. It would render hearty thanks to the Congregational churches of this city, on whose invitation it has come ; to the Centre and United churches in particular, for the use of their houses of worship for the different sessions of these meetings ; to the good people of New Haven of every creed, who have opened their homes and made our stay so genial and pleasant ; to the pastor of this church for wise and thoughtful care, and to the choirs for most grateful aid in the service of song ; to the Committee of Arrangements, and especially to Dr. Carrington, to whom the hundreds in attendance on these meetings are deeply in debt for direction and care ; to the different railroads, which have given reduced fares to those coming over their lines ; to one and to all, who have helped in gathering and entertaining these magnificent audiences, and in making these meetings so successful, that they mark the highest point yet reached among the great meetings of the Association, we render the thanks of grateful hearts."

A response to the resolution was made by Rev. Newman Smyth, D.D.

On motion the minutes were approved, and on motion of Secretary Strieby it was voted to adjourn sine die after singing the Doxology and after the benediction by Rev. J. E. Todd, D.D., of New Haven.

GEORGE F. STANTON, Secretary.
EDMUND M. VITTUM, Assistant Secretary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK, SOUTH.

BY PRESIDENT WILLIAM D. HYDE, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee, to which was referred the Report of the Executive Committee on Educational Work in the South, find that although the Association has been compelled to reduce the number of instructors from 250 to 239, yet the number of pupils remains substantially the same as a year ago. We are especially gratified to note that the largest increase is in the theological department, where there are 118 students; a gain of 22 over the number the previous year. We welcome this as an indication that the educational work of the Association is bearing distinctively religious fruit.

It is, however, not the quantity but the quality of the work done which is of chief importance. The great danger of educational work among an enthusiastic but previously unenlightened people is superficiality. The tendency to realize at once on an educational investment; the readiness to substitute a smattering of many things for a substantial grounding in essentials has been the peculiar bane of many schools for the colored race. Your committee note with satisfaction the evidences of thoroughness in the work of our chartered institutions. Not that it is the chief aim of our schools to provide their graduates with lucrative mathematical professorships, or supply Ohio colleges with Greek professors. But the fact that now and then a graduate of Fisk and Atlanta is able to take such a position is a gratifying evidence that the education these institutions are giving is such, not alone relatively to the prevailing ignorance out of which the students are drawn, but that it is education as measured by our own standards. The appropriations by the States of Georgia and Mississippi, the commendation of State officials in Tennessee, the gifts of individuals who are personally conversant with the work, are gratifying evidences that our work is appreciated and approved by those whose opportunities for impartial judgment are the best.

We note with gratitude the earnest missionary spirit manifested at Straight University, and the goodly number who have made confession of Christ and consecrated themselves to His service at Tillotson Institute. The development of Christian character, the training of Christian workers, the spread of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, are the ends for which these institutions are founded, and were they to stop with the training of the intellect without making every effort to bring the grace of Christ and the power of the Holy Spirit to bear upon the hearts and lives of the pupils they would fall short of the mission for which this Association has established them, and with which it intrusts them.

We heartily concur with the Executive Committee in their view that this work of education is the legitimate and essential form which intelligent work for the evangelizing of these people must assume. A person sitting in a New England study and busying his mind with abstract theological speculation might at first sight be puzzled by the fact that a missionary association, founded for the sole purpose of converting souls to God and spreading the kingdom of Christ, should be employing more than twice as many teachers as preachers, and have more pupils on the rolls of its schools than members on the rolls of its churches.

The explanation is that this Association was not born of far-off theological speculation. It was the offspring of the spirit of Christ in Christian hearts coming in contact with a great moral, social, and spiritual emergency.

The providence of God, overruling the wickedness of man, had made these people our neighbors. A prolonged system of robbery, the sad results of which our national priests and Levites had been too prone to pass by unnoticed, had left these people, as regards intellectual, moral, and spiritual qualities, stripped, beaten, and half dead. Christian compassion would be false to the pattern of our Lord in the parable did we not first bind up these wounds, pouring in the oil and wine of intelligence and thrift, and set the race upon the sound basis of honest industry, and bring the choice representatives of the rising generation to the pedagogical inn, and there take care of their mental and moral growth. Our Christian forethought would likewise fall below the Divine standard therein set forth did it not, in the shape of liberal support of permanent educational institutions, take out its two pence and give them to the professors and teachers in these schools. Christian liberality would be unworthy of the name did it not finally say to our Executive Committee, "Take care of these colored youth, and if the urgent necessity of the work and the acceptance of kindred work for Indians and Chinamen compel you to incur a temporary debt, go straight ahead and rest assured that whatsoever thou spendest more I will repay thee." True missionary work, according to both the example and the teaching of our Lord, gives men first that of which they are in most immediate and urgent need; that without which all else will be unacceptable, unpractical, and unprofitable. Jesus healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, opened the eyes of the blind, according as their immediate necessities demanded. The father brought out the best robe and the ring, and killed the fatted calf for the returning prodigal, before he stopped to discuss his future status in the household.

Your committee are convinced that the executive officers of this Association, men who have been brought in actual contact with the needs and necessities of the uneducated people of the South, who have studied their condition and seen with their own eyes the actual situation, and in their deliberate wisdom have adopted the policy of giving to education this prominent place in their work, are therein pursuing a policy which both commends itself to the common-sense of every man who realizes the actual situation of the illiterate people in the South, and which is in entire harmony with the teaching, the example, and the spirit of our Divine Lord.

And while we realize the urgency of the call from foreign lands, from the growing communities of the West, from the polluted section of the New West, and from the destitute portions of our New England cities, and the scattered populations of our smaller New England towns, we record it as our conviction that in all the wide range of missionary work in which our churches are engaged there is no form in which Christian benevolence may be more sure of wise administration of its gifts, more certain to achieve substantial practical results, more assured of the approving acceptance of our Lord and Saviour, than in endowing for permanent usefulness these six chartered institutions; in helping to support these 239 faithful Christian teachers, and in assisting these 8,000 eager young men and women to obtain the blessings of an intelligent Christian character and life for themselves, and the mental and moral discipline which shall enable them to bestow these same blessings on thousands more who otherwise must be left unreached and therefore unblessed.

REPORT ON CHURCH WORK.

BY REV. NELSON MILLARD, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

It is quite in keeping with the expectations of its friends that this Association should report substantial progress in every phase of its church work. The fact, however, though not a surprise, is not the less worthy of grateful acknowledgment. Of all the work of the Association, that accomplished through the Christian church is most closely allied to the Gospel mission of this society. Our chief and ultimate object is not the temporal benefit but the spiritual uplifting of these benighted classes for whom the Association labors. There is no hope of ever bringing them to the truest type of manhood save as they are made Christian in thought and purpose. All other special lines of education are important in proportion as they are tributary to enlightenment in the things of the Gospel.

The statistics presented by the Executive Committee are, as they are impelled to declare, quite inadequate to summarize the results of the year's work, and yet they are an indication of what has been wrought out under the Divine blessing.

Twelve new churches have been formed, making the whole number 124, while the additions amount to 1,272, keeping the average membership above 61 for each church. That the quickening Spirit has been graciously and encouragingly active in the schools and churches is evinced by the fact that more than 1,000 persons have declared a newly-found faith. The number of missionaries has increased to 117, of whom more than 50 were educated and consecrated under the labors of the Association. If a still larger number are doing Christian service as pastors and teachers in churches and schools not under our care, their devoted work is none the less our crown and rejoicing. We have great expectation of large results from the influence of religious teaching upon the more than 13,000 who are enrolled in our Sunday-schools, and from the 118 young men who are in course of training for the Gospel ministry.

In all this work, as the Executive Committee fittingly remind us, there is maintained a high standard of Christian character. With patience and unwearied fidelity our missionaries strive to bring both heart and mind into accord with the principles of the Gospel. They remember the disadvantages of a people whose inheritance was barbarism and slavery, and they are not surprised nor impatient at finding the process of enlightenment neither swift nor brief. As the degrading influences of ignorance and oppression continued to operate for generations, so they know time must be given for the uprooting of inherited tendencies and "long-cherished habits." Amid much to dishearten, they still do not lose courage, but work in the full hope of a triumphing Gospel. The promises which inspire the laborers among the once-neglected peoples are neither few nor small. They know that for these, whom God made of one blood with all the nations of the earth, and for whom, in common with all mankind, Christ died, there are Divine pity and yearning, and for every true laborer among them there are Divine benedictions and abundant grace. Those who enjoy the precious assurances in actual work among these people, and those who with prayers and gifts send them forth, do truly work hand in hand. May we who remain in the gentler surroundings of a maturer Christian civilization not forget those who have been kept back from the liberty and light which have been our inheritance, but may we with Christian sympathy work for those to whom we are indebted to the extent of our ability and opportunity. And may God indeed give the increase.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

BY REV. W. G. SPERRY, CHAIRMAN.

The committee to which was referred the work among the Mountain Whites report as follows:

We desire specially to commend the Secretaries of the Association for the faith and courage with which they have entered this new field. Overburdened with other responsibilities and cares, they have yet deemed this work within the 'sphere of possibilities.' And no less do we commend the heroism and zeal of those who have chosen to be the king's cup bearers to take the water of life and the bread of life to this thirsty and hungry land. After the reports from laborers in the field to which we have listened, not much need be said upon that which has been already done. Indeed, not much can be said. This is the time of beginnings. But now, when a few churches and a few schools have been organized, we have tried to look upon the work as the Secretaries view it, with prophetic vision, and to see the enlarging hopes of the future.

If any subsidiary motive were needed for the continuance and enlargement of this work, it could be found by turning backward a few pages of the nation's history.

These mountain whites had a much larger place than is commonly supposed in turning backward the tide of rebellion and in shortening the term of the war. From the States of West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, and Georgia more than 128,000 soldiers enlisted in the Union armies for three years' service. By far the larger portion of these were 'mountain whites.' Their patriotism and prowess were unsurpassed. The North owes them a debt of love and service for the payment of which, after the lapse of a generation, not even a beginning has been made. But we need not appeal to subordinate motives. These mountain whites are our brethren. They are poor and needy. They need a purer Gospel. They need the Christian school. These needs it is our privilege to supply. The call is urgent. Several churches, organized by Rev. W. E. C. Wright, of Berea College, Kentucky, are waiting for adoption by this Association. Some schools, also, need a little aid, which will soon become self-supporting. The committee have hesitated to recommend that a special fund be raised for the prosecution of this work, fearing that this course might draw away needed supplies from other parts of the field. But we are sure the churches will welcome and sustain any measures which the Secretaries may devise for enlarging the scope of our work in this too long neglected field.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

BY PRESIDENT J. H. SEELYE, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The report of the Executive Committee shows evidence of successful labors for the Indians. This is as might be expected. Nowhere have Christian missions been more successful than among the North American Indians. The annual report of the American Board for 1818 declares "that in proportion to the aid and means employed, no missions to the heathen since the apostolic age have been more successful than those to the American aborigines." Our American churches have from the first felt their reponsibility for the Christianization of these heathen at our doors, as the work of Eliot and Brainerd and the Mayhews, through five generations, still testifies. From a summary presented to the American Board at its annual meeting held in Portland, Me., 1882, of missionary operations among Indians in the United States, we learn that "in the year 1820 one half of the missionaries and nearly one half of the expenditures of that society were among the Indians." "In the year 1829 the Indian conversions were three fourths the converts in all our missions; in 1860, out of 1,250 missionaries who had been commissioned, 428— more than one third— had been engaged with the Indian missions." It is, then, not true that we have neglected these people, though our work has been far from what it might have been, and is at present far below the opportunity and need.

The precious inheritance into which the A. M. A. has entered as the successor of the American Board not only calls for thankfulness, but for hope and enlarged efforts. The Indian work of this Association might and should be greatly increased. Your committee recommend that especially among the Dakotas — the people against whom the pressure of our north-western empire is becoming every year more close and ominous, who are still the most numerous as they were originally the most warlike tribe in North America, among whom Christian missions have had so remarkable results, but more than one half of whom are still, in habits and dispositions, unchanged savages — there should be a strong and decided increase of missionary efforts.

Your committee have had referred to them the interesting and valuable report of the Committee on Indian Affairs presented to the Congregational National Council at its late meeting in Chicago, and would bear grateful testimony to the efficient interest shown by the Council in the work of this Association among the Indians. We join heartily in the resolution adopted by that body, "that it is the duty of our Congregational churches to enter into this work more earnestly and systematically and thoroughly than they have yet done," and we recommend that the Executive Committee be directed to consider the expediency of "setting apart or electing one Secretary who shall give undivided attention to this Indian work."

REPORT ON CHINESE WORK.

BY REV. J. H. TWICHELL.

Your committee, to whom the section of the General Survey relating to the Chinese work of the Association is referred, do not find in the fact that, measured by figures, the work has not enlarged during the year, any reason to judge that it has not been successful; still less reason to judge that it has not been wisely and faithfully prosecuted. It is much to be thankful for, in view of the circumstances, that it has held its own. Probably this is all that could be expected.

It is in charge of the California Chinese mission, auxiliary to this Association; and the character of the men composing its official and executive boards, which include some of the names most honored in our churches on the Pacific coast, warrants the confidence that the best has been done that could be with the means at disposal. Especially it appears to your committee to be a cause for congratulation and gratitude to our churches that such a man as the Rev. W. C. Pond was found to take the superintendence from the outset of a service so difficult and in many ways discouraging, requiring the exercise of a rare degree of wisdom, faith, and patience.

To extend aid to a Gospel enterprise within our national borders, the necessity of which was, in the providence of God, laid upon American Christianity, was the plainest duty of the American Missionary Association. To continue that aid, and to increase it if possible, is a duty no less plain. Its claim to support from this society is an obvious and perfect one.

And there is nothing to do but to hold on and secure the advantages conquered by the money and labor already expended, and trust the powers of Christian truth, and of Christian love, and of the Holy Spirit, to make their way, and wait for the day of harvest in God's good time.

REPORT OF FINANCE COMMITTEE.

BY HON. V. B. CHAMBERLAIN, CHAIRMAN.

The Finance Committee beg leave to report the result of their investigation along the line indicated to them by custom and the rules of the Association.

With such ability as we have been able to bring to the work, every inquiry having been fully answered by the Treasurer, we report that all the funds of the Association appear to be, and, as we believe, are accurately accounted for.

We have no recommendation to offer looking to any change in the method of bookkeeping, for we find the method in use results in clearness of statement and perfect accuracy.

The reports of the Treasurer and the Executive Committee give all substantive details of the finances of the Association Their reports have already been read in your hearing.

As committee law seems to require of us, as a committee, that we place ourselves near the treasury, measure its dimensions, examine well its means of defence, make sure that the watchmen are on the walls alert and vigilant, and that the custodian of the funds is honest and of good report; and having found all satisfactory in these regards so to report; and if not satisfactory in any respect, so to report, without fear or favor.

Mindful of our obligations and of the responsibilities resting upon us for a faithful although brief service, we declare to you, after investigation, that we believe your funds are honestly and well managed; that your Treasurer is competent and successful, and that the duties of your Executive Committee, so far as pertains to the finances, are performed with diligence and vigilance.

The same committee law, to which reference has been made, requires also that from the vantage ground of knowledge obtained by a scrutiny of the financial methods, work and resources of the Association, this committee shall turn its eyes to the field of labor and advise with you and the churches as to the necessities of that field, to the end that the supply and the demand be equal; for in this missionary work, as in commerce, if the supply does not equal the demand there will be disturbance, and ought to be disturbance, and running to and fro until equilibrium is established.

We find that the receipts for the year have been, from all sources, $335,704.20, an excess over last year of $44,840.14. This fact is important and gratifying.

The receipts from the churches this year were $215,564.36. The receipts from the same source last year were $191,698.35, an increase this year of $23,866.01.

It appears, by the report of the Executive Committee, that during the last year a constant pressure must have been felt, on the part of that Committee, for an enlargement of the work of the Association, occasioned by the opening of new fields and the urgent needs of fields long occupied. And yet, notwithstanding this pressure, under conservative and prudent management, having in view the debt, the total of the expenditures for the work of the Association during the year is but $5,904.25 in excess of last year. Wisely, as your committee think, special efforts have been made during the year to diminish the debt, and with such good success that the debt which, at the close of the fiscal year of 1885, was $29,237.73, was, at the close of the fiscal year of 1886, only $5,783.71, and is now over $1,000 less than this last amount. These stewards of ours, standing in full view of fields ripe for the harvest, listening daily to cries for help, must have been grieved at heart to say, as they often must have said, "Wait a little longer."

The Association has forty years behind it. Churches and individuals have learned to place confidence in its management, as is abundantly shown by the large amount of funds annually placed in its charge in the way of contributions, endowments, and legacies for its own use, and also for distribution to Berea College and Hampton Institute—children of the Association now doing an independent work of incalculable value to the country.

The Association is, in some respects, like a manufacturing establishment with machinery of the most approved pattern and structure, with officers of ability and skill, with faithful and zealous employés, but doing a business of only $335,000 each year, while having a capacity to do a business of double that amount, with an expense account only slightly increased. In the case of the manufacturing establishment, if the market should demand the goods the stockholders would see that capital was furnished to enable the directors to run the factory to its full capacity, knowing that the resulting profits on the increased volume of business must be largely in excess of the increased expense; for the same officers, with a comparatively small increase in the number of employés, will be able to handle the business. If the churches are wise, they also will see to it that the officers of this Association, who know how to work and are willing to work, are furnished with means sufficient to enable them to accomplish the results equal to their full capacity. Your committee, therefore, urge the friends of this Association everywhere to renewed and hearty efforts to supply the needed funds, assuring them that the results will fill their minds with content and their hearts with thankfulness.

We are confident that the debt, now small, will be entirely extinguished during the coming year, and we urge upon the Executive Committee a continuance of the present policy of paying as they go. They have indicated in their report, and will from time to time indicate, opportunities for work in the Master's vineyard, and the responsibility of furnishing means to prosecute that work rests rightfully on the churches and individuals who come to know the facts.

Standing by this treasury, having examined its condition, methods, and needs, we advise you and all who are like interested that it is highly desirable and almost a necessity that hither there be a constant and increasing flow of money. Undue reliance should not be placed on expected legacies; better far a safe reliance on the systematic and regular giving on the part of churches and individuals; being well assured, however, that he who acquires the habit of giving during life is likely to make provision for further giving at his death.

The Council of churches last week in session at Chicago had within its view and under consideration the needs of every branch of religious and missionary work especially in charge of the Congregational churches. No imputation of narrowness nor of partiality can properly attach itself to that body. Its deliberately pronounced advice to the churches is certainly important. During the session of the Council, Rev. W. H. Ryder, chairman of the committee to report on the American Missionary Association, offered a report in which occurred the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That the Council recommend that the churches contribute the coming year the sum of $350,000 to the work of the A. M. A.

"Resolved, That the Council advise the officers of the A. M. A. and the trustees of its chartered institutions of learning to put forth every effort to secure the speedy endowment of these institutions in order to assure their existence and permanent usefulness, and thus make it possible for the Association to extend its work."

The report was accepted and the resolutions were adopted by the Council. Your committee think this Association should return grateful acknowledgments to the Council for its advice to the churches, supplement it by its own earnest appeal, and then, with serene confidence, turn its face to the great work of the near future.

FORTIETH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

GENERAL SURVEY.

Two-score years have passed since the American Missionary Association began to live. It incorporated into its life, then, four organizations, which had arisen to face American slavery and to resist it. Two of these had the honor to live on Connecticut soil.

One of these two found forty-two negroes captured in Africa for slavery and claimed in the United States by slavery deprived of their liberty in New Haven jail. A New Haven district court set them free. Professor George E. Day, who taught the first freedmen, preparing them to carry the Gospel to Africa, still continues to unfold the word "which abideth forever." The first freedmen from slavery educated for the Dark Continent were legally declared to be men, and were made missionaries in this State; therefore, in an important sense, we are coming home at this meeting.

We look back upon forty years of history, years large with events, great in the evolution of human life and in the progress of the kingdom of heaven among men. In these developing years in our land the American Missionary Association has been no small factor. In the day of its testimony it planted its missions not only in America but in Africa, in Asia, and in the islands of the sea.

God in His ways and times withdrew these missions from other lands to concentrate them upon our own.

The motives of the beginning, to carry whatever is included in that great word, salvation, to those who have been passed by, and who need the power and the hopes of the Gospel, remain unchanged. The spirit to consecrate Christian life and energy, with sacrifices for the lowly and the oppressed; to regard people for whom Christ lived and died as dear to Christ and not to be despised by man, has so received the benediction of the Lord that any departure from it would be sin against the sanctions of heaven and the confirmations of human experience.

The methods of the past, also, had a divinity in them. They were providential; and the original purpose continues, to evangelize souls in darkness and to Christianize them, that those who receive the light may wish to carry the torch of Christ to others in darkness, and may know how to do it.

These motives and methods, with forty years of Divine approval upon them, are working themselves out at the present time in three distinct aspects; but these three are one.

The supreme purpose is to save those to whom we are sent. The central word of our name holds the central thought of our work. It is "Missionary." We are sent, first of all, to bear the Gospel of Christ; this is our one grand object.

We believe that all thorough consideration of moral evils, of intellectual evils, of political evils, and even of physical evils, must converge to Christ or diverge from Him; that salvation means a right heart first, but out of this, also right thoughts, right principles, and right conduct; that it enters thus into all the relationships of life, because salvation takes in the whole man and the whole life.

CHURCH WORK.

First of all, therefore, in publishing the Gospel of Christ, we are planting churches as fast as we can gather those who will stand fast in one spirit, striving together for the faith of the Gospel. We are cherishing churches in which we seek to collect and concentrate and diffuse the faith, to disciple both the heart and the mind, to bring souls into harmony with God. If I call your attention in this to statistics, I do not thereby intend to say that these statistics represent our work. The statistics of faith are not collected. The figures are:

Number of Churches	124
" " Missionaries	117
" " Church-members	7,571
Added during the year	1,272
" by profession of faith	1,038
Scholars in our Sunday-schools	13,149

That is, we have gathered and organized twelve new churches this year.

We have received upon profession of faith more than 1,000 new church-members.

We have added to our Sunday-schools more than 2,500 pupils.

But a true record must enter into the lives of these 7,500 church-members, gathered from the darkness to follow influences and choices, to find the applications of truth in common virtues, in character, to see how much unshapely and defective discipleship is being overcome, how long time-inherited tendencies are gradually being conquered, how long-cherished habits are being destroyed. There are no figures for all this nor for the grace which is slowly developing a discipleship—new in its standards to the race—among those whose spiritual life must of necessity call for patience and charity.

Let us not forget, then, in our outlook, that these churches which we are planting and cherishing include a people for whom the processes of degradation went on for many generations, operating by all the forces of law, and by the sovereign power of sovereign States, a people who have great hindrances on their way to a worthy discipleship, which we cannot feel. There are no statistics for all this, but we think there are no churches doing a greater work on these lines for growth in character, in Christian purity and worthiness, than those which we are now reporting.

More than fifty of the pastors of these churches are the children of the American Missionary Association, and very many more of those educated by us are pastors of churches not under our care.

It is a fact full of cheer to us that so fair a proportion of those who complete a liberal education under our teaching, realize their responsibility to preach a pure gospel, and feel the sense of mission to their own race. One hundred and eighteen of our students are now pursuing their theological studies, preparing for future influence. These churches under our care, comparatively young and nearly absolutely poor, have raised for church purposes the sum of $13,549, and for religious causes beyond themselves, $1,711.55.

This has been, as you observe, a year of grace in many of our churches. From the more than 1,000 new names enrolled for Christ, we look for many who shall become pastors and teachers in His name.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

Besides this church work for the colored race, the American Missionary Association is going through a territory which to a great degree hitherto has been gone around. There is a mountain region, beginning in Virginia and reaching down to Alabama, which contains, perhaps, two millions of people. It is populated by the descendants of those who planted the sea-coast States, but who, when removed from the currents of life and from the saving power of an intelligent faith, have come to a condition which calls for active Christian compassion.

The mountain people of this region, which is equal in extent to the empire of Austria, left to isolation and to themselves, have declined. Most of them, without the comforts of life and without the refinements of home, are without education and without intelligent Christianity. More than one-half of them cannot read their own names. They are poor, indeed. With impoverished blood, with impoverished minds, and with impoverished hearts, with self-neglect, they have been too long neglected and passed by.

Their misnamed schools, when they have them, serve rather to increase than dispel darkness, while their preachers are most often of the sort of which the supply is worse than the destitution.

A letter but a few days old from one of our missionaries laments the "deadly revivals which follow the track of these native preachers," whose opposition to Sunday-schools is open and whose aversion to education is loudly proclaimed. He writes: "The whiskey element has combined with one of these preachers in his locality—an easy union—to oppose Sunday-schools and intelligent preaching of the Gospel. One who has been a missionary in the "brush"—as it is called—tells of another native preacher who discoursed from the text, "The Lord is a strong tower." He declared the world to have been in a peculiarly awful condition at the day of Pentecost, because the generation was without towers, for Peter cried out and said: "Save yourselves from this untowered generation." Such leaders are blind guides. Preachers and people are in the ditch together. Help must come in ministers who are not ignorant, in teachers who can teach. This people, passed by of men, yet have the compassion of Christ. They are low down, but are not beyond the recuperative power of the Gospel. Their ancestry—remotely—was good. From time to time some emerge from this dense mass of illiteracy to show what is meant by reversion to the former type.

Two men from this class by sheer strength have stepped out into the very supreme place of the nation. He whose pen gave freedom to four millions of slaves was one of these. The other, who could not read until his wife taught him, also became a President of the United States.

This people, living largely in cabins and in a rudeness which cannot be described, their illiteracy increasing, their evils increasing, and their numbers increasing, have in some cases called to us, and in many cases welcomed us.

We believe them to be capable of a new destiny, and while our hands are full of work, we have not refused the call. If some have thought that this new opening was not within the sphere of our possibilities, while these have been questioning, our missionaries with a devotion that in some cases has risen to heroism, and with sacrifices not surpassed in the history of missions, are laboring where hardships are incident to a low condition, and where misery is the common lot; and the fulness of sacrifice with a patient faith is being rewarded by the Master. We have in this mountain region 15 churches. They are anti-caste churches. In this, our Congregational churches in the South have a distinctive mission. Wherever the A. M. A. has planted them, they stand outside of the caste spirit, and opposed to it. It teaches that God is the Maker of us all, and that before Him there is no room for caste among men. In church or school we build no wall of caste. One may be of all the colors of the rainbow, but that shall not disqualify him from the privileges of our churches or schools.

EDUCATIONAL WORK.

The educational work of the American Missionary Association is no doubt well understood, but perhaps its relationship to the supreme missionary purpose is not defined to all so clearly as we could wish. Education may be a great philanthropy, but we are not a society for philanthropy. Education may be a great patriotism, but we are not organized for this. Education may be necessary for the safety of the republic, but not for this does it engage us. We rejoice that our greater motive includes philanthropy, patriotism, and securities for our free government, making for them, but we are sent in the name of Christ to disciple the people for the kingdom which is not of this world.

We educate because ignorance is superstitious or godless, or both; because curses brood in the darkness, because virtue withers in ignorance, because righteousness needs knowledge. People with vacant minds must be led to feel that even "nature abhors a vacuum," much more grace. The people must be taught to think, or they will be thoughtless. They must be taught to reason, or they cannot live reasonably; they must know how to read the word of God and the works of God together.

In the mountain region it goes without saying that no society could hope to Christianize this people except it be also an Education Society. It were folly to lay foundations for permanent future good on wood, hay, and stubble. The schoolhouse and the church must go hand in hand. No society without a school system, tested by experience, can hope to go to this people with salvation. Hence we are planting schools with our churches on these hills and in these valleys. Both of these agencies are developing hopefully.

Our total number of schools in centres of importance, for a people of whom 80 per cent. cannot read and where 30 per cent. of the white people among whom they live cannot read, is 53. Fourteen of these are of great importance, Normal schools, besides which are six Colleges:

Total Number of Schools	53
" " " Instructors	239
" " " Pupils	8,753
Students of Theology	118
" " Law	78
Collegiate Students	53
" Preparatory	95
Normal Students	799
Grammar Grade Students	1,597
Intermediate Grade Students	2,348
Primary	3,766

Our 33 common schools are in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, and Arkansas.

Our Normal Schools, 14 in number, are in influential Southern centres, and in them students may be as well prepared for life as in most of our Eastern schools of the same kind.

We head these with our 6 Chartered Institutions :

In addition to these we point with gratitude and satisfaction to our grown-up children, Hampton and Berea. Howard University receives from us the support for its department of Theology.

Fisk University this year celebrated its majority in the presence of the State Superintendent of Instruction and many high representatives of Southern influence. It has won the commendation of Southern educators. One of its graduates at the alumni gathering gave an eloquent review of the progress of the race in the past 21 years: A people whose inheritance was nothing and worse, whose homes were cabins where no intelligent hand rocked the cradle, where no intelligent mind guided the footsteps of youth, have now 1,000,000 of its children in schools, 16,000 teachers of its own race for the race, 15,000 students in high schools, and colleges, rising toward worthiness. Fisk University is doing thorough work. The religious spirit of it is excellent and very decided. Its graduates know how to work. One of them has held in another institution a mathematical professorship at a higher salary than any of the professors, or even the president, of his own Alma Mater. Of the class which was graduated this year, not one had had a vacation for the space of five years. A Southern gentleman, formerly a Nashville resident, testified last year to the high merits of this institution by a gift of $4,000.

Atlanta University has wrought through the year with the discipline of sorrow upon it, and under the inspiration of the memory of a noble life taken from its direction. The funeral of the lamented President Ware was but the day before the college year began. Progress has been made the past year in the line of industrial work. A young man whose only instruction in architecture and carpentry was in the college, erected a house in the country from his own plans and specifications and resources. The house continues to stand. Seventy-five pupils have received the instruction of 1½ hours a day in industries, without interference with their literary work. The college has received this year, as before, the indorsement of the State of Georgia in the grant of $8,000. A former student of this university is now an honored Professor of Greek in an Ohio college. The academic teaching in this college is superior.

Talladega.—Three hundred and twenty-seven names appear on the catalogue. The scholarship has been excellent, never better. The students, many of them, give promise of great future usefulness. The industrial department is proving itself to be of great value. Four students this year were graduated from the theological department. Since the beginning 54 have studied theology here. They are all men of influence, and are shedding light in dark places. The number of such students should be greatly increased.

Straight University has had a fruitful year. With earnest educational work there has been a constantly growing missionary spirit, with a desire to pass the privileges received along to others. Many of the students are engaged in Sunday-school work. The number of students has attested the popularity and high standing of the institution. The enrolment is 585, coming from a wide area and representing a wide work in the future.

Tougaloo.—This University, near the capital of Mississippi, receives the approval of the State in the appropriation of $3,000. It has also been the recipient of a generous gift of $5,000 from a friend in Brooklyn, N. Y., for a school and an industrial building. The instruction is thorough, and the spirit of the institution is earnestly Christian.

Tillotson Institute likewise has enjoyed a year of prosperous progress. A goodly number of young men and women have made open confession of Christ during the year, and have intelligently consecrated themselves to His service.

In all of these higher schools the reports from the week of prayer were testimonies to the presence of the Holy Spirit. Permanent impulses were given to many lives from which our Mission hopes to reap future harvests.

We do not cease to pray that God will incline the hearts of those who love Him and who believe in the coming of the kingdom of Christ, to share their mercies and privileges with these needy peoples, and especially to remember with large gifts these permanent centres of continuous and far-reaching Christian influence. In what way can wealth do more for Christ among men than to endow such Christian institutions to perpetuate saving influences for all time ?

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

One feature of our missionary education is the development of character by Industrial Training. The American Missionary Association is not an institution for Industrial Training. The motive of our work is not to make carpenters, harness-makers, and machinists; not tin-smithing or shoe-making, but the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. Nevertheless, while men live on the earth, industry will be the handmaid of religion. It is an agency of grace. "Six days shalt thou labor," is a Divine decree. To teach people to work out the decrees of God is a part of the work of salvation.

We do not sympathize with the superficial infidelity which declares that education will save men. We are far from believing that algebra or geometry will create clean hearts. No amount of Greek and Latin will renew in men right spirits. No more are we apostles of the gospel of work. But we know that the Christianization of a needy people includes the manhood and womanhood which come with self-help and the ability to work out the calls of God as He has given gifts to men. The missionary motive is to direct the minds and hearts of those to whom we bring the Gospel of Christ, so that they may be able to work out the teachings of the New Testament in character, to become better fathers and better mothers, to have better homes, to be better citizens.

Our Industrial Schools at Atlanta, Talladega, Macon, Tougaloo, Memphis, Thomasville, Fisk, and at ten other centres of Christianization in the South, are imparting habits of forethought and foresight, lessons of life, and are directly tributary to our supreme purpose. The Connecticut School for Girls—the gift of a Connecticut lady—at Quitman, Ga., which proved to be located in an inhospitable and dark place, and which was destroyed by incendiaries, has been transferred to the beautiful town of Thomasville. This modern town has not only welcomed our institution, but has voiced its sincerity in a deed of several acres of choice land for our building, the generous bestowment of the Mayor of Thomasville. A new and commodious edifice is now in process of construction, while a temporary school is being carried on. It is hoped that Christian women of Connecticut will fully sustain this school.

Not a few of the students, in their aptitudes for various industries, have earned a considerable part of their education fees, and young women are being taught how to live and how to help others to live humanly in homes and in society. We follow the indications of Providence in these subordinate methods of Christianizing the people.

THE INDIANS.

The Indian problem is to be solved. The time has gone by when to solve this problem was to kill the Indian. The theory has ceased also that masterly inactivity will settle the question, because "the Indians are dying off." There are as many Indians in America to-day as when Columbus discovered this continent.

Moreover, the Indian can be civilized, can be educated, can become Christian. We have learned this, and know it. We have learned more, viz., that there are no people speaking a foreign language sunk in the degradations of heathenism more accessible or more quickly influenced by the Gospel. They respond to religious motives.

"In no other manner," testifies our Commissioner of Indian Affairs, "can our Indian population be so speedily and permanently reclaimed from barbarism, idolatry, and savage life, as by the educational and missionary operations of the Christian people of our country."

We have for the Indians:

In Nebraska and Dakota, along the Missouri River, there are three main stations: Santee, Oahe, and Fort Berthold.

In Nebraska the Santee Normal School reports a history of 16 years. The devoted and wise service of the Rev. A. L. Riggs is fruitful. There were 210 pupils last year, 20 of whom are students of theology preparing to carry the word of life to their own people in their own tongue.

Mr. Riggs writes us that "the native helpers, educated as missionaries and teachers, are, for the most part, noble and self-denying workers. In the Industrial department many of the girls have learned to make good light bread and to prepare other food well, and the girls, big and little, have learned to cut, make, and mend their own clothing with credit to themselves. The boys and young men are taught mechanics, and demonstrate considerable facility and skill. The plans for the next year contemplate considerable increase of teaching force and a large increase of pupils. The outlying mission fields are full of promise. We expect that the Lord will provide for this."

The Ponca Agency, Nebraska, reports a growing work, with 57 pupils last year. It is directed by Rev. John E. Smith.

The Oahe, Cheyenne River, and Grand River missions, under the care of Rev. T. L. Riggs, are full of hope. The new Industrial Building is filled with earnest students.

The Shiloh Church at Oahe reports a present membership of 65, eight of whom were received upon profession of faith last year. They have given $71 for their own preaching services, $20 to outside missions, $11.03 toward building a new church at Devil's Lake, and $8 toward reducing the debt of the American Missionary Association. If all Christian churches of the Congregational order in our land had done as well as this, our books would have a large balance on the right side of the ledger.

Fort Berthold, in Dakota, ministered to by Rev. Charles L. Hall, has 57 pupils, 51 of whom are regular attendants at the Sunday-school. Mr. Hall writes: "Our work for the year has been very encouraging. The Indians are adopting our ways of living more than ever before, and are ready to listen to the Gospel. They have scattered about over the country in the neighborhood of the villages where for many years they have huddled together, and have broken land on claims. They are now gathering crops of wheat, oats, corn, and potatoes. There is much promise in this advance step which the Indians have taken, for it involves the breaking up of their ancient communistic habits and many of their ceremonies. Several of our pupils are trying to follow Christ, and are praying for their parents that they may be brought to Christ. We have just sent away ten young men for additional training in Eastern schools.

Industrial training in the direction of farm work done well and with system of mechanics is taught to boys and young men with reference to thoroughness, carefulness, and patience, while housework, sewing and knitting, and the mysteries of darning, are learned by girls and young women.

Skokomish Agency in Washington Territory reports an Indian church-membership of 49. Eleven were added upon profession of faith last year. The Sunday-school enrolment was 65. The average weekly prayer-meeting attendance out of a membership of 49 was 43.

This Indian Church contributed last year to the A. B. C. F. M., $52.20; A. M. A., $38.60; A. H. M. S., $21; Congregational Union, $5.09; Bible Society, $15; other benevolences, $78.84; Pastors' Support, $152.50; Sunday-school, $26.35. Total, $389.58. No communion has passed without two or more additions, and this has been the fact with a single exception for more than three years. This church also might be quoted as a noble example for more highly favored communities.

A branch church at Dunginess, under the same ministry, has 27 members, and the average weekly prayer-meeting attendance is 20. Twenty-six couple have been united in Christian marriage, and finally polygamy has been abolished.

Santa Fé in New Mexico has a young institution, which it has baptized with a University name—with a look to the future. We are co-operating with this Indian work in New Mexico. A Christian teacher and superintendent whom we have lately sent to Santa Fé, writes us that he finds the work hopeful and demanding beyond his expectation, and he has already learned the language of strong appeal for "more help."

Thus the cry for aid comes from every station. Sixty-eight tribes have no religious teaching whatever, and 17,000 heathen Indians are in Wyoming Territory alone.

Our Government expended between 1872-1882 the sum of twenty-seven million dollars a year to fight Indians and to feed them. Highest army officers to-day declare that our way is the only way to solve the Indian problem. Our appropriation last year to this work was about $40,000.

WORK AMONG THE CHINESE.

The A. M. A. was a pioneer in missions among the Chinese in California. In the person of its missionary it went to the Pacific coast thirty-four years ago. In 1875, as an auxiliary to the A. M. A., the California Chinese mission was organized. This work, under the superintendency of Rev. W. C. Pond, has been greatly blessed. It looks to us for the largest part of needed funds. Our secretary in his report writes: "We may say that we look on into the future with confident though chastened expectations. The enthusiasm born of novelty long since died out from our work, and we realize, perhaps more deeply than ever, that a steady and a strong pull at the laboring oar, a rowing against the current of popular antipathies on the one side and of strenuous heathen antagonisms on the other, is what awaits us in a possibly long future. But we know that unseen agencies are on our side, and 'they that be with us are more than they that be with them.'"

THE WOMAN'S BUREAU.

This department of our work was formally recognized in 1883. Previous to that time it had substantially existed without distinct recognition. It has proved a very effective agency in imparting new intelligence from our schools, in strengthening the bonds between lady missionary teachers and the churches, and in securing the aid of Christian women for Christian women's work. The Bureau is successfully assisting Christian women who desire Christian work to find it, and those who sympathize with these to find them.

CONCLUSION.

Receipts for the year:

From Churches, Sunday-schools, and individuals	$215,564 36
" Estates and Legacies	47,584 19
" Income, sundry funds	10,141 21
" Tuition, etc	28,222 57
" Rents	402 50
" U. S. Government for Indian Education	17,720 84
" Slater Fund for Industrial Training	6,350 00
" Sale of property	9,718 53
Total	$335,704 20

Beginning this year with a debt of more than $29,000, of which $15,000 had accrued in the year preceding, we have bent our energies to decrease the balance against our treasury without decrease of our work. This has been well-nigh impossible, but it has been done. We have, however, the happiness to report such an increase in our receipts as to leave our debt upon October 1st diminished to the sum of $5,783.71.

We make grateful acknowledgment for the generous sympathy of our Congregational pastors and churches in our endeavors to meet the responsibilities which the churches put upon us. When they asked us to keep the work, in Christ's name and for Christ's sake, all along the lines where the providence of God has placed it, we have obeyed. We have trusted the churches. It has been strength and courage in duties which would be burdens but for their motive, and the gratitude of the poor, to feel that the churches have trusted us.

The heartiness with which our friends have responded to our appeals has taken from us something of the pain which it gives us to make appeals. We especially desire to mention with gratitude the noble lift given toward our financial freedom by the happy suggestion of Rev. Dr. Dana and by the brave and timely words of Miss Auld to Christian women. Only those who are carrying the burden of the debt of the churches can fully appreciate the services of all those who have placed the Association in its present hopeful outlook for the future.

We thankfully acknowledge our indebtedness to the American Bible Society for a grant of Bibles and Testaments to the amount of $417.50, and generous supplies of Sunday-school literature from the Congregational Sunday-School and Publishing Society.

We are your servants for Christ's sake. May He who holds the hearts of men, and who directs the minds of His faithful followers, lead us in the year to come, and lead the churches, so that His word shall run, and be glorified.

OBITUARIES.

While thankful for the mercies that have been attested in the health and life of our workers during the past year, we pause to mention with loving regard the honored names of a few who have been called to lay down the armor and enter into rest.

Mr. C. B. Rice, who entered our work at Talladega in 1882, after three years of faithful service in connection with that institution, answered the summons of the death messenger and went home, November 2d, 1885.

Mrs. Anna Haylor Hatch, who, as Miss Haylor, upon graduation from Oberlin College in 1870, entered our work at Selma, Ala., was married to Rev. Azel Hatch in 1879, and with him spent the remainder of her life laboring at Tougaloo, Miss., and Lexington, Ky., died at the latter place December 3d, 1886. A most unselfish and untiring worker, greatly beloved by all who knew her.

Rev. C. L. Goodell, D.D., a Vice-President of this Association, whose name in the churches from ocean to ocean was a household word because of his prominent activity in all our great missionary societies, died suddenly and unexpectedly at his home in St. Louis, February 1st, 1886. Dr. Goodell was a stanch friend of the poor and a strong champion of the oppressed.

Miss Addie M. Phelps, who labored in Charleston, S. C., Jonesboro, Tenn., and Savannah, Ga., was obliged by failing health to give up work in the spring of 1884. From that time her mission was to suffer. This she did patiently and resignedly until July 4th, 1886, when with joy she heard the call and peacefully fell asleep.

Rev. Edward Trumbull Hooker, who became the pastor of our church in Charleston, S. C., in 1881, and continued in that position till 1885, when, by reason of ill-health, he felt obliged to retire, died October 2d, 1886, at West Salem, Wis. Mr. Hooker gave himself to the work with great singleness of purpose, and took pride in the people for whom he labored.

Rev. Daniel D. Dodge died suddenly in Wilmington, N. C., at the age of sixty-seven. He entered our work at Wilmington in 1872, and continued there till the time of his death. His influence extended far outside of the church of which he was pastor and the school with which he was connected. He took an earnest interest in everything that pertained to the welfare of the colored people. He carefully studied their aptitudes and needs. He was ready to help in anything that gave promise for the elevation of the people. He was a devoted Christian, an earnest worker, and a faithful friend.

To all these servants of God we think of the Master as saying, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

It is apparent to any who study the character of the field of the American Missionary Association, that not only is there ample opportunity for women to work, but that it becomes a necessity to the successful accomplishment of the good designed. As well might we say to the impoverished, "Be ye warmed and filled," giving none of those things needful to the body, as to provide churches and schools for the degraded and destitute, without supplying those influences which will permeate and mould the homes, in the arousing and uplifting of the women from their condition of ignorance and indifference. Yet to secure this, we do not need a distinct and separate class of missionaries. The work is combined, and so it is that the schools of the American Missionary Association include other lines of instruction than those usually involved—instruction pertaining to home life, given to the youth in the schoolroom and to the parents in the cabins; and the teachers become missionaries. Selecting these according to the need of the field, it results that a large number of those employed are women—236 having been engaged in this missionary service during the past year.

What part has the Bureau of Woman's Work had in this? Just so large a part and so helpful as the Christian women of the North have permitted; and we rejoice to record an advance both in interest and in contributions. In addition to the donations by women to the general work of the Association twenty-six of these missionary teachers have been sustained by funds raised in Ladies' and Children's Missionary Societies of our Congregational churches, or by special collection. In every instance the contributors have been put into correspodence with their missionary representative through the system of monthly letters direct from the field, and thus a better knowledge of the work has obtained.

These missionary letters have proved an effective agency in imparting information and increasing interest, as many have testified, and one letter per month serves as report to the Association and also to contributors. Is it not reasonable that the excess of letter-writing by teachers should be thus relieved, since their time is so valuable to the needy people about them? Referring to her large correspondence, one of our faithful missionaries writes: "If for all the help we receive in our work so much is required, we shall have but little time for anything else." Let us reduce all this writing to one letter per month and use each such letter for its full worth, by free circulation.

Desiring to interest children and youth, that they may become familiar with the American Missionary Association and its work, and contribute habitually to its support, we have selected a "Children's Missionary" to write especially for little children in mission bands and Sunday-schools, and one who will write also for the young people, both boys and girls, that they may early imbibe a missionary spirit, in consecration of money and of personal service. A collecting card, called "The A. M. A. 'True Blue' Card," has been prepared as an aid in raising money, and this card will be furnished to all who wish the missionary letters.

During the year the Woman's Bureau has been given direct representation by its secretary at the meetings of the ladies in their State Unions, and in connection with State Conferences East and West, thereby establishing an acquaintance and confidence of exceeding value, while giving more full intelligence of this great mission field.

This has helped to develop the plan for the ladies of any one church or association of churches to take some definite part in aiding the American Missionary Association to carry forward its work. The suggestion has been cordially acted upon, and with good results. Maine, Vermont, Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin now have each their special schools or missionaries under the American Missionary Association, with whom they have communication through the Bureau of Woman's Work. Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Michigan are beginning to respond to this call, and we are led to hope that we shall have from each of these States also the help found in concentration and union, thus making twelve States in which this work is hopefully begun.

In this plan for woman's work in definite lines, it is not our purpose to divert funds from the usual church contributions. There would be nothing lost in this, but neither would there be anything gained. What the American Missionary Association needs is more help than it has hitherto received, and that without diminishing the usual church contributions the ladies will by special measures make a cash contribution annually in the support of teachers. In order to secure the results of the work in schools and homes, prompt action is taken in the establishment of preaching missions and churches, thus requiring a constant advance. It is for this reason, ladies, that we urge upon your attention the fact that a portion of the field is peculiarly yours. If you will do your part, the advance can be made.

Look in upon a single mission station. A group of three buildings attract our attention as a bit of New England transplanted, a church, a good-sized school-house, and between the two a neat, white, painted cottage. The missionaries number four, of whom three are ladies from the North. Over two hundred children and youth come daily to the school, where these missionary teachers instruct in branches usual in primary to grammar grades, and also in Christian morals and manners, with the Bible for a text book, seeking earnestly to develop heart, mind, and body to honor and righteousness. The little New England home gives practical illustration of what otherwise would be but dimly comprehended by those who have never known a home. It is open, day and evening, to all who will come. The morning devotions, the pleasant social meals, the group around the table in the evening, which the older pupils often join, are phases of home life sharply in contrast to the shiftless, joyless homes about them. With the influence of this home as a starting-point, these teachers, in visiting from house to house, suggest, advise, encourage, finding always the children the most ambitious to improve and make the little cabin like the teacher's home. You would think this sufficient to occupy these three ladies, and so doubtless they would were it not for the dire need about them. So time is found for a sewing-school, for meetings with the women, for temperance societies, for mission Sunday-schools, and numerous other forms of systematic work—for the purifying of the home life, and to guard the children from the fate of the parents. Who but women could win an entrance into such homes and hearts? It is to counteract the ignorance and desolation of womanhood that woman's help is needed in this broad field.

But is it more the duty of these to go and teach than for us who remain in the enjoyment of our great home privileges to send them? Can any lines be drawn in the personal responsibility resting upon us as Christian women, for the redemption of womanhood in these so long cast out and bound down?

Help is needed, and it is needed now, before the millions of children grow out of our influence and reach, to become like their parents, and even a more dangerous element in society.

How shall the help be given? Every church is an organization which bands together Christian workers. The nearer all can come to the very heart of the great societies appointed to the work of missions, the stronger and warmer are the missionary pulsations. Here is the American Missionary Association, with its forty years' experience in church and school planting, combined with woman's work. It has every facility for examining the field and selecting central points with view to the largest results, and it invites and urges your co-operation through its Bureau of Woman's Work, which is prepared to furnish information and to put you into direct communication with the missionaries. With your own heart full of this need, try so to lay the case before others that they, too, may feel it, and constitute yourselves a church mission band, to raise money to aid the American Missionary Association in carrying on its work in the South, and for the Chinese and Indians.

Thus can the ladies of every church take part with us in overcoming ignorance, superstition, and caste prejudice in behalf of womanhood in this our land.

SUMMARY OF INDIAN WORK.

SANTEE AGENCY, NEBRASKA.

FROM REV. A. L. RIGGS.

The Santee Normal Training School closed the work of the past year the last of June with appropriate exercises which occupied several days. Two whole days were given to public recitations of the academic department, one evening to public declamations, one day and evening to the exhibit of the Industrial department, and the usual farewell remarks incident to such an occasion. The teachers, both Industrial and Academic, presented reports, each of his special department, making sixteen reports in all, and from each one comes ample testimony that no attempt has been in vain, and no effort put forth without result. One and all testify that the marked improvement throughout the school is encouragement enough to help one meet bravely the difficulties and discouragements of the coming year; for that difficulties and discouragements must be met is well known by all who have attempted to raise a degraded people to a higher level.

At no time in the history of the school has so much interest been expressed by the people of neighboring towns. And the number of visitors received during the closing weeks testified fully to an awakened desire for more knowledge of Indian character as developed by education; and the surprise manifested by these visitors was a sufficient assurance to the workers that much had been done in the way of advancement. In the Academic department, in the teaching of mathematics, book-keeping, reading, English, Dakota translation, which is most useful in teaching idiomatic English, Dakota Bible study, music, drawing, and the speaking and writing of English, the results have been most gratifying.

The questions "Are Indians fond of music?" and "Can they sing?" are answered as often, perhaps, if not oftener than any other questions concerning them educationally. Their music teacher at Santee says of them, "Our pupils are very fond of singing themselves, and hearing music of any kind."

Next to music, the love of which amounts to almost a passion with some of them, their drawing lessons call out their best efforts. The patience and unflagging zeal with which they work over a difficult model, many white pupils would do well to emulate. Of course there are exceptions to this, and it is not a very uncommon thing to have a pupil, in a passion of impatience, crush the paper on which the outline has been carefully sketched, thus rendering it unfit for finishing. But, happily, these are exceptions, and what their teacher says of them, the exceptions go to prove. She says, "If development of character is the end of true education, it is certain drawing should continue to be a part of our regular course. It is hoped that that which is so surely talent in some should be so brought out as to give to the world some good designers at least, and perhaps in the future some noted artists."

From the four homes, two for boys and two for girls, comes the same report of duties faithfully and well performed, and a marked improvement in general deportment. The matron of the Young Men's Hall says, "Another improvement is the extent to which most of our young men can be trusted. It used to be unsafe to leave the closet and pantry doors unlocked in this house, or to lose sight of the keys at all. Now if I forget my keys in the doors they are always brought to me, and often the pantry is unlocked half a day at a time. I seldom find anything disturbed. On several occasions I have put a boy in charge, giving him the keys, and left him to get a meal ready, and have always found him faithful to his trust."

To some who were present during the closing exercises, the most remarkable feature was the musical and literary entertainment that concluded the exercises of the Academic department. To hear Indian boys and girls render with good enunciation and in a graceful manner such selections as Lowell's "Heritage," Whittier's "Slaves of Martinique," and Jean Ingelow's "Songs of Seven," was indeed a thing not soon to be forgotten. The song which introduced the programme was sung with a heartiness that made the "arches ring," and with a musical rhythm that would have disarmed the severest critic. The songs that followed and the organ recitals were equally good.

Not the least encouraging result of the year's work is the increased religious sentiment throughout the school, and the wider meaning that has been given to Christianity. All education here is on a Christian basis, and all education for the Indians which leaves out Christ and His religion must, of necessity, be a total failure. The Dakota Young Men's Christian Association has exercised a power for good that has been felt; and that God has watched over this people there cannot be any doubt.

STATIONS AT OAHE MISSION.

FROM REV. T. L. RIGGS.

1. Oahe central station and Industrial School.
2. Fort Pierre out-station, 25 miles from Agency.
3. Hope out-station, opposite Fort Sully, 10 miles from Agency.
4. Cheyenne River out-station 1, about 18 miles west-north-west from Cheyenne Agency.
5. Cheyenne River out-station 2, about 20 miles west-north-west of Agency, 5 miles from Cheyenne River.
6. Cheyenne River out-station 3, about 21 miles from Agency, 1 mile from 2, and on other side of the Cheyenne River.
7. Cheyenne River out-station 4, about 60 miles west of Agency on Plum Creek.
8. Cheyenne River out-station 5, some 63 miles west of Agency on Cherry Creek, opposite side of river from Cheyenne River 4.
9. Cheyenne River out-station 6, 65 miles west of Agency on Cheyenne River, and 5 miles from out-station 5.

10. Cheyenne out-station 7, 85 miles west of Agency on Cheyenne River, and 20 miles from out-station 6.

11. Park Street Church station on White River, 65 miles north-west from the Rosebud Agency, and 100 miles south-west of Oahe.

12. Grand River, on Grand River, 35 miles south-west of Standing Rock Agency, 125 miles from Oahe; of these 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, and 10 on the Cheyenne River Agency, 11 on Rosebud Agency, and 12 on Standing Rock Agency are cared for and supported by the A. M. A. The Native Missionary Society sustains 4 (Cheyenne River), and 7, 8, and 9 (Cheyenne River, 4, 5, and 6) are provided for by the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and others of North America, of which society Dr. Alex. McKenzie is now the Secretary.

At each out-station a day school is taught; boys and girls, and often men and women, learn to read the Bible, to write, and to work in the simpler arithmetical problems. All these stations have shown pleasing results in the very decided change that is taking place in the Indian mind regarding religious teaching. This has been marked and significant during the past year, in particular with the people on Grand River and at our Cheyenne River stations.

In church work and growth there have appeared good evidences of true and abiding improvement. Native Christians pray better and work better and give better than the same ones did last year. There seems to be encouraging signs with those who usually make no concealment of their heathen inclinations.

There have been added to the Shiloh Church 8 members during the year (and two were received yesterday which do not count with the year for which I report, but with the next). Five have come in on profession and 3 by letter. A very pleasing feature of this part of the year's work came in connection with the receiving of a little Indian girl into the church—Mattie Head. She was my first Indian child baptized. Our present membership is 65, and the most of them are faithful and true.

I wish to say a word regarding my native helpers as missionaries and teachers. It will not do to think poorly of these men and women. They are, for the most part, a noble, self-denying set of workers. I get a poor one once in a while. They have peculiar temptations to meet. Many of the burdens they are obliged to bear never would come to me. As teachers in the school-room but few of them are specially successful. There are some, however, who do remarkably good work.

The new work of the year from the more strictly missionary side has been the establishment of the Park Street Church station on White River with Indians of the Rosebud Agency. In October, 1885, I sent Jacob Good Dog, one of our Sisseton Indians, over to the White River to the villages of Red Fish and Yellow Thigh. His instructions were to preach the Gospel every opportunity, open a school, and live as a Christian man. For shelter he was to buy an old log house that was unoccupied. His school was well attended, and had good success. He made himself felt there as a Christian man. In June and July a comfortable station building was put up, a solid, well-built log house, with shingle roof and tight floor, of two rooms, one for the helper to occupy with his family, and the other to serve as a school-room and for services.

Other new work now in hand is the establishment of two additional stations with the Rosebud Indians, and the placing of "Hope Mission" on the Moreau River, probably with Spotted Eagle's villagers.

Industrial School.—The greater part of the funds expended in building for this school were collected before the beginning of the year, but it was only by the close of September, 1885, that the building itself was well under way. This is a two-story building, with large loft room overhead, and is planned to afford accommodation to from 40 to 50 girls, being on the dormitory plan instead of having separate rooms for the pupils. Its capacity is greater than with separate rooms. On the 15th of December we were able to receive pupils. From that time till the 1st of February girls were brought in till we had 25; then we called a halt. No more could be received. The work was tremendous in its demands upon the ladies in charge.

We sent our girls to their homes by the 1st of July, and as I write they and other new ones are gathering to come to us again. The most of our last year's pupils were from the out-station villages of the Cheyenne River Agency. We had two, however, from the Rosebud Agency, and one from Standing Rock.

FORT BERTHOLD, DAKOTA.

FROM REV. C. L. HALL.

The Indians have been adopting our ways of living more than ever before, and are more ready to listen to the Gospel than formerly. This change in the life of the people has involved a change in our school work. Instead of day schools we have to gather in pupils from a distance and board them. To maintain a boarding school in a far-off Indian country, away from supplies and help, in a community which has little appreciation of it, is a work of no little difficulty. The people think they do us a favor by letting us have their children to care for, and if we undertake discipline they take the part of the children. The wrath of two of the parents was stirred up a few days ago because we sent several girls to bed early for taking food from their table and distributing it to some troublesome boys outside. A poor boy was allowed to come to school, and then on returning home was berated by the assembled household for having become a white man, till in tears, and utterly discouraged, he pulled off his new clothes and ran off with only a blanket about him. But other parents are more sensible, and some bring their children to be educated. Last spring I visited a dying man who had a little girl eight years old. He was very weak, and after saying what I could about Christ, I turned to go, but he motioned to me to sit down, and when he had gathered strength enough he spoke of his wife and child, and said he wanted me to care for the little girl. I said that I would do what I could; that I hoped to be able to take more children in the fall, and, if so, I could take his. Then he lay still awhile, but would not let me leave him. Presently he called his wife and had her put on his moccasins; then he had her lay his cartridge belt and his gun beside him, and put his hand on the trigger. The woman sat by him, weeping; the little girl was before him, and I had stepped to the head of the bed. He threw his head back and rolled his death-struck eyes toward me and said, "I am going; what will you do; tell me plainly." I said, "I will take your little one and train her."

We have two small houses to accommodate 25 boys and girls for the coming year. After that the way is "not in sight," as the Indians say. We need a building for 50 girls. We have just sent off two young men for additional training in Eastern schools. We have several others and some girls away. Some of them are trying to follow Christ and pray for their people. One girl writes to her father, "I pray for you that you may give up idols and go in God's way." Once the father received his girl's picture, and kissed it as the tears ran down his cheeks. The little girls in our home would lie in their beds last winter and sing themselves to sleep with the Gospel hymns.

Last Sabbath nearly the whole community were gathered at a dancing and horse-racing entertainment. The preacher drove up to it just as a number of white persons drove up to witness the performances. He told the Indians that what they were doing was displeasing to God, and called upon them to stop. Three young men left the crowd and followed the preacher to a house for prayer, and by and by another followed. There we confessed our sins and asked God for mercy upon the people. So we carry on the warfare.

Industrial work is with us confined to housework, sewing, and knitting for girls. We are just adding a few small boys to our household, and the problem is to give them such work as they can do, and to keep them at it. They must begin to work for their own food and clothing as soon they are able, and must feel that it is their duty to do so. The common farm work must all be attended to, and the boys taught how to do this thoroughly. If there is no means for mechanical instruction, which is expensive, the ordinary farm work is educative in every way.

SKOKOMISH AGENCY, W. T.

II. Items.

The Skokomish church has, I record with humble gratitude, grown steadily, no communion having passed without two or more additions, and, in fact, since April, 1883, but one communion service has passed without some additions.

A marriage revival took place during the winter on the Skokomish Reservation. Heretofore, by the personal effort of the agent and myself, a number have been married; but instead of our going to them to induce them to accept the ceremony, they have sought it this year in nearly every case, and twenty-six couple have thus been united in Christian marriage, leaving only five couple who are now living together in the old Indian way. This is more than three times as many as have ever been thus married here during any previous year.

Another event on this reservation has been the abolishment of polygamy. For many years the order from Government has been to prevent any more plural marriages, but not to interfere with existing ones. This year, however, because of a petition from the second wife of one man, an order came for all men who had more wives than one to give up all but one. There were only four such cases, all of them being medicine men except one. It was acquiesced in with no trouble except in one instance, and that caused considerable trouble; but the offending ones were conquered at last, and the "twin relic of barbarism," as far as this reservation is concerned, is a thing of the past.

Last year the agent began to enforce on this reservation an order from Government forbidding the medicine men to practise their incantations over the sick, as so many of the Indians seemed to be ready for the step, that it was believed that the law could be enforced. It was very difficult for all to acquiesce in it at first, and it required a firm, strong hand to punish one guilty medicine man, but it was done, and during the past twelve months we have not heard their drumming and singing.

NOTES ON THE STATISTICS.

1. Besides the workers whose names appear in the table there should be mentioned Mrs. C. A. Sheldon and Mrs. E. M. Southworth, who have given Bible lessons and other instruction to our Chinese missionary helpers; also, Jee Gam, our veteran helper, who has given every evening of the year to a sort of evangelistic service in one or another of the missions of San Francisco and vicinity. This was good service, and the Lord has used it for the conversion of several. Jee Gam has now, however, returned to the regular work, dividing his time between the West and the Barnes Missions in this city.

2. As compared with our report for the previous year, these returns show a diminution at all points except (thank God!) in the last column, which recounts the number "giving evidence of conversion." In its externals, the year has been one of disappointment and discouragement. We opened with 18 missions and close with but 14. We had scarcely issued the annual report, in which, with what seemed like well-grounded hope, we said: "One encouraging peculiarity of the past year's work is that all the missions . . . seem to have become well-rooted, permanent institutions," before some of them began to show signs of dissolution. Various circumstances concurred to bring this about, but chief among them must be accounted the deepest, most elaborate, and widespread anti-Chinese movement that has ever cursed our State. The objective point was to establish and maintain a universal boycott as respects all Chinese labor and all products of Chinese labor. Thus, a nominally Christian people undertook to compel nearly 100,000 strangers to either steal or starve, for nine out of ten of them could not raise money to return to China, and must stay here. No wonder that race-prejudice was fanned to an intenser hate, and that these strangers gave cold welcomes to every custom, social or religious, that came to them recommended by such concomitants as that. Nevertheless, though fewer persons have come to hear the word, and most hearts have seemed hard-closed against the Gospel-seed, yet we are comforted by harvests coming of seed sown in preceding years. We have not been without fruit, gathered into life eternal.

3. Forty-four different persons have labored in our mission for a longer or shorter time during the year, of whom twelve were Chinese Christians. The total number of months of labor is 385.

4. Respecting the returns under the heads "Ceased from idol worship" and "Give evidence of conversion," it should be said that it is not meant that this whole number have come to the decisions thus indicated during this past year. This would overstate the results. Those figures represent about the average number of Christian Chinese, or of Chinese so far persuaded as to have ceased from idol worship, who have been connected with each mission during the year. The number converted within the last twelve-months cannot yet be given exactly, but I estimate it at 35. The total number concerning whom this hope has been cherished since our mission began its work cannot be much less than 600.

THE FINANCES.

The financial resources for the year may be stated as follows:

Balance from year preceding		$376.35
Sale of furniture		20.00
Drafts on parent society		8,000.00
Receipts at our Mission Treasury, as follows:
Local Missions	$1,072.30
Churches	852.65
Individual offerings	640.00
Eastern friends	489.00
		3,053.95
		$11,450.30

The disbursements are as follows:

Salaries of superintendent, teachers, and helpers		$8,353.00
Rents of mission-houses		2,018.00
Incidental expenses, as furniture, fuel, lights, travelling, etc		945.10
		$11,316.10
Balance to new year		134.20
		$11,450.30

This balance will be somewhat increased by further donations in payment of pledges already received. Its existence is to us a most grateful surprise. It reveals to us afresh the faithfulness of Him who promises to answer prayer. Two months before the close of the fiscal year it seemed impossible to gather the funds requisite to meet the unavoidable demands; but having first and continually laid our case before the Lord, we turned to His people, and the result is that we find our fears rebuked and our faith strengthened and every need supplied.

The permanent property of the mission consists of the Barnes, the West and the North Mission Houses in this city; the mission-house at Tulare, and an interest acquired, without cost to us, in the mission-house at San Diego. The total value may be estimated at $11,000.

SERMON.

By Rev. Alexander McKenzie, D.D.

Matthew xxv. 34, 35, 36—"Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me."

When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the angels with Him, then shall He sit on the throne of his glory; and before Him shall be gathered all the nations; and He shall separate them one from another. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father.

Into these sublime and impressive scenes are set so simple things as giving bread to the hungry and water to the thirsty. The common charities of life have an essential part in that decisive and divisive day. The sanctions of eternity are upon them. We have been reluctant to give to the words which thus exalt the bread and the cup their full significance. It has been a precious and stimulating thought, that what is done to one of the least of his brethren is done unto the Lord and remembered by Him. "Inasmuch" has been an inspiring word. Yet we have not been ready to give to these simple acts the importance which is here ascribed to them in their relation to our character and our destiny. It has seemed to be an undue exaltation of small things; an enlargement of works at the possible expense of faith; an elevation of the temporal and physical into the domain of the spiritual and eternal. The teaching has seemed unlike the rest of the Gospel with its instruction and demands. But the passage stands, with all its profound assurance, in the solemn words of the King and the Judge, the Redeemer and Saviour.

One would think that while we are looking so anxiously into the future, and asking of the realities which are awaiting us, we should eagerly grasp and firmly retain a truth so plain as this, whose words and symbols are so easily received and taken into our life. The thought of our time has brought the day of judgment once more into prominence and given to it its own place. It will be well if we are also led to observe with steadfast vision the words and deeds which belong in the day.

We should see the importance of the acts which are named and of the spirit from which they spring. We must intelligently mark that this account of the day when the Son of man shall come with his angels is a portion of the Gospel, and is to be regarded in its vital union with all other portions. The Gospel shows us the incarnation of God for the redemption of men. It teaches the divine grace and offers eternal life. It demands our repentance. It declares that we must be born again and from above. It calls for our belief on the only begotten Son of God. It requires the keeping of his commandments. It presents the Holy Spirit, the divine indwelling. It asks the open confession of Christ and promises his confession before his Father and the angels. In adoration and prayer, in thankfulness and love, we are meditating upon these high truths, and thus are borne on to the day of the Lord's return, when He sits upon the throne of his glory. Then not one of all these truths is mentioned. But we who for the first time listen to his voice hear Him say, "Come, ye blessed: for I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink."

This is not another gospel. It is the truth which the Lord taught, which his apostles have carried through the world. Here it is presented in its results. The acts which are commended are parts of the life to which men have been summoned. The "blessed of my Father" are those to whom has been given the grace which is in Christ Jesus. Hearing his words, they have not selected those which they will believe and left the rest; chosen the deeds which they will do, leaving others undone. They have come into a large belief and obedience, and these things are included in it. They are the fruitage of the spirit of obedience and faith. Repentance has brought them away from a selfish life. Conversion and regeneration have brought them into a life of charity. Faith has held them to the deeds of goodness and mercy which are required by Him in whom they trust. The Spirit of God has inspired them for usefulness "for the sake of the Name." The intelligent hearer connects the deeds with the heart and life; as one who considers the flower, that he may know it and be able to have others like it, marks its connection with the plant from which it has sprung, and with the seed from which the plant has grown, and with the heavens which have given the sun and rain that there might be the flower, and the earth which has imparted its vital forces. Only thus is the flower known. Acts of charity are not more independent. They belong to the plant and the seed, to the heaven and the earth; to the heart and life of man, to God who is above, and to all which nourishes the soul. If there are no such deeds, then so far the spirit has failed to be true to itself and its Maker. The branch which bears fruit is the branch which is preserved and taken into greater service. Faith without works is dead. The works witness to the life. The works are taken as the expression of the life. The vine represents the fruit which it promises and yields. The fruit represents the vine whose life it has received. This fruitage proves that there was this vine.

It is in accordance with the divine nature and its laws that the deeds which have the final approval should be wrought of the men who are approved. The life of Christ is their life. That He imparts of his own nature to men is a primal truth. When the love which He is enters into a man, it must continue to work as it has done. It has not changed its character by coming into a human heart. There is but one incarnation. There is but one Jesus of Nazareth. But the spirit which was in Jesus enters another Nazarene, and remains the same spirit. That Christ is in every believing heart, and every Christian heart in Him, is the mystic and blessed truth in which we have our being as his disciples. When this love is in us it must be what it has always been. The life of Christ, then, according to our measure, will be repeated by us. It cannot mean less than this, that we are "partakers of the divine nature." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do."

Our Lord when He was here, the love which He is, the love which dwells in men, gave bread to the hungry and water to those who were athirst. He took the sorrows and sicknesses of the world. The prophecy which He read in the synagogue at Nazareth He changed into his own biography. The poor heard good tidings, and the captives were released. The blind received their sight, and the bruised were set at liberty. His way was marked by mercies. The witness to his Messiahship was in the things which men heard and saw. These were more than a witness. His works were more than miracles, acts at which men must wonder. They were the natural working of his nature, the first-fruits of the larger deliverance which He brought into the world. Works like these belong with that nature when it is in another. He held men to Himself and shared his life with them. They were to minister to others "even as" He came to minister. As He was sent into the world, "even so" did He send his followers into the world, calling them, not servants, but friends, saying, "My Father and your Father." "Even as" and "even so" are coronation words, giving commission, inspiration, recognition. It is enough for the disciple to be as his Master. In the Master's thought it is not too much. "I am the Vine, ye are the branches." "Because I live, ye shall live."

We are to notice the importance of the acts which have their place in the day of God which is to come. We are to notice, also, that the natural ability to do these deeds is given to us when we receive the Christ, the Saviour and Lord. We must notice, further, that these deeds are to be done here, for it is here that men are hungry and thirsty. The judgment draws its meaning from the life which has preceded it. No new thing is created, no new principle is declared. The books are not written then, but are then opened. It is upon this present time that our thoughts are to be fixed. We feel the encouragement of the future, but we are to use it now. Our minds go forward beyond the bounds of these years; we listen reverently to the prophetic voices; we generously interpret the silence of the oracles; we confess to ourselves that we know not all the purposes of God and cannot define the plans of his eternity; our hope rests in his mercy; our love clings to his cross. But our duty we know. To consider that is more pressing than meditation upon destiny. To perform it is of higher moment than to range the uncounted centuries. The emphatic word is NOW—the now of duty and of grace. We cannot conceive the solemnity of the endless years. We must feel the solemnity of to-day. This we know when we lift our eyes to "the throne of his glory." Here, now, men are in need, and here plenty is in our hands.

This truth of the present importance, the eternal importance, of these deeds of love is many times set before us, and this, also, that they belong here, in this world. Before the bridegroom comes the virgins must have their lamps trimmed and lighted, and their oil in their vessels. Before the Master returns the servants must have used their talents and gained the interest. Jehovah declared by his prophet that He would have men deal their bread to the hungry, and bring the poor who were cast out to their house. "Then shall thy light break forth as the morning." St. James taught that there is no profit in words of peace when a brother or sister is in need of food and none is given. If a man say he hath faith, but have not works, "Can that faith save him"? "Pure religion and undefiled" stands in its old definition. St. John taught that the love of God doth not abide in one who "hath the world's goods, and beholdeth his brother in need, and shutteth up his compassion from him." St. Paul taught that faith, hope, and love abide, "and the greatest of these is love."

We are bidden when we pray for our daily bread to say, "Thy kingdom come"—the Father's kingdom to his children. When it comes it will be here. We look for it beyond "the splendid stars." Beyond the clouds we see "the glimmering verge of heaven," "the columns of the heavenly palaces." We need not look so far. The man who stood on Patmos and gazed into the excellent glory has written this: "I saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God." "I heard a voice out of the throne saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God Himself shall be with them, and be their God: and He shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning, nor crying, nor pain any more; the first things are passed away." Are we able to read this which is written? Are we looking for the city which shall descend and the tabernacle which shall be among men? "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more." When we remove hunger and thirst from men, so far the kingdom of God has come to them. Our simple act has this lofty meaning. The benediction is upon it, and the sanction of the coming day. On the confines of eternity the deed of charity is in its place.

These acts of kindness and love are the basis for works of a higher character. Our usefulness is not restricted to such deeds as these. We can give gifts which are more necessary, and whose virtue is of longer continuance. When Holy Scripture would describe the better gifts it calls them by the names of these. Jesus is the Bread of life. He gives the living water. He will receive the stranger into his Father's house. He provides the garment for the wedding feast of the king's son. He comes as a Physician to those who are sick. When He makes men free, they are free indeed. His work was spiritual. He redeemed the souls of men. Yet He was also the Resurrection. He cared for men in all their wants, not overlooking the lesser, not forgetting the greater. This we are to do. This the spirit which was in Him is to do, now that it is in us. The work is to be liberal and thorough. When I find a man, when I am found by a man who is thirsty, I am to give him drink. But when I do this, I must tell him of the living water. For the same reason which made me give the first cup I must give the second. The divine requirement, the divine nature in me, the human need and human pity forbid the limiting of my charity, incite me to the full indulgence of my love. Therefore I say, "My friend, here is water; drink of it. Drink, too, of the living water." This will not take his time, for he can hear me while he is drinking. It will not take my time, for I can tell it while I am waiting for my cup.

We cannot feel deeply enough the necessities which are upon men, by reason of their guilt. We cannot too earnestly point them to the Lamb of God, or pray them to be reconciled to God. But we must remember that in our Lord's announcement of the great day, the piece of bread and the cup of water are the things which are named. While I think seriously upon the eternity of those who are thirsty, I am obliged to observe their to-day. By the very solemnities of their future are their present needs made more evident. I hear the voice from the throne, "I was an hungred; I was thirsty." The earliest movement of his nature in me prompts the relief of the want which cries out for my help. I must give the cup if I am to get a hearing for the word which I long to speak. It would be folly to offer a man the truth when he is crying for water. Christ did not so. He fed the hungry and then He taught them. The word followed the work which had prepared the way for it. The miracle furnished the language of the teaching. The two belonged in one purpose and in one force.

The commendation of the word by the cup is natural and evident. Men believe in one who has helped them. Should not this be their reasoning? They are not unreasonable when they ask water of men who come to them, or stand before them, in the name of Christ. The Gospel which leaves out the cup is not the Gospel which He gave, which He is. Men will judge the vine by its fruit. When they do it, they are right. If they know the Scripture, they can give proof-texts for their doctrine and demand. Men have turned away from the forms of religion, and refused to hear its words, and have seen God, the divine love and help, in men and women who have ministered to them as Jesus would have done, and in his name. A woman, "for the sake of the Name," drew some of the outcast and despised of the great city to her beautiful country home, and let them see the sky, and rest on the green grass, and sit under the old elms. One of the helpless, hopeless, thus answered her charity: "Christ told you to do this. You never would have thought of it yourself." Could the trees which Christ had planted, or the flowers He had made fragrant, have found a worthier use than through human love thus to testify of Him? The heavens do declare his glory. So do the charities of the hearts which love Him. He taught that we should let our light so shine before men that they will see our good works, see them and be blessed in them, and give the glory to Him whose children we are, whose love is our inheritance and our life.

While I live would I preach the Gospel of God's love to the sinful who are athirst and the thirsty who are sinful, carrying to them the riches of his grace, the full Gospel of the cup and the cross. For I know that I shall hear Him say, "I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink." I can hear it even now.

Our best visions of the heaven which is beyond the world are after this pattern. It means little to us to think of a jasper wall glistening with chalcedony and chrysolite, sapphire and emerald, with gates of pearl, and a street of gold. But the city where perfect love abides and reigns, that we can comprehend. Through the love of earth, which sanctifies human life and witnesses to the love which is divine; the love which between Jerusalem and Jericho ministered to a stranger, and at Bethany poured from the alabaster cruse the costly spikenard; the love which gives its bread to the hungry and its cup to the thirsty: the love which sees in every man a brother, and blesses him in the Father's name; the love which goes on to the day when the Son of man shall come in the clouds of heaven; through this we can look upward and see what heaven will be. The throne of the King and the Saviour stands at its open door, and we look through the brightness into the glory. The welcome to heaven is in the language of the earth, "Come, ye blessed of my Father. I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink." To life is given this marvellous uplifting. Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, what is prepared for those who love Him. Yet we need not be surprised when we find that earthly charities have heavenly recognition. In the strength of the assurance we may go for many days, till He appear.

This is the missionary spirit and method. It is generous and complete. It sets a large estimate on the common things of life. It feels the importance of the simplest charities and their grandeur as they stand in the Gospel. It lives and works in this world and this day. It strives to bring in the kingdom for which it prays. It holds the future and the present in its purpose. It carries the two cups, of water and the water of life, and it offers them now and here. There are more gifts than those which are named by our Lord. Yet the six things which belong in the judgment as He presents it cover most of the pressing wants of men. If they have bread enough and water enough; if they have homes and raiment; if they are in good health and are at liberty, they are well furnished for useful and honorable lives. But these blessings are to be extended. It is necessary and it is required. The mind is to have meat and drink; is to receive friendship and clothing; to be well and free. Then is the man furnished for the larger life. Extend these terms to the spirit of man, as we are bound to do. The soul must have bread and water, home and raiment, health and liberty. Then is the man fully equipped for all which it is given to him to do. We can carry all these things to him, from the least to the greatest of them. We can meet men in their physical wants. We can teach them, that they may care for themselves intelligently and be of service to the community. We can give them a fair chance in the world, and can bring to them the kingdom of heaven. There are multitudes who need all these things, and we have riches in abundance. Our sympathies are quick, our humanity is deep, and we are Christ's disciples. Why, then, are we not more lavishly giving of our plenty? Why does the cry of the hungry rise unceasingly and enter into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, to whose day we are hastening? Is it not because we have all good things in so great abundance? We are so rich, so wise and strong, so happy and hopeful, that we forget the hungry throngs who are about us. Our corn has grown higher than our heads, and stands in close ranks, shutting us in, so that we do not see through it, or see over it, to the famishing who are on the other side. What if we break off the willing ears, and, lading ourselves with them, press our way through the tall stalks, which bend in obeisance before our charity, and carry the bread where men will eat and live! Through the rustling of the grain in this October air hear ye not the voice, "I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat"? If we cannot all readily leave our fields, we have those who will take our bread and pass it on to the hungry. This, simply this, is the mission of the Association which has now called us together. It needs nothing for itself. It reaches out its hands that we may lay our bread upon them; then will it carry our bread to those who are hungry. It speaks to us of them, and, not resting as it tells its errand, it holds out its hands. We can make this a Sabbath if we will pluck our ears of corn. We can renew the miracles, and feed the multitudes, and make men see Him in whose hands

> "Five barley loaves and fishes two
> A feast for many thousands grew."

They tell us, these messengers of ours, of the hungry and the thirsty. Out between the seas stretches the Dark Continent. Its millions of men are the children of our Father, and our Saviour died for them, and they know it not. We have brought from their shores, unwilling captives, who have toiled, suffered, died our slaves. It is a terrible record. The course of liberty has made them free. The men stand by our side at the ballot-box. They are poor, untaught, hungry, naked, sick, imprisoned still. They serve in the cities in the humblest callings. They gather in their villages, covet a little land, struggle against all chances, and cry for succor. Centuries of darkness, years of bondage, have left their mark upon them. Yet it is wonderful what they have done in these few days of liberty. Five million acres of land are theirs. They bring from their narrow grounds three million bales of cotton in a year. They have a hundred papers which they edit and manage. A million black scholars turn their dark faces up to twenty thousand black faces seeking for light. They are dreadfully hungry, dreadfully thirsty, these seven millions of God's children. I think there is nothing in history which matches their advance from so deep a depth to the creditable height where they are waiting and praying. Their piteous cry and more piteous despair are heard in the rustling of our grain. They are very hungry, and our corn is higher than our heads. They want bread, books, teachers; they want intelligence, manhood, religion. With so much to reward us for the little we have given, there is more employment for our larger gifts. They appeal to our humanity, to our justice, to our patriotism, to our respect for honest effort and manly ambition, to our piety. They appeal to the day and the voice, "I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat." They need to be told of the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. They need to be made ready for eternity. Yes, and they need bread, and all for which it stands—the bread from heaven and the bread from our fields. These messengers of ours have wrought bravely, passing on our grain. Their schools are among the chief glories of our land. Of our wisest and our best have we given, that these children of the Father might be taught. A day at Hampton is inspiration for a year. How he has stood who has made the place! His tall, lithe, sinewy form; the energy of his restless brain; the humanity of his great heart; the accumulated force of his being—all this we have seen and felt. We watched him as he towered above us. We stood with folded arms, amazed that one man could carry the burden of three. He never complained, but, loaded with the grain he had plucked from many fields, he made his way down among the hungry who had learned to watch for him. He faltered not, but fell. Slowly he rises now. I do not know that we can make light the work of such a man. But a part of the burden which he has carried we can carry. We can bear out blessings of our own. The same summons reaches us. The same want lies at our door. The same blessing awaits our willingness: "I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat." Many paths open among the needy. Let us move on. Fill up your arms from your own fields. Join the goodly company of them who bear the Master's name. Let us move on.

Once there lived where we are resting a race of red-faced men They were native to the soil. Their homes were in the woods which stood on this ground. They planted these fields and guided their boats along these streams. Then our fathers came. They thought to teach the tribes they found, that they might know their Maker and their Saviour. It was not long, and ruder manners prevailed. The natives receded before the strangers. Further and further were they forced toward the setting sun. They have no place of which they can be sure. Torn from their own life, they have found no other. Hard has life become to them. Dark is the story of the wrongs they have endured and returned. At last, after so long a time, we have learned to know them ; to remember who they are ; to mark their wants ; to regard their rights and listen to their appeal for the charities which are their due. Are we not debtors to the Indians? We have begun to care for them. The Government recognizes them. Hampton and Carlisle receive the red-faced youth to teach them manhood and womanhood. Some have gone out to them to help them in their homes. Here and there churches and schools are pointing out to them what they piteously call "the white man's road." The song of Israel is heard again, "Spring up, O well ; sing ye unto it." They drink of "the brook in the way," and therefore do they "lift up the head." But they are so thirsty ! Rosa Bearface and Frances Whitecow stand in the door of the "little white school-house with a belfry," and hold out their cups of water. "What are these among so many?" Through our fields, watering our tall, thick grain, run the deep rivers—water and living water. Who will not fill his cup, his hands, and give drink to the perishing? It was an entreaty we can hear but once ; the plea of a brave who had come from the life of his camp, and, fastening his eager eyes upon the face of a Christian, begged with trembling lips, "You know about that man come down from heaven to be kind to people? I hope you kind to us." He heard it who stood above the pool of Siloam, and cried, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." He heard it who will come in the clouds of heaven, and sit upon the throne of his glory, and we shall hear him say, "I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink."

Brethren, this is the service to which we are appointed. It is not our work for which we ask approval and a blessing. It is the Redeemer's work which He has left to us. Never was there a more sacred trust than He committed to the hands of men when He ascended from Olivet. If He were here He would go down among the hungry, He would go out among the thirsty, and help them every one. Is He not here? Is it not his name you bear, his love which moves within you, his strength which waits upon your will? Will you not go forth for Him and to Him?

"That radiant Friend who walked beside you yesterday."

We are only wise and good and strong when our life is lived by the faith of Him who loved us and gave Himself for us. The island of classic story was borne on the waters of the Ægean, eastward and westward, and up and down the sea. It had no honor and no use. Jove fastened it with chains of adamant ; then temples rose upon it. Its oracles were sacred, its festivals renowned. Kings and priests were its rulers. It was the treasure-house of the States of Greece, and against the Persian invader its unwalled towns were secure, guarded by their sanctity. Our life means little, achieves little till the divine Master and Saviour holds it in its place ; holds it to his intent, his compassion, his redemption. Then will its virtues flourish. Its affections, no longer floating sentiment, will be the gracious forces of beneficence. Its way and work will be made up "after the power of an endless life." The world will know his presence knowing ours. Our steady steps will bear us on to his day of blessing. Our patient ear, listening for the cries of men, will catch the still, small voice from off the throne. Men will be blessed of Him. Men will believe in Him because they see Him, know Him. They will tread the earth He trod and think of Him. Their glad confession shall be of his name and of his love.

"It was as if the Christ
Had been drawn down from heaven to track us home,
And any of the footsteps following us Might have been His."

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers and teachers here and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

4. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS—to purchase farm implements, plows, harrows and cultivators; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanic arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tin-men, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms with sewing and knitting material.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

relating to the work of the Association and to the AMERICAN MISSIONARY should be addressed to the Secretaries, 56 Reade Street, New York City; letters for the Bureau of Woman's Work to Miss D. E. Emerson, at the New York Office.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer, 56 Reade Street, New York; Rev. C. L. Woodworth, D.D., 21 Cong'l House, Boston, Mass.; Rev. Jos. E. Roy, D.D., 151 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the Gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work recognizes no distinctions of race or color. Since Emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as Missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES in the Mountain districts. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to co-operate with the Government in its humane and Christian policy toward the INDIANS.

In view of the necessity of elevating the WOMEN of these races, the Association has organized a BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK, to which it especially invites the co-operation of the Christian women of the churches.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III. of Constitution.)

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I BEQUEATH to my executor (or executors) the sum of———dollars, in trust, to pay the same in———days after my decease, to the person who, when the same is payable, shall act as Treasurer of "The American Missionary Association," New York City, to be applied under the direction of the Executive Committee of that Association to its charitable uses and purposes.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some States three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities, the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A.B.), as his last Will and Testament, in the presence of us, who, at the request of the said (A.B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions, until the next Annual Meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of the Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

Passed March 12, 1886, three-fifths being present.

An Act further to amend chapter three hundred and fifty-eight of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," as amended by chapter seven hundred and ninety-six of the laws of eighteen hundred and seventy-one.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of chapter three hundred and fifty-eight of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," as amended by chapter seven hundred and ninety-six of the laws of eighteen hundred and seventy-one, is hereby further amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or may hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled "An Act relating to wills;" but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never in any manner be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. Section five of the said Act is hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. This Act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairman of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various standing committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money comtributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures—viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII. CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and travelling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Southern Work. (3) Indian and Chinese Work. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished Business.
8. New Business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Forty-first Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the Second Parish Church at Portland, Maine, on Tuesday, October 25th, at 3 o'clock P.M.

Owing to the recent death of its President, Hon. Wm. B. Washburn, of Massachusetts, the Association was called to order by one of the Vice-Presidents, Alexander McKenzie, D.D., of the same State, who, after the singing of "Coronation," read the Scriptures—Mark vi, 30–56—and led in prayer.

Rev. Henry A. Hazen, of Massachusetts, was elected Secretary, and Rev. Edgar M. Cousins, of Maine, Assistant Secretary.

In the unavoidable absence of W. H. Fenn, D.D., Rev. Charles H. Daniels welcomed the Association in behalf of the churches and the city of Portland.

Response was made by Vice-President McKenzie.

The following committees were nominated and elected:

Committee on Nominations.—A. S. Walker, D.D., of Massachusetts; Rev. Rufus K. Harlow, of Massachusetts; W. L. Gage, D.D., of Connecticut; Rev. Arthur Shirley, of Maine; Charles Peck, Esq., of Connecticut.

Committee of Arrangements—Rev. Charles H. Daniels, Rev. Leavitt H. Hallock, Rev. Frank T. Bayley, William H. Fenn, D.D., Dea. E. F. Duren, all of Maine.

Business Committee.—Rev. Geo. M. Howe, of Maine; J. D. Kingsbury, D.D., of Massachusetts; Rev. Geo. E. Hall, of New Hampshire; Rev. Geo. E. Street, of New Hampshire; Dr. Luther B. Morse, of Massachusetts; James G. Buttrick, Esq., of Massachusetts.

Secretary Beard read the portion of the Constitution relating to life membership and delegates, and the roll of the Association and Visitors was prepared, as follows;

The Treasurer, H. W. Hubbard, Esq., presented his annual report, which was accepted and referred to the Committee on Finance to be appointed.

The report of the Executive Committee was read by the Field Superintendent, Rev. Charles J. Ryder, and the various portions of the report relating to different departments of work were referred to the special committees to be appointed.

The Association, led by Secretary Strieby, united in a concert of prayer with workers in the field.

The programme prepared by the Committee of Arrangements was adopted as the programme of the meeting, unless otherwise directed.

Adjourned to 7.30 P. M.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The meeting was called to order at 7.30 P. M. The devotional services were conducted by Pres. James W. Strong, D.D., of Minnesota.

The annual sermon was preached by A. J. F. Behrends, D.D., of New York, from the third verse of Jude, according to the Revised Version.

The sermon was followed by the administration of the Lord's Supper. The following named persons officiated at the service: Ministers—W. L. Gage, D.D., of Connecticut; Rev. George S. Dickerman, of Massachusetts. Deacons—E. F. Duren, R. H. Hinkley, S. W. Larrabee, Horatio Staples, John M. Gould, of Maine; Augustus Gaylord, H. W. Hubbard, of New York; Elbert B. Munroe, of Connecticut.

At the close of the communion, adjournment was taken to Wednesday at 9 o'clock A. M.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The prayer meeting from 8 to 9 o'clock was led by Joseph Anderson, D.D., of Connecticut.

At 9 o'clock the Association was called to order by the Vice-President presiding, who read the Scriptures. Prayer was offered by Rev. Henry S. Loring, of Maine.

The records of the previous day were read and approved.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following committees to act for the Association, and the report was adopted:

Committee on Educational Work: Rev. Wm. F. Slocum, Jr., Md.; Elbridge Mix, D.D., Mass.; Rev. Oliver S. Dean, Mass.; Rev. Forrest F. Emerson, R. I.; Rev. Omar W. Folsom, Me.; Rev. George H. Scott, Mass.; Charles Heath, Esq., Mass.; Mr. W. A. Crosthwait, Tenn.

On Mountain Work: Alonzo H. Quint, D.D., Mass.; Geo. W. Phillips, D.D., Vt.; Rev. Geo. W. Grover, N. H.; Rev. Charles C. McIntire, Vt.; Rev. Henry M. Grant, Mass.; Rev. Henry J. Patrick, Mass.; Rev. John A. MacColl, Vt.

On Indian Work: Frank Wood, Esq., Mass.; Elijah Horr, D.D., Mass.; Rev. George A. Tewksbury, Mass.; Rev. Frank A. Warfield, Mass.; Galen C. Moses, Esq., Me.; A. L. Williston, Esq., Mass.; Carlos Montezuma, Ill.

On Chinese Missions: Rev. S. Lewis B. Speare, Mass.; Rev. Henry L. Griffin, Me.; Rev. George S. Dickerman, Mass.; Rev. Charles H. Pope, Me.; Rev. Charles P. Mills, Mass.; Dea. Horace W. Otis, Mass.; Mr. Yan Phou Lee, Ct.

On Church Work: Rev. Cyrus Richardson, N. H.; Rev. Joseph F. Lovering, Mass.; Rev. Mahlon Van Horne, R. I.; Rev. George F. Stanton, Mass.; Rev. Arthur F. Skeele, Me.; Frederick E. Sturgis, D.D., Mass.

On Finance: Charles A. Hull, Esq., N. Y.; Rev. Smith Baker, Mass.; Edward S. Atwood, D.D., Mass.; J. Hall McIlvaine, D.D., R. I.; Col. Franklin Fairbanks, Vt.; Augustus Gaylord, Esq., N. Y.

A paper on "The Influence of a Life and the Life of an Influence," was presented by Associate Corresponding Secretary Augustus F. Beard, D.D.

A paper on "The Brotherhood of Man; or, The Three Brothers who Settled America," was read by Corresponding Secretary M. E. Strieby, D.D.

A paper on "Need of Intelligence in Giving," was read by Associate Corresponding Secretary James Powell, D.D.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following special committees upon the papers read:

1. Upon Secretary Strieby's paper: C. M. Lamson, D.D., Vt.; Rev. J. W. Hird, Mass.; E. L. Champlin, Esq., N. Y.
2. Upon Secretary Beard's paper: Rev. W. A. McGinley, N. H.; Rev. T. E. Babb, Mass.; Joseph W. Burgess, Esq., Mass.
3. Upon Secretary Powell's paper: Joseph Anderson, D.D., Ct.; Rev. W. R. Eastman, Mass.; Timothy H. Chapman, Esq., Me.

Rev. Dr. Behrends, of New York, spoke upon the subject of Missionary Literature as presented in Secretary Powell's paper. Rev. G. S. Dickerman and Rev. O. S. Dean, both of Massachusetts, spoke upon the same paper.

The Association listened to addresses in memory of its late President, the Hon. William B. Washburn, of Massachusetts. These addresses were given by Rev. S. G. Buckingham, D.D., of Massachusetts, and Secretary Strieby, of the Association. The latter presented a minute which had been adopted by the Executive Committee at their first meeting after learning of the death of Governor Washburn, and which they recommended for adoption at this meeting, and to be forwarded to the family of the late President.

The minute, which follows, was unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

"We recognize the hand of God in the recent and sudden death of Hon. William B. Washburn, the President of this Association. We mourn the loss of one whose name and influence have been so helpful to it; whose many private virtues have endeared him to so wide a circle of friends; whose public services in the Church and State have been so honored and valued; and we tender to his family our profound sympathy in their irreparable bereavement.

"Yet we are grateful to our Heavenly Father that he called our brother to himself by so painless a death and while in the discharge of his duty as a member of the American Board. We rejoice that in him we can point to one whose loving heart made his home happy, whose integrity and honorable dealing were a noble example in business life, whose honors and offices in the service of the State were unsought and were discharged with fidelity and ability, and whose life and work in the church were an honor to his profession and to the cause of Christ.

"In the suddenness of his departure we are reminded that we, too, may be called in an hour that we think not, and yet that it is the privilege of the Christian to be always ready to die with the armor on and in the active service of the Captain of our Salvation."

Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Association was called to order at 2 o'clock. Rev. George E. Street, of New Hampshire, offered prayer.

The report of the Committee on Educational Work, with an address, was presented by Rev. Wm. F. Slocum, Jr., of Maryland. Further addresses were made by Rev. Forrest F. Emerson, of Rhode Island; Mr. W. A. Crosthwait, of Tennessee, and Rev. Mahlon Van Horne, of Rhode Island.

The report of the Committee on Mountain Work was presented by Rev. Henry J. Patrick, of Massachusetts. Addresses in connection with the report were given by A. H. Quint, D.D., of Massachusetts, chairman of the committee; Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, of Kentucky; G. W. Phillips, D.D., of Vermont, and Rev. A. A. Myers, General Missionary of the Association, of Tennessee.

J. E. Rankin, D.D., led in closing prayer.

Adjourned to 7.30 P. M.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The Association was called to order at 7.30. Devotional exercises were conducted by James W. Cooper, D.D., of Connecticut.

An address on "The Nerve of Missions" was delivered by Pres. Wm. De Witt Hyde, D.D., of Bowdoin College, Maine.

Hon. Nelson Dingley, of Maine, gave an address upon "Some of the changed conditions in this country that demand increased missionary effort."

The Association then listened to an address upon "The conversion of the Chinese in this country," by Mr. Yan Phou Lee, of Connecticut.

W. H. S. Aubrey, D.D., of England, addressed the meeting upon "Some Phases of American Civilization."

A brief closing address was made by the Vice-President presiding.

Closed with singing the doxology and with the benediction.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The prayer meeting from 8 to 9 o'clock was led by Rev. J. E. Adams, of Maine. The Association was called to order by Vice-President A. J. F. Behrends, D.D., of New York, and led in prayer by Rev. R. B. Howard, of Massachusetts.

The minutes of Wednesday were read and approved.

The report of the Committee on Indian Work was presented by Frank Wood, Esq., of Massachusetts, who also addressed the Association, and was followed by Rev. George A. Tewksbury, of Massachusetts, Carlos Montezuma, of Illinois, a representative of the Apache Indians of Arizona, and President Joseph Ward, D.D., of Dakota.

The report was accepted and the recommendation adopted that a committee be appointed to co-operate with the Financial Secretary for Indian Missions.

The report of the Committee on Chinese Missions was presented by Rev. S. Lewis B. Speare, of Massachusetts, who addressed the Association, and was followed by Rev. Charles P. Mills, of Massachusetts; Gen. Augustus Gaylord, of New York, and Mr. Yan Phou Lee, of Connecticut.

The report was accepted and adopted, together with the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Association, holding its annual meeting in the State of Maine, sends its greetings to Rev. W. C. Pond, a son of Maine, with sympathy in his labors and rejoicing in his success among the Chinamen on the Pacific coast.

The report of the Committee on Church Work was presented by Rev. Cyrus Richardson, of New Hampshire, who addressed the Association, and was followed by Rev. George F. Stanton, of Massachusetts, and Mr. W. A. Crosthwait, of Tennessee.

The report was accepted and adopted.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following persons as a committee to co-operate with the Financial Secretary on Indian Missions: Frank Wood, Esq., Massachusetts; Franklin Fairbanks, Esq., Vermont; Elbert B. Munroe, Esq., New York; Joseph Ward, D.D., Dakota; Rev. Charles B. Mills, Massachusetts. And they were appointed.

Adjourned to 2 P. M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The Association was called to order at 2 P. M. Prayer was offered by Rev. Edward Payson Thwing, M.D., of New York.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

(For Three Years.)

LYMAN ABBOTT, D.D., N. Y.; J. R. DANFORTH, D.D., Penn.; A. S. BARNES, Esq., N. Y.; Gen. CLINTON B. FISK, N. Y.; ADDISON P. FOSTER, D.D., Mass.

(For One Year.)

JAMES W. COOPER, D.D., Ct.

The report was accepted, and a ballot being taken, the persons named were elected.

The meeting listened to reports of the committees appointed upon the papers read on Wednesday by the Secretaries.

Rev. W. A. McGinley, of New Hampshire, presented the report upon Secretary Beard's paper. The report was accepted.

C. M. Lamson, D.D., of Vermont, presented the report upon Secretary Strieby's paper, which was accepted.

Joseph Anderson, D.D., of Connecticut, presented the report upon Secretary Powell's paper, together with two resolutions. The report was accepted. The first resolution was adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That we submit to the Congregational churches, in local conferences assembled, for careful consideration, the question whether it is not desirable that such conferences establish special committees, whose duty it shall be to secure for this Association, along with the other benevolent societies of the denomination, a hearing from time to time in our churches, especially in those churches which are without pastors, and which for this, or other reasons, are liable to fail in their duty toward our great missionary and benevolent organizations.

And it was voted that the Secretaries print this resolution and send a copy to the clerk of each local conference, requesting him to bring it to the attention of the body.

After discussion, the second resolution relating to a Union Missionary Magazine was laid upon the table.

Adjourned to 7.30 P. M.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The meeting was called to order at 7.30 by Elbert B. Munroe, Esq., of New York. Rev. Frank A. Warfield, of Massachusetts, conducted devotional services.

The minutes of the day were read and approved, and the Secretaries were authorized to complete the minutes to the end of the meeting, and the Executive Committee to print at their discretion.

Secretary Powell, in behalf of Rev. Dr. McIlvaine, of Rhode Island, who had been called away, extended the invitation of the churches of Providence, R. I., that the annual meeting of this Association for 1888 be held in that city. The invitation was accepted.

The Association listened to an address by Hon. William P. Frye, of Maine.

Secretary Beard, of the Association, presented an address of thanks.

A response was made by W. H. Fenn, D.D.

Voted to adopt Dr. Beard's statement as a minute, to go upon the records. The minute is as follows:

A year ago when the American Missionary Association was reaching out in its thought for a place where the churches and Christians who are interested in its work could assemble to hear its reports and to consider the great causes which have been committed to it, a most cordial invitation was received from the churches of Portland to accept their Christian hospitality.

Those of us who have had occasion to know how much solid heartiness and sincere good will is extended in the outstretched right hand of this people had no question as to the pleasure which would be experienced by those who should be recipients of it. We answered that it was in our hearts to come, and we have done our best all this year to bring to these churches cheerful faces and glad hearts.

We came grateful to God in that we could look the world in the face with our debts cancelled, owing no man anything but love; with no gloomy shadows over us, happy in the glorious experience of knowing that we possessed money enough in our treasury to carry on our work two whole days. We have met with the characteristic greeting of a people "given to hospitality." We have come to a land of steady habits, and when some of you have taken us by the hand in the closeness of your grip we have sometimes been led to think that this is the greatest vice (vise) you have. And now, with our gratitude to God for His smiles in these beautiful clear days and bright skies, as if in harmony with the delightful Christian atmosphere of these meetings—symbolizing the spirit of our gatherings—it is not in accordance with a custom of form merely that we desire to express to these churches and pastors, and to all our kind friends here, our high appreciation of their services to this cause of missions, and to us so far as we represent this cause. You have given us strength and courage for our work another year.

It is not a small thing to arrange for a series of services like this. It means forethought and much care, many steps and much fatigue. It is not a small thing for people to open their homes freely to strangers and to so receive them that they are no more strangers.

Permit us then to thank the pastor, the officers and members of this church and society within whose walls we have studied and reviewed our work together. This is an ancient church, historic over the land. You have done no injustice to its history in your interest for the kingdom of God. Let us also thank the churches and pastors who have kindly shared in this abundant hospitality.

We should do that to which our hearts are foreign should we fail to remember those who have led us in Christian praise and those who in their labor of love have in many ways of service assisted the objects of this Missionary Association,

We recognize the courtesy of those railway and steamboat lines which have facilitated our travel here. Nor do we forget the enterprise of your public press and the kindness which has been extended to us in their full and accurate reports.

If any of you in this free-hearted welcome have entertained angels awares or unawares, we are glad of it. Most of us have left our particular angels at our homes. Some of us have not failed to discover that there are angels here in yours.

Therefore, brethren, in the name of our great Mission, of the schools and institutes which we have brought before you, of the churches which have prayed for us while we have been assembled, and in the name of the people to whom we are sent in Christ's stead and in your stead, accept our sincere thanks.

As we take up our farewell to go, we can appreciate your hearty services not only, but also your ability to successfully conceal any gratification which you may have that these three long days are over.

Voted that after singing, and a benediction by Rev. Dr. Walker, of Connecticut, this meeting stands adjourned sine die.

HENRY A. HAZEN, Secretary.
EDGAR M. COUSINS, Assistant Secretary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

REPORT ON EDUCATIONAL WORK, SOUTH.

BY REV. W. F. SLOCUM, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee, to which the report of the executive committee on educational work in the South was referred, would express at the outset their profound gratitude for the success that has followed the efforts that have been put forth in this large and important department of the work of the American Missionary Association.

While they deplore with all those who have the interests of this work at heart, the political attempts to limit the usefulness of the Association, that has grown out of unworthy partisan prejudices, yet they perceive with thankfulness that there is an element growing stronger every year at the South that appreciates the place, the importance and the value of these schools. Notably is this shown in Mississippi, where the State appropriation for the Tougaloo University was the only one not reduced. They would speak with appreciation of the Christian spirit that infuses all these schools, and the deeply religious character that is given to the work, and of the strong personal influences which are brought to bear upon the students.

Your committee feel that the time has come to push with greatest vigor a work that shall meet the demand for teachers in the public schools of the South, and to avail ourselves of the opportunity to reach the children and the homes of colored people through these; that every effort needs to be put forth to send out these teachers established in Christian ethics and feeling that the moralities of life are the basis of all true education.

Great pleasure is taken in the advance that is made each year in the matter of industrial and agricultural training; and every effort which tends to transform this people into an intelligent, upright Christian yeomanry, will be a profound blessing. Our constant aim should be to establish the true dignity of labor and the healthful desire to possess property and an intelligence that secures the best condition as property holders. Your committee are of the opinion that the opportunity for good through these schools was never larger than at present, and that the need of enlargement in many is imperative, and also that the time has come to push the work of special endowment for the larger institutions, that they may become independent of any financial pressure and may be put upon a permanent basis. And therefore of the three alternatives suggested by the claims of the work at present which they suggest in their report, can endorse one only, and do therefore most heartily recommend that instead of sacrificing the character of the work, instead of reducing the amount of work done, the Association shall have more money.

REPORT ON CHURCH WORK, SOUTH.

BY REV. CYRUS RICHARDSON, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee into whose hands has been placed the report of the church work in the South desire to state their impressions by calling attention to three or four important points.

First, to the marked increase in the membership of the Sunday-schools—an increase during the year of 2,000 pupils, or 15 per cent., bringing the present membership up to 15,109.

Comparing this with the entire enrollment in 1882, we find that during the five years there has been a growth of 100 per cent.

This is specially gratifying because it is understood that Sunday-schools or missions started at new stations look to the speedy establishment of churches at those stations; while well-organized schools in churches already established result in the careful study of God's word, with a constant application of inspired doctrine to practical life, looking both to the permanence of the churches and the personal purity of their members.

Another important item noticed in the report appears in the statement touching the amount of money which these churches have given.

Beside the $16,000 contributed for their own religious work, $2,300 have been devoted to pure benevolence. If this should seem a small sum as a contribution of 127 churches, it must be remembered that it is the gift of poverty, and not of wealth. The free-will offerings of almost any one of these congregations, when compared with the contributions of not a few New England churches, suggest the words of the Master: "She hath cast in more than they all."

Their spirit of sacrifice has often won for the colored people hearty commendation. To those of us who live amid multiplied temporal and spiritual privileges, and who easily lose sight of the goodly heritage for which we are to give an account, it is a spur, if not an inspiration, to read the story of the sacrifices which some of these brethren make in the giving of their scant substance for the more destitute members of the human family.

Their offerings for pure benevolence were above $600 more than the previous year, and are double what they were four years ago.

Your committee are glad to find that this feature of denominational work is strongly emphasized by the Executive Board, and that these churches, poor though they be, are taught that giving as well as receiving is a necessary factor in their growth, and that in true worship alms as well as prayers rise before God as a memorial.

Another noticeable item in the report is the building of meeting-houses. Indeed, the report characterizes the past year in its Southern work as one of "building activity." Every church that is to become permanent must have its house dedicated to God. The sanctuary helps to hold the people together and attach them to forms of worship that demand a reverential attitude. Perhaps no people have greater need than our colored brethren of those religious forms and ceremonies which secure quiet and order in the public devotions of the assembled multitudes.

We therefore rejoice in every new meeting-house that this society helps the struggling churches of the South to build.

Another item in the report to which we call attention is the organization of seven new churches during the year, about the average number, if you take a series of a dozen or more years, but not the average if you take simply the last five years.

Since 1882 the average rate of increase has been eleven per year.

It would undoubtedly be a joy to us all if the rate of increase could be more rapid. We must not, however, forget that we are at work "among a people who have no Congregational trend or training." It is undoubtedly wise to proceed with care, planting churches at the right centres and only where they will give promise of permanence.

After all the caution that has been exercised it has been necessary recently to drop four or five from the list. The aim should be at stability and worth rather than numbers. A single church organized on the right basis, watched over with painstaking care, so that her members shall adorn the doctrines they profess, will do more for the prosperity of Congregationalism in this part of the country than would a score of churches hastily organized and unsuitably located. We think the officers of this society have been wise in their movements thus far; nearly all the churches organized having made a history that deserves the admiration of Christian people everywhere.

But when we think of the constantly increasing number of graduates from the Christian schools and colleges under the patronage of this society; and the greater familiarity of the Secretaries with the localities suited to become strategic points for Congregationalism in the South; and the marked success of those churches whose permanence is beyond question, are we not warranted in expressing the hope that in the near future we shall see a radical advance all along this important line of denominational work? We know that this is what our Secretaries long for as well as pray for, and what with our contributions cheerfully made, they will hope to accomplish.

They heartily agree with us in believing that the uplifting influences of schools and colleges would be readily dissipated or turned into channels for evil if they are not gathered up and multiplied in rightly constituted bodies which shall prove the germs around which the forces of the community shall organize for good. Working together, therefore, as contributors and directors, we may expect to be cheered from year to year with the rapid growth in the numbers of these organized Christian forces which have in themselves vitalizing and transforming power which works for righteousness both in character and conduct.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

BY REV. A. H. QUINT, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The committee on so much of the Annual Report as relates to mountain work, particularly in Tennessee and Kentucky, respectfully report as follows:

The few details given in the report are of such an interesting character as to suggest the earnest wish that far more extended accounts of facts and incidents had been spread before the Association.

Want of space in the narration of the vast work of this body was of course the constraining reason for brevity in the report. But the comprehensive statement which is made exhibits conclusively the opportunity for a new and peculiar work, namely, that of giving the Gospel, its character and its schools, to a class hitherto scarcely touched by beneficent Christian agencies.

This is a class of white population, a class which felt of course in some degree the blighting influence of slavery, which contaminated everything within the reach of its malaria; but this class, from its circumstances, was not a slave-holding class. It is a class of sturdy blood and mountain habits, and is capable of great development. Two considerations urge the necessity of covering this field.

One is, the ordinary obligation to preach the gospel to those who do not have the gospel.

The other is, the evident capacity of this peculiar people to become a power in the development of that section of our land.

While the field and the number of persons are both limited in comparison with the great work among the freedmen, their importance appeals to this Association with steadily increasing force.

The opportunity is at hand, and it is in a line which old friends of our regenerating work could scarcely have hoped for. Devout praise is due to Almighty God for this open door to a vast success.

It is worthy of notice in this respect how, in the history of this Association, God has steadily placed before it successive duties and successive privileges. From the first dawning of its Foreign and Home work, freed from complicity with the great sin of our country, new specialties have been added as fast as older ones were ripened into practical efficacy. This comparatively new work seems to be in a direct line of Divine development. Your Committee feel that the sanction of this Association should be emphatically given to the work of its administration in this department, a work in which no spirit of caste shall be in any way tolerated, and that the call for a large increase of laborers to be located at all suitable points, should be met as rapidly as possible.

The Committee have no doubt of the wisdom and judicious care which characterizes your Executive Committee, and believe that that committee need only the hearty approval of this body to encourage it to go on in this direction.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

BY MR. FRANK WOOD, CHAIRMAN.

The first great work of this Association was due to a crisis in the history of one oppressed race on this continent, who after more than one hundred years of slavery and oppression, had, in the providence of God, freedom and citizenship suddenly thrust upon them. Four millions of souls—a large majority poor, ignorant and degraded—to these came the A. M. A. as God's own messenger to lead the way to education, usefulness and Christianity.

A similar emergency has now arisen in the history of another oppressed and wronged race for whom this Association has always done good work—the North American Indian.

Since the last annual meeting of this Association, the Dawes Bill, which has been called the emancipation proclamation of the Indian, has passed both houses of Congress, and is now the law of the land. Public attention, as never before, has been turned to the wrongs and the needs of the Indian. The new conditions have developed new necessities, new opportunities, and new dangers. Numerous societies, in thirty-two different States, have been organized to assist them. All this gives new importance to the work of the A. M. A. among the Indians. The summary for the year is encouraging. The conversions and additions to church membership tell a story of faithful, unselfish work for the Master, in one of the hardest possible fields of missionary labor, with little of the romance or pleasure of travel sometimes afforded by missions in foreign lands; among a people whom a Judge of the Supreme Court called "a despised and rejected class of persons;" handicapped and hindered in all their efforts by the suspicions and hatreds developed by centuries of injustice, robbery and cruelty from a Government that claimed to be civilized and Christian, and also by the Reservation System, which puts the missionary and the teacher under the absolute control of the Indian Agent, who may be a mere political tool and a man of no character, yet has despotic authority on the reservation, with power to expel or imprison the missionary, or break up his school or congregation. Yet in spite of all obstacles, through love of Him who was also "despised and rejected of men," they remained faithful amid dangers and difficulties, till, through their labor and that of their companions and predecessors, there are now nearly 29,000 Indian church members.

None have done better or more faithful work than the missionaries of the A. M. A. None are doing better work than Mr. Riggs and his associates. Yet, when compared with the extent of the field and the number and spiritual needs of those not yet reached by the influences of the gospel, and the opportunities and perils incident to their new and changing conditions of life, how very small is the work that the Christian Church is doing in this great field. Think of it—two hundred and forty-eight thousand Indians in the midst of a Christian land, and after the labor of 200 years only 29,000 professed Christians among them, and only 143 missionaries, of all denominations, to carry the gospel to this great multitude; and these few are hampered and hindered in their work by the intercourse laws, the opposition of agents and the orders of the Commissioner. When for the first time legislation, based on justice and humanity, is opening up vistas of usefulness and progress to the Indian; when the need of Christian teaching, guidance and care is greater than ever before, the Indian Bureau has issued orders that paralyzes missionary operations, by prohibiting the use of the vernacular in teaching English or the truths of the gospel. The Indians all know the vernacular. They have been carefully shut away from any other language by the Government restraints that surround all reservations, shutting out everything that would educate or civilize. The vernacular is used in the mission schools to teach English and the truths of the gospel to those who understand no other language. With this use we should submit to no interference. In a contest for religious liberty against the official tyranny that has for the last hundred years tried to usurp the place of Divine Providence to the Indian, we may be sure of the support of the freedom-loving American people. The intercourse laws should be repealed, so far as they relate to the operation of missionary societies. We should insist that all obstructions to the preaching of the gospel should be swept away. Then bring before all the churches the pressing and immediate needs of these neighbors who have fallen among thieves, who are pagans in a Christian land. While we are waiting they are passing into eternity. Shall we remain in selfish indifference till we are aroused by the dreadful sentence, "If thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand"? This Association is only the servant of the churches. The means and the men must come from the churches. If the churches were awake to their duty in this matter, and realized their responsibility for the Christianizing of the Indian, they could send missionaries to every part of this field within a year. There are 248,000 Indians in the country, excluding Alaska. From this number we should deduct 65,000 in the five civilized tribes. This leaves 183,000. Of this number 28,600 are already church members. This leaves a population not greatly more than three times the size of this city of Portland. Would we dare to say to our Master that we cannot occupy this field?

There never has been a time so propitious as the present; there never has been a time when the wrongs and the needs of the Indian have received so much attention from the Christian, the legislator and the philanthropist.

Therefore your committee would recommend that a committee of five be chosen to co-operate with the Financial Secretary for Indian Missions in devising and carrying out measures to bring the needs and opportunities of the Indian field before the churches, other missionary societies doing Indian work, and the numerous Indian Aid Societies now organized throughout the country.

This committee should make an effort to secure the co-operation of all Christians and friends of the Indian in a greatly enlarged, thorough, systematic mission work. They should also labor to create a public sentiment that should demand the repeal of the intercourse laws, so far as they hinder mission work; the order in relation to the use of the vernacular in the mission schools, and the removal of every other obstruction of the Indian Bureau to the civil and religious liberty of the missionary and teacher on the one hand, and the Indian on the other.

The gospel of Christ offers the only solution to the Indian problem. It must precede and prepare the way for civilization. Through it alone can we save the Indian, and atone for the century of dishonor in which our Government's system of dealing with the red men has made them paupers and kept them barbarians and pagans. This is the work of the Christian church, and if we shrink from or avoid the duty of the hour, God will not hold us guiltless.

REPORT ON CHINESE WORK.

BY REV. S. L. B. SPEARE, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee note with special satisfaction the following indications of progress in the work of our Association for the Chinese. Willing subjects of missionary labor are more numerous and more accessible. Past years of foundation work, dealing with Asiatic inertia and colossal prejudice and just resentment under wrong, are bearing fruit unusual in amount and assured genuineness. Our faithful missionary superintendent on the Pacific coast does not abate his courage or enthusiasm. Faithful teachers and coworkers can be found. The Lord of the vineyard has set his seal of approbation by granting harvests which, in the light of difficulties in the field and their promise for the future, are truly great. That Foreign Missionary Society, spontaneously formed by Chinese converts, thoroughly equipped and liberally supported in proportion to their means, and which aims, finally, at nothing less than the conversion of China's millions, should silence any and all cavil or uncertainty as to their motives in embracing Christianity. Japan, also, hears tidings of Christian sympathy as her wandering sons are met with helpful counsels and religious enlightenment on these far western shores—the land of their ideal civilization. We rejoice that those in charge of the field see their way clear for "tentative evangelistic work" and have entered upon it. This betokens firm conviction and resolute purpose that the field shall be taken for Christ. Difficulties and embarrassments only multiply their zeal and methods. Like the great missionary to the Gentiles, these heralds of the gospel look upon "many adversaries" and "an open door" as equivalents. The statistics of recent progress emphasize our golden opportunity to reach the "hermit natives" through their representatives within our borders.

Your committee note with profound regret the serious falling off in the money appropriations for their work. Native helpers, skilled and consecrated, are the chief preaching agency of all missionary fields, and of China preëminently. Ours is the opportunity to multiply such helpers. California is in the foreground to-day as never before, not excepting the old mining days. The church should occupy that field with a zeal and wisdom that shall emulate the enterprise of railroads and real-estate projectors. The church must not contradict all her traditions and working principles when Christ's poor come to her borders by the thousand and under conditions specially favorable to Christ-like approach. Her own life will be impoverished by so doing. The priest and Levite wronged and degraded their own souls by passing on the other side from the wounded sufferer, as much as the good Samaritan enriched his by pouring oil into his wounds and sheltering the victim of robbers.

Your committee hope that measures can be taken to bring the attention of our beloved churches to this their phenomenal opportunity and duty—to give the gospel at short range and nominal cost, to Asia's millions and support that message with all possible sympathy and aid.

REPORT OF FINANCE COMMITTEE.

BY MR. CHAS. A. HULL, CHAIRMAN.

In presenting their report upon the financial condition and management of the business of the American Missionary Association, your Committee on Finance desire to commend the clear and thorough manner in which the accounts are kept, so that any needed information may be had regarding any one of the numerous items of investment or expense at the numerous places where the work of the Association is carried on. The schedule of the property owned by the Association shows it to be possessed of buildings and land for the carrying on of educational and church work, the aggregate cost of which stands at $576,540.15. In addition to this plant, the Endowment funds amount to $229,375.78 which are securely invested, and yield an anuual income of about $10,000. The Association also holds conditional trust funds amounting to $69,726.95. The good judgment shown in the purchase of land, the erection of buildings, and the investment of the permanent funds speaks well for the thorough care of the officers and the Executive Committee.

The committee desire to congratulate you and the Congregational churches of our land upon the extinction of the debt which for several years has been a burden to the Association. The treasurer's report shows a balance on hand of $2,193.80, after paying every liability of the Association up to October 1, 1887, including the debt of $5,783.71, which remained at the end of the previous year.

In order to accomplish this, however, it has been necessary to defer until the receipts should warrant it, much work which presses with importunity upon the Association in the various fields.

We find that the treasurer's accounts are regularly and faithfully examined each month by the financial committee of your executive board; and at the end of the year by two auditors chosen by the Association who attach their certificate to the report, and who are thoroughly reliable business men. The accuracy and economy of the work are thus as fully secured as in any merely business establishment. The by-laws of the executive committee provide a system of checks upon the officers similar to those in use in great corporations; and while of old it was said that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light," we are glad to note that in the administration of the American Missionary Association so great a degree of worldly wisdom or common sense has been employed.

The duties of the treasurer are responsible, and have been performed with exactitude and fidelity. The receipts for current work of the year from all sources have been $306,761.31; and the expenditures therefor, $298,783.80.

These items of expenditure have been carefully examined in detail by your committee, and they report that in each department the most careful economy has been used, and no curtailment which would not materially cripple the effective force of the Association seems possible.

Your committee have taken some pains to compare the expenses of the Association with those of other missionary societies, and we find that it does not suffer in the comparison. The committee note with regret that the expenditures for work among the Indians and Chinese have been cut down materially as compared with the previous fiscal year; but we believe that the policy of the Executive Committee in refusing to incur liabilities which the Congregationalists of the country would not meet is the right one.

They must keep the Association so economically and so safely managed that no reproach may justly fall upon it; and the fact that they are able to come before you at this meeting, and to report the absolute extinction of the load of debt which has been upon them and you for several years, and have yet developed and prosecuted with vigor the grand labor for the oppressed, appeals in the strongest possible way to you for the most generous increase of the sums to be intrusted to their management in the year to come.

All departments need enlarging. The Southern work ought to have not less than $275,000; $15,000 is a small sum to spend upon the Chinese on our western coast, while $60,000 would hardly give the much needed development to the Indian Mission. Shall not the $350,000 thus plainly needed and earnestly recommended by the last National Council of Congregational churches be forthcoming? From us to whom much has been given, much will surely be required. If we cannot in person go with these Christian men and women who are devoting their lives to the direct work of this Association, into the cabin of the Negro, the abode of the mountaineer, the opium den of the Chinese, or the wigwam of the Indian, let us at least say to those who do,—"We will uphold your hands, we will abundantly support your work, we will, as far as we can, share your burdens and be your fellow laborers."

FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPT. 30th, 1887.

GENERAL SURVEY.

THE SOUTH.

Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, gave evidence of a keen and just appreciation of the needs of a race just escaping from centuries of bondage, when he said to his son-in-law: "Thou shalt teach them ordinances and laws, and shalt show them the way wherein they must walk and the work they must do."—Ex. xviii, 20. These freed slaves, under the leadership of Moses, needed instruction in reference to religious duties, the conduct of their lives, and the larger work that opened to them as free men. This counsel of the old Midian Priest applies equally in its principles to the problem the A. M. A. is helping to solve among the freed men of the South to-day. This work must be fundamentally that of instruction. No revival excitements, no moral shocks, will effect the cure of superstitious ignorance which the social, political and religious forces of the past have united to make most dense. Slow and patient methods of instruction only can dispel this darkness. This fact emphasizes the importance of the in the South. The total number of schools planted in the Southern States is fifty-four. Six of these are chartered institutions, fairly entitled to the rank of Colleges. Sixteen are Normal and Training Schools. Thirty-two are common schools, scattered throughout nine different States. In these schools are 246 instructors and 8,616 pupils.

In analyzing these figures, we find not a few encouraging facts. One school has been added to the total number under the care of the Association during the last year. Two new schools stand in the list of Normal Institutes. Normal work was begun by the A. M. A. in 1866; now we have sixteen well furnished schools, one great purpose of which is to instruct instructors.

Large additions have been made to the accommodations of our schools during this year. Three school buildings, and two buildings used for industrial training, have been erected. Tougaloo rejoices in the completion of the two Ballard buildings, one used for class rooms and the other for industrial training. These two buildings were erected by the students, under the direction of the Superintendent of Mechanical Training, who was also the architect. The saving in expense of building was not less than $3,000, and the Industrial classes were thus given the best instruction in this department.

The Girls' Industrial School at Thomasville, Ga., has just entered its new and commodious home. This building accommodates forty boarding pupils, and contains furnished rooms for teachers, two offices, dining-room, reception room, kitchen and laundry, and all the appointments of a complete boarding school.

The Academy at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., a school established for the mountain people, has just dedicated a new and commodious building, to be used both for school and church purposes.

At Williamsburg, Ky., we have added an Industrial Department to the course of study, and an unused factory has been purchased and fitted up for the accommodation of the classes. These mountain boys who become skillful in the use of carpenter's tools in this school will scarcely be satisfied to occupy the poor log cabins in which their fathers and grandfathers have lived for generations. Missionary influences radiate from a carpenter's shop now as in our Lord's day. At Grand View, Tenn., the people themselves have rented an additional building for school purposes. The enrollment had already outgrown the accommodations of the old quarters. At Straight University, New Orleans, a neat Industrial building has been erected. In addition to these new buildings which have been put up this year, the Cassedy school building at Talladega has been materially enlarged, to meet the growing needs of this department. At Avery Institute, Charleston, S. C., the damage wrought by the earthquake has been repaired. There was serious interruption of the school work here, as the Institute could not be opened for months, and it was difficult even then to gather the usual number of pupils, on account of financial losses and the intense excitement of the public mind incident to the earthquake. The enrollment shows an attendance of ninety-two less than last year.

Notwithstanding these extensive enlargements, pupils have been turned away from several of our institutions because of lack in school accommodations and in teaching force. In one school the Principal tells us of a boy who applied for admission to the school. He could not take him. In a few days a leading business man of the city called to intercede in the boy's behalf, but every corner of the school was full. "If there is a case of sickness or removal for any cause, will you not promise to let that boy have the first chance?" pleaded his earnest friend. But this boy was only one of many such boys and girls. At another Institution the Principal reported at one time during the year that there were twenty-five families who were waiting for an opening in the school, that they might send one or more pupils there.

In a school-room fitted to accommodate fifty-two pupils if every desk were full, at one time the teacher reported that one hundred and eight were present. It goes without saying that it is impossible to do the best sort of school work under such circumstances as these, and the A. M. A. seeks to do only the best work.

One of three things is evidently true in reference to the educational work of the Association: We must either sacrifice the character of the work, or reduce the amount of work done, or have more money. Which shall it be?

Industrial training holds a still more important place than ever in the course of instruction in our schools. The new Industrial buildings at Williamsburg, Tougaloo and Straight are already occupied with interested classes.

There are now taught at Tougaloo, in industrial branches: Farming, Tinning, Blacksmithing, Wagon-making, Carpentering, Painting, the use of Steam Power in Sawing and otherwise. The boy who completes a course of instruction in the wagon-making department can build, iron, paint and prepare for market, wagons or carriages, beginning with iron in the bar and timber in the rough.

The Industrial training for girls shows similar advancement. The work has been better systematized, and regular grades in housekeeping and sewing have been established. Kitchen gardening, which is the æsthetic name for all sorts of unæsthetic household work, has been introduced into several of our schools. In one instance the A. M. A. missionary has been invited to organize classes for Industrial training in the white public schools of the city, on account of her superior skill in teaching in this line.

The Connecticut Industrial School for Girls, already mentioned, which began its existence under the baptism of a fiery persecution at Quitman, rejoices in the great enlargement of its facilities for industrial training. Unlike the prophet's experience, we can say that "the Lord was in the fire."

Let us turn a moment now to note the record of the year's work in our six chartered institutions.

Atlanta University has wrought throughout the year, under various embarrassments. No one has yet been found to take up the large responsibilities of the Presidency so successfully borne by the lamented President Ware. The schools of the prophets and the various fields of labor have been diligently scanned, but no Elisha has been found upon whom her Elijah's mantle should fall.

The iniquitous Glenn Bill disturbed the quiet of the scholastic life of the University. It is not necessary to refer at length to the barbarous propositions of this bill. It failed to pass; but the bitter agitation, the obtrusive visits of politicians and the excited state of public feeling, have been a terrible tax upon the strength of those who were already burdened with the regular work of the University. Notwithstanding these discouragements, Atlanta University has increased the enrollment of pupils from 291 of last year to 413. "The wrath of men shall praise Him," is a truth that is always true.

Fisk University has enjoyed a year of marked prosperity. The character of the work done here is of a high order. A scholarly French prelate of the Romish Church, who had visited many institutions in this country, recently found his way to Fisk University. He took in hand the classes in Latin and Greek, and put them through an exacting and exhaustive examination. He afterwards said to a friend that the work done in the class-rooms at Fisk University was as good as that of any American school which he had visited. This is unsought testimony of high value. Fisk is constantly broadening and deepening her work. Here, too, the enrollment shows a decided increase over that of last year. The names in the catalogue number 437, as against 384 last year—a gain of 53. During the year there has been a quiet work of grace among the students, both hopeful and helpful.

Talladega College.—Among those who took the title of B. D. upon examinations at Talladega's last commencement was a young clergyman who, during several years of successful ministerial labor in a large church, carried on systematic study and prepared himself for these examinations. Talladega College lays great emphasis upon thorough scholarship. The course of study includes Normal Training, College Preparatory, College and Theological Departments. The Intermediate and Primary grades of the Normal department have outgrown their accommodations, and the building has been enlarged to accommodate them. The industrial departments are an important feature of the school work at Talladega. The Winsted farm offers fine advantages for agricultural training, and the large Slater shop furnishes the students with opportunity for thorough knowledge of mechanical industries. The President writes: "Talladega aims at thoroughness and seeks to cultivate the hand, head and heart." The enrollment in this college shows a slight increase over that of last year.

Straight University, at New Orleans, gathers among its students many from that bright and interesting people known as Creoles, who have so often furnished characters for song and story. The Romish influence is very strong at New Orleans, but during an interesting revival with which the school was blessed this year, not a few children of these Catholic homes professed Christ. One of these desired to join the University Church. Her parents gladly consented, saying that if their child could live a better Christian life in that church than in their own, they were rejoiced that she should take this step. The religious interest in the school this year has been deep and genuine.

The regular course of training at Straight includes Normal instruction, and teachers educated here are found in many Southern cities. At Vicksburg, Miss., the Superintendent of the colored public schools, having eleven teachers under his direction, is a graduate of Straight and is an honor to his Alma Mater. The year just closed showed an enrollment of 518 pupils in this school. Industrial classes have been organized as a part of the regular school work. In the Law Department at Straight we have the remarkable phenomenon of white and colored students sitting down side by side in the same classes. The whites come from the best Southern families, and are there because the instruction in the Straight Law Department is so excellent. A diploma from this department admits a student to the practice of law in the State, without examination.

TOUGALOO, MISS., is situated only eight miles from the capital of the State. There has been added to the former course of study at Tougaloo a department of Biblical instruction during the year. The purpose of this department is to fit the students for more efficient and intelligent Christian work. The industrial departments of Tougaloo are especially complete and have been already mentioned. The appropriation of $3,000 from the State was almost the only one in the whole list of appropriations voted by the Legislature for school purposes which was not reduced this year. This fact is remarkable testimony to the value of the school by those who see its immediate results. Rev. G. S. Pope, who has been connected with Tougaloo as its President for many years, has been transferred to the general missionary work in the Tennessee mountains. His services as President of Tougaloo have been characterized by great energy and faithfulness.

TILLOTSON INSTITUTE, at Austin, Texas, is the only important school we have in that great empire of the Southwest. This is the youngest child among the chartered institutions of the Association, but even this child is crying out for enlarged accommodations. The enrollment of the school shows a considerable increase over that of last year, and the promise for the year now opening is still larger. One building only answers all the purposes of this institution. Here are the school-rooms, the teachers' rooms, the President's residence and office, dormitories, rooms for industrial training of girls, library, chapel, dining-room, kitchen and laundry, and it is not a large building either. Are not these facts potent arguments for a new building? An industrial department has been added to the Tillotson this year and a Superintendent of Mechanical Training has been appointed.

In addition to this goodly list of large institutions we point with pride to Berea and Hampton, planted by the Association. Howard University also receives support in its department of Theology.

Such is the brief record of the educational work in the South during the year. Thoreau paid a splendid tribute to John Brown when he said of him in reference to his neglect of the schools: "He let his Greek accent slant in the wrong way in order to set upright human souls." But these heroic teachers of the A. M. A. are straightening Greek accents, solving mathematical problems, and teaching the spelling-book and the alphabet, for the same grand purpose, that they may set upright human souls. Salvation is the guiding purpose of this educational work. This purpose is not forgotten amid the rush and fret of school cares and duties.

CHURCH WORK.

Number of Churches	127
" " Missionaries	103
" " Church members	7,896
Added during the year	1,197
Scholars in our Sunday-schools	15,109

These statistics show a substantial gain over last year. Seven new churches have been organized during the year. These are situated as follows: Decatur and Riverside Plantation, Ala.; Hammond, La.; University Church at New Orleans; Petty, Texas; Combs, Ky.; and Andersonville, Ga. The hills and valleys of the old prison pen at Andersonville doubtless sometimes echo with the songs, and with the prayers of these Negro disciples, loyal to the heart's core to New England Congregationalism.

Five churches have been dropped from the list this year, as changed conditions of communities made it unwise to continue them.

There has been during the year a quiet Christian work throughout the South, which has borne gratifying fruits, over 1,000 having confessed Christ for the first time. The Sunday-school enrollment has increased by nearly 2,000. The contributions of these churches also show a healthful increase. They contributed this year for benevolence, outside of their own work, $2,322.51, and for their own church purposes, $16,014.50, making a grand total of $18,337.01. This was an increase over the previous year of $610.96 in their benevolences, and $3,075.61 in the total. This is an average contribution of $2.32 per member for every man, woman and child in these churches. The average membership of these churches, planted among a humble people who have no Congregational trend nor training, stands at the encouraging number of 62 for each church, while the average membership for each Congregational Church west of the Mississippi is only 43. And these people in the South are loyal Congregationalists. Although "a wild olive tree and graffed in among the branches, they already partake of the root and fatness of the olive tree." The old argument urged by their Baptist brethren that the Bible tells of John the Baptist, but nowhere of John the Congregationalist, has lost its power to shake their faith in the church of Paul and John Robinson. An old black man recently arose in a prayer-meeting and most solemnly, with eager voice and emphatic gesticulation, exclaimed: "I am a Congregational, and I mean to continue a Congregational till I get up yonder,

'Where congregations ne'er break up,
And Sabbaths never end.'"

They have found Congregationalism in their old hymn-book, which is the next thing to their Bible.

At the annual meeting in Cleveland in 1882, in the report of the Committee on Church Work, is found the following: "The rate of progress during the last seventeen years has been uniformly constant, about five churches per year. * * The question now comes, whether it is not quite time to change the rate by doubling it; at least to quicken the pace." Do the facts show that this suggestion has been followed? Since 1882 fifty-five churches have been organized, an average of eleven per year for the five years since 1882—more than double the old rate of five per year; another illustration of our Lord's words, "Be it unto you according to your faith." In 1882, 709 were added to the churches; in 1887, 1,197 were added. But the advancement in the Sunday-school work in our churches is still more remarkable. The total Sunday-school enrollment, as it appears in the annual report of 1882, was 7,835, but we are able to report this year an enrollment of 15,109, an increase in these five years of 7,274, or nearly 100 per cent.

These years have witnessed marvelous progress in systematic care for the children and youth by the churches of the Association.

The year just closing has been a year of building activity in the church work. Five new meeting-houses have been erected; four of these are among the mountain people and one among the freedmen. One new feature in our church work is the organization of two churches composed principally of Congregationalists from the North, who have taken up their residence in the South. They needed help and organized under the care of the Association. Although we have no great Pentecostal baptism to record this year, we reverently speak our thanks "that the Lord has added to the church almost daily, such as are being saved."

MOUNTAIN WORK.

When the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association "decided to offer these mountain people the aid of our system," probably even this far-seeing committee did not fully realize the magnitude of the work, nor the grand possibilities of the field. The few feeble churches that then existed are scarcely recognized now in the larger work that has grown up independently of them and miles away. Indeed, in entering this region in 1882 we were only putting the plow into the field, which had been already turned by pioneer laborers of the American Missionary Association. Before the war a brave man had pushed his way back into these mountain fastnesses in Christ's name. He went under commission from this Association. He opened a school; his work was successful. Into his school he put a library for the use of his pupils. In this library there was a volume of Wesley's sermons and, among these, one against the sin of slavery. This book got into the hands of a pro-slavery family. It was told that the preacher was teaching anti-slavery doctrine. Excitement in this back mountain region was intense. A mob was organized. They seized this missionary, bound him, beat him, and took him some two miles over the mountains and threw him into a cabin, and left two men as guards at the doors, while they, with their habitual delay, went to their homes for their dinner. They intended to return and inflict sorer punishment and perhaps hang him. Two mountain lads, brothers, heard of this outrage. They were pupils of this godly school-master and loved him. Each one, unknown to the other, went by a different path to the cabin with his rifle on his shoulder. They took out their teacher, cut the cords that bound him, and while he and his terrified wife at his side climbed the mountain, pushing their way to the Ohio river, these stalwart mountain lads kept back the mob with the threatening use of their unerring rifles. This missionary and his heroic wife finally reached the river and escaped. Now for the wonderful climax to that history. We have recently organized a Congregational Church where these thrilling scenes occurred. Among the original members who united in the bonds of freedom-loving Congregationalism were these two men who when boys defended this teacher at the risk of their own lives. A neat little church stands near this prison cabin of the past, and the bell that hangs in its belfry, whose tones fall now upon no slave's ear, was contributed by the wife of this first missionary to this mountain region. Such was the heroic beginning of the Association's work among these mountains. God had not forgotten during the years that passed, the tears and blood and prayers of these brave sufferers for Christ's sake.

This mountain work now is divided into two well-defined fields, both important. The field in Kentucky has for its base the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, which has been built since our present missionary force began their work in this region. The central point of this work is Williamsburg. Here we have a large and prosperous academy and church. Eleven whole counties are easily reached from this center and only one of these has as yet been occupied. In addition to the work at Williamsburg, there are two primary schools and five organized churches and constantly increasing numbers of missionary stations in this field. Chapels have been erected in South Williamsburg and Woodbine and are used for public service. A pastor has been settled over the church at Williamsburg and has taken up the work with great efficiency. The General Missionary has been relieved from the pastoral duties which he has borne before, and has larger opportunity for outside work which is pressing upon him. "Can we not have at least one pastor for each county?" is the painfully urgent plea of one of the faithful workers in this field.

The other field of mountain work lies along the Cumberland Mountains in Tennessee. Its base is the Cincinnati Southern Railroad, and the work extends far back into the mountains. Twenty-two counties are here accessible to our pastors and teachers. We have in this field two flourishing schools, one at Grand View and the other away up on the Cumberland plateau, at Pleasant Hill. Besides these schools, there are also churches at Grand View, Pleasant Hill, Pomona, Robbins, Slick Rock and Helenwood. Lastyear a new school was taken under the care of the Association at Sherwood, Tenn. We have thus surrounded this vast mountain region with our missionary forces. A General Missionary has been put into this field during the past year and the work opens upon him with constantly increasing magnitude. These people are Americans in every sense of the word, ninety-eight per cent. of the population of some counties having been born where they still live. Those who come into the region from other parts of the same State they call foreigners. A missionary in writing recently from this field says: "I asked how many of them in the meeting had Bibles in their homes, and out of fifteen or eighteen families represented only two of them had Bibles." Another missionary asked a girl seventeen years old if they had a book in her house. "A book, what is a book?" was the astonishing question. A book was described to her. "Oh! yes," she said, "I believe there was one in the cabin before grandmam died, but it was lost so long ago I plumb forgot how it looked."

This is our work. Only the edges of this great field have been gleaned. Will you not let us send our harvesters right into the heart of this ripening grain to gather in the name of our God?

INDIAN WORK.

The Indian work is chiefly in Nebraska and Dakota. The following is the summary for the year:

Churches	5
Church members	370
Added during the year	43
Schools	18
Pupils in Schools	608
Missionaries and Teachers	61

The report shows an encouraging increase in church membership. This means the redemption of souls from heathenism.

The three principal stations in the North are Santee, Oahe, and Fort Berthold. The work has been strengthened in each of these stations during the year. The Santee Normal School celebrated its seventeenth birthday during the past year. It was the first school of its kind established among this nation and its fruitful history abundantly proves the wisdom of its planting. Superior normal training is given the students in this school. The enrollment this year was 195. Twenty-six students were gathered in the theological department, many of whom will doubtless become missionaries to their own people. Pilgrim Church at Santee has enjoyed a year of prosperity. Eighteen have been added to the membership, eleven on the confession of their faith.

At Rosebud Agency three villages, including about 8,000 Indians, are open to missionary influence, and the work is being pushed with increased vigor. Jacob Good Dog, a converted Indian, was the Boniface in this field.

Among the Ponca Indians, in Nebraska, the work has been carried on with about the usual results.

OAHE.—This mission includes a training school and eleven out-stations on the Cheyenne and Grand rivers. Nineteen have been added to the Oahe church, on confession of their faith, during the year. A young man has been ordained as missionary to the Indians, and enters this field on Grand river for his life work. He has caught the spirit of Edwards, and Eliot and Brainard.

FORT BERTHOLD has passed a year of prosperity. New work is opening in this field. We quote from a recent letter: "Since my last letter we have had very interesting and serious developments. The Gros Ventres and Mandan tribes, situated 20 and 40 miles from us, have little or no religious instruction, only as they come to us. These two tribes we are hoping some of our young men who are away at school will be ready soon to work with."

S'KOKOMISH AGENCY lies 1,000 miles to the west of Fort Berthold, in Washington Territory. The church here has also been blessed during the year with revival influences and four have united with it on confession of faith.

These Indian missions have been visited personally during the year by two of the Secretaries of the Association, and the work has been carefully inspected.

SANTA FÉ, New Mexico, still receives a fixed appropriation from the Association for the Indian department of its University, the Principal and teachers being appointed by the Association. Fourteen Apache girls have been among the pupils during the year—the first Apaches that have ever been gathered in our schools. They prove to be bright and docile pupils.

CHINESE WORK.

Missions	17
Missionaries	28
Pupils enrolled	1,044
Hopeful conversions	150
Given up idolatry	211

The report of the Superintendent is both joyful and sad. The numbers of those who have given up idol worship and those hopefully converted are the largest it has ever been our privilege to report; but the work has labored under great embarrassment in the serious diminution of funds. The resources for the current work were necessarily reduced by more than $3,000. New doors are opening in this Chinese work. The Japanese are now ripe for schools and churches, and a small beginning has been made in this direction. This work is open to us, and the command to enter is written in the imperative.

WOMAN'S BUREAU.

Only four years have passed since the Woman's Bureau became a recognized department of our work, although it existed in reality for many years before. These years have abundantly proven its efficiency. It is useful especially along three lines: First, in assisting the women who are engaged as teachers to understand and grasp their work; again, in reaching the mothers and sisters of the pupils with purifying Christian influences, as they could not be reached in any other way; and also, in bringing information to the benevolent women of the North in regard to the special needs of their degraded and helpless sisters in the South. The shocking story of their degradation can be told only by women to women. Along all these lines of service the Woman's Bureau has been especially successful during the past year. Its usefulness is greatly increased because it is an organic part of a larger Association, and thus gains a wider field of vision. The range of its operations is constantly enlarging.

FINANCES.

RECEIPTS.

From Churches, Sabbath-schools, Missionary Societies and individuals	$189,483 39
" Estates and Legacies	52,266 73
" Income, Sundry Funds	10,561 07
" Tuition and Public Funds	28,964 81
" Rents	478 10
" United States Government for Education of Indians	17,357 21
" Slater Fund, paid to Institutions	7,650 00
	$306,761 31

The total disbursements for the year have been $298,783.80, a decrease in the expenditures of last year of $13,467. We entered this year with a debt of $5,783. The problem that taxed our skill and energies was this: How can we do the work which the Lord has put upon us, and at the same time not increase this debt? It looked, at times, as if it would prove impossible. For the month of February the receipts were $9,000 less than last year for the same month, and even so late as July there was a falling off of $17,000 for the month. The magnificent rally in September brought into the treasury a splendid sum, and the problem was solved.

Through carefully studied economy in the expenditures, by persistent efforts in the collecting field, and by the large and generous benevolences of the churches, all under God's good providence, this has been accomplished.

The current expenses of the year are all paid; the debt with which we began the year is all cancelled, and we enter this new year with the good sum of $2,193.80 on the credit side of the ledger. But this will provide for the current expenses of the Association only about two days.

This has been a perilous experiment. The work has suffered, although none of it has been given up. The total number of missionaries has been reduced. Teachers and pastors have been overworked. New fields, "white to the harvest," have been ungathered and left to possible blight. We praise God for this deliverance, but earnestly pray that we may not again need the chastening discipline of a like experience.

Many of our churches are rejoicing in books and Bibles and Lesson Helps given them during the year by the Bible Society, the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society, and the Western Tract and Book Society. The Association expresses its sincere thanks to these sister societies for their generous assistance in its work.

Such is the record of another year in the life of the A. M. A., as we read it from our human standpoint. The full significance of these simple facts as they stand related to the Divine plan for the redemption of the world, we cannot trace, nor need we. "What is written, is written."

IN MEMORIAM.

The following honored names have been added during the year to the list of those who have laid aside the armor and entered into their rest.

Rev. W. W. Weir, Pastor Second Congregational Church in Eureka, Kans., died November 21st, in his fifty-first year. He began his ministry in the African Methodist Church, was ordained as a Congregational minister in Eureka in 1881, and continued his services in connection with this church until the close of his life.

Mrs. J. H. Parr died at her home in Chicago, April 3d, 1887. Mrs. Parr went South, under appointment from this Association, in November, 1884, and took charge of the Musical Department at Tillotson Institute, Austin, Texas. Her husband was transferred to the school at Quitman, Ga., the following year. Her experiences the night of the burning of the school at Quitman gave her nervous system such a shock that she never entirely recovered. Her death came suddenly, and was evidently the result of that terrible night.

Rev. Sidney Hamilton Dale fell with the harness on, in the first months of his active ministry. He was graduated from the Theological Department at Talladega College, in June, 1886, and died the 18th of June, 1887. He was appointed Pastor of the church at Florence soon after his graduation, and his few months of service there were characterized by great earnestness on his part. With exultant prayer and triumph, and confident faith in his Saviour, he passed away.

Rev. Willis R. Polk, who had been Pastor of the Congregational Church and teacher in the public school in Fayetteville, Ark., since 1884, died, after a lingering illness, July 26th, 1887.

Rev. Samuel Stamford Ashley, after a protracted struggle with disease, was released by death Oct. 5th, 1887. He was sixty-eight years of age. His principal work was in the South. He labored among the soldiers, and followed Sherman's army into Wilmington, N. C. Here he opened a school among the freedmen, and was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention and drafted the school laws which were passed by the Legislature, upon which the school system of North Carolina was founded. He was the President of Straight University and Pastor of the First Congregational Church at Atlanta. While in the service of the A. M. A. he was attacked with yellow fever and never fully recovered his health. He was an earnest and brave Christian soldier, and held his place in the battle line, even when enfeebled by disease.

Hon. Wm. B. Washburn died suddenly at Springfield, Mass., Oct. 5th, 1887. He was born in Winchendon, Mass., in 1820. While sitting on the platform of the City Hall, in which the meeting of the American Board was being held, he quietly and unexpectedly fell asleep in death. "He was not, for God took him." Mr. Washburn's life was a most successful and honored one. He was graduated from Yale College in 1844, with the Christian ministry in view, but was providentially led into business pursuits. He settled in Greenfield, Mass., and built up a large business in the manufacture of wooden ware. Early in the war he was elected United States Representative, being complimented with the entire vote of his district. Massachusetts elected him its Governor in 1871, by an overwhelming majority. He resigned his seat in Congress to be inaugurated Governor, in January, 1872, and he resigned his Governorship to fill out the unexpired term in the United States Senate caused by the death of Charles Sumner, in March, 1874. In 1881 he was elected President of the American Missionary Association. His valuable services as presiding officer at the annual meetings, his wise counsels and wide influence, greatly advanced the interests of the Association.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

REPORT OF SECRETARY.

In inviting the women of the North, and particularly those of the Congregational churches to help establish and sustain its missions, the American Missionary Association has felt that woman's work in the churches at home is as important as woman's work in the mission field, in order to secure the greatest efficiency, the best results of the labor expended.

Nor have we been disappointed. As the hearts of those at home have opened pityingly toward the needs of women suffering from the effects of oppression, abuse and paganism, right here in our own country, and the hearts of our missionaries have been burdened with the same woes, the helping hand has been mutually extended; and it has been the mission of the Bureau of Woman's Work to join these hands in strong and loving ministry.

Our woman's work in the field can be only briefly referred to here. It is embodied in the full report which the Association gives of all its missions. Of the sixteen Normal and graded schools reported by the Association, seven are in the charge of lady teachers alone. One of these is a boarding school especially for girls, and is similar in plan to the Mt. Holyoke and Auburndale schools. But in all our boarding schools like methods are introduced, indeed the best that can be culled from Northern experience is put into practice.

Some slight changes in our plan of work should be noted, as indicating the new demands upon us in woman's work. We no longer select our special missionaries mainly for house-to-house visiting and Bible reading, but combine this with more effective organized work. To concentrate effort upon the training of the young for usefulness, is conceded by all our workers as most essential. This is well accomplished in our boarding schools, but where we have only day schools or churches we have felt the need of reaching the home life more effectually than could be done by a missionary visitor. We therefore bring the young people to our special missionary for practical instruction, connecting this with the Christian training.

Sewing-schools are established in which girls are taught not merely how to sew well, but how to cut and make garments for themselves and fathers and brothers. Kitchen-garden has been quite generally introduced for teaching all kinds of laundry, kitchen and dining-room work, care of bed-rooms and bedding, polite attention to guests, with all amenities of home life. Thus a transformation has been made in many homes through the new life opened up to the children.

White Shield and White Cross Societies are sustained in the interests of purity. Missionary societies are formed and the young people are taught how to manage them. Through these societies the sympathy and interest of colored and Indian women have been so moved as to lead to self-denial that would put us to shame, so eager are they to give to others the light they have received. Temperance work has a prominent place in all our missions. As illustrative of the influence exerted in this direction we note one instance. The principal of our colored school in Jonesboro, Tenn., organized her temperance society ten years ago, and for years it was the only one in the place. Thus the colored people were organized and ready for action long before the white ladies. Our Northern missionary bought materials for colors, sat up nights and lettered the banners, and at the late election in Tennessee took her school to the polls, nearly every child carrying a suggestive motto, such as "Protect Our Homes," "Lead us not into Temptation." Through her persistence and energy the white ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union joined in the movement. It is true, the amendment was lost in the State, but in Jonesboro every colored man except two voted for prohibition. Noble efforts may sometimes fail—noble lives, never.

But even could our woman's work in the field be written in minute detail it would give but an imperfect review of what is undertaken. You hear of overflowing schools, of many forms of Christian work, of the numbers added to our churches from ranks in day and Sunday-schools, but the wrestling prayers of earnest women, the watchful admonitions, the unremitting toil which has entered into what we call success, who shall record? Over two hundred such missionaries the American Missionary Association has upon its rolls, and it is for these, and that we may add to the number, that we ask your united support.

We have much to encourage us in the results of the past year. There has been an earnest reaching out by ladies' societies, Sunday-schools and mission bands, for some special work which would tell for good in direct influence toward the enlightenment of those in darkness and need, and contributions have been so applied as to be at once helpful to our treasury and yet assigned to some specific object interesting to contributors. Christian Endeavor Societies have begun to come forward with their help. These societies, which include lads and misses, find a most useful and attractive work in our Indian Missions. It has been quite a problem how to win and hold the interest of boys in missions, but we have found the magic word—Indian—and that if our boys' thoughts are given proper direction in the study of Indian history and missions, they will not fail to be on the right side in their convictions and eager to help educate an Indian youth, the longer and more unpronounceable his name the more eager.

Sewing societies have been encouraged to contribute their service in a way that is valuable to us. Our item of house furnishing alone is a large one, for in connection with our eighty-nine schools are about thirty mission homes and boarding halls to be kept supplied with bedding, table linen, etc., for families of from fifteen to two hundred and fifty. These needs are indicated in a sewing leaflet which is sent to those who will assist us to set an example of good housekeeping where we plant our missions.

The most important help, however, being money contributions from all these societies, we have sought by our system of missionary letters to encourage the ladies and young people to annual contributions. The amounts thus received have varied from $10 to $100, according to the ability of the church, but every society thus contributing to the A. M. A. may work for some definite object and receive the field letters.

To the Woman's State organizations we offer specific work on a larger scale. Of such we name the following as co-operating directly with us: Maine and Vermont each by a "Woman's Aid to the A. M. A." Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, South Dakota, each by a Woman's Home Missionary Union, and Minnesota and Kansas by their Woman's Home Missionary Societies.

The State organizations have some of them undertaken the support of a single school, and others of missionaries selected from different departments of our work. In every State the appeal of the A. M. A. is made through its Woman's Bureau to the ladies of all the churches and to all the ladies of the churches, and the contributions are in part through the State organizations and in part direct, all working to the same end.

Other States also, not yet organized, are assisting us in definite lines, as Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Any society of old or young people, whether Missionary, Ladies' Aid, Benevolent Society, Sewing Circle or Christian Endeavor—whatever involves combined interests and united work—we cordially welcome to share with us in the grand opportunities of our field.

In this way the ladies of the Congregational churches are helping in the support of seventeen of the established missions of the American Missionary Association—among the colored people, poor whites, Indians and Chinese, according to their choice.

Public meetings in behalf of missions have been provided with lady speakers, and in many instances the monthly missionary concerts of the churches having the American Missionary Association for a subject, have been furnished with fresh letters from different parts of the field, thus giving vividness to the facts gathered from the A. M. A. literature.

We all know that it is not by doing any great thing that the home is made beautiful and strong, but by the many acts of thoughtfulness, the light and skillful touches which singly appear so small, but together and often repeated become essential. So in our connection with these great mission boards, let us make our work valuable by our constancy and skill in doing what we can, giving an aureola to the cause of missions by the well directed rays of womanly, consecrated service.

A VISIT TO THE DAKOTAS.

BY SECRETARY J. E. ROY.

In 1871, on a tour of home missionary supervision in Dakota, I came over the Missouri in a canoe, the only mode then of transportation to this Santee Agency School. I found here Rev. A. L. Riggs, who had come the year before to take up the newly initiated work of Rev. J. P. Williamson, who removed up the river thirty miles to open a mission upon the reservation of the Yankton Sioux. At that time Mr. Riggs had already displaced the cabin home and cabin school-house by a frame residence and a frame chapel school-house about 30x50. Now I find that the chapel has been spread out upon the sides and elongated in the rear, with sliding doors to shut off each of the several new parts into additional recitation and Sunday-school rooms, and the whole to be crowded for morning prayers and Sabbath service. There have also come on, the Dakota Home for Young Women, the Bird's Nest for Little Children and the Cottage for Little Boys, each of the three under a matron, and the Dakota Hall for Young Men, with one of the teachers' families there in charge. Then come the well-built shops for shoemaking, carpentry and blacksmithing; and lastly, the three-story dining-hall, with accommodation for a hundred and fifty at the tables, with rooms for teachers and workers, and a whole story yet to be finished off, when funds are in hand, to accommodate more girls. The whole is heated by furnaces and supplied with the most approved apparatus for cooking, baking and laundry work.

But beyond this expanding of the shell, I find the inner institution matured into a good deal of character and strength. Though it has grown by itself, it has come to be very much like our best boarding-schools at the South. The course of the year makes up more than two hundred pupils, and there are now here one hundred and thirty. The mass of them have learned the English, and the classes are taught in it. Many of them have been advanced in English studies. The régime everywhere takes on the Christian type. A great majority of the scholars have been brought to a personal acquaintance with Christ. A good number of teachers and preachers have already been sent forth. Music—both vocal and instrumental—brings in its refining influence. A splendid corps of teachers is employed. Every pupil, male and female, has some work to do. The shops for blacksmithing, carpentry and shoemaking have each a competent workman as instructor, and those departments are run under the closest inspection. I have seen one Indian doing a fine job of shoeing horses, that most important of all work in blacksmithing.

Mr. Riggs, the father of the Theological Institute of Chicago Seminary, has brought the same feature in here. And so for two weeks, about twenty-five men, young pastors and divinity students, coming in from their fields, are drilled in the practical Bible doctrines and methods of preaching and pastoral work. The lectures have run from two to four in a day. Clearly it has been a season of stimulus and of replenishment to the young brethren. Those who were pleased with the young people from this school who sang at the Chicago Council, at the New Haven Anniversary and over the East, last fall, will be glad to learn that at least half a hundred of equal cultivation could be sent out as specimens. Three native teachers are here employed, and they can use either language. It has been a great delight to me to hear Pastor Artemas Ehnamani preach in his own pulpit in the presence of his church, that numbers a couple of hundred, and without the chopping up of his address by the intervention of an interpreter.

INDIAN LIFE AND CHARACTER.

FROM MRS. CHAS. W. SHELTON.

The American Indian of to-day is unlike the Indian of fifty years ago. We think of him as he was then—a savage; but whatever he may once have been, the word does not now apply to him. He is no longer a savage, but a man, like other men, with ambitions, hopes and plans. The popular idea that he is blood-thirsty, ever watching for a chance to deal out death, ever on the alert to surprise and betray, is an erroneous one. In war, treacherous and wily he has proved himself to be; but the Union soldier knows where to look for the snares of the Indian, for they are all of a kind, while the Indian is constantly baffled by some new treachery of the white man.

The wonder is that the Indian is learning to restrain himself, is becoming even long-suffering, while his constant experience since the "Mayflower" first touched his native shore has been such as to make him a wild man, knowing no law, feeling no charity. I heard a minister recently speak of the "rolling eyeballs of the savage!" He is not a panther, a hyena or a maniac; he is a man, sane and in his right mind, lacking only a guide and a teacher to put him where he himself is longing to be placed—on a footing with the intelligent white men of this country. Upon entering an Indian camp I have never seen the redmen spring for their guns and give their war-cries. They have always received us in a quiet, friendly way, with a cordial hand-shake and the usual "How," taking care always that we be not annoyed with dogs or children. They are a hospitable people, giving of their poverty without stint. Among themselves they give of their food and scant clothing until it becomes a fault.

Three months' life among them during the past summer has proved to me that they are an honest people. During the whole time we never locked a door, a trunk or a bag, except on a few occasions when the white children of some employees annoyed us extremely. More than once have we camped among them, away from all white people, surrounded on all sides by Indians and Indian tepees. Many a time have we chosen a camping spot, dropped our wagon-load of clothing and provisions, and left all for hours at a time, coming back to find them undisturbed and untouched. Only when they deal with enemies, do the Indians prove dishonest. We once spent an hour in the house of a young Ponca, waiting for a thunder-storm to pass. My children amused themselves while there with a bag of marbles which they had taken with them, and, occasionally, as they played, a marble was dropped and lost, and was not missed from the dozens left. Upon our return by the same road, the Indian came out to meet us, bringing in his hand the marbles. The Indian had children—marbles to an Indian child are no small plaything, yet he returned them as a matter of course. I have sent Indian boys on errands to the post-traders' stores, and invariably they returned with every penny of change.

These are little things in themselves, but serve to show that honesty is characteristic of them, and to show also that there is some good in the nature of the Indian.

A point not to be passed over is their great friendliness toward those whom they know to be friends. There is little an Indian would not do for the comfort of such an one. I have an Indian friend who, in the face of the blackest Dakota thunder-cloud, insisted upon giving up her tepee to us, and would not listen as we urged her and her husband to share it with us. She spent an hour or two in pinning it more firmly to the ground, even taking off her shawl to stop up a hole.

They are not a quarrelsome people. The missionary to the Poncas once accused a man of selling his horse contrary to the law, and he denied it, saying he had loaned it, but upon being confronted with the proof of it, he said: "Well, have it that way, if you would rather; I do not want to quarrel about it."

All these traits which are good—are the best—I dwell upon because they are facts not generally received, and contrary to the popular idea of the redman. They are not gotten from books, nor from the reports of the Indian Bureau, but "I speak that I do know and testify that I have seen."

The Indians are an intelligent people, keen and quick. Running Antelope, a chief, once said to some missionaries: "The Dakotas have brains—are thoughtful; you deal with us as men who can think and consider." They are not the grave, stubborn people that we have thought them. The stolid look, said to be theirs, is characteristic of them only when they are in circumstances where they wish to cover up all emotion and expression; this seems rather to have been acquired by their sad contact with white men. Among themselves they are social, jolly and lively as other people; they think and plan their own important affairs, and they gossip and talk nonsense just as we do.

They live in many different ways. The wilder ones build log houses, if they can, or cling to the old tepee still. We all know the Indian tepee; it is the round tent from which General Sibley took his pattern for the much-admired Sibley army tent. The interior of the tepee is not usually attractive. The Indians are a filthy people naturally, having and using little water. What they use in summer time must be brought from the rivers, and if these are at a distance the difficulty is great. The river water is thick with mud, and is hard also, so that the foulness of the Indian home is not to be wondered at.

The furniture of the home is simple and scant. A few old skins and quilts for the bedding, and a black pot or two, constitute nearly the whole. It is easily moved, and takes up little room. There is nothing concerning the home or its furnishings to anchor the Indian, any more than the Gipsy, except as he may have gotten himself beyond the tepee life.

The Government ration-system is a strange one to understand, on account of the complications it enforces. The ration is issued once in two weeks, and consists chiefly of beef, flour, sugar, coffee and beans. This food lasts the Indian just half of the two weeks. I suppose the idea of the Government is to leave some responsibility on him, and to give him some incitement to work. However this may be, it sometimes works well, and sometimes does not. The older people, who know nothing of work, live as they can when the ration is gone. The Indians tell me that they go and visit their friends, and beg food of those who are able to give. Then, when there is no food left, they starve until next issue day. Indians know what it is to starve—it is no new sensation to them. I sat an hour one day in the wagon of an Indian, watching the issue of beef, and was more than once sickened by the sight of Indian women snatching at and eating the raw meat even before it was cold—so quickly is an animal killed, dressed and given out; but as I watched them the disgust passed away, for I knew that a starving man would eat anything to live.

You may have heard the story of the tribe of Indians who in their hunger came scores of miles, one cold Dakota winter, to receive their rations of an agent. Owing to some neglected red-tape on the part of the Government, the order to give out the food had not been received by the agent, and in compliance with the laws he withheld the issue, although it was ready and only waiting for the word "give." Their pleading and their gaunt faces were in vain, and they went home again through the snows and the winds, and died of hunger.

Many are the Indians who starve to death! Civilization has come so near, it has driven off the game, the support of the Indian, and has given only half a support in return. Strong, able men sit waiting around their camp-fires for teachers and for guides to show them the ways of civilization, to show them how to work and how to provide—waiting for teachers who have not been sent. The ration-system obliges many Indians to spend half of their time, or more, on the road to and from the agency, so that, were they never so ambitious, little could they do at farming.

The Indians are not a moral people. They have a code of morals of their own which they follow strictly, but the code does not correspond to ours. Their very manner of life stands in the way of much improvement; this must be changed before much can be done. That the Indians are superstitious, we have always known. What else could we expect when every strange thing is to them Wakan—a God; and all these gods are gods of wrath, seeking constantly to do them injury?

They stand in great awe of sickness and death. Little care is given very sick friends, from the fear they have of going near disease. I saw, last summer, a young man dying of consumption. His friends had laid him by himself, in a teepee apart from the house, and to stop his struggles during the hemorrhages, had bound him so that he could not move; his feet were fastened to stakes in the ground, his hands were tied together, and as he lay there helpless, so near to death, the friends sat off at a distance from the tepee and watched for the end. At one time, thinking him already dead, they began the wailing so common among them. But the old native missionary, hearing them, went and discovered that the breath was still there, and they began again their quiet watching. Finding that unconsciousness had set in and that there were no more struggles, they prepared him one day for death, with the very best clothing he possessed, and a beautiful new pair of moccasins, placing beside him on the ground all his possessions—his pipe, his sleigh-bells, and many trinkets—and then again sat apart to wait for the end. During the days that he lay so low, only the women attended him.

Death is to them all a frightful, fearful thing. They place their dead on hill-tops, as near as possible to the sky, into which one soul goes, but beyond which they know little. They believe that a person has four souls. One hovers near the body after death; one goes into some wild animal or into a child; one stays with a lock of the hair kept by the friends until such time as they can throw it into the country of their enemies, where the soul works havoc among the people, causing them trouble and misfortune, and remaining there indefinitely; the fourth soul travels up the milky way—"the path of the soul," and though they have a vague idea of a heaven to which it goes, the idea is so indefinite that it amounts to but little.

With all their intelligence, with all their longings after something better, the Indians are in a most wretched condition. Some have learned just enough of the truth to forsake their own gods, but have learned of none to fill the void—which condition is far worse than the old.

PONCA AGENCY.

FROM REV. JOHN E. SMITH.

It is four years since I came to Ponca. As I look back over that time, I can see where the Poncas have improved in many respects. The year I came they had given away some thirteen hundred dollars' worth of ponies to outside Indians. Last week thirty Yanktons were here and nothing of any account was given to them. Almost all the issued stock up to that time had been killed to furnish feasts, but for two years past very few have been used in that way. At that time hardly any children were in school, but they were running around with long hair, and dirty. Now almost every child is in school, either here or at boarding school. Then the marriage relation was very little observed, except on the part of the older people, but for some time there has been very little marital infidelity. The general tone of the community has been raised, and the ideas of what constitutes a decent life, with many, have been changed.

The school is now running nicely for the most part. The lunch-dinner which is furnished the pupils is having a good effect so far. At present, the morning session of three hours is devoted to study, and in the afternoon the smaller scholars are allowed to go home and the larger boys are mending harness. I hope for two or three good results from this. It will help to teach the Poncas to repair their tools, etc.; will teach the children to speak English—a thing we have not yet accomplished; and will give a few of the rudiments of industrial training. The average at church for the past month has been twenty, with a good attendance at the Friday evening meeting. We are now having night school with a fair attendance.

REVIEW OF THE YEAR.

The fiscal year of "The California Chinese Mission"—the representative and agent of the A. M. A. in its work among the Chinese—closed August 31st. Statistics ought not to be dry when they set forth succinctly a gospel work and a record of souls saved. Each unit in each number stands for a story that angels stop to read—a gift, a labor, or a turning of the heart of God, that has to do with the eternal life.

Our missions have numbered 17; of these, 11 have been sustained during the entire year, and two others for eleven months. We have no vacation in our schools, unless forced to it by lack of funds, or by other causes which we cannot control.

The number of workers has varied from 23 to 28; the aggregate number of months of service being 309. Of these 91 are to be credited to our Chinese missionary helpers, and 218 to Americans. The total number of pupils enrolled is 1,044. The average enrollment month by month has been 461; the average attendance, 247. These numbers are smaller than those of last year, or of any preceding year for a great while; which comes of a serious diminution in another quarter which it has been out of our power to avert. Our resources for current work have been less than in previous years by more than $3,000—last year, $12,341.80; this year, $8,989.30. This statement is to date; I trust the amount will be increased somewhat before the books are finally closed. It was impossible to maintain the larger work with the smaller sum. I think that we can truly say: We have done what we could. The most serious loss is in the employment of Chinese missionary helpers; we ought to have had twice as many in the field as we were able to employ.

The expenditures on account of current work have been as follows: For salaries of superintendent, teachers and helpers $6,222.80; for rents of mission houses, $2,103; for incidentals, $634.15; total, $8,959.95. The contributions made directly to the treasury of this Auxiliary amount, at this writing, to $2,989.30, of which about $250 were given expressly for permanent property.

While we note with sadness these diminutions, we record with gladness an increase at the point of largest interest, the point towards which all our endeavors tend. We find in our statistical columns, under the head of "Profess to have ceased from idol worship," an aggregate of 211; under that of "Giving evidence of Christian character," 150. These are larger numbers than we have ever before been privileged to place at the foot of these columns; and among those who give evidence of Christain character are many who a year ago either walked in utter darkness, or were refusing to let in on their hearts the dawning light of Christ. I cannot as yet state exactly the number who seem during this year to have accepted Christ, but I think it cannot be much less than fifty. If so, then the total number of whom this hope has been cherished since our work began, cannot be much less than 650.

These encouragements are due, under God, very largely to some tentative evangelistic work which we have undertaken. The results are such as lead us to pray for the privilege of enlarging this branch of our service and prosecuting it with greater vigor. We are praying—and I think with faith and unity—that God would raise up among us some one on whom we can bestow this special gift. I look for an answer. I expect that during this new fiscal year, upon which we have entered, the providence of God will open the way, and the Spirit of God will beckon us on to a system of evangelization which will reach to all our missions and will pass beyond them, making the wilderness to blossom as the rose.

Among the "new departures" of the year is the beginning of work among the Japanese. The first attempt to Christianize the Japanese in California was made in connection with the First Cong. Church in this city. The first Japanese baptized were received to that church; but the work was suffered to lapse, and other denominations have supplied our mortifying lack of service. A beginning has again been made, this time in Oakland. Mr. N. Kusaki, a young Japanese who was graduated last summer from the Pacific Theological Seminary, led off in the undertaking. He still assists in it, though it has now been placed in the hands of an American lady as the principal teacher. It is an experiment at present, but gives good promise of success.

Another interesting development, which, however, dates back a little more than a year, is the Foreign Missionary Society organized by our Chinese brethren. This movement was spontaneous; no urgency or even suggestion from me occasioned it. It was put into almost complete working order before I was made aware of it. Its primary object is to sustain missionary operations in South China, the provinces from which our brethren came. But its watchword is nothing less than "China for Christ." They have already gathered nearly $250, contributed not from an abundance, but out of deep poverty.

Another point of interest is the marked change in the spiritual atmosphere of some of our missions—notably those at Stockton, Petaluma and Oroville. It seems to foretoken a "wide and effectual door" soon to be open before us, which God grant that we may have the men and the means to enter for a campaign aggressive and victorious.

BRIEF HISTORY.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846, its distinctive characteristic being freedom from all complicity with slavery and caste.

The object as stated in its constitution is, "To conduct Christian missionary and educational operations, and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort."

It began its work in Foreign Missions in Africa, Siam, Sandwich Islands, West Indies; and its work in our own country, in the Western States and among the Indians.

In 1848 it began work in the South among whites and blacks, although attended with great opposition and danger.

In 1852 it undertook to reach the Chinese in California, the plans ripening in 1870 to successful work.

In 1861, during the civil war, began the enlargement of work in the South, which has been marked by steady progress and success.

In 1882 it transferred its Foreign Missions and enlarged its Indian work by receiving the Indian Missions of the American Board.

The work of the American Missionary Association is therefore at present among the Chinese in California, the North American Indians and the needy classes of our Southern States.

SERMON.

BY REV. A. J. F. BEHRENDS, D.D.

"Beloved, while I was giving all diligence to write unto you of our common salvation, I was constrained to write unto you exhorting you to contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints."

JUDE 3, REVISED VERSION.

This is one of those sentences of Holy Scripture, of which it may be said that they are angels in disguise, hiding a smile of heavenly beauty behind a frown. They are like the nuts that, at this season of the year, the children gather under the trees; great, ugly, prickly burrs covering a kernel of sweetness. There is a hand of tenderness within this glove of steel. I trust this may appear as we proceed, and that the discovery may suggest such thoughts as shall not prove inappropriate to the present occasion.

The sentence has a martial ring, fit introduction, it may seem, to an epistle crowded with violent denunciation. It is a short letter, of only twenty-one sentences, but it has the concentrated energy of a tornado, overwhelming and destroying its opponents; and it would be easy so to intone its varied and fierce imagery as to leave the impression that Christianity encourages and urges to conflict for its own sake. Such an inference, however, would be a grave mistake. Jude was not a man of pugnacious temper. The first sentence shows us his heart, and gives us the keynote of his impassioned philippic: "Mercy unto you, and peace, and love, be multiplied." It was the hand of peace that grasped the two-edged sword and made it smite so vigorously. He proceeds to state that he had long contemplated the writing of a treatise, not on controverted points of doctrine, but on the "common salvation;" in a pacific strain, and on matters in which all Christian believers were agreed, and in which they had never differed. His meditations had been rudely interrupted, and he found himself compelled to write at once, hurriedly, and in a very different tone. Corrupt and corrupting teachers had secured an audience, who turned "the grace of God into lasciviousness," who confounded Christian liberty and license, who taught men that they could be pious without being pure. This has never ceased to be the most perilous practical heresy, invading alike the pulpit and the pew, the divorce of morality and religion. That danger roused the lion in Jude's heart, and his pen flew over the page as if dipped in fire and winged with lightning. But even then, it is not some doubtful and debatable doctrine that urges him to write; it is still the faith "once for all" delivered unto the saints, the original, common, and permanent heritage of all true believers, to whose earnest defense he summons. He seems to regard the clear and fearless preaching of the simple gospel as the best and only antidote to heresy in doctrine, and to immorality in practice.

This is the temper in which we must meet the burning questions of our own time. We fight because we love peace, and in order that peace may come to stay, in the assurance that right and truth must prevail. Every pulse-beat must be one of love, even when fire breathes from the lips. There must be no poisoned sting in our polemics. Besides, there is a common faith, immutable from the beginning. There are some things beyond all reasonable doubt or dispute, fixed points for Christian conviction, from which nothing should ever lure us, the bond of Christian fellowship, in whose united and emphatic testimony lies the hope, nay the potency and the pledge, of the gospel's ultimate and eternal sovereignty. Suffer me, then, briefly to pass under review these primary and permanent Christian convictions, the supporting frame of Christian doctrine, giving strength and unity to our greatly diversified forms of teaching. All I shall attempt to do is to present a series of connected sketches, leaving the rough outlines to be filled out by your own thought.

At the head of these primary convictions must be placed the Christian doctrine of God. There is such a doctrine, clear and comprehensive. I do not mean the affirmation that there is a God, for that the Bible takes for granted; and it is high time that we ceased trying to prove what the Scriptures boldly assume. It is conceded by all, that nature, man included, must have some invisible background and support—that there is a Great First Cause. A logical atheism is an impossibility. But who, and what, is God? With that question the Bible busies itself, and its answer is unique in its loftiness and completeness. In the Scriptures the God, whose existence is assumed as otherwise known, reveals Himself. Now the core of the Biblical doctrine of God is not His personal existence, nor the metaphysical unity of His being, nor even the supremacy of His moral government, but the living reality and unity of His ethical nature, the eternal confluence in His personal life of infinite power, wisdom, holiness and love. The unity of God is His unity as Lord, as the Jehovah of the Old Testament revelation; the unity of God as the "I am that I am," in His covenant relation to the sons of men. We are summoned to preach the Living God, of whom Jesus Christ is the manifested glory, and in whom the Christ dwelt in real and redeeming energy from everlasting, the personal, eternally self-existent Spirit, self-conscious and self-determining, whose essential nature is Holy Love, imposing Himself as the law of all life, imparting Himself as the source of all wisdom and the fountain of all blessedness. This is the foremost article of Christian conviction, fundamental alike to doctrine and conduct. There is no such motive to penitence and abhorrence of sin, no such incentive to holiness, as the conviction that God sees me, that His piercing eyes follow me everywhere. If that will not keep a man from wrong, nothing will. What is true for ethics is no less true for theology; its point of departure and its angle of observation are in a Scripturally consistent doctrine of God; and there are many painful problems for which such a faith provides the only solution. We may, and ought to be, so sure of what God is, that we can joyfully trust Him when we cannot trace Him, assured that the darkness which hides Him is only the Eternal Light that is too bright for our mortal vision. We become painfully anxious to justify the ways of God almost in proportion as our faith in Him loses its firmness of fibre. Nor is it easy to grasp, and to retain in its completeness, the Biblical conception of what God is. It is easy enough to think of Him as an infinite Cæsar, arbitrary in his decrees and crushing men without compunction; or as an inflexible judge, giving unrestrained scope to his righteous indignation; or as the embodiment of an easy-going compassion, careless of wrong-doing; but to conceive of these qualities as mutually conditioning, and as universally operative, so that He is righteous wherever He is gracious, and gracious wherever He is righteous, is no mean mental achievement. Nay, this is the most heroic affirmation of faith.

One of the earliest problems for Christian thought was the maintenance of the metaphysical unity of God, without destroying those distinctions in His essential nature which the doctrine of the Trinity is intended to guard. But the modern, the deeper, and, for practical purposes, the more important problem is the maintenance of the ethical unity of God, that in Him, in His counsels, and in His government, power, wisdom, holiness, and love, are co-eternal and con-substantial. Am I fighting a man of straw? Theology has busied itself with sundering what the Bible joins together, with pitting justice against mercy, and with coining a doctrine of grace that touches only a few elect souls, or with proclaiming a salvation in which the moral law is shorn of its eternal majesty, and the will of man robbed of its true freedom. Have we not all heard the Fatherhood of God so defined as to reduce His moral authority to a shadow; and His moral government so emphasized as to limit His Fatherhood to a narrow circle of souls? Have we not heard it said that God must be just, but that he need not be merciful; that moral law is universal, but that grace is restricted? Such is not the vision of God which the Bible gives us, and it is opposed to any view of God which seeks to maintain and guard the ethical unity of His being. Holiness and love, law and grace, overlap and interpenetrate each other. There is no God out of Christ, and the Christ has always been in God. The God of the Bible is one, not only metaphysically, but morally; not only in person, but in conduct and government: eternally the same, universally the same. He lays the same law upon every conscience, He brings home the same grace to every guilty soul, He imposes the same moral conditions upon all who would obtain His approval.

I may not speak for others; but to me this conception of God is the Alpha and Omega of my theodicy. I do not understand the world in which I live. Its moral life perplexes me more and more every day. It seems terribly out of joint. The iron has entered into my soul; and unless I am greatly self-deceived, I am hospitable to any suggestion, from any quarter, that will in any degree lighten or dispel the awful gloom that rests upon the moral government of God. But I have never met with any speculative solution that at all compares with this simple and daring faith in the God of the Bible, whose power is unlimited, whose wisdom is infallible, whose righteousness in impartial and inflexible, and whose love is universal and boundless. I know enough of myself to be assured that other and mightier moral energies shape the life of man than that of the human will, and those energies issue from the hands that were pierced on the cross. Thus do I come back to repeat, with ever growing joy of spirit, that ancient confession of the Christian Church, "I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth." I believe, with all my heart, in the Living God who, from love of the world, sent His Only-Begotten Son, not to condemn the race, but that the world through Him might be saved. Upon the universality of that love I plant my feet; and I will suffer no man even to suggest that there is a single soul upon which the light of that love does not fall. Into every man's moral life, into every man's eternal destiny, that redeeming grace enters. How, I cannot tell; but of the fact I am sure, because I have learned the high and hopeful lesson from the lips and the life of the world's only master, in whom I behold the essential glory of God. As for the rest we can afford to wait.

"God is His own interpreter,
And He will make it plain."

Next in importance, in the catalogue of primitive and fixed Christian convictions, is the doctrine of the reality of the human soul, spiritual in its nature, moral in its constitution, immortal in its destiny, bearing the image of God. The knowledge of God conducts to, and shapes, the knowledge of self; and the reverse is equally true. There is a subtle connection between what I believe myself to be, and what I believe God to be; and an advance in one department of knowledge is an advance in the other, while the mastery of both is the task with which the theologian and the preacher are occupied. The knowledge of what God is, is undoubtedly the higher and more fruitful, but the knowledge of what man is, is the more immediate and practical. Psychology has always given form and color to theology. Trace the doctrinal debates of the centuries, and you will find their roots in divergent theories of the nature of sin, and of the native powers of the human soul. It is not surprising, therefore, that the Bible deals so largely with an exposition of human nature. The heart of man is laid bare, and his eternal destiny is outlined. The story of his creation invests him with an incomparable dignity, as summoned to universal lordship, and to the most intimate fellowship with God. The record of the fall shows him endowed with a moral freedom truly amazing, and the subsequent history uncovers the awful abysses into which the abuse of his powers may plunge him. It is a hell on earth that greets us in the antediluvian history, and in the moral life of Sodom and Gomorrah; and the flood and rain of fire appear as angels of mercy to rid the world of such monsters of iniquity. And yet compassion tempered judgment. Man is too great a prize to be lightly abandoned, and in the Incarnation we read at once the burning passion of God's love for man, and the Divine estimate of the human soul. In Jesus Christ we behold God in His glory, and man in his dignity; and no man who believes in Jesus Christ can ever think meanly of himself, or of his fellow men. Before that revelation, all caste and race-prejudices must vanish: and the Christian Church has no greater task than to proclaim, with her Lord, against every form of materialism, idealism, and fatalism, the existence, the moral freedom, the eternal destiny of the human soul.

These call for clear and incessant affirmation, for men value their birthright lightly, and are ready to barter it away for even less than the price which Esau named. Men think meanly of themselves, and despise each other. They need to be taught that man is a free, creative spirit, not the product of physical organization, nor the sport of circumstance, that he is responsible for his character and conduct, capable of redemption, destined to live forever. And if there be a soul behind every human face, for whose redemption Christ endured His mysterious travail, that soul commands our homage and is worthy of our most patient ministry, whether the skin be yellow, white or black.

With these two great convictions is bound up a third, defining the relation of God and the soul, the universal supremacy and the inviolable authority of moral law. Conscience is the court where God and man are brought face to face. Righteousness is the living tie of fellowship between man and his Maker. There is in conscience a variable element, dependent on environment, influenced by education; but there is also an invariable element, the constitutional push and thrust to the recognition of the right as unconditionally and universally obligatory; and if conscience only had might, as it has right, it would rule the world. The moral law never changes. Its authority is supreme. Its voice rings out, clear and strong, above the wildest tempest of human passion. Whatever a man may think of the atonement as related to the justice of God, he knows that he cannot be happy until he comes to terms with the Judge in his own breast. Physical science has done much to make clear the universal scope, and the beneficent supremacy, of law. Freedom works in its traces. Genius cannot ignore its behests. There is no chance; all things are linked together in the order of an eternal reason. We read history under the guidance of that principle. It is this that makes us impatient of any definition of the supernatural, in which the natural does not retain its rights. It is this that makes us insist on so conceiving a miracle that its occurrence shall not involve the violation or the suspension of natural law, that while it is the emergence of a higher order, it is on that very account preservative of the lower order. We may not say less of the moral law. There is call for ceaseless and unqualified iteration that it is supreme and inviolable; that its claims are never suspended, nor held in temporary abeyance; that even the atonement is not a compromise with righteousness, but a more glorious vindication of it than could have been secured by punishment; and that only in justice is there safety and blessedness for individuals and communities. The sooner all men can be made to see this, and to act accordingly, the better. Hell may have a very harsh sound to many ears, and no heart can hear it without a shudder; but a universe without impartial justice, careless about righteousness, would be worse than hell.

In the galleries of the Louvre you may see a startling picture. Its theme is Brutus condemning his son to death. There stands the fair-haired youth, looking with silent, pleading eyes upon his father, while the lad's friends throng about him in every attitude of agonizing entreaty. You can read the conflict of emotion in the father's stern face and clenched hand. But Rome is greater than any man, and the order of the State must be maintained. It is never safe to press the logic of analogy; but many of the objections urged against the atonement, and against retribution, vanish under the light of that canvas, as it brings home the truth that the order of righteousness must be inflexibly maintained.

Recurring once more to the first two primary elements of Christian testimony—God and the soul—we reach another, as involved in their mutual gravitation, the possibility and the certainty of a Divine revelation, and, as growing out of that, the plenary authority of Holy Scripture. If God loves man, and man needs God, it is reasonable that God should come to man, and that man should seek after God. In the first, we have the secret of revelation, in the second we have the secret of religion. Father and child will seek each other, and the paternal search will be the most unwearied and persistent. In prayer man comes to God, and in revelation God comes to man. Revelation is thus seen to be the condition and counterpart of prayer; and a religion which retains prayer while it denies revelation, is an empty form and a hopeless contradiction. There is in man a constitutional receptivity for the thought of God, and there is in God a spontaneous disposition to make use of that human receptivity for the communication of His thought and life. They that seek Him find Him, because He is seeking all such. Such being the gravitation between God and man, most intense and unwearied on God's part, we have reason to expect that He would anoint some men with peculiar wisdom, and make them the accredited heralds of His will, prophets and apostles for all time to come. The result of that anointing and guidance we possess in the Holy Scriptures. In them the Divine revelation has taken authoritative form. The rays of light are here focused. The process was vital, not mechanical, progressive, complete and sufficient. Without committing ourselves to any theory of inspiration, and freely conceding the difficulties connected with Biblical interpretation, we affirm the sufficiency and the plenary authority of the Bible. Its word is final, and universally binding.

Coming now to the Written Word, what new elements does it add to the faith for which we must earnestly contend? What is the substance of the prophetic and apostolic testimony? Let the beloved disciple answer: "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." Distinctively Christian doctrine deals with the person, the work, and the mission of Jesus Christ. Its main affirmations concern the Incarnation and the Atonement, the true and proper Deity of Christ, and the redeeming energy of His sinless life, His atoning death, and His incessant advocacy. In Him, and in Him alone, is our redemption. In Him, and in Him alone, is the hope of the world. The philosophy of the Trinity may escape us, the mystery of the theanthropic person of our Lord may baffle our scrutiny, but the universal church confesses, in all her creeds, and psalms, and prayers, that in Jesus Christ dwelleth forevermore the fulness of the Godhead bodily. The atonement may be an unfathomable secret, and no explanation may ever satisfy us, but there can be no hesitation in affirming, as there never has been any uncertainty in the unbroken Christian testimony, that by the blood of the cross God has reconciled the world unto Himself.

So much for the substance of the Gospel which we are to preach. How shall we preach it, as apologists or as apostles, simply as a matter of duty, or under the inspiration of certain and glorious triumph? We find our answer in the fact that He who is our infallible prophet, and our atoning priest, is also our anointed king, whose cross is the throne of power because it is the altar of sacrifice. We believe in, and preach, the kingdom of God on earth. It is our high theme, as it was that of John the Baptist and of our Lord, of prophets and apostles. It shall fill the earth, and make the heavens radiant. Among the classic productions of the eighteenth century, in France, was one by Bossuet, entitled "A Discourse on Universal History." Its aim was to bring into orderly array the movements of all the ages, to trace the golden threads of unity and of progress from the beginning of time to the latest days. Whatever may be said of the method of execution, the plan itself was a masterly conception, and one which has been a favorite theme of meditation with many of the world's greatest Christian thinkers. It stirred the mind and heart of Jonathan Edwards while he pondered his "History of Redemption," as yielding the secret alike of time and of eternity. It captivated the genius of Augustine, who wrote his "City of God" when Rome had fallen before the fierceness of the Goth, when the world gave itself up to the wildest despair, and when even Jerome sat trembling in his cell at Bethlehem, hourly expecting the end of the world. Then it was that the African Bishop had his vision of that more ancient city, whose foundations could not be shaken, whose dominion should be universal and abiding, the joy of the earth and the wonder of heaven. And centuries before, Paul in his old age had the same sublime vision, and gave it form in his incomparable epistle to the Ephesians, where he speaks of the church as called to make known to all principalities and powers, in the heavenly places, the manifold wisdom of God. The preaching of the gospel, by the church on earth, commands a universal audience, and inaugurates the eternal empire of truth and righteousness. Daniel in the city of Babylon, when idolatry seemed to be triumphant and defiant, hurling true men into the furnace of fire and the den of lions, and the exiled John on Patmos, when the storm of persecution had broken over the infant church and threatened its summary destruction, wrote in the same jubilant strain.

Our message is one of triumph. Our testimony is keyed to victory. We bear glad tidings, and therefore our ministry and our religion should be full of hope and joy. Alas, for many it is not. They are still watching at the grave, when their Lord is risen. They commune in sadness by the way, when the Prince of Life is at their side. Their eyes are holden; they are foolish, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. There are no grander monuments of religion than the great cathedrals of Europe. But they are tombs, rather than temples. They are as damp and gloomy as they are magnificent. They dwarf the worshipper, and emphasize the ceremonial. The dead are everywhere, in the crypts, under the marble pavements, crowding the cloistered passages, confronting you at the gateways. The windows, rich in old glass, and the walls with their rare frescoes, perpetually proclaim the story of suffering and of martyrdom. Everywhere it is the same—the crucifix, the symbols of the passion, the stations to the cross, the bleeding Christ; and when you attend to the service, you find it chanted in a minor key, and it seems as if a prolonged wail rang and echoed through the aisles and arches. It is a sad religion of which these temples speak, fit outcome of the life of a people all of whose hopes have been crushed. Oh, the world needs to hear again the wondrous song of the angels, the glad message of an ascended and reigning Christ. A divine life pulses beneath these ribs of death. Our faith is not a perpetual Miserère, but an eternal Jubilate. Christ is risen, and that means the coming Paradise of God on earth.

Let the heavens ring, and let the stars join in the wondrous anthem! Let the earth be glad, and let all the trees of the forest clap their hands! Let the mountains and the hills, the plains and the rivers, take up the strain, and let the ocean add its mighty and musical bass! For the Lord has come, to unloose the heavy burdens, to break every yoke of tyranny and oppression, to secure liberty to every captive, and his eternal birthright to every soul, until the renovated earth shall be transfigured into the Eternal City of God!

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of regular income to keep pace with the growing work. This increase can only be reached by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our higher educational institutions, to accommodate the increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, cultured and pious, for these churches.

3. HELP FOR YOUNG MEN, to be educated as ministers and teachers here and missionaries to Africa—a pressing want.

4. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS—to purchase farm implements, plows, harrows and cultivators; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanic arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tin-men, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms with sewing and knitting material.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payment shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation, or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

[CHAPTER 358.]

Passed April 19, 1862.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subject to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business, and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions, until the next Annual Meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. Said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase or take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property beyond the value of three hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 5. No inhabitant of this State, who shall die leaving a wife, child or parent, shall devise or bequeath to the aforesaid corporation created, more than one-fourth of his or her estate, after the payment of his or her debts; but a devise or bequest by such inhabitant shall be valid to the extent of such one-fourth; in no case, however, shall any devise or bequest to such corporation be valid in any will made by any inhabitant of this State, which shall not have been made at least two months before the death of the testator or testatrix.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

An Act to amend an Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two.

[CHAPTER 796.]

Passed April 27, 1871.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of the Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," passed April nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, is hereby amended, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds and to purchase and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, subject to all provisions of law relative to devises and bequests by last will and testament, any real or personal estate given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never be in any manner directed to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

[CHAPTER 52.]

Passed March 12, 1886, three-fifths being present.

An Act further to amend chapter three hundred and fifty-eight of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," as amended by chapter seven hundred and ninety-six of the laws of eighteen hundred and seventy-one.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. Section four of chapter three hundred and fifty-eight of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty-two, entitled "An Act to incorporate the American Missionary Association," as amended by chapter seven hundred and ninety-six of the laws of eighteen hundred and seventy-one, is hereby further amended so as to read as follows:

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or may hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled "An Act relating to wills"; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars, and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same; Provided, that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never in any manner be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

SEC. 2. Section five of the said Act is hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. This Act shall take effect immediately.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee; the call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Only members of the Executive Committee shall attend its meetings, but the Committee may by vote invite the presence of any other person on special occasions.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee shall be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of five members each :

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act, the Chairman shall appoint a subsstitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee, before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statement when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

OTHER STANDING COMMITTEES.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and may consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amonnts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number.

Special Committees may be appointed from time to time, as required.

Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee.

All special committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various standing committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for their action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and keep all books of account required by them.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES AND OTHER AGENTS.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries and other Agents as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches, collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be assigned them, and who shall also prepare and present through the Corresponding Secretaries to the Executive Committee each month reports of the work done by them for the previous month.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association shall have space provided for three signatures—viz.: those (1) of the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) of a Corresponding Secretary, and (3) of the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYÉS.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employé shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and travelling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries.
5. Reading of the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Southern Work. (3) Indian and Chinese Work. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished Business.
8. New Business.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of the majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given, in writing, at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.
